

ASHLAND UNIVERSITY

6201 9100 007 676 3

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2011 with funding from LYRASIS members and Sloan Foundation

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 1

JANUARY 1
1919

The BRETAREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETAREN -

My Year

HERBERT ATKINSON JUMP

Today I am facing a new year strange;
What gift will it bring me of joy or change?

I will make it a year of faith and prayer,
A year of high endeavor;
I will crowd it with deeds both brave and fair,
I will act the hero ever.

I will search the world for hearts to bless;
I will fit out my love with wings;
I will fill my days with tenderness
That thinks and soothes and sings.

I will travel God's path at God's own rate;
I will welcome both gain and loss;
Nor will I rebel when Heaven's gate
Looks tragically like a cross.

And so as I live through the strange new time,
The Master will make it a year sublime.

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918. Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Opening Words of the Editor	2	Second Highest Percentage Gain—Prof. J. A. Garber	9
Editorial Review	3	Some New Mission Opportunities—Edwin Boardman, Jr.	10
Time to Report—Chas. A. Bame, D.D.	4	Frankly Facing the Tasks of 1919—Prof. J. A. Garber	11
The New Sense of World Brotherhood—Prof. J. L. Gillin, Ph.D. .	5	The Endeavor Society Helping the Sunday School—W. R. Deeter	11
Challenges of the New Year—G. H. Jones	6	News from the Field	12-15
Coping with Difficulties—G. L. Maus	7	Let's Talk It Over—R. R. Teeter, D.D.	15
Sermon: The Outlook of Faith—President W. D. Furry, Ph.D. .	8-9	Matrimonial	15
New Year Ideals—G. S. Baer	9	In the Shadow	16

EDITORIAL

Opening Words From Your Friend, the New Editor

"It is with a keen sense of the bigness and difficulty of the task that I enter upon the work to which the Brethren Publishing Company and the late General Conference have called me. And I hope you will not misunderstand me when I say that it has been with much reluctance that I have yielded to persuasion to accept the editorship of The Brethren Evangelist. I am not unmindful of the honor that has been conferred upon me in this position nor the unparalleled opportunities for broadening vision and of far-reaching influence that it offers me. But I know that no opportunity is without a corresponding responsibility and it is the shadow of that responsibility growing constantly heavier with consideration that has caused me to waver. Through my imagination I can understand something of the peculiar difficulties of the editorship of a denominational paper like our own. And I am not presumptuous enough to think that I can cope with these alone. If we are to have a brighter and more original church paper it will require more than the very best effort of any one man as editor. Aside from the guiding wisdom of God it will require the co-operation of the brotherhood in financing and the help of her religious leaders in writing to make it possible. The making of a church paper is a co-operative business. This, I pray, you may all understand. It is not my business alone, nor yours, but ours. I have accepted the leadership you have placed upon me in this matter on condition that you give me your hearty and active co-operation. A very large number of the Brethren pledged themselves to do this at the late Conference. I have taken them at their word and believe they will make good their promises when called upon for some contribution. For my part, I stand ready, trusting in the wisdom and strength of God, to give constantly the very best service that is possible for me to render. I will consider no sacrifice too much to make and no task too forbidding to undertake by divine help in order that we may have the most attractive, most practically helpful and most spiritually uplifting official organ possible. And with mutual faith and co-operation, I am sure that every difficulty can be overcome and every problem solved.

A Policy of Fairness

It is with a scruple of keen conscience for the letter and spirit of fairness man to man that I enter upon my editorial duties. I have no desire to interfere with the free expression of opinion and interpretation merely because it may differ from mine. I would not, if I could, require another's thoughts to be made over the mould of my own, any more than I would consent to another determining the character of my thinking. I am desirous that we shall feel our freedom limited only by the manifest spirit and written Word of our Lord Jesus Christ. And this last statement excludes the apostles of the late Pastor Russell and the late Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy and their like, if any have fears that such a platform is too broad. It also excludes the use of unkind, incourteous and unChristian characterizations and personalities, if any should ever seem provoked to such a degree. Such a policy, I believe, meets the approval of practically all of both the ministry and the laity of our beloved church. This confidence was gained at the 1918 Conference immediately after my election to the editorship by a canvas made of as many ministerial and lay delegates as I could get in touch with in the one remaining day who felt themselves qualified to write. I put into their hands a paper headed with these words, "On a policy of justice and fairness to all, regardless of differences in thinking, and an insistence upon the principles of Christian courtesy, will you co-operate with the newly elected editor of The Brethren Evangelist by the writing of occasional articles of merit when called upon and requested at least one month in advance? If so, subscribe to this paper." Of those interviewed there were none who did not consent to the fairness of the policy and practically all subscribed to it. Any who are willing to co-operate with me on such a policy, whether ministers or laymen, are requested to send me their names. Bear in mind I am desirous of enlisting the co-operation of laymen as well as ministers. Such co-operation will carry with it the consciousness of having done what you could to make the Evangelist what you would like it to be.

Give Only Your Best

It is my desire to secure as large a list of contributors as possible and yet I am sure I would not be measuring up to your expectations of me if I should not insist upon the maintenance of a high standard of writing. By that I mean not that every article shall be a masterpiece, but that each one shall be the very best that its author can make. He who has the privilege of writing for approximately 20,000 readers ought to consider it important enough to give his very best, most careful and prayerful thought in the very best language he can command. Any old thing written in any old way is not fair either to the editor or the readers.

An Advisory Committee

If the unexpected should happen and an article should come to the editor's hands that is so far afield from safe Biblical interpretation or wholesome religious instruction as to be called in question by the editor, he will refer such article to an advisory committee composed of President W. D. Furry, Dean J. Allen Miller, Business Manager R. R. Teeter and Editor of Sunday School Literature, A. D. Gnagey. These men will co-operate with the editor in determining the policy of the paper.

A Request for Prayer

I crave your daily prayers that God may use me in this new position in just the way that will please him most. You can pray if you cannot write, and I believe in the accomplishing power of prayer. The difficulty of my task justifies my asking the prayers of the brotherhood as much as any other position in the Brethren church. Moreover, I feel myself as weak and needy as any other man. If you will support me with your prayers, I am sure God will give me strength and wisdom to serve you very humbly and sincerely.

GEORGE S. BAER.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

This is a good time to put the Evangelist in every home of your congregation. Read Brother Teeter's words on page 15 and proceed to do what he suggests. We need you to help start the new year right. And when you have the Evangelist in every home, write something about your work for the news department of the paper, that will make the paper more valuable to your people. That is what Brother Homer Anderson did, and I am sure he will find that his people will stand by him the more loyally and appreciate his services the more keenly because he has told in this public way of their co-operation and the victory he and they have gained.

From a letter accompanying Dr. Gillin's article we learn that his work with the Red Cross will not permit him to get back into his regular work in the University of Wisconsin for possibly a few months and may be addressed at Glen Ellyn, Illinois. His Red Cross work is keeping him very busy. With the demobilization of the armies it is growing heavier. The Department of Civilian Relief must stand by the families and the men until every last man is back into civil life with a job and with his family life normal again.

Brother Beachler's report this week, we notice that he is and expects that the days of interruption are past, that he will allow compensation as small as the "flu" or bad weather to stop his work for the week endowment. And we are delighted to see the mercury rise in the thermometer. Pennsylvania is doing herself proud.

Under the new arrangements it will be necessary to have all material for publication in the editor's hands by Friday noon, if it is desired to have it appear in the week following. Everything of an editorial nature should arrive earlier if possible.

Notice Brother Lytle's request for the prayers of the brotherhood in behalf of his evangelistic campaign now in progress. Brethren can help each other in this way.

The call for the New Year reports on the Four-Year Program campaign has gone forth from General Director Bame. Brother Lytle, Indiana District Director also issues a special appeal. The Ohio Director, George S. Baer, would like to add a word of urgency concerning the early sending of reports. And doubtless other District Directors are anxious about the matter. So let the churches be anxious also, and success will come to all.

Brother Maus reports that in the midst of a revival meeting at Bryan, Ohio, with Brother Lytle as evangelist, the "flu" came along and settled in their midst and stopped everything. Many a good plan, faithfully undertaken, has been suddenly halted by things over which we have no immediate control, this last fall. But let us believe and work to the end that God will give victory in the end to those who serve him faithfully.

The appearance of President Furry's sermon, "The Outlook for Faith: A Christmas Meditation," in this New Year number means that Christmas cannot be limited to one particular day in the year. It is well that the voices of Christmas echo and re-echo after the twenty-fifth of December has gone. Thus we shall be able the better to keep the Christmas spirit going through all the days of the year. Read the sermon carefully, it is a great message.

Brother L. S. Bauman is assisting Brother W. E. Thomas of Milford, Indiana, in an evangelistic campaign and has just closed a meeting with Brother J. A. McInturf at Goshen. Doubtless reports of faithful striving will soon reach us from these points.

Brother N. W. Jennings reports some good results from evangelistic campaigns in the South and his "Travel Notes" will be read with interest. He is now located as pastor of the First Brethren church of Los Angeles, California.

Brother C. F. Yoder sends a good report from Rio Cuarto, South America. Present conditions certainly challenge the Brethren church with opportunities that have never been equalled. Keep these things in mind and pray over them until Easter and it may be that the Lord will move the hearts of our people to supply both money and life to make possible a larger work in this promising and needy field at this most opportune time.

Several of the ministers have recently been in the grip of the "flu." There may be others, but these are known to have been sick because they reported inability to comply immediately to requests for articles, Brethren McClain, Oberholtzer and Whitted. May they and all others similarly indisposed be restored soon to normal strength and health. I wish to acknowledge my appreciation of the fact that they notified me of their inability to write. The cause was certainly sufficient and we were not disappointed by waiting for an expected article that could not come. But they will write as soon as able. The response thus far to my requests for contributions has been generous. Thank you, Brethren.

Whenever a new church is dedicated don't fail to send a cut of it to the Evangelist. We cannot all go to see your new building, but we do want to see a picture of it. All the Brethren want it, so don't forget. We are hoping to be able to show you soon the picture of the recently dedicated church of Fillmore, California, of which Brother Sylvester Lowman is pastor.

You will notice that "Page Eight" has been transferred to page three. This has been made necessary for several reasons. You may unconsciously turn to page eight for a while to find the news in brief, but in time we think you will find the change an advantage to you as it will be to us from an editorial standpoint. If you like the Evangelist in its new dress, tell your friends about it and get some new subscriptions.

As this paper was going to press a telegram came from Brother G. C. Carpenter of Peru, Indiana, asking us to publish an urgent call for two teachers for Lost Creek, Kentucky. They are needed immediately. Who will say, "Here am I; send me?" Write Brother Carpenter.

To the pastors: When sending in obituary notices, kindly do not keep them until you have enough to fill a column. Several such reports have come in in one week and it makes it impossible to report them all promptly. Please send the notices as your funerals occur and we will not be compelled to hold back some for lack of space. Same true of marriage notices. Thank you for taking it so kindly. We know you will co-operate.

A card from Brother G. T. Ronk says "We are 'on'—the Sunday School Contest via Waterloo route." It looks as if Brother Goughnour's people would have a merry company. "Get on board, there's room for many more."

Crown Chapel, Iowa is on the Evangelist Honor Roll, so Brother G. T. Ronk reports. This will make Brother Teeter laugh next week in the Business Manager's Corner. It tickles the editor, too. Keep coming.

A new missionary by the name of Paul James Cook arrived at the home of Brother and Sister James S. Cook, December 3, 1918. Congratulations and good wishes to you and yours, Brother Cook.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

TIME TO REPORT

This message is planned to come to you in the first issue of the year 1919. The first thing I wish to say to the pastors and Keymen all over this great country of ours is that it is time to report! Does it come to you a little like that little-too-early call for breakfast? Well, I assure you it does to me; I am a pastor whose work has been "hard hit" by the very unusual happenings of the past three months. But it is time to get up, now and report. I am sorry that our reports will not be what we have prayed they might, but it is time. If you will look into your "Hand Book"—is it handy?—you will find on the inside of the first cover a post card that asks for a report in the month of January. Well, that month is but a few days away. Hence this call:

PASTORS or CONGREGATIONAL KEYMEN will please see that a card is started to the District Director—see first page of the booklet—no later than JANUARY 15, 1919.

District Directors will have till February 15 to get them to me. This is a more generous allotment of time than I had given last year and it is to be hoped that no congregation will neglect to make the best report possible by that time.

What is the Use?

Well, what is it? If we do not care to know where we are getting, then, "what is the use?" But how can we plan to make up for lost time if we delay finding just what is our present status?

How Hard Have We Been "Hit"?

Doctors tell me we shall not know till next summer how terrible have been the ravages of the "flu." We can not, perhaps. Neither can we tell how much the churches have been handicapped till then, because it will not have been all written till that time; but much of it has already been written—pray God the most of it—and we do want to know as soon as possible how to plan for the recouping of the terrible losses of the past months, other years, perhaps the most fruitful of all the year.

Accurate Records

Accurate records of the promptness of the churches will be kept by the Program Committee. First place will be gained in case of a tie by the one that first reports. "Now then, Do It" is becoming a good slogan and always will be because it is so easy to defer things and this is too important to be deferred. The way to get right with the Program is to "do it now" as soon as this comes to you.

Shall We Report If We Have Lost All Goals?

By all means. Certainly, that will not be good news, but it will be important news. The only way we shall be able to erase the awful blackness of the charts on pages 8, 10 and 11 of the Hand Book and therefore from the records of last year, is to get reports.

Reports, whether they are good or bad! I am here to assure you that the one I send to my District Director will not look good compared to the one I desired to have ready for this time, but I shall send it, nevertheless. Report all the goals you have lost even if it is sixteen.

What Shall We Do To Be Saved?

Many of the people who are expected to report have often preached on the above subject. Then, you have, perhaps, preached on "What Must I Do to Be Lost?" and answered, NOTHING. That is all one needs to be lost—just nothing. That is all you need to do to lose this program. If we gain it, however, it will be done by whole-hearted co-operation by every member of the churches all over this land of ours. Keymen, pastors, organization leaders, just ordinary members—we all need assiduously to address ourselves to the tremendous task we have set for ourselves and do it as quickly as possible.

Now, A "Happy New Year"

Fellow Workers, that comes from the heart. In the last four years the world has been full enough of sorrow and disappointment. This fall and winter has been the worst ever for most pastors of the Brethren churches. Churches have had to pay for what they did not get and pastors have been accepting pay for services they could not give because opportunity denied it to them. It has not been easy for either pastor or laymen to endure it. But the good God knows best. In his wise providence, all will end well. Let us be happy in the opportunity that is to be ours and ^{once was} he is only trying more plainly to mark out for us ^{in to the} Let us not be blind nor asleep, but watching to see his ^{om-} gates in it all.

Tomorrow

What will tomorrow tell? A letter from one of my parishioners in a distant city a few days ago wrote: "we are living in strange times." Who will deny it? The whole of Europe is unmade. America, whether in loud tones or faint, is threatened with the rumblings of a different world. Old precedents are being broken right and left and new conduct is already in vogue or coming. With the unmaking, we had little to do. With the remaking, we ought to have and to do our full share. Can we do it? Are we ready to do it? Small as is our number, we are not so small as Gideon's 300. At home and abroad, the tomorrow is to be different. Whether the promised Coming is to be the climax of the present crisis or whether the world is really to be shaped for a time by the Councillors at the peace table, the time is portentous. Is God with us as he was with Gideon? If he is, the program is important and we ought to give ourselves to its most diligent advancement. Tomorrow—ours is but a small number of months distant—and a big lot of the program is still unfinished. Perilous times have been passed and perilous times are still ahead. Let us keep steady; diligent; alert. Tomorrow will be too late unless we do well what we have for the task, today.

BE SURE TO REPORT!

IF IN DOUBT, CONSULT THE HANDBOOK.

BAME.

GENERAL ARTICLES

The New Sense of World Brotherhood. By J. L. Gillin

A new epoch has begun in human history. This new year sees a decision in human history which marks a step forward in the development of the Kingdom of God. It sees the death of the doctrine of the supremacy of Might in human affairs. It sees the embodiment of that doctrine in cowardly flight from his own land and from the people for whom he claimed to have such affection. The new year will mark not only a new year but a new epoch. "Old things have passed away: behold, all things are becoming new."

During the four years of war two significant things have happened which have a bearing upon the relations of peoples. One of these is that as never before the rest of mankind has become conscious of the German sense of superiority to other nations. The other is that the nations allied against Germany in the great struggle have discovered in their common danger from the enemy a new bond of fellowship.

The arrogance of the Germans was well known only to those who had come into close touch with them. The diplomats knew it full well. Scholars who had read much in German philosophy, German politics and German Political Economy or who had traveled in Germany knew it well. Any of you who read my articles describing my trip to Europe ten years ago will remember that I mentioned the lack of German civility towards foreigners, especially to those who could not speak their language well. In some respects I think that arrogance is somehow a part of the German character. One can not fail to notice it in many Germans he has known in this country. At any rate in Germany they certainly possess it with respect to anything German. To hear Germans talk, there was never any such goods as German-made goods. German science and philosophy, German technology, German literature, German music and even German are were, to hear them tell it, beyond comparison with any other. That was their conception of the superiority of what they called German Kultur.

Not only had the Germans persuaded themselves that they were the greatest nation in the world, but they had well nigh persuaded the rest of mankind that they were God's chosen people. This they had done through their educational system. They furnished the best system of graduate study to be found in the world. This they provided at very little cost through their state universities. Their universities attracted students for graduate work from all over the world. Not only did these institutions furnish the best training for graduate students in many lines, but they also inculcated respect for Kultur, which in many cases carried over in the thoughts of the students from other countries into other realms than education.

On the other hand, no sooner did the war break out with Germany's refusal to allow Austria to compromise with Serbia and with her violation of her sacredly pledged word to respect the neutrality of Belgium, followed soon after by Bethmann-Holweg's cynical assertion that necessity knows no law, and that the treaty was but a scrap of paper, than the English and Americans for the most part saw what the French had long known, that German Kultur was founded on the doctrine of Might as against the doctrine held by the Entente nations and the United States, the doctrine of Justice. The Kaiser was right last spring when he said that this war is a struggle of ideals. The recognition of this difference between the national ideals of Germany on the one hand and the ideals of the Entente nations on the other also made clear what before had been obscure, namely, that the other Western nations, especially the great democracies, cherished ideals very much alike. The ideals included that of Justice.

By Justice we have come to understand through the terrible struggles and sufferings of this war that we mean a number of things. We mean that course of conduct which we should desire from another were we in his place in dealing with us. In short we mean the application of the Golden Rule of Jesus. Moreover, we apply that ideal of justice both to the individual within the nation and to other nations and peoples. To the German the State is supreme as over against the individual; the strong state as against the weak one. At once the people of England, France and America—aside from those individuals who had succumbed to German Kultur—saw that they possessed common national ideals. Not only the bond of common danger but the magnet of common ideals drew the peoples arrayed against the Germans together into a fellowship of feeling and action. Thus two things good came out of the terrible war—(1) clear-cut conception of common ideals as against opposing ideals, and (2) the drawing together of those possessing a common ideal and common purpose. Unfortunately, however, the war stirred up strife and hate as well as fellowship between different nations and peoples.

The Germans have seen their armies beaten. They have seen the hated English and the despised Americans and the contemptible and "degenerate" French force them to surrender their proud armies and their beloved navy. They have seen the enemy upon German soil. They have heard their "Deutschland uber Alles" answered with the Marseillaise. They have been compelled to have their cry "Gott strafe England" shoved down their own throats. They have been starved for four years for naught. They find themselves burdened with not only their own enormous war-debt but with the burden of paying for their wanton devastations. Naturally they will not at once feel very kindly towards those who have dashed their dreams to earth and destroyed their fondest hopes. Can the Germans be included in this new sense of brotherhood?

The answer to that question depends largely upon two things: (1) Upon how completely they have been whipped. No one knows just what the conditions in Germany are at the time this is written. If the Germans have been so completely overcome that throughout the Empire there is a recognition that the things for which Germany fought cannot be obtained, not only now but evermore, then there is the possibility that the German people may come to revise their social and national ideals. All depends upon (2) the way in which the conquerors treat the conquered Germans. If the Allies and the United States treat them firmly, but kindly, establishing order, but bringing to them food and helping the people to change their conception of the ideals of the Allies and the United States, that sense of brotherhood may include the peoples of the Central powers also. On the other hand if the Allies mistreat the inhabitants of the Central Empires, returning evil for evil, rather than good for evil, allowing their people to starve even if it is possible to give them food, heaping insult upon them as they have heaped injury and insult upon the occupied territories of France and Belgium, then we shall have a fine harvest of sullen hate that a hundred years cannot overcome. In short if the spirit of Christianity, the spirit of mercy for a fallen foe, inspires the Allies in their dealings with the Germans, then we may hope that this war shall have brought us a little nearer not only to clearer views on Liberty and Democracy, but to that ideal of Paul which he declared before the adherents of an ancient Kultur, a race as proud of the achievements of their race as the Germans, and with much more reason in their day, the Greeks, when on Mar's Hill he declared, "God hath made of one blood all nations that dwell on the face of the earth." The test of our Christian spirit is coming in the next few months. Yesterday was the judgment day of Kultur. Now is the judgment day for Christian civilization.

Challenges of the New Year. By George H. Jones

Challenges are of two kinds. First, there is the challenge of difficulty, the lure of a worthy goal bringing out every characteristic that God counts worth while in the conqueror who overcomes himself and loses his identity in the glory of a noble cause. It is the summons of a great cause. Second, there is the challenge to mortal combat of an enemy, where the total defeat of the vanquished is sought.

In olden times a challenge came from one Christian knight to another, in an endeavor to try his courage and skill. From this high ideal came a descent in later times to less honorable motives, some using the knightly joust or tournament to defeat and kill an antagonist. Many enmities were settled in this way. The duel of the past century was a survival of the old custom of the right to challenge when a gentleman was offended.

Challenges to the church imply the ever present conflict between good and evil; right against wrong; the divine against the devilish. These challenges to the church partake of a nature that threatens its very existence. The two cannot exist in harmony. In past ages the strength and power of the church was dedicated to righting wrong, the defeat of evil and the encouragement of good. Wherever and whenever its opportunity came, the permanence of its work was guaranteed by the quality of its service. Its secret of strength, if there was any secret, rested in its unselfish spirit to lift man higher than his habits, to purify his impulses and to teach him self-control through the mightiest personality the world ever saw—the Lord Jesus Christ.

The old year has been an eventful one. The new will be in its way equally as wonderful. Challenges varied as the old are beginning to fling out their banners, and problems legion in number and puzzling as any we have yet faced. Our greatest danger will not be in our own activity, but in our selection. Our bias is our danger. There is nothing sadder than a man of splendid parts, or an organization of noble men and women, frittering away their strength and power, totally immersed in minor maladjustments of society, that will eventually right themselves, if subordinated, as they should be, to the greater evils to which they are related, busying ourselves with methods, when vital problems are tottering to defeat, because of neglect, neglecting the weightier matters of national and local morals and customs.

The New Year calls for new choices. There are industrial knots to untie; social errors to rectify; moral values to rejuvenate; political chaos to stabilize; religious facts to be given new applications. Every realm of human endeavor is needing readjustment. As a church we are interested in some of them exclusively, as individuals we are interested in all of them, as Christians our interests are largely, though not exclusively, in the moral and religious challenges. Any neglect of these endanger all that we have won.

What the contribution of the Brethren church in the past has been other than in a local manner, is a mooted question. We have no time in this article to debate the question. It has been in the writer's opinion larger than most of us think. But we must concern ourselves with the past only as it helps to direct our future.

Many local opportunities are offering themselves and challenging our strength and faith. Many denominational goals are calling. Our loyalty to these many and essential standards is necessary. We are put upon our mettle by these multiplied calls, but our answer to them will prove whether we can rise to our privileges and become a factor in, not only local affairs, but national as well.

The Changing Order

It is universally conceded that the world cannot be the same since the war, as it was before. We need to see the change and heed the direction in which it is going. Back of the effect is the cause. The past two or three years has crystallized many ideals. Co-operation and concentration have been the passwords of the times. Efficiency has been the open Sesame to every effort. Capital and labor have worked more harmoniously than ever before. Recreation has had more scientific and conscientious consideration than it ever had. Comforts and luxuries have become not only common, but excessive. Poverty has almost disappeared. The reaction is bound to set in some time. When, only God knows. Compelling our serious consideration are the following National Challenges that overshadow so many minor ones.

Sabbath Desecration

The glory of the early settlers in America was the religious significance of Sunday—the Lord's Day. The efforts of selfish interests, and unrestrained passion for pleasure have combined to undermine the sacredness of the day. Under pleas of personal privilege and the bribe of charity, the land has become aflame with efforts to make a holiday out of a holy day. Thinking minds in every epoch of our national history have solemnly warned us against the subtle desecration of the day, some have even gone so far as to prophecy the beginning of the wreck of our national life, when loose religious ideals permit the thoughtless to secularize the day. Coming from Europe where a continental Sunday is the weekly holiday—not in England, but in Belgium, France and Germany, we will have to face the challenge of a looser religious ideal of the Lord's Day than ever. Will the church stand ready to meet the challenge?

The Cigarette Evil

One of the alarming features of the world war, was the total surrender of two great religious and benevolent institutions to the devil of Nicotine. At the close of a gigantic war that nourished so many splendid ideals, was one fact that not only left many with a disappointed feeling, but stands accountable for many deaths. It is the cigarette habit. Their surrender of their high ideals of physical health for the sake of a usefulness that was sure to be theirs in any event, thinking men stand appalled at the lack of foresight. Young soldiers by the thousands learned to smoke or after a short resistance, took up with an old and evil habit and became again victims of the Little White Slavers. The sceptical press everywhere sneered openly and advertised the fact that these institutions were the biggest distributors of "Th Coffin Nail" the world ever saw. What a spectacle! A habit is encouraged that sober business men and reputable physicians have dubbed as "the prolific cause of untold physical deterioration and moral lapses." The death toll when hard users of cigarettes were badly wounded or contracted pneumonia was so serious that only God and the government could keep track of the damage. It was strange too how press and public orator were hypnotized when the great tobacco trust boasted of its entire output dumped into the lungs of our boys through religious organizations. A false idea of patriotism closed the lips and paralyzed the pens of almost everybody. Physiologically any physician can describe its ravages. Morally, the reformers have been telling us, its ravages are great. Where now are the prophets of Israel? There is no challenge fraught with bigger consequences than the cigarette evil.

Christianizing Money

Business ethics are not always Christian even in a Christian land. Vast fortunes which the government proposes to tax almost to forfeiture is mute evidence of the profiteering of great corporate bodies, having a mind to make money, but no soul to have a conscience. Consider the war profits, so-called, the abnormal dividends when the very sons of the profiteers were paying in blood for an ideal which their fathers were selling at 50 percent on the investment.

The corporation seconded by the individual business man who transacted business upon the basis of "Get all you can," resulted in government regulations to prevent further extortion.

The same principle has dragged the generosity of the man who gave the Lord $26.00 per year on a $1,000.00 wage, and still gives the same on $2,000.00, in withholding from God what belongs to him. Worship of mammon, or the spirit of covetousness, is the same in each case.

Mission apportionments are as hard to get as ever, even with only 50 percent advance in incomes. Financing the activities of the Kingdom through our average church is as hard a task as ever, even with the many swollen incomes. Of course the cost of living has advanced.

The challenge of the covetous spirit ought to stimulate the church to a restatement of its position on tithing. To tithe seems the only adequate answer to the problem.

The church has risen to the situation in the past. What she has done she can do again. The stalwart Christian knights whose armor of faith never failed, have left us an heritage of which we can be proud. Their devotion in other days to the great tasks they faced, is inspiring to those who gird themselves for the battle today. They battled against immorality until even politicians were willing to close the red light districts and admit the folly of their coinage, "Without such houses a decent woman would not be safe on the street."

They battled against subtle bribery, which challenged those in authority to secure justice. It is now looked upon as such an ugly act that even criminals shrink from attempting it. Its only survival now is "tipping" men to do what they are paid regular wages to perform.

The battle against duelling, the quickest method, and the safest from the charge of murder, to get rid of an enemy;

Against lotteries until public sentiment was educated in favor of a law condemning them;

Against gambling, the ruin of many a splendid career;

Against the licensed liquor traffic until—but what can we say more? Faith and faithful men have accomplished miracles.

Facing the coming year with so much to inspire us, the tasks before us challenge our faith and faithfulness. Sabbath desecration we will fight; the cigarette evil we will fight; the covetous spirit we will fight, with all the attendant evils that comes from indulgence in these forms of sin.

Not forgetting the fact that when we change an individual life we begin the change of his environment. When there has been a sufficient number of lives changed, the environment of a whole community will be transformed. Reformation like charity begins at home, and great moral and religious transformations begin in the individual life. Our biggest challenge is the nearest unconverted man or woman.

Coping with Difficulties. By G. L. Maus

While the nation is aroused and responsive as never before and while the boys are in constant motion coming from the camps and from the front, it is time for the church to adopt some program as great for the church as the war program was for National patriotism, or for financial interests which are profiting by the war. During the last two years the strain of this awful war has brought calls on every side, such as, Red Cross, Young Men's Christian Association, etc. Patriotism has been running high everywhere, thus making the work of the church exceedingly difficult. The "flu" epidemic which has taken more lives than the war itself, has completely changed the winter program, which we fear will cause a reflection through out the whole year, as some of our churches have been closed for weeks and some for months by the State Board of Health, and this too makes our work more difficult. How are we going to meet these things? There is just one way we as a church are going to meet these difficulties and that is by every man and woman putting him or herself to the work as never before.

It is striking testimony to the influence of the church in the world that comes from one not overly friendly to Christianity and much less to the church, when he declares that with the decline of the church, sin and evil have increased and the real problem which we face today is not this, that, or the other specific evil, but is primarily a religious problem. We are not ready to admit the decline of the church, but we will agree with the statement, that with the decline of the church, sin and evil will increase, and for this very reason, if for no other, the church is entitled to the support of every man who has in his heart some way to better the conditions of human society. It is also implied in the statement that the church at its best has within itself the power to solve every problem that has to do with the welfare of human life. A church, if it be a church, a real church, with Christ as its source of inspiration and power, is an earthly located reservoir of moral supremacy and divine omnipotence; it is one of heaven's spiritual dynamics let loose on terrestrial ground, and its possibilities are unlimited. We plead, therefore, not only for the solemn dignity of the church, but for its responsibilities and incalculable possibilities, for there is no calculating the reach of any object, of which God holds the heavenly end and that is inflated with some of God's original breath. It is by the possession of this superior life, superhuman life, the divine impulse descending into the soul of men from God, that the church has secured to itself its distinguished moral leadership—a leadership which it can maintain only as this divine life of God continues to flow through the life of the individual that constitutes the church.

We believe we have a whole Gospel church as it was instituted by Jesus Christ and propagated by his apostles. The one supreme need of the hour, facing the difficulties as they are before us, is supreme faithfulness to the faith of our fathers. Faithfulness to the church means faithfulness to him who loved it and gave himself for it. We need a church faithfulness characterized by a sublime seriousness which will cause us to struggle for spiritual ideals, for the advancement of the church, and for the enlargement of our own powers. Pastors and laymen in the Brethren Church, we need a faithfulness that strikes deep into our religious life. Jesus says, "By their fruits ye shall know them." John says, "Be thou faithful unto death." Rev. 2:10. This is a command that lasts a long time—"unto death." What are we saying? Do we realize it? We are none of us sure how far away death is. Even if it should be a long way off, then our faithfulness to God and duty should be just as long, even until death. We are to be faithful in every thing all through life. The word we should never forget is faithfulness. The men and women who make a success of business are the men and women who are faithful. And the people who receive the crown of life are those who ring true. When we are faithful to God and to duty and in all our attempts to carry out our best purposes in the midst of difficulties, then we are making a success. It is a beautiful thing to possess, the quality of faithfulness, and God always rewards those who possess it. When we think of this it will help us to be faithful, even in the midst of difficulties, and when things are hard we cannot help but succeed if we are faithful. Let us ever set before us the words of John, Rev. 2:10 and always try to live up to it and we will receive the crown of life.

GROW SOME NEW WOOD

When Longfellow was well along in years, he was asked how it was that he was able to keep so young and write so beautifully. In reply he pointed to a blooming apple tree near by, saying, "That apple tree is very old but I never saw prettier blossoms upon it than those which it now bears. The tree grows a little new wood every year, and I suppose it is out of that new wood that those blossoms come. Like the apple tree, I try to grow a little new wood each year." Try it yourself as the new year begins.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The Outlook for Faith: A Christmas Meditation

By William D. Furry, Ph.D.

SCRIPTURE: Luke 8:20

To countless multitudes Christmas Day, 1918 has come with new and added benediction. Apart from the first Christmas Day there has never been another like unto the present one. For four years the day enshrined by the centuries as the sublime festival of universal peace has dawned upon a world bleeding with cruel and pitiless war. The song of the angelic host whose golden melodies have floated down to us from that radiant Judean night when the heavens broke forth in minstrelsy have been wholly drowned by the clamors of deadly strife and the calm beauty of that first Christmas Star reddened by the fitful glare of bloody battle. But yesterday the nations of the earth were at war. During the past four years the world has passed through the bloodiest war of all history. Property of incalculable worth has been wantonly destroyed. Millions of the sons of men have made the supreme sacrifice. Hatred, envy, strife and covetousness have suppressed the Christmas Spirit which is the spirit of joy and peace and love. The moral darkness resting upon the earth the past four years is comparable only to that which rested upon the earth at the time of the coming of the Prince of Peace. However much we may lament we can but admire the consistency of the German-American woman who a year ago in decking a Christmas tree refused to hang upon it any radiant symbol of the Christ-child; and who would not permit a star or angel to grace the summit. Instead the traditional Eagle of Odin spread his wings on the top twig and the Snake, whom our northern forefathers saw at the roots of the world-tree Ygdrasil coiled, with red tongue poisonously struck out, high among the branches "The tree has always belonged to the Snake; it was a mistake to suppose that the Christ-child had killed him," was the bitter comment of the woman upon her own act.

The Seeming Failure of Faith

And today her kind is legion. To multitudes the failure of faith is evident. Numerous magazine articles have appeared since the outbreak of the war giving discouraging accounts of the conditions of organized Christianity. The impression has become quite general that the Christian faith has lost much of its former standing, that many of the beliefs formerly held with undisturbed confidence are no longer tenable, that very much of the Bible has been discredited, and that the teachings of our religion are no longer worthy of serious consideration. The result is that many persons are no longer giving serious thought to the things of the spirit. Statistical studies of the church both urban and rural yield similar forebodings. If the world war has demonstrated any one thing at all it is that the church as the organized confession of faith has failed in the present crisis to make itself felt in any unified and effective way. Tested by any of the cardinal principles of faith Christianity seems hopelessly to have broken down. Approaching the problem from this point of view many serious minded persons have reached the conclusion that the outlook for the Christian faith lacks both assurance and encouragement.

Not Decadent but Renascent

But to others equally serious and thoughtful the Christian faith is not decadent but renascent. All that has been said and written in recent months about the failure of the church, the impending crisis and the church at the crossroads, has been said a thousand times and will doubtless be said as often again. History, it has been said, is an excellent cordial for drooping faith. The persons who are forever lamenting the passing of the "good old days of the faith," exhibit stronger sentiment than historical sense. There has not been a time in the history of the Christian faith when essays on its failure would not have commanded a reading. The task of the church is to bring human nature including human society into an ideal state, and it is always failing. But there has never been a time when the Christian church was so clearly aware of its task and so earnestly and successfully engaged in it as at the present time; never a time when the Bible was so intelligently read and so reasonably interpreted; never a time so rich in Christian privilege and opportunity and so replete with constructive Christian activity. There is today a genuine and profound awakening of faith especially of our American Protestantism and the future is redolent with promise and charged with limitless possibilities.

Evidences of Optimistic Outlook

The closing statement of the last paragraph will be questioned; and since we are enjoined to have always a reason for the faith within us it may be well to cite the evidences upon which the optimistic outlook for faith is founded. What we will do depends upon what we believe. The most important thing about any man, writes Chesterton, is what he thinks. Faith is not an illusion canonized. Faith is a religious experience but religious experience is not necessarily Christian faith. To the Christian the great matter is not that he feels but what he feels. In much of our modern faith sympathy has supplanted certainty. We have impressions but lack insight. Our faith is weak today on the intellectual side. The first stage in the solution of a problem is a knowledge of the problem itself. While not of the world our faith is nevertheless in the world and in the accomplishment of its task dare neither be ignorant nor indifferent to the problems and conditions presented by the world. To win the world for our faith demands knowledge both of the faith and the world to be won. There are times however when world-conditions are more auspicious for the future of faith than others. In the history of Christian faith there have been only two really creative epochs—the fourth century and the twentieth. The first is now history. The second is now in the making. As the church of the fourth century had to re-think itself in terms of the Greek and Roman worlds so the church of today needs re-think itself in terms and under the influence of the thought of the twentieth century. And evidences are not wanting that the church as the custodian of faith is adjusting itself to new world-conditions in ways that guarantee an enlarging place in the new world.

(1) The modern world dates from the introduction of the scientific spirit and method. This movement is scarcely more than a half-century old. For a long time the church, in the supposed interest of its own welfare, assumed an attitude of hostility toward this movement. To many persons even so moderate a position as that of Hasting's Dictionary of the Bible was repugnant. Insisting upon a bald literalism in the interpretation of the Bible this movement gave rise to such organizations as the Holy Rollers, The Millennial Dawnists, the Church of the Nazarenes, etc. But persons trained in the modern scientific methods of study could not bring themselves to the acceptance of the Bible as interpreted by the literalists. While not committing one's self to the so-called Higher Criticism it has become possible for the student to accept every claim the Bible makes for itself without outraging or compromising his sense of intellectual honesty and decency. In abandoning the legal and atomistic interpretation of the scriptures for a more vital and historical method the church is paving the way for a new day for religious faith.

(2) In its recognition of the social implications of the Gospel of Jesus Christ the church is also exhibiting a faith which the modern man can accept. One wonders in reading the Gospels why this aspect of the teachings of Jesus should ever have been lost. Since the Christians at Jerusalem undertook to provide for the widows, the church has always regarded the poor as peculiarly the object of its care. The history of the church abundantly shows that it was the church that built hospitals, schools, asylums and made charity a passport to paradise. The estrangement between the church and the world is rather of the church's own making. It is not urged in the present connection that the social task is the primary task of the church but it is urged that it is a task from which the church can not release itself without the loss of prestige and power. The task of the church in the world is two-fold: (1) the task of Spiritual Authority and (2) the task of Social Sympathy. The second has too long been ignored and the assumption of this aspect of the task of the church presages a larger and more enthusiastic acceptance by the masses.

(3) The larger place of faith in the world tomorrow is assured by the increased interest exhibited by the church in the problem of religious education. Never since the beginning days has the church shown so high regard for religious education of youth as now and religious education as now understood is the serious endeavor to utilize the highly developed study of educational processes and methods for religious purposes. To train the child the way he should go is today regarded as a task and a responsibility than which the church has no greater. The old uniform lesson system can only be regarded as the climax of non-scientific method in religious education. The past decade has witnessed significant advances both in the content and method of the Sunday school. The task of the church is the creation of Christian ideals as interpreted by the church. The Bible must therefore hold the first place in religious education. In religious education the content is incomparably of greater value than method, for the content is the only thing that can give experience its religious value. "It is the content that turns psychology into theology, thought into revelation and experience into faith." (Forsyth). Only the Bible can create the power to believe the Bible. Self-redemption is a self-contradiction. The growing recognition of the supreme place of the Bible as the exclusive content of religious education means the beginning of a new and brighter day for faith.

(4) The rise of a new denominationalism of a federated type means also the beginning of a new day for faith. It used to be urged that denominationalism is a scandal to Christianity, but the larger thought of our day finds that denominationalism is the inevitable implication of Protestantism. But we are also coming to discern that denominationalism is not necessarily sectarianism. Unity does not necessarily necessitate union. Today denominationalism is largely a matter of doctrinal emphasis and with our growing sense of the breadth and depth and individuality of religious experience we are no longer scandalized by the presence of differences of denominational emphasis.

Revival of Denominationalism

There is however today a revival of genuine denominationalism. If any religious body is to continue its career of usefulness it must find some motive strong enough to give unity to its membership. Denominational self-respect, a sense of divine calling and mission must possess any denomination which would earn for itself a place in the world. The negative mood never wins in religion. The secret of denominational growth and effectiveness is the possession by the church of the prophetic mood which means that the soul is possessed and obsessed by some great truth or truths which the world needs and the church is divinely responsible for the giving. The Brethren church had its rise in the midst of numerous and conflicting denominations and was urged to independent existence by the conviction that only a complete restoration of the Primitive Apostolic church gave ground for ecclesiastical units. Its plea then and still is restoration rather than reformation. Our plea is an undenominational plea for the New Testament church as expressly set forth in the Gospels. The only really universal church must in a very vital sense be the original Apostolic church. To Brethren Jesus is the starting point rather than the goal of the church. As we can not develop beyond him in matters of faith so we can not develop beyond his form of the church. We must adhere to the original type.

In the light therefore, of these new notes of faith of our day we must believe that this is not an ill day for faith but the beginning of a new and better day. Faith is not in peril. The church has not failed save as every other institution has failed. The Bible has still a message for men, Christ still brings new life, and Christian faith still stands unshaken in the thought and confidence of men. A new day for faith is immediately ahead of us. The Son of Man still finds faith on the earth.

New Year Ideals

This new year more than all others offers inspiration for new and loftier ideals. A new and larger world of possibilities is unveiled challenging to a higher conception and a higher realization of life and its relations. These ideals give ceaseless, tormenting unrest until peace is sought in zealous effort to attain them. By nature we continually become life our ideals. On this fact hangs the hope of the individual and the world, as well as the possible curse of all. It is of supreme importance, therefore, that ideals shall be of the highest order.

First in every Christian's life should be the desire for a daily growing realization of divine indwelling. Success in time and eternity depends upon maintaining a vital relation with God, who is our life. "Abide in me and I in you," for "Without me ye can do nothing." The branch is fruitless and lifeless apart from the vine.

If the church is the body of Christ, every member of that body should make the welfare and work of the church the first business of life. Nothing should be permitted to interfere with fidelity to him who is the Christian's partner in life and service.

In the home Christ should be the constant Guest, though unseen, yet joyously felt. Here we find the pivot on which turn all the problems of society. The spiritual presence of Christ alone can make the home all that God intended it to be, the inspiration of life, the refuge from the coldness of the world; the training school of the soul and the door-way to heaven.

The Christian's ideal is not complete until it has imbibed a generous portion of the Christ-spirit of sympathy and neighborly kindness. It was sympathy that brought Christ into the world. He found humanity robbed and bleeding by the wayside and his true followers will not desire to play the part of the priest or Levite. Sympathy for the needy is the genius of Christianity.

The Christian ideal may seem dizzy high to the world but he who wears Christ's name dare not accept anything less than the perfect human life.

G. S. B.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Second Highest Percentage Gain

Brethren Sunday school workers may be greatly encouraged with the gratifying gains set forth in the twelve page leaflet published by the National Sunday School Association, entitled "A Year's Stewardship." During a year when other denominations, almost without exception, were reporting losses Brethren schools seemed to have made complete gains. The twenty-two percent gain of Graduate Teachers is peculiarly significant. The figure is exceeded in only one instance, the amount of total offerings which was increased by twenty-eight and two-tenths per cent.

That is a most commendable teacher training record. It is indicative of the fact that our people are realizing the urgent necessity and vital importance of teacher training. Once this department is duly appreciated and properly organized other problems will be speedily solved, for the trained teacher is the key that unlocks many closed doors. We will hardly be able to duplicate last year's achievement during the present year because an enlarging number of our schools are adopting the Three-Year course. But we may exceed the fine gain in enrolling teacher training students and completing the First Year's work. It is just possible that the influenza epidemic defeated some cherished plans for new classes. In any such event let the promoters remember that it is not too late to organize a teacher training class. To employ the pregnant phrase of Brother Trent, our worthy General Secretary, regard your "DISappointment as HISappointment." Yea verily, and is there a more fitting way to begin the work of this New Year of grace than by organizing a teacher training class? Complimentary words are being received concerning "The Educative Process in Religion," Part II of our First Year book. The number of copies which you need will be mailed immediately on receipt of your order. If a class cannot be maintained, which condition has come to be the exception, see how many persons will agree to study the book individually. Without a class or individual students your school cannot qualify on Point 5 of the Standard of Excellence as a Front Line School.

J. A. GARBER.

MISSIONS

Some New Mission Opportunities for the Year

By Edwin Boardman, Jr.

It is Nineten Hundred and Nineteen! What do these words mean to you? Just think a minute. Over nineteen hundred years ago a little child was born who was destined to change the course of the whole world. So great has been the influence of this Master Personality upon the lives and hearts of men that nearly one-half of the people in the world have been constrained to "look at him, believe on him and be saved." His gospel message has been ringing its glad tidings to a whole world, but the strange thing about it is that only parts of the world have heard it. The other parts are blind to the "marvelous Light" and deaf to the stirring call of the Christ. There is a reason for this blindness and deafness and the sad part of the matter is that the reason is to be found in the negligence of Christian people to carry the news of salvation to a whole world. Thus in a sense there are no "new mission opportunities" for the proposition is centuries old. With this fact in mind let us have a little heart to heart talk about the situation from a Brethren standpoint.

What is the Brethren standpoint? Now come on, what do you believe about missions? You think they are a good thing? So does anyone who has ever thought anything about the matter at all. What do you think about your Brethren responsibility to a lost world? You believe in John 13, and you wouldn't feel safe unless you had been immersed three times; and the communion and love feast you believe in with all your heart. You say you believe all the New Testament scriptures and you have taken them as your rule of faith and practice. All right, before you go any farther with this article look up the last message of Jesus to his followers in Matt. 28 and also in Acts 1. "Understandest thou what thou readest?" If you have understood you have no doubt come to the conclusion that the Brethren church and a certain brother or sister by your name have certainly failed in a full obedience to the Christ. According to the Book the Brethren follow, we can believe in nothing less than a "whole gospel for a whole world" and this must be our platform. Now we are ready to look at some of these 1919 mission opportunities.

First, with the breaking up of the European armies many of the territorial troops of France and England will return home. Most of these men are from Africa and India, though there are also representatives from China and the islands of the sea. These men will take home stories of Europe,—its people, manners, customs, and religion. Their eyes will have been opened to the arts of civilized living. They will be loth to go back to the old life of poverty, squalor, and ignorant savagery for even during the horror of war they have seen much that is good. Their religious conceptions have been affected. Whether Pagans, Mohammedans, or Hindoos they have been brought into contact with Christianity through Y. M. C. A. huts, Salvation Army workers, and through public Christian meetings. Ideals of life will be different for their ignorant provincialism has been shaken to pieces. These returning soldiers will present a problem to the missionaries laboring in the countries to which they will return, for the "backwash" of war will be felt, but these men will also present a nucleus of aggressive spirits by which new advances can be made. The opportunity of thoroughly meeting an added big job in mission lands is thus presented.

In the second place the world is opened as never before to aggressive Christian effort. Turkey is asking that the United States establish a protectorate in her territories. As a nation she has fallen and a staggering blow has been given to Islam. The whole "near East" is thus peculiarly open to Christian teaching and effort. Palestine has been proclaimed as the modern homeland of the Jew and a new nation is destined to be born in that land if present plans materialize. Tibet, Afghanistan and other hitherto closed lands are opening wide their doors to a better faith and a more glorious future. It has even been suggested that the United States should take Germany's African colonies and govern them as they have the Philippines thus relieving some of France and Britain's burden.

Stand back as you will, Brethren, you cannot say you have no opportunity to serve your King. His world is opening wide its portals so that the angel's song of "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which SHALL BE TO ALL PEOPLE," can really become a truth. This open world makes more compelling than ever the positive need for the church awakening to her task.

Another opportunity of peculiar importance

Plan Your Missionary Program for the Year Early

This year, 1919, is going to be one of the greatest years for missions in modern times. The war has greatly interrupted many missionary enterprises, but the great missionary need was never so keenly felt. This past year has witnessed great changes in the churches of every denomination, both in America and abroad.

Ministers, our own as well as those of other denominations, are preaching more seriously than they ever did. They are facing tremendous situations in the task of reconstruction, for the whole world is in a flux. For these reasons there are going to be more inquiries about what the Christian religion is and how it works and where it works. There is a great opportunity, therefore, for the church to supply the information and to "round up" all the popular interest in the subject. This is where mission study classes to the Brethren is the fact that we are just about to swing open the door of the Ubangi-Shari region in Africa and the opportunity is open to us to invest life and treasure in winning a whole people to Christianity. Brethren, we dare not be satisfied with sending only six missionaries into this place for this number will only make a beginning. There must be more missionaries sent and a reserve force prepared to carry the work on to a successful conclusion. Besides preaching the gospel to the natives there must be a system of education started to conserve the results. Translations of the language will be imperative. A new moral and social dynamic must be made an integral part of their life so that the whole social group will be shaken to its core. Then, too, is it too much to hope that some day there will be an industrial branch to our mission in that region?

The three opportunities mentioned above are but illustrations of what lies before us. I could tell of new points of advance in the Argentine, of the fine opportunity for vigorous work in the foreign sections of our large cities, of the needs in the highland sections of our country and the opportunity for real pioneer work in back country districts. All these "open doors" represent different phases of the missionary effort, but I have not the necessary space to tell of them.

Suffice it to say that 1919 holds fine possibilities in store for the Christian faith in general. It is our duty to appropriate our share in the world movement and carry the banner of the cross to new conquests, "Nihil sine labore" (nothing without labor) would be a good motto for our mission enterprise at this time. Remember it takes men, money and movement to win a lost world back to God.

can serve; a definite missionary program for the Sunday school will help wonderfully, and missionary leaflets will carry the message to those who cannot be induced to attend the services of the house of God.

So far as interdenominational work is concerned, we know of nothing better for the diffusion of missionary information than the publications of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. A catalogue of their stock may be obtained at 1 Madison Avenue, New York City. One of the best contributions they have made to the cause is their "Worker's Packet," which costs 10 cents. It consists of ten pieces of printed matter bearing upon "The Every Member Canvass." These are the suggestions of the missionary committee. You should send for this, if you don't have it already, before starting missionary campaigns or planning your program for the year.

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

Frankly Facing the Tasks of 1919. By J. A. Garber

A Frank Attitude

The New Year has caught us. A new world confronts us. Nineteen hundred and eighteen was replete with extremes. For a season the darkening clouds of discouragement hung very low, but once the tiny rift was seen the sun of triumph soon came into full vision. Now we are privileged to bask in the sunshine of promised peace. While the days of armed conflict have ceased, the times of militant service have not ended. The Christian institutions of America and the allied peoples sharing her ideals have been spared the further destruction of militarism in order that they might continue to be the instrument of God for the salvation of the world. To help to vindicate his overruling Providence the church must redouble her effort in the application of a saving gospel to a plastic world born in the birththroes of an unspeakably cruel war so that the new world shall be developed after the mind of Christ.

Behold Your Big Job

That is seen in and through it. Let it come within the range of your mental eyes with great frequency that you may study it minutely and intently. Not a little indifference and half-heartedness can be traced to the lack of a due appraisal of the work at hand. Before any group of persons give themselves with full abandonment to the accomplishment of a given task they must have some appreciation of the worth-whileness of the task. It was a belief that the principles of democracy were worth dying for that made millions of men willing to brave the indescribable hardships of carnage and tens of millions of people willing to support unstintedly their intrepid soldiers. We must prove that they neither suffered nor died in vain. They freed the forces of democracy; we must culture them. And what department of the church is better prepared by genius and method to perform this urgently needed service? Christian Endeavor is a democracy in miniature. It is a voluntary association of young people. One is their Master, even Christ, and under him they are all equals among equals. This democratic society is subject to none other, except the church, and it is under it only as the child is under the tutelage of the parent. It elects its own officers, directs its own finances and promotes its own work. Thus by actively doing, not by passively watching others, these young people, banded together for Christ and the church, learn how to manage the business of the Kingdom.

Take An Inventory

Since fidelity to Christ, loyalty to his church, training in the service of both, cultivation of the devotional spirit, consecration of substance and giving of self are invariable constants of Christian Endeavor, should we not make the immediate task of the new year that of determining who are sharing the blessings of this training school? Moreover this sort of reckoning accords perfectly with the spirit of the season. And again, the apparent success or failure of our larger work is conditioned by the way in which you deal with this first duty. Judging by the yearly statistical reports many of the societies, like the churches, do not keep definite and accurate records. This ought not so to be. The Master's business requires precision and accuracy. Without further delay let the president and his associate officers meet and determine exactly how many active and associate members are enrolled with the society; the number gained or lost; the number won to church membership; the number enrolled in the Army of Patriotic Service; the number of Quiet Hour Comrades; Tenth Legioners; the amount of money collected and disbursed; the number of Life Work Recruits and Christian Endeavor Experts. Compare these findings with the appointment stated on the Four Year

Challenge mailed to your society and you will have precisely stated the challenge that faces your society. Plan at once and work earnestly to make every goal. If you neither delay, nor relax, you will be able to make a creditable report the first of April when the annual statistics are asked for.

Help the Sunday School

This slogan suggests the January service-theme. Despite her larger family Christian Endeavor has never appeared jealous of her big sister, the Sunday school. Knowing that there is no occasion for competition but every reason for co-operation, Endeavorers have always counted it a joyous privilege to contribute to the teaching department of the church, and their contributions have been numerous and generous. Consequently, provision has been made for a Sunday School Committee as a regular part of the Society's organization. This is the opportune time for this committee to wait upon the superintendent, presenting him with the names of Endeavorers who desire to pursue the teacher training course and with the names of those who are willing to serve as substitute teachers and with names of those who are ready to sing in the Sunday school choir or play in the orchestra: asking him to co-operate with you in securing new members from the several classes and to help you to boost Christian Endeavor week. Such a spirit of reciprocity will issue in an interchange of fruitful endeavor and eliminate a lot of fruitless talk about the overlapping of the two departments. Wherever the fundamental aims of each are rightly understood and the working programs of both are properly correlated there is no duplication of effort. These agencies were organized and developed within the church under the direction of the Holy Spirit as helpers; why should men seek to estrange them and give them the relation of competitors? Let one compliment the work of the other and so fulfill the plan of God for both.

The Endeavor Society Helping the Sunday School

By W. R. Deeter

Realizing that there are many ways in which a society may be of valuable help to a Sunday school through co-operation, and of the different views others may hold, I want to present a few simple plans that I think will be useful and suggestive to societies as a whole. No efficient work can be done in any organization unless it proceeds in a systematic way, to develop needed spiritual culture and oversight. The custom of organizing a crowd of young folks with no spiritual leadership is wicked. It sets a low norm of ideals and leads them falsely to believe they are doing spiritual service, while it prevents a proper appeal on behalf of a leader's group. A prayer band of ten is often more desirable than a rabble of fifty.

The young people are the church of tomorrow, and must be developed for leadership as well as for their own sakes. They should be organized, not to free the older folks of responsibility but to give better opportunity for co-operation by wise, young-hearted, forward-looking elder leaders.

One among the various committees of the C. E. Staff should be the Sunday school committee. There are millions of youth in the United States not enrolled in any Sunday school, Protestant or Catholic. This committee is a kind of Look-out-Committee to obtain new scholars. If new members can be found for the Sunday school they will invariably affiliate themselves with the Endeavor and its work. Just now I recall where a pastor in the west went out and sought new members for the Organized Class, and in a short while its membership grew from eight to twenty-four. Resulting from this, aside from the good of the Class alone was an organized Christian Endeavor, where no organization had existed before. They were the hope of the church's future. Here are a few suggestive plans:—

1. A plan of religious census, or house to house visitation, is the most systematic way of doing the work of this committee. The plan is too long to fully outline here, so in brief, it consists in dividing the town or city into districts, giving one to each church; of dividing these districts again among workers, who visit the homes and obtain all the information possible concerning church preference, and Sunday school attendance, and record on blanks provided for the purpose. These are then collected and apportioned among the churches to follow up.

2. If such a plan cannot be operated for a whole city, then a district may be assigned and canvassed carefully.

3. The committee may assist teachers by calling upon pupils who have been absent from their classes.

4. They may assist the superintendent by securing pledges from persons to act as substitute teachers.

5. Wherever it is allowed, names may be secured from public school teachers of those in their rooms who do not attend Sunday school, or, young people in the schools may themselves obtain this information.

6. The Committee should also endeavor to interest as many other Christians as possible in the work of building up the Sunday school, and especially lay the needs and plans of the work before the members of the Society of Christian Endeavor.

7. The committee may prove a valuable aid in organizing county and township work under the State Sunday School Associations, and in conducting conventions.

These suggestions should be modified to fit your own locality and its peculiar needs. However none should be attempted without first consulting the Lord through prayer. And your prayers will be answered according to the amount of effort you put forth in performing the task, and as to what you are willing to redeem in work. If the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor is to become a greater power for the church today, it must be through the medium of young folks who are willing to be hitched up to larger loads than their fore fathers were, and to carry it to larger ends through a better organized means of systematized Christian work. The church must make room for its young people.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

TRAVEL NOTES

From Mountain View, Virginia, we went to Mosy, West Virginia, where we were in battle with the god of this world not quite two weeks. Brother Coleman is the pastor of the flock at Mosy, and considering his short time in the ministry he has done exceedingly well. God has blessed his ministry in bringing souls into the kingdom and in building a church house in which to worship, furnishing most of the money, and for good measure preaching for nothing. Brother Coleman, like Brother Duncan feels, that a young minister should come into the field in those parts and take up the work.

During the meeting nine souls saw the holy light, and came into the church making a good confession before many witnesses of our glorious Savior. Five of these came the last night of the meeting, four young men and one girl. They were fine young people. The meeting was just starting off fine when we had to close for the lack of time. God bless Brother Coleman and his people, and give them a great victory in the year 1919. We had our home with Brother Coleman, and happy were the many hours we spent together.

Our next stop was at Gatewood, West Virginia. Here we found almost every opposition imaginable, the "flu", rain, bad roads and many stumbling blocks in the church, but the Almighty conquered in the name of His Son Jesus, and twenty-one made the start for heaven, the homeland of the soul. The writer had the baptizing to do as the Gatewood church had no pastor. However, at the close of the meeting the church called for a business meeting and called Brother Coleman to take charge of the work as pastor until a regular pastor can be secured. Our home was with Brother Charles Jones while at Gatewood, and it was a good home in which to abide. May the dear Lord send to the people in West Virginia a good strong man who will lead those neglected ones on to victory. Brother A. B. Duncan and others have fought well, but feel the time has come when they should let a younger man take up the work.

May the King of Glory lead us on in heavenly splendor in the year 1919 and some good sweet day when the task is done may he call his own home to receive the "crown of life which shall not fade away. May we be kept in his great name that throbs with all life, light, and immortality."

When you read this if all goes well we will be in California. Our address until further notice will be Los Angeles, California, 426 East 49th St. With love to all in the Faith.

N. W. JENNINGS.

UNIONTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

God has been good to us, very good; and we are thankful to him, very thankful. The epidemic has passed and although a few of our folks contracted the disease, mostly in a mild form, we lost none as a result. The war has passed and we were fortunate to have no losses among the boys of our church, neither dead nor wounded. We were under the ban along with the rest of the churches, and according to the best advices the Uniontown church was closed longer than any of the others in the Brotherhood. Yet we are right side up and ready for increased service to the Master. The ban knocked us out of holding our Thanksgiving offering at the usual time, but we have arranged to hold it the 26th of January and look for a good response. We held our Christmas services on December 22nd and although it was a very nasty day, raining from morning until night, we had a good crowd present, and the White Gift offering that was conducted in connection with the exercises by the children netted the General work the neat sum of $91.69. Owing to conditions our Sunday school is down a little in attendance and the above represents an average offering of about ninety cents per member. Wouldn't an average like that for Foreign missions tickle the heart of our good Brother Bauman? We are sorry that the weather man was so against us for were it just a little more pleasant to travel we would doubtless have broken our record of last year when we gave slightly over $100. But note that average and keep that up through the Sunday schools and Brother Trent will have a celebration that will make the peace rejoicing look quite tame indeed.

Among other things that the ban disarranged for us was our revival meeting. We were forced to postpone that and now it will commence the 12th of January to continue at least three weeks. We solicit the prayers of all for greater things than we have ever been able to do hitherto. I was forced to call off the only meeting that I was billed to hold outside my own church, and feel sorry that I was also unable to respond to all the calls for evangelistic work that have come to me this fall. I like the work and only the interests of the church for which I am particularly responsible, caused me to close my ears to all calls for assistance. My church has been very gracious in permitting me to go to the assistance of others, and this year was no exception, but conditions this year are different from any year in the history of the church and we had to govern ourselves accordingly.

All the auxiliaries of the church are awake and working. It is a source of satisfaction to know that you have a loyal, enthusiastic, working body of members who willingly tackle anything that is shown to be of real worth to the church, be it local or the work at large, and just such a bunch of folks stand back of yours truly. Our lines are in pleasant places and we try to show our appreciation of the loyal support given by keeping the tugs pulled up tight on our side of the chariot. Mistakes all of us will make, but the membership here recognizes that a member may make a mistake as well as the pastor, something which some folks fail to recognize, and consequently we go on smoothly in the spirit of mutual forgiveness. May God help us develop that spirit more and more throughout our whole church.

Ere this is read by the church the new year will have slipped into its dock and we will have added responsibilities to answer for. May we all, laity as well as ministry, do all within us to measure up to what the good Lord is going to expect of us. His Word is very plain as to the things needful, and a constant perusal of it will help us to play the game of life not only more fairly but more effectively. Think of any athlete trying to play the games without first knowing the rules! So I would have you think of the Christian trying to take part in the greatest "game" without knowing the rule or guide book. Read the Word, meditate upon the Word, and most of all live the Word and the God of peace will be with you. I must wish a Happy New Year to all the Brethren, and especially to those doing their best in the Publishing House. Greetings to the new Editor and a promise of hearty support of all that is for the good of the cause to which I have dedicated my life is made to those upon whom we have laid hands for the trying work of editing and publishing our printed page.

The Springtime will soon be upon us, and as we draw near to it, or it to us we are thinking of the addition to our building that we have been looking forward to for some time. Uncle Sam has withdrawn his restrictions on building materials and as soon as prices come down a little we will be into the dirt and muss of extension work. The unsightly look of things that is bound to come with tearing out walls, etc., does not appeal to us, but we are looking beyond that to the completed church that we will have and it inspires us to the effort ahead.

When in your private devotions don't forget us before the throne of grace. We wish to be found doing the will of him who died for us, and we would be kept in the path that is called straight. We pray for all the Brethren and you can always believe us interested in the progress of the church. Yours until the Lord comes, and forever after that,

BROTHER ED.

Home Mission Notes

First Liberty Bond

The first Liberty Bond given to Kentucky mission work was received as a Christmas Gift on Christmas morning. The faithful donors were Brother and Sister Howard C. Williams, of Elmer, N. J. How many of our readers could, with or without self-denial, send Liberty Bonds to be used to further the Home Mission work of the Brethren church? The giver can designate the place where he desires his gift to be used. May this generous gift from our eastern friends serve as a worthwhile suggestion and inspiration to a hundred others in the Brethren church who can and ought to do likewise. Do it now.

Riverside Institute Opens

Brother Drushal announces that the Winter term of Riverside Institute will open on Monday, December 30, and that the prospects for a large attendance are good. May all who come in touch with Riverside come into touch with Jesus Christ.

Faithful Bantam Hens

Dear Mr. Carpenter: I send you a Christmas Gift, the money I saved from the eggs my Bantam hens laid on Sunday—$3.50. I sent it for the Kentucky Mission. Now I am going to save for the Easter offering. I want to send some to the missionaries I read about in the Brethren Missionary. Mamma says I can have an envelope to put it in. I am 9 years old.

Miss Lena Schubiger,
Frenchtown, N. J.

A Young Farmerette

Dear Brother Carpenter: I will send to the Kentucky Mission a Christmas Gift of $2.40 this year. I helped Papa and Mamma this summer on the farm and earned it. I hope to send more next year. I was 10 years old this fall. I wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Yours,

Vienna E. Hackett,
Hampton, N. J.

All From New Jersey

Has the reader noticed that all the gifts mentioned above, Liberty Bond and all came from New Jersey. Every child in the brotherhood ought to be trained in Christian missionary giving. If they are not trained while young they will not likely ever be trained. Praise God for the parents who set the right example before their children and teach them the gospel principles concerning mission and missionary giving. Thanks to all of our New Jersey friends. New Jersey must be all right!

Thinking Ahead

The following advertisement appeared in New York newspapers over the name and address of one of the city's leading real estate firms:

"A New Era has started
Able Men are thinking ahead
Are you thinking of the Future?"

The church of today must be thinking ahead, and not only thinking but acting. What the Brethren church will be in five years and in ten years will depend largely upon the missionary activities of the church today and through the coming years. How many of the churches now supported in part by our mission boards will in 1919 become self-supporting? How many will at least make a worthwhile advance in that direction? How many new churches will be organized in 1919? Our Field Secretaries, who are in the field not in person but in thought (they are thinking ahead) are studying the field and are planning for the future. The Home Mission Board is trying to serve the church by exercising every possible foresight and by using practical business methods in the Lord's work. The Board seeks the help and advice of pastors and laymen throughout the church who are "Thinking Ahead."

G. C. CARPENTER.

RIO CUARTO, ARGENTINA

News of peace have arrived and the city is full of the flags of the allies mingled with the Argentine flags and there is general rejoicing. May God grant that the final arrangements may be such as to insure not only peace but justice and morality as well. We need a better world, such as only the gospel can produce.

This country is now suffering the scourge of the grip, but thus far it has been only a mild form which lasts only a week. Nearly a third of the people seem to be down with it. Schools are closed and in some places all public meetings are prohibited for the time. It is not that bad here yet. A few of our members are sick, but none of the workers.

Instead of closing down our work we are increasing it. We have begun street meetings on Sunday afternoons and also a monthly woman's meeting which will be organized soon into an S. S. C. E. The street meetings are held in the square in front of our church, this being the best point in the city for them. In case of storm we can easily retire to the church. The public officials are now nearly all quite sympathetic with our work.

We have recently had a visit from Brother Hershey of the Mennonite Brethren. He and his companion, Mr. Shank, are traveling over the country a great deal, making a thorough investigation before deciding upon a location. He thinks we made no mistake in selecting this place.

In my former communication I mentioned the student movement in Cordoba against the Roman church. The minister of education was appointed to settle the trouble and he settled it in favor of the students. Then the priests got several fellows to attack the leader of the students and he was beaten with clubs almost to death. This has stirred the anti-church party more than ever and on Sunday nearly a third of the inhabitants, thirty thousand in population of about eighty thousand marched in parade in demonstration against the priests. Now is a time of crisis in this republic and we should have scores of able missionaries to take advantage of the opportunities that are at hand but soon to pass. The people have always been taught to hate Protestants as vile heretics and unless they can be made to understand the gospel now they will soon be lost in infidelity.

At this writing, November 9, we have not a word as yet about the General Conference, but think that surely there will be mail soon. May God bless you all.

C. F. YODER.

DUTCHTOWN

In order to keep my promise to my good people, while on the goal 9 drive, I must report our success, which I sure am more than pleased with. I promised them to treat them through the Evangelist. The Evangelist will be a New Year gift to a lot of new homes in Dutchtown and I am sure that every one will look over every page to find the treat that I promised them. I believe that I shall be safe to say my work will be much easier now with the help of the Evangelist. I must say that Dutchtown has not only helped me as their pastor, but she has sent out all over the world a good example. By standing by her pastor I did not have to plead with them, they were ready. We did not use the budget system, but we used our own system and it worked. The system was that all should have the paper and those that could pay $2.00 pay it and the poor give what they could, and we surely got enough so that the paper goes in all the homes, including those that could not pay $1.50. Those who did not take the Evangelist were only four and one of these could not read, and one Evangelist goes to a family outside of our church. So when we have all but three of our homes provided for I count it a joy to know how good this church has served by the pastor. While the "flu" has hindered the work, and we don't know what to do, we don't know from one Sunday until the next whether we will have services. It begins to look like the prophecy of John the Revelator had come true. People want to go to church and cannot. Ye that are just, be just still, and ye that are righteous, be righteous still. We pray that this may not be yet. We can not say what we will do, for we have no assurance of tomorrow. We are glad to make this report under conditions as they are. Hoping to do great things for the Master, may God bless all our good people at Dutchtown and long may the Evangelist stay with them. I must make a confession here to the Editor: I must confess that I got the best lesson at the Indiana State Conference, when Brother Teeter gavs us a one hour talk in 15 minutes, how pastors had promised to do something for the church paper and had failed. I said then, old fellow, you are hitting me mighty hard if you only knew it. I set my head to working a plan, and after I had the plan I set shank's horses to work, for that's the only way we got going. And I worked the field from Mentone to Piercetown, and from Piercetown to Leesburg, and the work was done for Dutchtown. But we got another job. College Corner, you are next. Eighteen papers is not enough, College Corners must go "over the top" for the Evangelist.

I believe I have two good churches, Dutchtown and College Corners, and we shall do our part so far as our ability will let us, to serve these two fields. While College Corners has a hard proposition just now, the "flu" and very bad roads. But the faithful don't stop for poor roads nor the "flu" May God help us to serve this people. Keep your eye on Dutchtown and College Corners for we are coming. Dutchtown had 5 papers, now 32.

HOMER ANDERSON.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

From Philadelphia we went to the Sergeantsville-Calvary circuit. Although these churches are in New Jersey they are nevertheless in the Pennsylvania Conference, hence I visited them in connection with the canvass in Pennsylvania. This was entirely new country to me. While I had met a few of the people in at least one of these churches at National Conference, I felt that I really only knew the pastor and his wife. Brother Morton Sands is serving in this field and he is a brave, noble man. I know he is noble because of his tireless, self-sacrificing devotion to his congregations. And I know he is brave because, notwithstanding he had just gone through a three weeks' meeting at Sergeantsville with Brother Marcus Witter and had just got rid of him, when he met me at the train he smiled. I say, it takes a brave man to smile when he gets two preachers on his hands in as quick succession as that. Well, anyhow, I found the most genuine hospitality in the Sands home, and we had a grand visit together.

In our canvass of these two churches we encountered some bad weather which was unfit for man or beast. And yet, for several days Brother Sands took me around without the slightest complaint with his horse and buggy. This time it was a horse and not a Ford: But it was sure a real roadster. I have seen Fords catch the spirit of the Campaign for Endowment often; but this time I saw a horse catch that same spirit. And I want to say right here that while perhaps the results of the canvass did not go to where I think it should have gone, yet, I shall never for a moment blame the horse. The horse did her part nobly.

Watch Pennsylvania Push the Mercury Above the Star in This Thermometer

COLLEGE
ENDOWMENT

In this circuit the result was $444 when I left. That would seem like a strange place to stop. And I am glad to say that there was still some work to finish, so that when I hear from Brother Sands I have no doubt I can change the figures to something more natural. The final result, I am hoping, may go well beyond $500.

At Calvary I shall remember particularly Brother Samuel Weber and his good wife, in whose comfortable home we found refuge the night we were at that place. I say refuge because it was a terrible night and it was indeed a refuge. To Brother and Sister Sands and the Webers and all the other good folks in these churches who showed me kindnesses I am, and shall continue to be grateful.

I went to Ridgley, Maryland from New Jersey. This church is also in the Pennsylvania conference. Here too I encountered some very bad weather. But worse even than the weather, I found the whole community in the firm grip of the "flu." But we could not stop for either of these things. I am surprised that Lytle should make such a disturbance over a "little" thing like the "flu." The "flu" is n't so bad if you don't get it!

Well, I was going to say, at Ridgley I renewed acquaintances with my dear old College friend, H. L. Holsinger. It was my privilege while yet a student, to say the words which made him the husband of his wife. And he is still my true friend in spite of that. In other words, he don't hold it against me. Needless to say I had a grand visit in his home. Both he and his good wife know just how to make the stranger feel perfectly at home who is within their gates.

The Ridgley congregation is not large numerically. At present this charge is without a pastor. There have been heavy losses in the last year or two by members moving away into the large centers where there was great demand for labor in making war materials. A Sunday school is maintained which is a means of holding things together. In time past Brother H. L. Holsinger served this church as pastor. But at the present time he is not preaching anywhere. I may add that this church is also in the home community of Miss Vianna Detwiler. During my stay at Ridgley I had the privilege of meeting Miss Detwiler, who had been home assisting in the recent meeting under Brother I. D. Bowman, and who had not yet at that time returned to her work in Baltimore.

While the weather made it impossible for me to get around as much as I otherwise would have been able to do, I was in the home of Brother Paul Holsinger several times, also in the Mitchell home. Here I met again our aged and loyal brother, David Replogle. It is always a pleasure to meet Brother Replogle. His religion is the kind that keeps one young, and cheerful and hopeful no matter how old you get. It would be great if we could all have just that kind of religion. Brother Replogle is quite aged but he has a splendid home with his daughter. I am very glad for the day I spent in that home.

Ridgley did well for the College, but I might whisper that the result was very much improved because one loyal brother got into the $500 class. Those who know Ridgley best will have no difficulty in guessing who that loyal brother was. We raised $665 at this place. If we could have gotten into all the homes this result would doubtless have been some higher. This was not the first time I was at Ridgley: I hope it will not be the last time. I have not a few pleasant memories of Ridgley. I only wish the Ridgley folks would work out some plan by which they could have more preaching. Maybe this will yet be done.

Finally, I want to add my word of appreciation to the retiring Editor for the splendid co-operation he has given me in the Evangelist since the very beginning of the Endowment campaign. It has meant much in making possible the success which has attended our efforts thus far. And I can say that at no time in the campaign have I asked him for anything which he did not cheerfully give. Thank you, Brother Teeter. And while I feel sure your successor will give me a no less hearty co-operation, yet I also feel sure he can give me a no more hearty one than you have given.

The next report will be from Waynesboro, and that will be the last report from Pennsylvania for the time being.

WM. H. BEACHLER,
Campaign Secretary.

Endowment Fund Subscriptions by Pennsylvania Congregations

Allentown, Pa.	775 00
Berlin, Pa.	1 200 00
Downey, Pa.	200 00
Maple Grove, Pa.	100 00
Masontown, Pa.	2 765 00
Moxham, Pa.	700 00
Bunker Hill	108 00
Liberty	232 00
Yellow Creek	318 00
New Enterprise	663 00
Martinsburg, Pennsylvania	850 00
McKees, Pennsylvania	1 000 00
Altoona, Pennsylvania	2 200 00
Conemaugh, Pennsylvania	5 133 50
Morrellville, Pa.	$ 400 00
Rosedale, Pa.	650 00
Summit Mills	2 500 00
Salisbury	1 000 00
Listie	400 00
Johnstown, 1st church	3 000 00
Pike, Pennsylvania	630 00
Meyersdale	$ 4 000 00
Jones Mills, Pa.	555 00
Mt. Pleasant, Pa.	220 00
Uniontown, Pa.	1 800 00
Highland, Pa.	155 00
Aleppo, Pa.	125 00
Pittsburgh, Pa.	1 800 00
First Brethren, Phila, Pa.	3 117 00
Third Brethren, Phila, Pa.	500 00
Ridgley, Md.	665 00
Sergeantsville, N. J.	444 00

TO THE CHURCHES OF INDIANA

The time is at hand, for that first report to District Director. If you have not a Hand Book, why not? Then, if you have no Hand Book of the Four-Year Program with the cards to fill out, SEND FOR ONE AT ONCE.

Remember every church must send a report. We must have them. Indiana will have to have a better showing by far, than last year. Now pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and presidents of the various auxiliaries, look after these reports and see that they are turned in to me as all my reports depend on on you. PLEASE BE PROMPT.

W. T. LYTLE,

BURLINGTON, INDIANA

We will attempt a series of meetings at this church, beginning, after an all day's meeting on the first of January. We had planned for this service to begin in November, but owing to the conditions of the health of the community we postponed it, to begin the first of the year. Now, we will solicit the prayers of the entire Brotherhood in our endeavors.

W. T. LYTLE.

Burlington, Indiana.

LET'S TALK IT OVER

If getting a good start is half the battle it is essential that Brother Baer and myself get started right with this first number of the Evangelist under the new regime, for we both know that there is many a battle to be fought before the success that both he and I anticipate for our publications during the years that are in the immediate future. A division of labor and responsibility has been made but a unity of purpose shall be the aim of the three men who are now in charge of the different departments of the Publishing House, and as business manager of the Company it shall be not only the aim but the ambition of my life to develop a business and to build up an institution that the church need not mention with hesitancy or apology or shame.

Since I have dropped the appellation of editor and will now pose as a plain business man it shall be my policy to drop the use of the editorial impersonal we and to use the personal pronouns you and I in what I shall have to say in the Business Manager's Corner, for I want to establish a personal relationship with all the pastors and all the churches and Sunday schools of the brotherhood in a more direct manner than was possible under the old system.

I have long taught in both sermon and editorial that a business man could be as much a servant of God as a preacher of the gospel is, for business can be conducted for the glory of God as well as church services can be held in his honor and it shall be my aim now to prove and to practice what I have preached.

Since coming into the Publishing House more than three years ago I have never ceased contending that the attitude of the membership of the churches and of the Sunday schools toward the publications of the Brethren church is more dependent upon the attitude of the pastors of the churches than upon any other one thing and I have not yet had any reason offered to me that would lead me to change my mind. So I shall consider it as one of my chief tasks in the immediate future to cultivate a close personal relationship with every pastor of the church. I covet your personal friendship, not for what it may mean to me, much as that may be desired, but for what it may mean to the publishing interests of the church in the development of a business that shall redound to the honor and glory of God.

One of the most successful enterprises ever undertaken by the Publishing House was the campaign to get the Evangelist into the home of every active family of Brethren in the entire church. The plan adopted met with unusual success during the past year and the indications are that it will meet with even greater success during the year nineteen hundred nineteen. The pastors that have experienced having the Evangelist in every family in their congregations are unstinted in their praise of the beneficial results, and I am glad to report that not a church has fallen by the wayside as yet that has tried the plan for one year. The last two churches to adopt the plan for the second year are Allentown, Pennsylvania and Louisville, Ohio, Brother Baer bringing the list from Louisville along with him as he came to take up the duties of his office. We are now in the very busiest days of the year at the Publishing House and it will be a couple of weeks before I can find time to give the matter of Evangelist subscriptions the attention it should have, but if our readers will be a little patient and give me just a little time to adjust the affairs of the office to the new plans I will take up this matter a few weeks later, but in the interim give heed to what I shall have to say from week to week in the Business Manager's Corner.

MATRIMONIAL

LEININGER-MYERS — Samuel Leininger and Lelah Myers were united in marriage October 19, 1918, at the home of the pastor. Both are highly esteemed young people of the community where they reside. The bride has been a member of the Brethren church for a number of years, the groom is a member of the German Reformed church.

RIAN-BOZE—Augustus B. Rian and Lucy Bose were united in marriage October 29, 1918 at the home of the bride. Both are held in very high esteem by their friends. The groom is the superintendent of the Bethel Brethren Sunday school and has held that office for a number of years with much credit. May many rich blessings attend all contracting parties and the God of all Glory bless and keep them.

W. F. JOHNSON,
Berne, Indiana.

STAIR-HUBLER—At the home of the undersigned, Ashland, Ohio, November 27, 1918 Casper C. Stair and Mrs. Jennie A. Hubler were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Brother Stair is a deacon in the Fair Haven church and a splendid Christian gentleman. His wife is a refined lady of good qualifications and will make a splendid companion to Brother Stair.

The best wishes of the many friends are that long life and prosperity may accompany them always.

BENJ. F. OWEN.

GIBSON-BECKWITH—The home of the writer was the scene of a quiet wedding December 7, 1918, at 2:30 P. M., when Mr. Olen Paul Gibson and Miss Anna Doris Beckwith were united in marriage. Mr. Gibson is a son of Brother and Sister D. P. Gibson. Ceremony by the writer.

HALE-WORINGTON—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Green was the scene of a quiet wedding Monday evening at eight o'clock, when Mr. Harry B. Hale and Miss Edna V. Worington were united in marriage by the writer. Mr. Hale is an enlisted sailor on the U. S. S. Dolphin as chief baker. He was granted a fifteen day furlough. He will return to his post of duty soon.

M. S. WHITE.

BERKLEY-CHADWICK—The marriage ceremony of Arthur Berkley and Hazel Merle Chadwick was solemnized at the bride's home on December 12. May God's richest blessings attend these young people through life.

GEO. E. CONE.

CASHMAN-CARR—Mr. John Lloyd Cashman and Miss Edna Ruth Carr, both of Altoona, Pa., were united in marriage September 4, 1918 at the home of the writer. These young people are both members of the Brethren church.

YARNELL-DELOZIER—The marriage of Mr. Charles N. Yarnell to Miss Gertrude DeLozier of Duncansville, Pa., took place at the home of the writer October 21, 1918. The bride is a public school teacher and has been for some years an active member of the Brethren church of Altoona.

Ceremonies of the above performed by the writer. We join with the many friends of these young people in wishing them well through life.

W. C. BENSHOFF.

IN THE SHADOW

BEACHLEY—Cora, Rohrer, sister of the above, died October 19, 1918. Our sister, like the rest of the family, was a faithful member of the church here. She, with her family were regular attendants and took an active part in church work. She was of a cheerful disposition, beloved by all who knew her. She leaves to mourn her early translation a husband and two children, Robert, aged 7 and Lois, aged 3 years, besides a mother, brother and a large circle of friends. The three above died in the space of two weeks' time, in the prime of life and usefulness, and in the full expression of faith. They all received the rite of anointing, thus expressing their faith in the Word. Our prayers and sympathy are for the consolation of those bereft.

SHIPP—William C., died October 16, 1918. He was a young man, employed by the Western Maryland Railroad Company. He leaves a wife and two children besides his parents and three sisters to mourn his early departure. He was a member of the church here.

ROWE—Joseph Franklin died November 27. He was a promising school boy of fifteen summers. The dreaded "Flu" developing into pneumonia was the cause of his death. He was a member of our Sunday school. He leaves his heart-broken parents, sisters, brother and many friends to mourn his departure.

The above were victims of the "Flu" with two exceptions. May God comfort the bereft. The above funerals by the undersigned assisted by Brother Tombaugh at the first three.

SPECHER—Emory Ringer died at his home in the city November 20, 1918. He was employed by the Cold Storage plant of the city. He was esteemed by his fellow workers. He suffered for several months of tuberculosis. He was aged thirty-seven years, and leaves a wife and child. Sister Sprecher who is a member of the church here has our prayers and sympathy in her early widowhood.

ANTHONY—Was laid to rest in the Funks-town Cemetery October 19, 1918. He was an industrious young man, the main support of a large family. Our deep sympathy goes out to the mother and family for their loss.

HARTLE—Daniel, died November 1, 1918. Deceased was employed as motorman on the Electric lines of the community and was widely known, evidenced by a large circle of friends who gathered to pay a last tribute to his memory. He was rather of a reserved disposition but congenial and devoted to his family. He was a member of the Reformed church. He leaves a wife and three children, two daughters and a son who will hold dear his memory as a devoted husband and father.

A. B. COVER.

BYERS—Benj. F. Byers passed away in his seventy-second year, at his home in Johnstown, Pennsylvania. Brother Byers was one of our faithful attendants in the Third church and will be sadly missed. He was a son of the late Elder Wm. Byers of Vinco and Pike congregations. He was sick only a short time until called to his heavenly home. He is survived by his wife and eight children, all of whom are members actively engaged in church work. Brother Alvin Byers of Canton, Ohio, being one of his sons. It is not often a family of children are found to be all active church workers and splendid Christian people. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor the undersigned.

SMITH—Brother Benjamin Smith departed this life October 23rd, 1918, of Spanish influenza. Brother Smith was one of the officials of the Third church and will be missed greatly because of his activity and readiness to serve in whatsoever capacity he was asked to, always willingly serving where he could. His death was unusually sad because of the prostration of his whole family at the same time. Just as his mortal remains were brought into his home, his little daughter and only child passed away. Both bodies were interred in one grave. Services by the pastor. Burial in South Fork cemetery. Our sympathy is indeed extended of the young widow in her affliction.

SECHRENGOST—Samuel Sechrengost, a member of the Third Brethren Sunday school departed this life July 15th, 1918. He died in France and lies buried somewhere upon the battlefield where he gave all that he had to his country. He was born June 14th, 1892. Aged 26 years. Memorial services by the undersigned.

We have also officiated at 8 funerals of children, many of them from families not members of the church.

G. H. JONES.

HISEY—Arthur Eugene Hisey was born December 13, 1916, and departed this life September 16, 1918, after a short illness. Arthur was loved by all who knew him, being extremely bright for his age.

FARLOW—David Sampson, son of Crawford and Hazel Farlow, was born October 12, 1916, and died at his home in Merrell, Michigan, September 20, 1918, after a very short illness.

MILLER—W. H. Miller was born September 27, 1865 and departed this life October 13, 1918. Brother Miller was for a number of years connected with the Berne church and Sunday school, serving for two years as teacher of the teacher's training class. He was always loyal to the cause. He taught public school for a number of years with great credit to himself and the pupils.

RAY—Irvin Ray was born in Adams county, Indiana, November 27, 1888, and died at his home in Mercer county, Ohio, December 3, 1918, after a short illness of influenza. He was united in marriage to Nellie Irelan February 20, 1910. To this union were born two children. Brother Ray united with the Berne church several years ago, always living for him who died that he might live. He will be greatly missed by his class as he seldom missed his Sunday school.

WENDAL—Lloyd, son of Wm. and Tena Wendal was born July 27, 1918, and departed this life December 7, 1918, after a very short illness, with that dread disease, the "influenza."

Funeral services by the writer

W. F. JOHNSON.

BRIM—Mandy J. Brim died after a brief illness of influenza at the home of her brother, Asa Brim, in Flora, Indiana, December 7, 1918, aged 35 years; 2 months and 29 days. In 1905, she united with the Darwin Brethren church, and after coming to Flora she transferred her membership to the First Brethren church of this city. Her devoted care to her aged invalid mother made it impossible for her to attend the services as often as she had wished. Besides an aged mother she leaves two brothers and six sisters with a large number of near relatives and friends to mourn her absence. The funeral was held from the home by the undersigned, assisted by Elder Fisher of the Old Order church.

HICKS—Helen Evalene daughter of Brother and Sister Jacob Hicks, departed this life at Flora, Indiana, after an illness of pneumonia, December 5, 1918, aged 13 years 3 months and 13 days. Evalene united with the First Brethren church of Flora about three years ago, and was an active regular attendant at Sunday school, church and the Junior C. E. Her kind, cheerful disposition, and glowing smile made her a friend and favorite of all who knew her. She will be missed by her many friends. Besides the grief-stricken parents she leaves to mourn her departure two brothers and a sister and many friends. The funeral services from the home by the undersigned, assisted by Rev. Beery of the Church of the Brethren.

S. C. HENDERSON.

YAGEL—William Henry Yagel was born in Whitley county, Indiana, April 17, 1849. He was united in marriage to Eliza Mary Martin, October 6, 1873, to which union there were four children born. He departed this life December 8, 1918 at the age of 69 years, 7 months and 21 days. He united with the Bethesda Brethren church October 18, 1891. He was a highly respected member of this congregation, a noble father and Christian. He was confined to his bed the last seven months, and suffered greatly but patiently without murmur before his death. He leaves a wife, two children, one brother and two sisters. Two children preceded him in death. The funeral was conducted from the Church of God by the writer, assisted by Rev. Bolton, pastor of the Church of God.

G. L. MAUS.

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETHREN -

Brotherhood

"Have a shoulder for the burdens
Of the weaker soul each day,
Stoop and lift them and be tender,
And be kind in every way;
For the gentleness of kindness
Has a gospel of its own,
In the way that love is measured
And the brother-heart is shown.

"Have a shoulder for the burdens
Of the one whom God guides near,
It is worth your while to tarry,
If through sympathy you can cheer;
For we only cross these pathways
Once—each day we near the end,
Where life's wealth and satisfaction
Lies in having been a friend.

"Have a shoulder for the burdens
Which the frailer lives must bear,
Climb their Calvary and share them,
For the crowns of life bide there;
Love and brotherhood commingle,
When, like Christ, whate'er the price,
We will take the cross of others
On the hills of sacrifice."

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918. Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

A Practical Church for a Practical Age—The Editor,	2	A Great Opportunity—A. L. DeLozier,	10
Editorial Review,	3	The Acid Test of Stewardship,	10
Four Year Program—Charles A. Bame, D.D.,	4	Christian Endeavor and the Sunday School—Prof. J. A. Garber, ..	11
How to Become a Member of the Brethren Church—L. G. Wood, ..	5	The Twin Sisters of the Church—Claude E. Hill,	11
Our Celebration—Alva J. McClain,	6	A Proposed Plan of Correlation—E. P. Gates,	11
The Church as a Business Man Sees It—Frank L. Kehr,	7	News from the Field,	12-15
The Battle Line at the Beginning of 1919—The Editor,	7	The Tie That Binds,	15
Sermon: The Apostolic Church in Action—W. C. Benshoff,	8	In the Shadow,	15-16
Adult Division of the Bible School—L. G. Wood,	9	One Man and a Pair of Good Legs—R. R. Teeter, D.D.,	16

EDITORIAL

A Practical Church For A Practical Age

This is a practical age and men want a practical religion and a practical church. The great Author of Christianity and Savior of the world was practical. He lived a practical life of service, taught a practical religion and is a practical Savior. There have been times when serious minded men stood aloof from the church and Christ, because they considered the church impractical and the Christ necessary only to women and children and weak men. And the church was much to blame for this attitude taken toward her and her Christ. There were times when she failed to meet the vital needs of men, and, forgetting the example of her Christ who went about doing good, she withdrew from the wicked world that she might not be contaminated and contented herself with her cloistered life and private devotions. But those periods were the exception and not the rule. She has in the main been practical to every age, and more now than ever. Her vision has been broadening with the advancing years and her helpfulness increasing with the multiplicity of life's duties and trials. With the growing stress and temptations of our modern life the church has grown stronger and more practically serviceable. And in this she must continue to lead on and will, by the grace of God. Let her not allow her foes, who make merchandise of evil, to deter or deflect her from her purpose, by the time-worn, implication—"Let the church concern herself with religion and her preachers preach the gospel, and not be interfering with our business, or politics or social affairs." I said, it is a false implication, for religion is not a mere matter of form and ceremony, it is not a diversion from the very pressing and practical affairs of life, it does not content itself with stirring the emotions and entertaining the mind on Sunday; it is life itself, and has to do with everything that touches life. And the great institution divinely ordained to nourish and propagate religion is concerned about everything that enters into life. There is absolutely nothing that men can build a fence around and say to the church "Keep hands off and keep silent about it." If it is to man's detriment the church cannot hold her peace and fold her arms without being untrue to the teachings and example of her Lord. If it is for man's welfare the church is duty bound to encourage it and guard it from misdirection. The church of Christ must continue to be, and in ever increasing measure, the saving influence for the whole man or she must cease to use her Master's name. Let me illustrate what I mean.

It is not necessary to the fulfilment of her mission that the church conduct gymnasiums, but it is necessary that she be concerned about the physical welfare of her people and all people. She should furnish inspiration, encouragement, spirit and ideal for those community movements and institutions, which can better care for the physical training and recreation of people than the church. Though she does not direct these interests, yet she must, by co-operation, be the saving influence in them, and in her teaching she must lay emphasis upon right conduct and care of the body that it may be a fit temple of the Holy Spirit.

In the complex life of many communities she may not be able to be the social center or personally direct all social activities, but she should be much concerned about the kind of social activities that are carried on. A church and a dance hall can no more work harmoniously in the same community than a church and a saloon. The church must oppose every institution that is antagonistic to its great purpose and the best interest of the people whom it is to seek to save. And we are coming to see that greater wisdom lies in supplying or directing or encouraging the right kind of social activities, so far as possible, than in opposing the wrong kind after they have gotten hold of the people.

The church has a right to be interested in the industrial and financial conditions of men, and through her various auxiliaries to supply inspiration and purpose to remedial efforts and encouragement to industry and prosperity. She is and must be concerned that people be prosperous rather than poverty stricken, and industrious rather than indolent. It is not necessary that she run an employment bureau or keep a standing committee on industrial relations. But if she takes personal interest in men's difficulties and helps them on their feet when they are down rather than be satisfied with dealing out charity, those who are thus given their feet again may not only use them to earn a livelihood but to walk the path of grace into the Kingdom.

There are a multitude of ways in which the sharing of Christ's sympathy for men will lead the church to help to make better the conditions, activities and lives of the people of every community. But in it all she must ever keep in mind that every man is an immortal soul and she must help him plan not only for life but for eternity. The church's task is spiritual and she must see all these calls for practical sympathy and direction of life interests as means of leading men the better to a realization of the Christ ideal for their lives. She must keep ever in mind the goal of life and seek to steer men safely through every perplexing situation to their rightful destination. She must use every circumstance, every problem, every need to enable her to build characters that will stand the test of fire and win the approv-

God. She must "become all that she may be of some." To win the right is her great purpose. Some cannot be won by the songs and prayers and sermons on the Sabbath, she must endeavor to find some other avenue of approach. Some may need to be cleansed from their leprosy before they will return to glorify God and some may even need to be defended from their merciless accusers, as was the woman taken in adultery, before the Christ can free them from the multiplied power of sin. Whatever men may need to exalt, strengthen and make more wholesome their lives, let not the church shrink from doing. And when the church gives herself to such Christ-like ministries let no one say she is becoming secularized or is profaning her calling. Everything that enters into the life of a man makes an indelible impression upon character and has a spiritual bearing. Everything that makes or mars the life of man is a concern of the church.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Brother Lynn says the "flu" is raging in and about Ankeny-town, so that it is impossible to hold services.

Brother DeLozier issues a challenge to an unusual but practical type of missionary service. Read his article on the page of "Missions."

Still they come. Brother I. B. Trout comes with 83 names to which to send church news and Brother Grisso sends 47. All these make the Evangelist the more valuable and its all the more worth your while to write for it.

Brother Carpenter repeats his call for teachers to help out in the noble work being done in Kentucky. Read his "Home Mission Notes" and think the matter over, perhaps he is calling for you. It is a great opportunity to serve the Kingdom interests.

After a brief vacation for the Christmas season the halls of Ashland College were again open for business Friday, January 3. As usual the students are somewhat tardy in leaving "Home, Sweet Home," but doubtless most of them will soon be back.

Brother Snyder has certainly done an unusually fine piece of work in collecting both the Thanksgiving offering and the White Gift offering by mail, with closed church, and going "over the top" with both. He undoubtedly has a loyal people who know how to co-operate with their pastor's wise and energetic leadership.

The sermon in this week's Pulpit was preached at a union meeting of the churches of Altoona, Pa., by the author, Brother Ben-shoff. In this new department, the best of the various pulpits can be had every week. If your pastor preaches an exceptionally good sermon, urge him to send it to the editor of the Evangelist.

The editor, who will not be able to close his pastorate at Louisville before April 1st, has for sometime felt that he had about the finest people to serve that could be found anywhere, and he was made to feel more certain of it by some recent surprises in which cold cash played a large part for the benefit of him and his wife.

Brother Owen and his family experienced a very pleasant and profitable New Year surprise in the form of a wagon load of "eats" from his parishioners at Fair Haven. The character of the people must be in keeping with the name of the place. Such a church is truly a "fair haven" in the time of the cold and scarcity of winter.

The call goes forth from the Ohio State Missions Board secretary, Brother E. F. Miller, of Bellefontaine, to the churches in the above district to "pay up." The payments are supposed to be made quarterly, as the apportionments. Turn to his notice and see what your church owes and then ask somebody if the remittance has been made.

See the "Sunday School" department for more "takers" of the Waterloo challenge. Johnstown, Pa., and Muncie, Ind., are on the trail of the Waterloo bunch this week. It looks as if something had been started that cannot easily be stopped. Well, that is the way to get boys to attend Sunday school—"start something" and they will come.

See the Business Manager's Corner for the news of more Honor Roll churches. The spirit seems to be about as contagious as the "flu." It does not have the bad effect, however. So don't try to avoid it. It will make your church work go easier if the Evangelist comes into every home of your parish. Try it. And then write some news and see how eagerly your people look for the paper.

We learn that Brother Wolford's family have all been sick with the "flu" and he has been kept busy as nurse. Brother E. G. Mason, secretary of Ohio District conference has also been a victim of the same disease. These Brethren have promised to furnish an article each as soon as they are able. Thank you, Brethren, as well as all others who have responded so nobly, for your co-operation.

It looks as if the war had taught us how to give, judging from the amounts being reported for White Gift offerings. Let us hope so. Would it not mean a great new era of world evangelization and Kingdom building, if we could see carried over into the church the same ready and generous response to financial appeals as was shown in meeting the financial needs of the war. It would be a better guarantee against another world war than anything else that could be done.

Brother Oxley's heart will be glad long after the "eats" are consumed because of the kindness and generosity of his two congregations. Such expressions of love mean far more than the material value of the gifts, great as that may be. And the sight of his six-year old daughter engaging in the humble ordinance of feet-washing while he himself was engaging in the same service was enough to give him a thrill of divine ecstasy never to be forgotten.

Notice Brother Bame's reminder about "reports" again, on page 4, and as he is wont to say "Now then do it." And I want to drop a hint to the church leaders over the brotherhood—if you would write him occasionally and tell him you are with him and trying with all your God-given strength and wisdom to work the Program, it will doubtless be appreciated and make the burden of his leadership lighter. Moreover, it will help him to keep fourth page glowing with news.

It is refreshing to learn from Brother C. C. Grisso, that North Liberty, Indiana, has not been weakened by the "flu." Perhaps the optimism of the pastor has something to do with keeping the people courageous and confident. Of course some communities have been "hit" harder than others, and it will help out in the final count on the Four-Year Program records if the churches which have been more fortunate can make up to some extent for the losses incurred by those which have suffered severely from the epidemic.

Brother J. A. Garber, or National Christian Endeavor president is supplying the Christian Endeavor page with some interesting material on the correlation of the young people's organization with the Sunday school. All Sunday school workers as well as Christian Endeavorers should read what appears in this issue. By the way, let me suggest that Endeavor workers send reports and articles of special interest to Brother Garber and help him keep the page bristling with things of special interest to our young people.

The Ashland Sunday school cabinet met at the home of Brother W. H. Beachler on Thursday evening, the 2nd, to work out plans to thrash Waterloo in the Sunday school contest. It is seldom that a preacher turns on his former parishioners, but that is the case here. Brother Beachler is not alone to be blamed for this situation however. You could not expect anything else from the live bunch of Sunday school workers of the College church, headed by such an aggressive Sunday school man as their pastor, Prof. J. A. Garber.

With Sister Vianna Detwiler as personal worker and Brother I. D. Bowman as evangelist, Ridgely, Maryland, has experienced a spiritual refreshing. Eight souls were added to the Kingdom, and, at the most important age in life. Who can tell the far-reaching results of such a harvest of young life? Yes, Sister Detwiler, the meeting was a great success though the shortness of the meeting did not permit getting in touch much with the outside world. And may God continue to bless the evangelist and the personal worker in their tireless efforts in their respective fields to serve him.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

Have You Reported Yet?

It is in the Hand Book—the report card, I mean. No, your District Director is not going to ask you for your report; it is to be the work of yourself, voluntarily, from what was asked of you in the last number of the Evangelist. If you did not read that page last week, you'd better go to your files and get the page and read it. If you did and have not yet reported, you had better get busy right away and do it. I think all instructions are on that page. If they are not on that page, you will find them in the Hand Book where the postal on which your report is to be made, is found.

Or Shall We Just Pass It Up?

Pass what up? The reporting? Not a bit of it. This Program is going right on, whether it is to be as good as we had hoped or not. Wars are not won without a single loss. Some battles go against the victorious; always. They seem to need it to keep up the real fighting spirit. If you are fagging out or discouraged, read some more of the precious promises of the Word.

“When Jesus comes to reward his servants
Whether it be noon or night,
Faithful to him will he find us watching
With our lamps all trimmed and bright?”

If the signs of the times portend anything at all they surely show marks of the immanent fulfillment of the promised coming. Will your church and your report be ready? If not, hurry to make it up without further delay. We NEED THE REPORTS. Note the dates of limit.

Somebody Heard From

Just this forenoon, I got two good letters from leaders interested in the work of the church. One said, “Let us go to the program with all our might and main. Our work here is on the job as before the “ban” (terrible word) and we will make all the goals with the possible exception of goal—I put it before my folks very strongly that there ought to be a greater response than before because of the way the Lord led us through with so few serious cases of the “flu.” The best part of the year is still ahead of us and we must use it. I'M WITH YOU TO THE LAST FRAZZLE.”

That Helps

Now that is the kind of talk that makes for work and victory. I hope every preacher in the brotherhood as well as every leader will ponder that the best part of the year is still ahead. It is true. With the second wave of the disease dying and with better knowledge of how to avoid and prevent it, let us hope that the second wave is the last and that we shall soon be at the very best part of the year and that our churches will do the best they can to recover the losses caused by the trials through which we have passed.

Another

Another letter from one who has an excellent opportunity to know, writes, “As far as church work is concerned, wherever I go, the work has been all shot to pieces. I have not met a preacher who has nearly carried out his plans for the fall. It was simply impossible. But you would be surprised to know how many folks I am meeting who have already made up their minds to attend the 1920 conference because it is to mark the consummation of the Program.”

What Will the “Consummation” Be?

I can tell you. It will be just what we make it. The surprise of all the war, especially to Kaiser Bill, was the speed with which the U. S. A. got into the war. We are a part of this same U. S. A. Can we speed up like we helped the government to do it? We can. Get in your reports so the Committee can tell you where we are and what we shall have to do next. Hurry. Thank you I was sure you would.

How About Teacher Training?

Of course you know that this comes in as a part of the Program. Have you ordered one of Prof. L. L. Garber's new books just off the press for your Teacher Training class? Well, no matter what your teachers have studied, this is a book every Brethren teacher ought to study. There ought to be enough pride in our denomination to make you feel good that one of our number can produce a book on Religious Education that at once stands right along with the best that can be produced. If you knew nothing about Prof. Garber as a teacher and scholar, you could soon reach a conclusion by making a study of this small volume; and that is exactly what we hope many of our Sunday schools will hasten to do. Teachers, Superintendents, Preachers! What book could you better study for your own good, than, “The Educative Process in Religion” by a scholar like Dr. Garber. I heartily commend it to all our Sunday schools. Get it of Prof. J. A. Garber, Ashland, O., at 5 for 90c. Then use it.

Happy New Year

“The new year is not with us only the new day;
Each day is a white page to be written;
Write it beautifully and the book of the year will be beautiful.”—Bliss.

“Joy to the world the Lord is come
Let earth receive her King.
Let every heart prepare him room
And heaven and nature sing.”—Watts.

“Yet still we trust in God the just.
Still keep our faith alive.
That 'neath thine eye all hate shall die
And only love survive.—Greely in 1863.

Before his throne I'll daily fall
And on him, pleading, gladly call
Surrendering myself, my all.
And then when all the days have gone,
Defeats are met and victories won,
When all the Year's work has been done,
Great blessings will be mine.

BAME.

Inactive church members lose their healthful appetites and respond only to sensational stories and statements, to special music and other spiritual condiments and sugar-coated pills, just as sedentary folks lose their appetites for bread and other nourishing physical food.

THE GENERAL ARTICLES

How to Become a Member of the Brethren Church

By L. G. Wood

The Bible being our only creed and text-book, this subject requires a discussion of the Scriptural steps that lead from darkness to light. For convenience I will identify the steps as follows—1st, Faith; 2nd, Repentance; 3rd, Baptism. When I say faith is the first step, I do not mean a cold, historical, abstract belief, but a living personal evangelical faith. To be sure Paul says in Rom. 10:17, "So then faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God." But I do not consider the hearing a step on the part of the one becoming a member of the church, for that is a step to be taken by the church, as proven in Rom. 10:14, "How shall they hear without a preacher and how shall they preach except they be sent." Jesus Christ has made the church entirely responsible for the delivery of the message, it is ours to see that the people hear. This is the introductory work of receiving folks into the Brethren church and the foundation of faith. The preacher is to be the willing messenger; the church is to send him forth; "the Word of God" is the message.

1—Faith is the first step toward peace with God and membership in the church. Some say that confession is the first step; the importance of confession can not be overestimated, yet it is not a step in itself. Confession is the mouth speaking from the "abundance of the heart," therefore confession is the outward expression, and must be both in word and conduct, of the believing heart. Rom. 10:10; "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation," therefore confession is a vital part of faith itself. Without confession and obedience, "belief is vain" and "faith is dead," 1 Cor. 15:2; "By which also ye are saved if ye keep in memory that which I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain," Jas. 2:26; "For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also."

The New Testament scriptures fall into three natural divisions—(1) facts, (2) commandments, (3) promises. The facts are to be believed—an appeal to faith. The commandments are to be obeyed—an appeal to loyalty. The promises are to be enjoyed—an appeal to relationship. These divisions must be recognized as having to do with the induction of souls into Christ and the conduct of souls in Christ.

The three great facts of scripture are (1) death, (2) burial, (3) resurrection of Jesus Christ. It is interesting to note that the first mention of a Savior prefigures his death. Gen. 3:15; "Thou shalt bruise his heel." This also points to his death, Isa. 53:5; "He was bruised for our iniquities," Paul presented these facts and said it was "the gospel he had preached that they had received and by which they were saved," 1 Cor. 15:3-4. "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures." The clause, "according to the scriptures," proves these to be the great facts of all scripture. All facts are comprehended in, and cluster around these.

2. The great commandments are (1) faith, (2) repentance, (3) baptism. These are the steps which induct into Christian fellowship, therefore the steps by which members are received into the Brethren church. Brethren, I am so glad that we have these steps so beautifully simplified in the scriptures, that we may know how to preach, and how to answer inquiring souls.

The Acts of the Apostles is the book of apostolic conversions; in it we have the steps unto fellowship, and membership as taught and recognized by the apostles. We have an example in chapter two. Peter preached—what did he preach? He first laid the foundation by referring to the scriptures to prove that this was the very Christ which was promised; therefore, "according to the scriptures." Then he builded upon this foundation by declaring the death, burial and resurrection of this Christ. Then the people were convicted. What convicted them? The belief of the great facts of the message. Then they asked, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" v. 37. Thus, the mouth was speaking from a believing heart. This was proof to Peter that they had accepted Jesus Christ by faith and desired full fellowship, and that faith desired to become a mighty power by complete obedience. At once the apostle told them what to do, v. 38. He pointed them to the next steps, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ." What for? Just because it is a form that the church holds? No. Because they had been blessed, because their sins had been forgiven? No, none of these; Peter does not leave us in the dark, nor to guess what it is for. "For the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit, for the promise is unto you and your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

When many modern preachers "hedge around" this proposition, they are "begging the question" and not giving the Word of God a square deal. Some of these modern prophets say those people were forgiven and saved by "faith only" when they asked the question. If so, then why did Peter command the people to "repent?" It is unreasonable and does violence to the plain teaching of the Word.

Here I wish to lay down a proposition, with a challenge, that the above mentioned scriptures are in harmony with all other teachings of the New Testament and prove that faith, repentance and baptism are three distinct (though beautifully blended) steps unto the remission of sins, and that they each stand in the same relation to forgiveness. And this means fellowship with Christ and membership in the church.

Repentance is a sorrow for sin, which causes one to forsake an old life. II Cor. 5:10; "For Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of." It is the step following faith, and implies a letting go of the old life and taking hold of the new. Heb. 11:6; "For without faith it is impossible to please him, for he that cometh to God must believe that he is." It is impossible to repent—let go the old life—until we have believed there is something better. It is also impossible to take hold of the new life, until we have believed that there is one.

Baptism is commanded with all the authority and importance, with which faith and repentance are commanded. In fact it represents the climax of induction. Gal. 3:27, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." It is also emblematic of regeneration. I do not say that it IS regeneration, but it is the divinely given emblem of regeneration. John 3:5; "Except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit he can not enter into the kingdom of God." Baptism represents a death to sin and also a birth into a new relationship. It stands for our union with Christ in death, burial and resurrection. Rom. 1-5, presents both the design and the form of baptism. "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his DEATH? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into DEATH; that like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his DEATH, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." There are three words used in the above which teach the fullness or completeness of the actions of baptism, i. e., "baptized," "buried," "planted;" these words are interchangeable and each requires immersion. The clause following each of these words describes how the actions are to be performed, requiring a forward action—"into his death," "into death," "in the likeness of his death," (John 19:30) "and he bowed his head and gave up the ghost." Man was created in the image of the triune God, Gen. 1:26. "And God said let US make man in OUR image." By sin man fell from this favor and likeness; by grace he may be restored. This grace comes by regeneration, for the restoration of the triune image. This restoration comes from, and relates us to, the Father (as Creator) the Son (as Redeemer) the Holy Spirit (as Resurrector); all of which is embodied in the great Commission, Mat. 28:19; "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost." Therefore, to comply with the Word requires a three-fold and forward action.

These are the steps which lead to membership in the Brethren church, with a right to the three great promises:

Our Celebration.

"Nor filthiness; nor foolish talking, or jesting . . . but rather giving of thanks."

Peace has come! Such must be the meaning of bells ringing and whistles blowing as we write. An end at last to the awful slaughter of men! An end to the pouring out of precious resources into the maws of destruction! An end to that fearful nightmare of possible world dominion by an inhuman, beastly Prussian power whose ruthlessness and cruelty have out-rivaled the Huns! An end to the soul-racking suspense of those who daily have scanned the casualty lists for the names of loved ones. Surely, it is time for rejoicing, a time for the making of great mirth, There has been much anticipation. Now there is realization and there will be celebration. Every true-hearted man must cast about for some way to express the long pent-up feelings of his soul.

Let it not be "filthiness," or in modern language "vice." Many (it is said with sadness) will take this way of celebrating the coming of victory and peace if we may judge from the memory of past occurrences. It has seemed that "by common consent" and "tacit agreement" the town is "wide open" on such occasions. "The lid is off." To get drunk is counted by some a virtue. Liberty becomes license. All the "good fellows" will make "a night of it." And many of those to whose hands has been entrusted the task of restraining vice will wink at indulgence in the most despicable forms of it. Why should the Beast be turned loose in our cities because the Beast of Berlin has been defeated? "Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor adulterers, nor drunkards shall ever inherit the Kingdom of God." "Let no man deceive you with empty words: for because of there very things the wrath of God is coming upon the sons of disobedience." Let the Christian shun such a way of celebrating the coming of peace.

Neither let it be "foolish talking." The expression is literally "fool-talk." Among the profane and unthinking the announcement of peace will be made the occasion of much fool-talk. It is fool-talk to boast that "we did it." Say rather with the late Kitchener, "God did it." For it is God the Most High that ruleth in the kingdom of men and giveth it to whomsoever he will. It is the God of Heaven that setteth up kings and removeth kings. It is he, and not the "weather-man," who giveth "rain from heaven and fruitful seasons" without which there could have been no victory. It is he that humbleth the mighty and bringeth

(1) forgiveness, (2) Eternal life, 1 Jno. 2:25. A man often heard that (3) Christians today is "Back to Christ." Let us hope that Christendom may speedily move "back to Christ" and Brethren, let us be found there waiting, and earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, "as good stewards of the manifold grace of God." Eph. 4:13; "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.

Gospel Steps

1. Facts.
 - (1) Death of Christ, 1 Cor. 15:3.
 - (2) Burial of Christ, 1 Cor. 15:4.
 - (3) Resurrection, 2 Tim. 2:8.
2. Commandments.
 - (1) Faith, John 14:1; Heb. 11:6.
 - (2) Repentance, Acts 3:19.
 - (3) Baptism, Matt. 28:19-20.
3. Promises
 - (1) Forgiveness, Acts 2:38.
 - (2) Holy Spirit, Luke 11:13.
 - (3) Eternal life, 1 John 2:25.

By Alva J. McClain

them down to the sides of the pit. Let us give glory and ascribe praise to him. It is fool-talk to express by word and writing the sentiment "To hell with the Kaiser." The Kaiser will most certainly find a "place in hell" instead of "a place in the sun," unless he thoroughly repents of his sins and takes refuge "in Christ" instead of "in Holland." But it is just as certainly not within the province of mortal man, whose breath is in his nostrils, to consign the Kaiser to this place of eternal torment. Besides, let it not be forgotten that this same hell is also to be the destination of all others who have sinned and are outside of Christ. Let us not, therefore, assume the prerogative of God. In his hands is the destiny of the human soul. He will see to it that Justice receives her full dues. Let all the people keep silence before him.

Neither let it be "jesting." In other words, our celebration should not be by means of buffoonery, low jests, ridiculous pranks, vulgar tricks. What a vivid picture this expression presents of the manner in which some shall celebrate the advent of peace! Theatre and street will be full of it. But the thinking man will shun it; if for no other reason, by reason of his remembrance of certain shell-torn bodies which lie rotting beneath the soil of France. Let those who have forgotten be found in the company of those who "jest." The Christian may rejoice. But jesting is not rejoicing.

But there is a way in which the Christian may express to the full his feeling of happiness and gratitude over what has taken place. It is not by filthiness, nor by foolish talking, nor by jesting. It is rather by giving of Thanks. The Christian knows full well that every good and perfect gift cometh down from the Father of Lights with Whom there is no variation nor shadow that is cast by turning. He knows that the preservation of the world is solely through the longsuffering and mercy of God. He knows that peace is a gift of God's love whether it comes to the human soul or to the nations. Therefore he bows his knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ in humble recognition of his marvelous grace and kindness toward us in him.

Life may be held so pure, so receptive to all high influence, so noble in its aspirations as to furnish the right conditions for those finer promptings; or it may so degenerate into the material, the selfish, the self-centered, as to become deaf and blind and unresponsive to them.

the only thing they see The Church As A Business Man Sees It

By Frank L. Kohr

There are many organizations about us. Some appeal to us while other do not. But organizations are necessary. Almost everything that is accomplished, is achieved by means of organizations. An individual can not advance himself alone. A man can not lift himself by pulling on his own boot straps. As Paul says, "No man liveth to himself nor dieth to himself." Together we succeed, or together we fail. The days have passed when any one is or can be sufficient unto himself. It is because of these organizations that we find ourselves in different positions, positions of importance or positions less desirable. If it were not for these organizations, there would be no positions; that is, there would be no difference in or graduation of any of our positions. Those individuals who have such rare ability, would have no chance to display it. Men occupy positions of responsibility because in organizations they have shown themselves capable. They continue to hold positions of trust as they show their fitness to lead organizations.

One of these organizations is the church. In it are positions for capabilities of the highest degree. But it is not the position of persons nor the efficiency of organizations that this paper cares most for. Thus far we have thought of organizations and how they put us all into various positions. With this understanding let us consider the view an ordinary business man takes of the church. We shall admit at once that not all business men take the same view.

We are acquainted with the fact that many business men are among the best workers of the church. In some cases they are the sole promoters and sustainers. This, we are sorry to say, is not true of business men in general. But what is the attitude of the ordinary business man toward the church? He does not hate the church; no, and many of them would not consider living anywhere except in church communities. In fact most of them know quite well that their property would not be worth fifty cents on the dollar if it were not for the church. Perhaps we can answer this question best by naming several views.

Some consider the church a small item, a side issue. The church is all right, but should expect nothing from them. By this they tacitly say that the church is not worthy of their support.

Other business men consider the church a very excellent place for women and children, but not for themselves. These are quite willing to help support the church; peradventure it is the cheapest way to raise the children with good influences about them. Still others regard the church as a splendid means by which to advertise their business, while others regard it as the shortest road to popularity. The church affords these people an opportunity to surround themselves with a host of friends and helpers, and they use these groups to further their political or financial interests.

Many more particular attitudes might be mentioned. Some are just too busy (as they think) to attend church services on Sunday. It is all right for people not so busy as themselves. Their automobiles have time to go everywhere except to church.

There is another class, not so small as you might think, who intend to go to church but on Sunday morning a peculiar disease attacks them. They are so sleepy Sunday morning. Perhaps they would not admit that such neglect is an attitude against the church. They seem to have forgotten that "actions speak louder than words."

We have noticed a few of the attitudes taken by typical business men. If we should trace some of these business men to the end of their days, we would find they had changed all pretensions and actions to fixed attitudes. By habit they have no desire for the church. They see the church as the main thing in life, their only salvation, and the only salvation of the world, but it is too late. The way they have been acting towards it has determined their eternal future.

The Battle Line At The Beginning Of 1919

It requires quick glancing to keep even a moderately up-to-date view of the temperance situation. If we don't tarry too long, we may glance at the line of battle as it existed at the beginning of this month. I say "existed"—past tense—because this data is likely to be past tense by the time it is read. State legislatures are meeting now, and the question of ratifying or rejecting the Federal Constitutional Prohibition Amendment will be facing them at the outset. And many legislatures are certain to ratify it, as certain as they are to meet. And practically all of the rest are extremely likely to ratify. Even the wettest of them can do little worse than side-step the question.

The following 15 states have already given their approval: Mississippi, Virginia, Kentucky, South Carolina, North Dakota, Maryland, Montana, Texas, Delaware, South Dakota, Massachusetts, Arizona, Georgia, Louisiana, Florida. The following state legislatures are considered certain to ratify and will meet in January: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming. This list includes every state which has not already ratified except New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania. Investigation has shown Pennsylvania to be hopeful; New York an even proposition and New Jersey probably opposed to the amendment. But some great surprises have occurred in this fight and it may be that more may be our lot.

In Alabama where success to the amendment was considered doubtful a dry legislature was elected with a majority of 25 to 10 in the Senate and 75 to 31 in the House.

In Illinois there will be about 10 majority in each House for ratification. Rhode Island, which was considered opposed to the amendment until recently, will probably be 23 to 16 dry in the Senate and 55 to 45 dry in the House. Connecticut has a majority of 75 for a clean state and the Senate is safe. Wisconsin was considered uncertain, but the upper House will ratify by 22 to 11 and the lower by 59 to 41.

During 1918, Congress passed the food administration bill with the so-called war prohibition section, which was signed by the President, November 21st. Congress has enacted prohibition for Hawaii, and the President forbade the manufacture of beer, his order becoming effective December 1st.

Moreover, the ground gained during 1918 by hard hand-to-hand fighting is very encouraging—to the "drys." There are 2,546 dry counties in the country and only 351 wet. This shows a dry gain for the year of 460 counties. Four state-wide prohibition victories were won during the year—Ohio, Florida, Wyoming and Nevada—with a recount pending in Minnesota. Prohibition was defeated in Missouri and California, but ratification legislatures were elected in both states. There are at present 31 dry states, not including Texas, where a state-wide prohibition law was held by the state Supreme Court to be contrary to the constitutional provision for local option.

The situation is certainly pretty bad from the saloon's standpoint. It begins to look as if the people were not going to reserve any place for the exercise of "personal liberty." If this movement keeps going at this rate John Barleycorn will soon be crowded off the earth and will be compelled to join the Kaiser in seeking "a place in the sun."—Editor.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

Epit. Luke 11:23
heard and

The Apostolic Church In Action

By W. C. Benshoff

SCRIPTURE: Acts 2:1-8

No one can give a thoughtful reading to the book of Acts without being impressed with the fact that the Christian church during the first century experienced a rapid growth. Geographically—the church spread over Judea, Samaria, over Asia, and into Europe; its influence was felt in all the chief cities from Jerusalem, the city of the chosen people, to Rome the capital of the world empire. Numerically the number of the company of believers increased from one hundred and twenty to many thousands. This phenomenal growth was realized in the face of strong opposition. Satan had met with defeat in his combat with Christ. After the ascension, the enemy sought to destroy the works of the Lord through the persecution of his followers. But God is faithful who has promised, and the apostles were true to their trust. There is a secret to this wonderful growth and achievement. It is a profitable study for present day Christians. It is profitable to study those who have succeeded in any line.

The point needs to be strongly emphasized that the work of the Christian church is the most important, the biggest work of the present. The church is worthy of our best effort. Millions have never heard of Christ. It is the business of the church to give to these the gospel. "Go ye into all the world and make disciples of all the nations."

But is the church experiencing a growth today in keeping with her growth during the first century? Is it claiming new territory for Christ in proportion to its intellectual and material efficiency, in proportion to its opportunity as it did during the days of the apostles? True, the church is accomplishing much. Its influence for the spiritual and moral uplift of humanity is apparent. Wherever the gospel is being preached there is to be found nursing for the ill; mercy, love and compassion for the poor; and salvation for the lost. But in the face of all this, the growth of the church today does not compare with that of the first century. Consider the intellectual and financial strength of the church of the present day. The body of believers as a whole were never better schooled than at the present; the bulk of the wealth of this and other lands is to be found in the hands of men of the church. BUT HAS THE CHURCH THE POWER TO MOVE THE WORLD FOR GOD? Thomas Aquinas was once in the presence of the Pope when he was counting a large pile of gold. "Thomas," said the Pope, "the church can no longer say 'Silver and gold have I none';" to which Thomas replied: "No, nor can she longer say, 'In the name of Jesus of Nazareth rise up and walk.'"

We hear much today about modern methods, we need to hear more about primitive practice; we hear much about organization, we need to hear more about absolute surrender. Results are to be obtained not so much through the whirr of machinery as through the operation of the Spirit. There needs to be a returning to the first principles of discipleship.

The followers of Christ acted in obedience to the command to tarry in Jerusalem for the baptism of the Spirit. Note what they might have done after the ascension. They might have gone into Jerusalem and begun preaching Jesus as the Messiah. And while this is to be their mission, they are not yet ready. These disciples need to be purged. Selfishness rules their hearts. They have been disputing as to who is to be the greatest. They have yet to learn that he who would be greatest must be the servant. Further, they need to be empowered. They are but men, and man independent of God is helpless in the successful preaching of the gospel.

These apostles are to begin the most difficult task ever undertaken by mortal man, that of making disciples of all the nations. Man through his skill and genius can accomplish much in the material world, but to do the work of the church, he must be filled with the Spirit. There is a tendency to rush into the work of the church independent of Divine power. Dr. S. D. Gordon points out three essentials to the Christian life, "The secret life of prayer, the devotional life of Bible study and the active life of service." The last is most generally engaged in by followers of Christ. Many people work in the church who spend but little time in the study of the Word and in prayer. And it is often the case that much of our service accomplishes but little in relation to the great work to be done, largely because it has not been preceded by the other two. To tarry, to wait in the presence of God means the searching of hearts, confession of sins, adjusting of differences; it means the enlarging of the vision, the gaining of a truer conception of the mission of the church. "These apostles were not endowed with power from on high, until they were fully imbued with the sense of their commission."

Note, they were all there. This prayer meeting was the big event. More important than business, than the lodge, than the meeting of the board of directors. Further, they were of one accord. "The place is nothing but the accord is everything." Perhaps they were not of one accord at the beginning of this week of prayer. But in waiting upon God each became harmonized with the Divine nature and thus with each other. It was upon this collective, harmonious, waiting, praying body that the Spirit came with great power. "No man can do a great and enduring work for God who is not a man of prayer, and no man can be a man of prayer who does not give much time to praying."—E. M. Bounds.

Under the power of the Spirit these disciples began to speak. They were not hindered by timidity or fear. They had had an inner experience and it must find expression. Many a believer has lost much of the grace of God out of his heart because he failed to give expression to the things he felt under the touch of the Spirit. These men had a conviction that Jesus was the promised Messiah, others must be led to believe. They all began to speak. How different from the modern prayer meeting. The prayer meeting of today differs but little from the preaching service in the number participating. The preacher in his teaching and lecturing occupies the entire time and the laity is satisfied that he should do so. This speaking was not a mere jargon or babble. They spake as the Spirit gave them utterance; intelligently, understandingly, effectively. A believer's testimony can be effective only as it is prompted by the Spirit. The matter of meeting for prayer was not abandoned on the day of Pentecost, but, "They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread and in prayers." Acts 2:42.

These followers of Christ made a full and complete surrender of themselves with all they possessed to the Lord. The test of a believer's sincerity is determined by his willingness to sacrifice and his readiness to give. They gave their possessions. Acts 4:32-35. Money in the hands of a Christian is a determining factor. Christ still sits over against the treasury and watches how men contribute. These disciples gave themselves. They regarded the Christian life what it truly is, a warfare, a struggle, a conflict. And no men have ever given themselves more freely for the cause of truth than did these. They feared not persecution, not even death; the only thing they feared was that they might fail in the preaching of the gospel. All this they were enabled to do, because they were men of CONVICTION.

The theme of the preaching of these early disciples has a vital relation with the phenomenal success. Does it make any difference what a man preaches? It did with them. They held themselves rigidly to one theme and that was, "Jesus Christ and him crucified." Note just a few instances. Peter on the day of Pentecost; "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ," 2:36; Read also 3:13-16; 4:10-12; 10:34-43. Stephen said, "Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which shewed before the coming of the Just One: of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers," 7:52. Philip, "Then Philip opened his mouth and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus," 8:35. Paul, "And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God." Also, 9:29; 13:23.

Yes, they preached Jesus. They preached Jesus the resurrection from the dead. Read, 4:2; 4:33; 5:30; 10:40; 13:30, 37. They preached that men must repent as recorded in 2:38; 3:19 and elsewhere. It cost these men something, yea much, to preach Jesus. They were persecuted, stoned, imprisoned, martyred. But these men were faithful and God blessed the preaching of the Word to the spread of the gospel and to the conversion of thousands. Similar results can be obtained through a similar practice. The church of the present day needs to wait before God and hear anew the Divine commission to save the world.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Adult Division of the Bible School

By L. G. Wood

Having been elected superintendent of this division, at our last National Conference, perhaps a word will not be out of place. This is the BIG department of our Sunday school work, because it is composed of BIG folks. But please do not measure it by avoidupois. Its members are of matured physical powers, of largely developed intellectual powers, and of deepened spiritual powers.

I have the record of 208 organized classes in this division, distributed through districts as follows: Indiana, 65; Pennsylvania, 38; Ohio, 34; Kanemorado, 27; Illinois, 26; Maryland-Virginia, 9; California-Washington, 9. You see there is lots of room even at the top so come along with your classes. If all adult workers knew of the work being accomplished by the classes that are "living up to their organization," we could have double that number in the next year.

Why Organize Classes in the Adult Division?

1. Because of the bigness of the work to be done and the unused talent for the doing of that work. Here is the brain and brawn of the church, and certainly it should be harnessed for achievement in this reconstructive period that is now upon us. Our day calls loudly for executive ability, in the work of the Kingdom.

2. Organization does not take the place of the Holy Spirit, but it furnishes system, channel and consecration for his operation. I would not ask a class to organize, at the expense of dependence upon the Holy Spirit, but for the conservation of his energy. You would not undertake to run a great machine by hand, but you would throw the lever and connect it to the dynamo. See that your class is energized, as well as organized.

3. Organization distributes responsibility. The old time Sunday school class was entirely dependent upon the teacher for its success or its failure; but not so in organized class, for every member is put to work and made responsible for a part of the work. The organized class has been the means of many persons discovering themselves, and thereby, the discovery of their life work.

4. It inspires by a greater outlook and to a greater activity. It also cultivates a healthy co-operation. The individual is a part of the class, the class is a part of the school, the school is a part of the state and national association, and this a part of a world movement.

5. It makes personal work both easy and definite, for in your class, your personal work for others is "team work." "The class that is not out for business, has no business to be out" (Marion Lawrence).

"Keep your heads in the clouds and see the entire human race, but keep your feet on the ground and go after the individual." (W. C. Pearce).

Brethren, organize your classes, secure your international certificate, and send to the writer for your denominational seal, and it will be forthcoming.

White Gifts of Victory and Peace

The following "White Gifts" have been received already, in the order given below:

Dayton, Ohio,	$ 90.00
Waynesboro, Pa.,	6.43
Oakville, Ind.,	15.88
Uniontown, Pa.,	91.69
Philadelphia, Third, Pa.,	11.00
New Lebanon, Ohio,	28.00
Muncie, Ind.,	13.00
Denver, Ind.,	3.50

Total $259.50

The first check received came from the Dayton school and is just 100 percent better than last year. The second from Waynesboro, is just 44 percent better than last year. The third, from Oakville, is just 230 percent better than last year.

All of the above are practically equal to or more than the amounts given last year except one.

That certainly is a fine start. If all the other schools report amounts proportionally good to those received, we will keep Brethren Carpenter, Drushal and Cook smiling for the next nine months.

ALBERT TRENT,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

Reports on the Challenge

Muncie, Indiana, December 28.

Dear Editor: The Muncie Brethren Sunday School has accepted the four month challenge of the Waterloo Brethren Sunday School. I hope we are not too late.

Yours for Victory,

1209 S. Shipley St.

ORA C. PAUL, Superintendent.

January 1, 1919.

The First Brethren Sunday school of Johnstown, Pa., accepts the Waterloo Challenge.

ALBERT TRENT, Superintendent.

Whatever else a church may have, loyalty is the soul of church efficiency as well as of religion.

Nothing is so ruinous as a lifeless profession. God has no enemy, and Satan no tool, like the zealous professor of of Christian discipleship whose life is not actually directed and sustained by the indwelling Son of God.—John Dickie.

MISSIONS

A Great Opportunity—Foreign Mission Work at Home

By A. L. DeLozier

Almost every one is indulging in some prophetic mood these days. These are surprise days. We stand almost breathlessly waiting to see what will come next. The imagination goes wild at times in contemplation of what may be. Being human myself, I too take the liberty to "dip into the future."

As I look, I see the greatest opportunity in the history of Christianity, and I covet for the Brethren church a preparation to meet that opportunity. Lloyd George cried: "Ships! Ships! more ships!" and the United States answered with the Hog Island project. I cry: "Languages! Languages! more languages!" and I should like to be answered by a score of our young people who will elect to study Italian, French, Spanish and other tongues. This war has broken down the barriers. We shall see in our midst more Mexicans, South Americans and Europeans. Indeed I am seeing them already. Who is going to be the most attractive North American to these peoples? Obviously the man who knows their language and can lead them on to better things.

Other churches are seeing this vision and preparing for it; especially, the Catholic church. Is the Brethren church going to sit idly by and when the opportunity comes, stand off and see the other churches reap a harvest while we are helpless? I trust not, I hope not, I PRAY not.

We as a church need to remind ourselves, not only on this point, but on many others, of the words of Shakespeare: "There is a tide in the affairs of men, which taken at the flood, leads on to fortune; omitted, all the voyage of their life is bound in shallows and in miseries; and we must take the current when it serves, or lose our ventures."

Young people of the Brethren church, I challenge you! Are you going to be equal to this opportunity? You can't go wrong on language preparation because the demand for such teachers in the high schools and colleges is greater than ever before. The writer who now teaches French and Latin in the Allentown High School, has had other language teaching positions challenge him in the same city.

Why can't we have Brethren young men and women who will teach languages in our public schools, preparatory schools and colleges, and with their margin of time engage in "Foreign Mission Work at Home?" This could be done under the supervision of the pastors of some of our city churches where such opportunities exist. Such workers would be well supported without cost to our mission boards and would be getting the theoretical and the practical of the language at the same time. A more fascinating piece of work is not to be conceived under the sun, and it beats the Kaiser's coveted place in the sun too.

Young people of the Brethren church, if you want to plan big, I herewith challenge you to this greatest of all coming opportunities!

Adios por esta vez.

THE ACID TEST OF STEWARDSHIP

Mission Boards Considering United Financial Campaign

The Mission Boards of the Christian churches of North America are considering a plan to submit the claims of missions to the "acid test" of stewardship on a combined basis and on a scale, commensurate with the needs and opportunities of reconstruction times ahead.

This was discussed quietly, prayerfully but enthusiastically at an all day conference held at 25 Madison Avenue, New York City, on December 17, 1918, attended by over 134 representatives of the home and foreign mission boards of North America and of affiliated interdenominational movements.

This weighty conference was called by Dr. James I. Vance, as Chairman of the Foreign Mission Board of the Presbyterian church in the United States, who presided, and outlined the far-reaching proposal for a united campaign on behalf of the missionary and benevolent work of the evangelical churches of the whole North American continent.

A thorough discussion followed in which these missionary leaders took part, among others: Dr. Robert E. Speer of the Presbyterian Board; Dr. S. Earl Taylor of the Centenary Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Dr. Wm. Hiram Foulkes of the Presbyterian New Era Movement; Dr. Fred P. Haggard of the National Committee of Northern Baptist Laymen; President J. Campbell White of the College of Wooster; Mr. Charles A. Rowland, and Mrs. Wm. F. McDowell.

The following resolutions were passed:

Moved, that it be the sense of this meeting that there should be a united campaign in behalf of the missionary and benevolent work of the evangelical churches of North America as represented by their organized national boards or agencies and such affiliated interdenominational agencies as it may be found wise to include after further conference.

Moved, that the chair appoint a committee of fifteen, of which the chair shall be one, for the purpose of preparing a plan to be submitted to the Home Missions Council and the Foreign Missions Conference in January, 1919.

Moved, that this committee be requested to arrange if possible for a Joint Meeting of the Home Missions Council and Foreign Missions Conference and such other agencies as would naturally be involved when a plan as presented by this committee and as revised by the conferences may be submitted for final approval.

This proposal though tentative as yet marks an advance on the road to that practical unity which must mark the future policies of the Christian church if it is to realize and exert its potential influence in the work of world reconstruction on the basis of a genuinely Christianized democracy.

A Short Sermon on Love

The following beautiful sentiments, translated from the French, constitute a sermon, which is worthy of the close attention of every reader:

"You have only a day to spend here on earth; act in such a manner that you may spend it in peace.

"Peace is the fruit of love; for, in order to live in peace, we must bear with a great many things.

"None is perfect; each has his failings, each hangs upon the other, and love alone renders that weight light.

"If you cannot bear with your brother, how will he bear with you?

"It is written of the Son of Mary, that 'having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.'

"For that reason, love your brother, who is in the world, and love him unto the end.

"Love is indefatigable; it never grows weary. Love is inexhaustible; it lives and is born anew in the giving, and the more it pours itself out, the fuller its fountain.

"Whosoever loves himself better than he loves his brother, is not worthy of Christ, who died for his brothers. Have you given away everything you possess? Go and give up your life, also, if needed!

"Verily I say unto you, the heart of a man that loves is a paradise on earth. He has God within him, for God is love!

"The wicked man loves not, he covets; he hungers and thirsts for everything; his eyes, like unto the eyes of a serpent, fascinate and allure, but only to devour.

"Love rests at the bottom of every pure soul, like a drop of dew in the calyx of a flower. Oh, if you knew what it is to love!"

Sometime ago one of the Y. M. C. A. secretaries in Mesopotamia wrote that he was giving letters of introduction to soldiers who wished to see mission work; for there are many men keen on seeing what they have often heard of and subscribed to. In India also the soldiers are given opportunities of getting glimpses of mission work. Many of our boys, when they return will surprise us with their grasp of missions. Perhaps we had better do a little brushing up.

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AND THE .. SUNDAY SCHOOL

As announced in last week's notes, January is our Sunday School month. The articles which follow were written by specialists: the one a former pastor and now secretary of young people's work in his own denomination; the other is Field Secretary of the Illinois Christian Endeavor Union and a Sunday school superintendent. Thus neither depends on theory, but both write from practical experience, giving us the viewpoint of both the minister and layman.

In the late Ohio Convention we heard Mr. Gates emphasize most of the points included in the plan of co-operation outlined below, and are glad to publish the fuller statement at this time. A careful study of it will help our workers to correlate the work of the two departments; the teaching school and the training society, so that one may complement the work of the other in the interest of the entire church.

J. A. GARBES.

THE TWIN SISTERS OF THE CHURCH BY REV. CLAUDE E. HILL

The Sunday school is the church at work teaching the Word of God. The whole church should be in the Sunday school, for it is the duty and privilege of the whole church to teach the whole gospel to the whole world. Christian Endeavor has always been vitally interested in the work of the Sunday school. The majority of all the teachers are now, or have been, active Endeavorers. Well organized Endeavor Societies have a Sunday school committee, whose sole duty it is to increase the interest and attendance of the school. There is no overlapping or duplication between the Sunday school and the Endeavor society. They occupy distinct and separate fields. Organized adult classes cannot do the work of the Endeavor society, and the Endeavor society cannot do the work of the organized class. There is abundant room and an imperative need for each in every well organized and efficient church. The Sunday school teaches the Word of God. That is its primary function. There are social activities connected with every efficient Sunday school. There is an element of training in its work. But it can never train in service and lead young people to apply knowledge and exercise their gifts and talents as can the Endeavor Society. The Sunday school, in its constitution and organization, is fitted to teach. The Endeavor Society, in its constitution and organization, is fitted to train. There is an element of teaching in the work of the Endeavor Society, but it must be remembered that it is not primarily a teaching organization. It exists to train and lead young people to make use of the knowledge they have acquired. The Endeavor Society complements and makes effective the work done by the Sunday school. It is needless to say that there should be the utmost sympathy and co-operation between these two great agencies in the church. Each should minister to the growth and efficiency of the other. A well-managed Sunday school makes for an efficient Endeavor Society; and creates a demand for it; and an efficient Endeavor Society will make for a larger and better Sunday school. Both are needed in the church. They should grow and prosper together. It is all the Lords' Work, and in the Service of Christ there is not only room for all, but glory enough for all, May the blessing of God be upon these "Twin Sisters of the Church," and may each prove a help and a blessing to the other.

A PROPOSED PLAN OF CORRELATION

By Mr. E. P. Gates

January, 1919, is to be observed as Sunday School Month by Christian Endeavor societies and Sunday schools all over America. A national campaign has been launched by the trustees and field secretaries of the United Society of Christian Endeavor with the purpose of emphasizing definite ways in which the Sunday school and the Christian Endeavor society may help each other. Prominent Sunday school workers are co-operating heartily in the plan.

Suggestions for the campaign are as follows:

A. How Christian Endeavor Can Help the Sunday School

1. Make sure that every Endeavorer is enrolled in the Sunday School and is regular in attendance.
2. Organize a substitute teachers' class to study the lesson one week in advance of the regular school and be prepared to take classes at a moment's notice.
3. Organize a Teacher Training Class. If one is already organized, recruit members for it.
4. Put on a special campaign for new Sunday School scholars. Conduct a community census. Make a house-to-house canvass.
5. The Lookout Committee may help the busy teachers follow up absentee scholars, and organize a personal workers' group to win scholars for Christ.
6. The Prayer Meeting Committee may assist in the opening devotional exercises of the school.
7. The Missionary Committee may promote a campaign of missionary education in the school, including a series of five-minute miscials for classes or departments of the school.
8. The Social Committee may provide social talks.
9. Raise a special fund to purchase needed equipment for the school: maps, blackboards, Bibles, etc.
10. Ask the superintendent what he wants the Christian Endeavor society to do and then do it.

B. How the Sunday School Can Help Christian Endeavor

1. Allow five minutes in the opening exercises of the school during January for short talks to the scholars on the importance of joining the Christian Endeavor society. One of these talks might be by a successful business man who is a former Endeavorer, one by the Sunday School Superintendent or a popular teacher. On one Sunday a "quartette" from the Christian Endeavor society might give one-minute talks on "What Christian Endeavor Has Done for Me." Let the Intermediate society present a brief dialogue on one Sunday. Close the series with a decision service conducted by the pastor, on Sunday, February 2, Christian Endeavor Day, at which time an opportunity will be given every Sunday School scholar to enroll in Christian Endeavor.

2. Offer a pennant, lettered with the class name, to every class 100 percent. of whose members are regular in attendance at Christian Endeavor.

3. Announce Christian Endeavor meetings enthusiastically in the Sunday School.

4. Co-operate with Christian Endeavor leaders and the pastor in securing superintendents for Junior and Intermediate societies.

5. Offer a prize for the best poster, made by a member of the school, advertising the Christian Endeavor society. Offer a prize for the best essay by a member of the school on "Why Sunday School Scholars Should Be Active in Christian Endeavor."

6. Pay the expenses of one or more members of the school to a Christian Endeavor convention or summer conference.

7. Appoint a committee to work out with the Christian Endeavor leaders a unified educational program. Such a plan will insure, for example, that the Bible memory work of the Junior society will supplement that of the Junior department in the Sunday School and that the mission study plans of the Intermediate and Young People's societies will be promoted in harmony with the plans of the Sunday School.

C. How to Promote the Campaign

1. State, district, county and city union officers should see that a copy of these suggestions is placed in the hands of every pastor, Sunday School superintendent and C. E. society president.

2. Local church workers should see that a campaign committee is appointed at once, representing the pastor, the official board of the church, and the Christian Endeavor societies. This committee should decide what special features of the campaign are to be pushed and plan ways of promoting them. It is not intended that all the suggestions given above should be carried out during January. If the Sunday School devotes its energy for the first month to enrolling the scholars in Christian Endeavor, and the C. E. society successfully promotes one feature of its program, this will give an effective start to a year of hearty co-operation.

3. If there are no Junior or Intermediate

(Continued on page 16)

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

A PRESSING APPEAL

The following from Brother Drushal should bring a teacher, and by all means some one who can teach music and play the piano, for Riverside must not be without music.

"Dear Brother Carpenter: Since last writing you, prospects are booming. Better than we had even thought. We ought to have a teacher who can teach music, and must have a teacher for the lower grades. We hope a nurse will be here soon too. Must have a nurse by all means."

The Riverside workers and others are praying earnestly that the Lord will send forth the needed help into the harvest fields that are white. Surely some of our readers will help to answer the earnest prayers by saying, "Here am I, send me."

A Teacher for Krypton

By all means there should be a subscription school at Krypton for three or four months, and it should begin at once. Kentucky teachers' certificates are not necessary for either school. Who will go? Write at once.

A Barrel of Money

In a recent Evangelist appeared the announcement of the arrival of "Paul James Cook," and with it the suggestion that he be placed on the Christmas lists of our readers. "The Little Brown Church" had the happy thought of sending to Paul James a barrel of money. It was a gilded barrel and was taxed to its capacity, seventy-five new gold pennies filling the center and silver occupying each end. The father writes: "Paul has more money than his Dad." If his father had a barrel of money it is hard to tell what he would do. Tell the people of the "Little Brown Church," Paul will come to preach for them sometime; I hope."

A Man Killed

Brother Cook writes that they had a fine Christmas as service on Christmas eve, but that on Christmas day a man was killed in Krypton, being struck by a train. Drink was the cause, as usual.

December Receipts

S. S. C. E., Nappanee, Ind.,	$ 5.00
Golden Hour Bible Class, Nappanee, Ind.,	3.00
Sunday School, Uniontown, Pa., ...	10.00
Mrs. Guy Pittenger, Wooster, O., ...	2.00
Brethren Church, Berlin, Pa.,	25.00
Mrs. Walter Maxson, Elkhardt, Ind.,...	19.00
Brethren Church, Masontown, Pa., ...	20.00
Howard L. Mauzy, Warsaw, Ind., ...	5.00
Men's Bible Class, Huntington, Ind.,	5.00
Miss Elizabeth Gnagey, Chicago, Ill.,	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rinehart, Flora, Ind.,	25.00
C. E. Society, Flora, Ind.,	15.00
M. W. and Angeline Eikenberry, Kokomo, Ind.,	6.00
J. Warren Eikenberry, Kokomo, Ind.,	1.00
Mrs. B. F. Oram, Logansport, Ind., ...	5.00
Pliny E. Oram, Logansport, Ind., ...	5.00
First Brethren Church, Hagerstown, Md.,	10.00
C. E. Society, N. Manchester, Ind.,...	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. Henry V. Wall, Long Beach, Calif.,	200.00
S. S. C. E., First Church, Phila., Pa.,	15.00

Krypton Brethren Church on Brother Cook's salary,	69.00
Sunday School, Middlebranch, O., ...	10.00
Miss Lena Schubiger, Frenchtown, N. J.,	3.50
Mrs. Matilda C. Antram, New Salem, Pa.,	5.00
W. S. Angell, Portis, Kans.,	10.00
Chas. Berkeley, Mifflin, Pa.,	10.00
Mrs. W. N. Grubb, Ashland, Oregon,	5.00
Mrs. Ella Race, Pittstown, N. J.,	5.00
Mrs. Edwin C. Hackett, Hampton, N. J.,	2.60
Vienna E. Hackett, Hampton, N. J.,	2.40
Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Williams, Elmer, N. J. (Liberty Bond),	50.00
First Brethren Church, Roanoke, Ind.,	5.00
Mrs. Lillie Warren, Silver Lake, Ind.,	5.00
Mrs. W. H. Yagel, Kunkle, O.,	2.00
S. S. C. E., Lanark, Ill.,	5.00
S. S. C. E., Dayton, O.,	10.00
Loyal Helper's Class, Waterloo, Iowa,	10.00
Mrs. Mary A. Snyder, Glover Gap, W. Va.,	5.00

G. C. CARPENTER.

NORTH LIBERTY, INDIANA

I always consider it a privilege to report the work in the part of the Lord's vineyard over which he hath made me overseer. As pastor and people we want to testify to the leading of the Holy Spirit in these days and we are learning to trust him more and more as the days come and go. While we have passed through some sad experiences, yet through it all we are still praising him for his wonderful goodness and his saving grace.

The pastor held a brief series of meetings during the month of November. The effort was especially to revive the membership, since the field has been so thoroughly gleaned in time past. Two men, both heads of families were added to the Lord during these days.

The attendance and interest at all of our services are excellent, and I cannot see but that we are just about where we were before the epidemic struck us. We have met all our obligations and responded to every appeal made by the church at large. We went over nicely for Home Missions at Thanksgiving time, contributing at the rate of 30 cents per member. At Christmas time without any special effort the Sunday school gave nearly $22.00 for National Sunday school work, and the following Sunday over $21.00 for Armenian and Syrian relief work. And so we forge ahead thoroughly missionary in faith and practice.

We rejoice in being successful in placing the Evangelist in 47 homes in the congregation, which is possibly thirty more than during any previous year. I am hoping for the time when this part of our church program will be carried out in every congregation in the brotherhood. And it is not such a terrible task after all, brethren, just a little extra gasoline is required, that's all.

We are planning for advances along various lines. The month of January will be observed in North Liberty and vicinity as "Go-to-Church Month." A systematic effort will be put forth by the various churches. We expect splendid results from the effort. We shall start a Teacher Training class too, early in the new year.

Our plans for evangelistic meetings away from home have been seriously hindered. We hope however, to hold at least one meeting away before spring.

I shall not close without mentioning the kindness of the Brethren at Christmas time. A goodly number came to spend Christmas eve at the parsonage, bringing useful and valuable gifts, among which was $5.00 in gold for Mrs. Grisso and a beautiful Bible for the pastor. We shall ever cherish these gifts and seek to prove ourselves worthy.

May the Lord keep us all true and faithful to the great Head of the church until he comes to reign with his saints.

Yours under the precious Blood,
C. CLARENCE GRISSE.

DELMARVA PENINSULA

As an inducement to change my plans for the West, and to return to help Baltimore through the starting season, the president of the mission board granted me the privilege of complying with the request of Brother Bowman to help him in the revival effort in my home church, Ridgely, Maryland, which is across the Chesapeake Bay from Baltimore. It is the only Brethren church on the Eastern shore of Maryland, or on the entire Peninsula of Del-mar-va (named after the three states out of which it is formed. "Shall the doors of this lone church be closed?" This has been asked of me on my short visits home. To say "No," meant to be ready to help them in their first move to hold a meeting. No revival meeting had been held here for over six years and no preaching services for over six months.

With only a two weeks' meeting, the evangelist could not be expected to reach much beyond the church. The eight baptized were mainly from the Sunday school class of girls, some of them in high school.

The prophetic messages given by Brother Bowman were the drawing feature for outsiders. Some of them remembered when he last held a meeting here, about fifteen years ago, that he indicated from prophecy, that there would be a war at this time naming the most of the nations involved. The banker of the town attended regularly and the Methodist preacher had planned to attend, but was called to a camp in Kentucky.

What an unequalled opportunity for Brethren preachers to sound the clear note of Kingdom tidings! Is any evangelist doing his divine duty who is not giving the midnight cry to awake? "When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the Kingdom of God is nigh?"

VIANNA DETWILER.

STILL ON TOP AT ROCHESTER, IND.

For some time I have been thinking of writing to the Evangelist to let the readers know that the old world is still in operation. We, like the rest, have been bothered with the well known "flu." But in spite of this

I can say we are still pressing forward at Tiosa and New Paris. Some weeks ago when I went to New Paris, I was visited in the evening at the home of Brother Clay Fadges' by the church with a large donation. It was a surprise to me, but was accepted with many thanks. Our church there has been closed for about five weeks on account of the "flu." We are hoping to go there again next Sunday. I can say for New Paris church that there is as fine a people there as any one would want to preach to. It is not as large as some churches, but always steady and true. When you hear any one say any harm of New Paris, be sure you know it before you believe. Then the old war horse, Tiosa, here they got the best of my wife and I the other evening. We had a Christmas entertainment on Christmas evening, and continued services the rest of the week. On Friday evening after services Brother Oscar Scott took me down to the basement, saying he wanted a talk with me in regard to Sunday school work. When we got there, I found about $30.00 worth of good eats. And several people who were not there said more was coming. So, watch the preacher grow. Well thanks for it all. This makes a man feel like his work was not in vain when such free will gifts like this are given by both churches. Then on Saturday evening we held our Communion services. About 40 were present. As we said the "flu" still bothers us some. One of the most beautiful sights at this service was that of my second daughter, Ruby, age 6, obeying the command of Christ, in washing another's feet. She was baptized when 5 years old and is Brethren all the way through. Glory to our God, forever and ever. Somehow this stirred me more than anything for some time, and I think I will be a better man than ever before. May the Lord bless the entire brotherhood.

ORA E. OXLEY.

FAIR HAVEN, OHIO

It is only occasionally that an article appears in the columns of the Evangelist respecting the work at Fair Haven. The fault lies with the pastor, and does not mean that the church is dead. On the contrary, it is alive, aggressive and generous. When a minister is attending school and preaching every Sunday, there are many things that occupy his time and make it almost impossible for him to write church news. The poet has said, "New occasions teach new duties," and that is the motive that impels us to write at this time. Two faithful members of the Fair Haven church drove twelve miles through the rains and mud, and arrived at our home in Ashland on January 1, 1919. What was their mission? Why, they brought a wagon loaded with good things to eat. Here are some of the items: Five and one-half sacks of flour, corn meal, six bushels of potatoes, cabbage, squash, apples, several crocks of lard, apple butter, jellies, canned goods, dried corn, sugar, coffee, soap, chickens and $2.00 cash. Those who read this article will no doubt say that such a donation must have made the receivers happy. Well, it certainly did. Even my three little boys expressed themselves in such a way that there could be no doubt that they appreciated it. They remembered that the same thing happened last year, too. Each former Fair Haven minister that reads this item will remember that during his administration donations of like manner were given to them. The custom is old, and yet new. It requires new energy each year to collect eatables and travel twelve miles through the mud and rain. We appreciate your untiring efforts, brethren, and we thank you and all those who gave. It is a fine Christian spirit, and is encouraging to a minister that has been hindered from his work the last four Sundays on account of the "Spanish Influenza."

These people also sought to keep in touch with us by telephone to know whether we had been stricken by the terrible malady that has ravaged the world. It is a pleasure to work with such people. My one desire is, that God may endow me with grace and wisdom to render the service necessary that will enrich their lives as well as all to whom I may minister this year.

Again, the Fair Haven congregation is aggressive in church work. It is the ambition of these people to reach all the goals stipulated in the "Four-Year Program." They are going by leaps and bounds and it will take more than the "flu" to stop them. Anyway, the "flu" cannot prevent consecration, and that will win. These people are consecrated and I am confident. People who subscribe to all that is good, give liberally to the "United War Work," and sacrifice their sons for the safety of democracy and yet have a large portion of money and consecration left for the work of the Lord are going "over the top." Such is the spirit of the membership of Fair Haven.

BENJ. F. OWEN.

TO THE CHURCHES OF OHIO

The following apportionments were made for the churches to be paid quarterly. The first quarter ending June 30th, 1918:

Ashland,	$30.00
Ankenytown,	9.00
Bank Creek,	10.00
Bethesda,	6.00
Bryan,	17.00
Buckeye City,	3.00
Camden,	2.00
Canton,	7.00
Columbus,	3.00
Dayton,	30.00
Fair Haven,	15.00
Fair View,	14.00
Fremont,	5.00
Postoria,	1.00
Baracca,	5.00
Bethel,	5.00
Gratis,	22.00
Gretna,	10.00
Homersville,	6.00
Louisville,	14.00
Mt. Zion,	1.00
Mansfield,	3.00
Miamisburg,	5.00
Middlebranch,	6.00
New Lebanon,	8.00
North Georgetown,	5.00
North Liberty,	2.00
Pleasant Hill,	12.00
Rittman,	2.00
Salem,	8.00
West Alexandria,	15.00

Williamstown,	10.00
Zion Hill,	8.00
Amount received,	$509.00
Amount Due,	900.00

Knowing the calls that have come from many sources for funds to continue the war, and that many churches have been closed on account of the influenza, we have been reluctant to make an appeal for funds. But the poor pastor and his family at the mission point may have had a struggle equally as great as any of us, and is looking for his amount of the "hire" which he has so justly earned.

Any amount however small will be thankfully received.

E. F. MILLER, Secretary.

Bellefontaine, Ohio, R. No. 1.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

Our canvass in the Waynesboro church was a real pleasure and the results were highly satisfactory. I preached there Friday and Saturday nights of December 20th and 21st, also on Sunday morning of the 22nd. Our Waynesboro congregation is only about 10 years old, and my visit there in the interest of endowment was my first opportunity to meet our people there or to see their work. And I must say, I found a remarkable strength and stability there for a work so young. As a matter of fact the result attained for endowment in the young Waynesboro church is almost if not altogether sufficient to make some of our older congregations look a little bit "sheepish" over what they have done. But it has occurred to me that perhaps the fire, and the zeal, and the venture which is characteristic of young people is also characteristic of young churches. Maybe as congregations get older they lose their snap, and their hopefulness, and their venture just as folks do with the approach of years. Anyhow I am proud of Waynesboro.

Brother Marcus Witter is pastor of this flock. He has given to this field a long, faithful service, and if my sense of discernment is to be relied on at all his people love him as much now as they did in the early stages of his pastorate among them. This fact does not need any comment. It explains itself. And I am sure I can safely say that to Brother Witter belongs most of the credit for putting the Waynesboro congregation on the map. What has been accomplished here is a fine example of what can be done when a man settles down seriously to his job and sticks everlastingly to it, in the meantime faithfully backing up his preaching with his life.

Waynesboro went $1,530. The people responded with the finest spirit. In this church I found another man who joined the $500 class, and a man, by the way, who has not been in the Brethren church very long, but covets for the Brethren church a future, and who is abundantly able to see how important is Ashland College if we are to have a future. I shall always remember the pleasant days I spent with Brother Witter during the canvass and the thorough co-operation he gave me. It was a joy to visit his home and his family. I shall always remember with gratitude the cordial treatment extended to me in the home of Brother and Sister Victor Koontz. May God richly bless all the good people whom I met in the Waynesboro church, and may he prosper the cause which they represent.

Now then, this will be the last report from Pennsylvania for the time being. It will be observed that the mercury has been placed at $85,000. This means that the Pennsylvania churches are credited with $40,000 to the cause of endowment. However, someone will add up the list of gifts from Pennsylvania churches as they appear in this issue and say that those gifts do not total $40,000. No, I'll grant it. It lacks a trifle more than $1,000 to make it even $40,000. But I want to say that the gift from Brother George Paul of the 40-acre fruit farm in Florida and the city lot is not counted in this result at all. And it will therefore be seen that at the most conservative possible estimate of the value of this farm and lot, the Pennsylvania result belongs at $40,000 and more. And not only so, but there remain four of the smaller Pennsylvania congregations to canvass yet, and it will not surprise me if those four churches make up the necessary $1,000 in order to round out the $40,000. And if they do Brother Paul's gift will stand as that much above $40,000 for Pennsylvania. In the face of a record like that I propose "All hats off to Pennsylvania." I do not believe I hear a dissenting voice. Surely this is a record which gives occasion for just pride among the churches of the Keystone state. And for the Brethren people of Pennsylvania and their pastors, I have only words of praise. May God richly use and bless our churches of old Pennsylvania!

Maybe I lack in faith, but I question if any other state or district in the brotherhood will go beyond this record. True, from the standpoint of membership some states and districts may do better than this. But it is evident that if they do they shall have to get up early in the morning and hurry some. Of course, with the Conemaugh church it is different. Up to this time Conemaugh church holds the banner among the congregations, with a result of over $5,100 to her credit. If Conemaugh will continue to hold this banner remains to be seen. Personally I will say that if I were in the place of Pastor L. Garvin Smith I would be a trifle uneasy about my banner. I have a strong suspicion that some other churches have determined to go up the flag pole and bring down Conemaugh's banner. And all will consent that I would be a strange solicitor if I did not say to all such churches, "Go to it. I hope you win out." But in fairness to Smith I will say this, that his interest in the final success of this campaign is such that he will rejoice if a half dozen churches do better than his congregation did.

I had hoped to be able to announce in this article that our next report would come from churches in Illiokota. It was our full intention to take up the work next in that district. However, we have information that at least Cerro Gordo is under quarantine on account of the "flu," and that it is still bad at other places where I must go; and besides, Illinois and Iowa have had an extremely heavy fall of snow which would seriously interfere with my work. Hence, it is unlikely I shall try to finish the churches of Indiana at this time. W. H. BEACHLER, Campaign Secretary.

Watch Pennsylvania Push the Mercury Above the Star in This Thermometer

Endowment Fund Subscriptions by Pennsylvania Congregations

Allentown, Pa.	775 00
Berlin, Pa.	1 200 00
Downey, Pa.	200 00
Maple Grove, Pa.	100 00
Masontown, Pa.	2 765 00
Moxham, Pa.	700 00
Bunker Hill	108 00
Liberty	232 00
Yellow Creek	318 00
New Enterprise	663 00
Martinsburg, Pennsylvania	850 00
McKees, Pennsylvania	1 000 00
Altoona, Pennsylvania	2 200 00
Conemaugh, Pennsylvania	5 133 50
Morrellville, Pa.	$ 400 00
Rosedale, Pa.	650 00
Summit Mills	2 500 00
Salisbury	1 000 00
Listie	400 00
Johnstown, 1st church	3 000 00
Pike, Pennsylvania	630 00
Meyersdale	$ 4 000 00
Jones Mills, Pa.	555 00
Mt. Pleasant, Pa.	220 00
Uniontown, Pa.	1 800 00
Highland, Pa.	155 00
Aleppo, Pa.	125 00
Pittsburgh, Pa.	1 800 00
First Brethren, Phila, Pa.	3 117 00
Third Brethren, Phila, Pa.	500 00
Ridgley, Md.	665 00
Sergeantsville, N. J.	444 00
Waynesboro, Pa.	1 500 00

MILLEDGEVILLE, ILLINOIS

The new year has come with its challenge and its tasks. In many ways the year nineteen hundred and eighteen has been a difficult one in church work, but yet much good will come out of it all. Especially were the closing months trying times because of the widespread and disastrous effects of the influenza epidemic.

During these months came the dates for two of our special church offerings. From the absence as yet of a report in the Brethren Evangelist of the Thanksgiving offering, it may be inferred there was difficulty in many churches in going "over the top" with these offerings. With closed churches in many places the Christmas offering too was doubtless seriously interfered with.

But the writer is glad to report that the Milledgeville church, in spite of all these handicaps, went "over the top" in both offerings. This, however, was not done without effort; it did not just happen. But, realizing the greater difficulty in attempting to raise the amount of both offerings at a later time if these special days were allowed to go by without doing anything, before Thanksgiving day I mailed the best letter I could prepare for the occasion, together with a special offering envelope, to the entire membership of the church. The response from the people was splendid and their offerings were brought in personally, by messenger and by mail, and in due time the whole amount was received. Then when Christmas time came on the churches were closed and all special services were out of the question. Again letters with special "White Gift" offering envelopes were mailed to the members of the church, and once more the response was such that we were able to more than reach the goal. While this method of meeting our apportionments involves considerable work for the pastor and has its particular faults, yet with us it worked and produced the results we were looking for and enabled us to begin the new year with a clean slate.

This church also succeeded again in placing the Brethren Evangelist in over seventy-five percent of our homes for the coming year. We use the "every home canvass" method because it is most satisfactory. We found it easier to reach this goal the second year than the first.

The four-month program and challenge proposed by the Waterloo Brethren Sunday School meets with our hearty approval. Our Sunday school here has accepted the challenge and tossed its hat into the ring, and we are going after that Gold Star. But that is not the only thing we expect to get; we hope to derive great benefit for the entire school from a four-months' campaign of special activity. If other schools win the stars we believe our efforts will not have been in vain. This is one game where "every throw is a winner"; there is nothing to lose for any contestant, but everything to gain in exact proportion to the efforts put forth.

MILES J. SNYDER.

DOINGS AT LOUISVILLE

The Brethren at Louisville, Ohio, have had their plans upset and their work interrupted much as churches elsewhere, but they have made the best of things and are hopeful, as usual, of the future. Every special offering has been lifted and "over the top" has been written on every one.

It has seemed most convenient for Louisville to take her offering for Benevolences on Rally Day. This special service was held on October 6th in the morning and a Harvest Home service was the evening program. An offering for Benevolences slightly above the required 10 cents per member was raised. Then the "flu" settled over Louisville and the ban was on tight for four weeks.

On the morning of November 10th, the ban was lifted, and we had the regular services. On the next Sunday evening communion services were held and the state mission offering was received. The attendance was only two-thirds normal, due to the fact that some were sick and some afraid of the "flu," but the offering went above what was needed to meet half of the yearly apportionment (a State mission offering is received at each semi-annual communion). The next day the "flu" ban was replaced. The saloon men of the town protested the closing decree of the health board, a part of which became weak-kneed and caused the saloons to be exempted from the ban. Then all the pastors, including the Catholic priest, vigorously protested against the exemption of the saloons while the churches remained under the ban. The result was that the churches were permitted to have day services only for the next three weeks.

On Sunday morning, December 1st, the offering for General Home missions was lifted and 35 cents per member, instead of the required 30, was the amount realized.

Our White Gift offering came next. It was received at the White Gift service held on Monday night, December 23rd. Here there was no thought given to any requirement. Everybody simply tried to do their best. And how good "their best" really was you may judge when I tell you the amount was $90.00 when last counted. (I say "last counted," because the total amount did not come in at the White Gift service; some gifts were coming in several days after). That splendid offering was made possible by every member and every class in the Sunday school doing "their best."

The pastor is willing to confess, in spite of his great faith in his people, that when the "flu" ban was lifted, he feared it might be too much of a strain on the church to ask for three heavy offerings in six weeks. But the official board advised to try it. So letters with offering envelopes enclosed were sent to every member of the church. The bigness of the program was accepted as a challenge and "over the top," they went.

The next special feature was the "All-day New Year Conference and Business Meeting" which is an annual affair. The morning session consisted of talks, special music and congregational singing. The central theme of the session was "A Greater Brethren Church in Louisville." Various factors that entered into the realization of that slogan were discussed.

Then came the noon hour when the members arranged themselves in a circle in the Sunday school room and a basket lunch was enjoyed.

The afternoon session was given to the transaction of business and to reports from the various departments of the church. All reports showed that the past year had been a good one considering prevailing conditions. Officers for the ensuing year were elected without the slightest friction. And among the various items of business it was voted to put the Evangelist on the church budget for the second year. At this meeting the pastor read his resignation to take effect the first of April in order to give his whole time to the editorship of the Brethren Evangelist. Plans for a successor are well under way, the results of which will be announced in due time.

This report is not yet complete. Certain things happened that made the pastor and his wife to rejoice because of the church's appreciation of their services. First, the Friendship Bible class, composed of young married ladies, gave Mrs. Baer, their teacher, a beautiful leather purse at Christmas time. Second, the ladies of the church gave the pastor and his wife a box of "greenbacks" and silver which amounted to $21.50. This came as a Christmas remembrance. Then, on New Year day, the church voted the pastor a $50.00 check as an expression of appreciation. These surprises and valuable gifts were appreciated more than our feeble words could tell. If they are an expression of love on the part of the people for the pastor and his wife, and we know they are, the very acceptance of them becomes an acknowledgement of a love that is mutual. They are to us love-gifts and are appreciated far above their commercial value, high as that is. We have grown to love these people and have consented to leave them with great reluctance, and only because of a feeling that the call of the Brethren Publishing Company and the late General Conference is God's call to larger service. May God bless those dear people and send them more worthy leaders than we have been.

GEO. S. BAER, Pastor.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

MOORE-NOWLIN—At the writer's residence in Roanoke, Virginia, on Wednesday, December 18th, Miss Annie L. Nowlin, became the bride of Mr. Richard L. Moore. Both are highly respected young people of the city. The occasion was marked by its quietness. Ceremony by the writer.

L. G. WOOD.

GREENWOOD-HAMAKER—On Saturday, December 28th, 1918, at the residence of the writer, in Roanoke, Virginia, occurred the marriage ceremony of William H. Greenwood and Bertha I. Hamaker, both of Roanoke city, and the bride is a member of the Brethren church. Ceremony by the writer.

L. G. WOOD.

SAMPSON-DUDLEY—On Christmas day at noon, Mr. Oscar Sampson and Miss Blanche Dudley were united in marriage. Mr. Sampson is a member of the Brethren church at Center Chapel. The bride is a worthy young lady of North Liberty. Ceremony at the home of the bride's parents by the writer.

C. C. GRISSO.

IN THE SHADOW

CHAPMAN—Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, America's foremost evangelist, passed away on Christmas day. He was known, respected and beloved around the Christian world and his death occasions a breach in the ranks of aggressive, evangelical Christianity that cannot easily be filled in this generation. He was born at Richmond, Indiana, June 17, 1857.

PAGE—It is with deep regret that the nation hears of the death of Dr. Walter H. Page, former Envoy to Great Britain. On October 12th he returned from his duties in England in very bad health and since that time has been in the hospital until ten days ago, when he went to Pinchurst, North Carolina, where he passed away.

TINKLE—Andrew Floyd, son of Francis and Rhoda Tinkle, was born September 2, 1891, in Carroll county and died December 4, 1918, aged 27 years, 3 months and 2 days. He was married to Josephine Murphy, March 25, 1914, to which union was born one son, Dwight. He was a member of the First Brethren church at Flora. Besides his wife and son, he leaves one sister, Flora, to mourn his departure. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by the pastor of the Presbyterian church, Rev. Steffy, and by his own pastor, Brother S. C. Henderson.

W. T. LYTLE.

SIGLER—Julia Rookh Hendrix, third daughter of Zedock and Susannah Hendrix, was born in Carroll county, Indiana, August 17, 1882, and died at her present home in Highmore, S. D., November 19, 1918, aged 36 years, 3 months and 2 days. She was "keeping the home fires burning" while her husband, Dr. G. V. S'gler, was in service in France. She was a member of the Salem Brethren church before marriage, when she went with her husband to the Disciple church. She is survived by her husband, two sons and one daughter, her mother, a sister and three brothers. Her body was shipped to her mother's home in Indiana, where the funeral was conducted November 24th by the writer. Interment was made in the Burlington cemetery. W. T. LYTLE.

ROBERTSON—Alma Robertson died at the family home near North Liberty, Indiana, December 8th, at the age of 15 years. Hers was a beautiful life just begun. She was a Freshman in the North Liberty high school. Funeral services from the home by the writer. C. C. GRISSO.

RHINEHART—Thelma Junior, passed to her reward on the 8th of December, at the tender age of two years, four months and six days, at her home in Roanoke, Virginia. Little Thelma was not strong enough to resist the dreadful epidemic of influenza. A brief funeral service was held at the grave, by the writer. L. G. WOOD.

SHAVER—Delmar G. Shaver died at Hopewell, Virginia, December 21, 1918, after an illness from influenza which developed into pneumonia. He was the youngest son of William Shaver and a grandson of Rev. E. B. Shaver. As a musician, he was one of the leaders of his profession at Hopewell, and for years was the organist in the Brethren church at Manertown. He was a member of the Brethren church for more than four years and will be missed in church work. Brother Delmar leaves his father, mother and one brother, Owen, to mourn his untimely death, he being only 18 years, 6 months and one day old. Funeral services were conducted from his grandfather's home at Maurertown, by Rev. Geo. A. Copp and his body interred in the church cemetery at that place.

EMMONS—Valentine J., son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Emmons, departed this life at Ashland, Ohio, on November 30, 1918, in his thirty-fifth year. He had been a member of the Brethren church since 1905, and, despite a severe affliction, passed out of this life very peacefully. Only a few weeks earlier the bereft family was called upon to part with a daughter, but their trust is in God who comforteth us in all our sorrows. J. A. GARBER.

SMITH—Bessie, daughter of Cornelius and Amanda Crowell, entered the heavenly life on December 8, 1918, aged 29 years and 24 days. On April 1st, 1916, she was united in marriage with Arthur Smith, of West Alexandria, Ohio, where Mrs. Smith held her church membership. She was a devoted wife, a loving daughter and a faithful sister. Funeral from their late home in Richmond, Indiana, where these young people had made many friends. May the Lord sustain those who mourn. J. A. GARBER.

Business Manager's Corner

One Man and a Pair of Good Legs

Brother Beachler has had much to say during the past year about the efficiency and the sufficiency of a Ford, and recently he has written of the loyal service rendered by a good horse, but I can not remember that he has yet had to resort to man power or foot power to get results, and yet one of our Indiana pastors has developed to a remarkable degree this style of propelling power, and with nothing but his two feet snrmount-ed by an indomitable spirit to carry him over the country he made a complete canvass of a country congregation, whose members receive their mail from four different post offices, in the interest of the Brethren Evangelist and succeeded in increasing the list for that congregation more than FIVE HUNDRED percent, and that man of "the willing mind" was Homer Anderson, pastor of the Dutchtown Brethren church. But some of you say, that feat can not be repeated in many churches, and in reply, I can say I can name several dozen congregations where there is room for its repetition. There may not be the Anderson type of legs there to carry the pastor around, but there is the field waiting to be cultivated. I say I know there are many such fields because I know how many papers are going into these congregations. I also have a pretty good idea of the number of members in each congregation.

But to convince you that this great increase is possible in many places let me call your attention to a list of subscriptions with eighty-three names just received this morning where formerly but twelve papers were going. Many churches have less than a dozen papers coming to their families so this is not necessarily an exception. I do not know how Brother Trout did it, for he is a new man among us, and the feat he accomplished was done in about the oldest congregation we have, namely, Berlin, Pennsylvania. Here the increase is nearly six hundred percent. Although the subscription list to the Evangelist has been practically doubled during the last year, if we would continue at the rate of these last two congregations for awhile it would not be long until the list would be doubled again.

Crown Chapel, near Leon, Iowa has also won a place on the Honor Roll of the Evangelist within the last week, so it is seen that the movement is confined to no state or section, but that from Pennsylvania to California the Brethren churches are catching the vision and with proper encouragement and determination on the part of the pastors this may yet become one of the most important movements of the church.

The Evangelist mailing list is being revised and transferred to our new system as rapidly as possible, and it would be a great accommodation to the workers in the Publishing House if as many subscribers as possible would renew their subscriptions at once, even though they may not expire for several months.

We would call the attention of the Sunday schools to the fact that the Junior Quarterly was delayed in the making this quarter and that it will arrive late to all the schools; but it will soon appear.

R. R. TEETER,
Business Manager.

A Proposed Plan of Correlation

(Continued from page 11)

societies in the church, the campaign committee should see that they are organized immediately. If there are eight or ten boys and girls between eight and twelve years of age in the Sunday School there is need for a Junior society. If your young people's society is largely composed of members over twenty years of age, there is need of an Intermediate society to take care of the boys and girls between thirteen and seventeen. For organizing literature write to your State C. E. Union, or General Secretary William Shaw, Christian Endeavor Headquarters, Mt. Vernon and Joy Streets, Boston, Massachusetts.

4. Close the month's campaign with a special celebration of Christian Endeavor Week, February 2 to 9, 1919. Suggestions for the week's program may be secured from the United Society of Christian Endeavor.

5. In enrolling members for Christian Endeavor, be sure to emphasize the Christian Endeavor covenant. Do not lower the standards of the society merely for the sake of increasing the membership.

6. Use every possible means of publicity to advertise the month's campaign. Appoint a reporter to send an account of what you accomplish to the Christian Endeavor World, The Ohio Endeavorer, the local newspapers, the denominational papers, and the International Field Workers' Union, 405 Association Building, Chicago.

7. REWARDS: A Christian Endeavor shield will be awarded to the Sunday School submitting the best report of work done in the campaign. Gold C. E. pins will be awarded to Sunday School scholars submitting the best poster and the best essays on Christian Endeavor. Reports, essays and posters, to be eligible for prizes, must be sent to the International Christian Endeavor Field Workers' Union, 405 Association Building, Chicago, not later than February 20, 1919.

Brethren Home of Ohio

An incorporation with over $10,000 in Assets

PURPOSE. To build a home for the aged and infirm of our church and an orphanage for our children.

Why not make it a National Home for the entire brotherhood? The Board of Trustees will present this proposition at National Conference this year.

Gifts, subscriptions and bequests solicited.

Information cheerfully given.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Ira Fudge, Gratis, Ohio, Pres.
Orion E. Bowman, V. Pres. and Atty.
Elmer Wombold, Secy.
1718 W. Monument Ave., Dayton, Ohio
Jesse A. Garver, Treas.
J. Allen Miller.

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 3

JANUARY 15
1919

The BRETAREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETHREN -

Pray for the Makers of Peace

There can be no true Victory without a Righteous Peace

"I exhort therefore that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions and giving of thanks be made for all men; for kings and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty."—1 Timothy 2:1, 2.

"God of our fathers, God of the nations,
Sovereign supreme over all the wide world,
Here we would praise Thee with heartfelt oblations,
Here while the banner of peace is unfurled.

Lord of the centuries, pardon the ages
Dark with the terrors of battle and blood;
Give forth Thy light and unfold the bright pages—
Glorious era of true brotherhood.

Judge of all peoples, still with us pleading,
Teach us Thy justice and reason and right;
Give us courage to follow Thy leading,
Children of liberty, children of light.

Rise, O America, rise to Thy splendor,
Lead forth the nations to war against war;
Stand for the highest, be freedom's defender,
Brotherhood, justice and peace evermore."

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

What Will the Boys Do When They Come Home?—The Editor,	2	What Counts for an Efficient Sunday School?—E. E. Frantz, ...	9
Editorial Review,	3	Missionary Possibilities of the Central West—G. T. Ronk,	10
Four Year Program—Charles A. Bame, D.D.,	4	Set Your Society in Order—Prof. J. A. Garber,	11
Teaching Church Ordinances—Miles J. Snyder,	5	Life Work—Edwin Boardman, Jr.,	11
What Will Put Power into the Church?—Robert F. Porte,	6	News from the Field,	12-14
Change Cars—E. M. Cobb,	7	In the Shadow,	15
Sermon, Forty Kinds of Fools—Charles A. Bame, D.D.,	8	"Christ Makes All Men Free" (Poem)—Rev. T. W. Dickert, ...	16
		Grow Up or Blow Up—R. R. Teeter, D.D.,	16

EDITORIAL

What Will the Boys Do When They Come Home?

I ask this question in the greatest seriousness and am anxious that you shall ponder it with me. It is a serious question because it comes from the hearts of the boys. It is not a creation of my imagination; I have read it on pages of letters written by serious minded boys who have seen service in the front line trenches, boys who have walked in "the valley of the shadow" day after day and have been made to understand the seriousness of life. One young man wrote, "I am wondering what I will do when I get home; whether I will just be satisfied with having a job and making a little money, or whether I will be able to give myself to the thing that will make my life count for the largest service. I don't know what I will do. But I feel as though a fellow ought to be doing something really worth while." Another khaki clad friend overseas wrote, "I haven't made a very shining success of things. I have been a church member, but never gave it very serious attention, never was any too greatly concerned about faithfulness and allowed trifles to interfere with my good aims. I hope I can do better. In fact I don't believe I can go back and be satisfied with my old life." Another young man of talent and training with whom I had talked intimately and seriously before he went over wrote, "I don't know whether to take up the tools again or not. Sometimes I want to turn to something that will show results that will last." And I might quote from other letters expressions from boys whose souls have been purged of the petty meanness and bigotry and selfishness so common to men who have not faced death or disaster. They do not all express a discontent with their former trade or professions, for some have already found the place they fit in life. But to a man, they write of a desire to play the game of life seriously and serve the interests of Christ and the church faithfully. So that I am sure there is a wholesome discontent in the minds of the boys, who have walked in the presence of death, with things that are trivial and unworthy. And they themselves are wondering what they will do when they come home. It is not jobs they are puzzled about. There will be jobs galore. What will they do to keep vivid their new ideals they have received, and how will they be able to practice them in their daily walks? That is the question; and it is their own question, not ours.

But I am anxious that it shall be made our question too, and that it shall disturb our minds as it has their own. For then, I am confident, the right answer will readily be found. When I put the question to the church and her leaders I know I am putting it where it belongs for there better than anywhere else can the boys find those who are able to direct their young minds in vital things. I want that we shall make the question our own and then seek how we may contribute to its answer.

First, throw a spiritual atmosphere about them as soon as they return. There will be receptions and social fetes many, and the church may encourage or co-operate in them, but they do not meet the boys' needs. Something more is rightly expected of the church and something more vital must be planned by it. Give their receptions a spiritual significance and make them feel that the church clothes them with a spiritual mantle that will protect and warm them. Make the church worship so vitally religious and its fellowships so genuine and sympathetic that they will seek it and love it as the home of their souls. Let no pettiness, or jealousies, or narrowness, or selfishness or bickering or clashing exist. But let the church be exalted and ennobled, strongly inspiring and wholesomely spiritual. And he will seek its counsel and accept its guidance in that which has become to him the most important life problem.

Second, plan a program of aggressive Christian service, a program of things that are big and worthy to be done, that challenge faith and call for heroic endeavor. Call them to enlist in an offensive against entrenched evil in society, public life or in business. Put up to them the task of making the church supreme in community leadership, in relieving distress, healing the sick, lifting up the fallen and, most important of all, winning lost men to Christ. Make the program both big and worthy, and they will not be daunted but will rush with the accustomed courage and determination of the battle field to the challenging task. That will win them and hold them, and it will give them the answer to their question.

But there is another way in which this question should be answered by some of these men; and the church and the pastor can co-operate in bringing the right answer. There are many choice and talented men in the country's service. Over against that fact, there is a great dearth of worthy, well-equipped young men entering the ministry today. There are many of these men who are worthy and pre-eminently qualified for this noble calling. And no greater service could be rendered to them than the direction of their attention to the claims and opportunities of the ministry. We owe it to them to do this, for they rightfully look to their churches and their pastors for guidance in settling this question for their awakened souls. Every worthy young man has a right to such attention as soon as he returns home. Every one should have the wise, sympathetic counsel of some man of God in the effort to decide what he shall do when he gets home.

Moreover it will be rendering an incalculable service to the Kingdom of Christ in directing the choicest and ablest young men into the ministry and missionary work of the church. The need was never so great as now for worthy messengers of the gospel, both in the homeland and in the non-Christian world. The war has, in a large measure, depleted the ranks of the workers at home and abroad. The need of the world for the gospel is more pronounced than ever before, while the plans of the church to give forth the gospel have been greatly hindered if not completely interrupted. The demand for an enlarged and more efficient ministry is imperative. We need it to conserve what the war has won, to make democracy Christian and safe for the world, and to prevent a recurrence of the terrible world ravage which we have just witnessed." Many of those who fought for the liberty of the world" will likely respond to a "call to preserve the fruits of that liberty" if it is presented rightly. Let us hold up before these young men the opportunities and challenges of the ministry and see if they who dedicated their lives to the country's noble cause may not re-dedicate them to the greater cause of establishing and extending the Republic of God.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Don't neglect that church report. A lot of people are waiting to read it.

Read Brother Carpenter's "Home Mission Notes," he has "a fine suggestion" for you.

Turn to the "Sunday School" department and see the "White Gift" reports. Looks good, doesn't it? It will look better when yours come in.

Sister Detwiler is courageously keeping at her work in spite of a sprained knee. With such determination she will certainly continue to "overcome the difficulties" at Baltimore as they rise.

Word comes to us from Brother Wirick at St. Petersburg, Florida, promising support to the Evangelist and stating that he hopes to do some work among the Indiana churches during the coming summer.

Our correspondent from Oak Hill, West Virginia, corrects a mistaken report of the Jennings' revival held at that place. The number of conversions was 48 instead of eight. It's a difference that is worth correcting and we are pleased to call attention to it.

There comes to our desk a card on one end of which is a picture of Brother G. W. Rench, pastor of the First Brethren church of South Bend, Indiana, and on the other an announcement of a series of six sermons on the personal return and reign of our Lord, beginning January 13th.

Brother Bell has been very busy on the Pacific coast; besides carrying on the work at Long Beach, he was recently "called up the Valley in an evangelistic campaign," and at the same time has had sickness in his home. But he promises an article soon for the Evangelist. Thank you, Brother Bell.

On the Christian Endeavor page Brother Garber outlines Christian Endeavor week and introduces our new Life Work Superintendent, Brother Eddie Boardman, who brings his initial message in that capacity on the same page. It will pay you to get acquainted with him if you don't know him, and catch some of his fire.

The Los Angeles, California church had a great meeting on New Year's day with two things in particular to encourage them—one, the fact that they almost completely wiped out their church debt and another that their new pastor, Brother Jennings was with them for the first meeting together. May God grant them great success this year.

Brother Henderson reports six additions to the church in the twelve weeks he has been in charge of the Flora church, notwithstanding the fact that the "flu" ban has been on all but five Sundays. He finds himself in the midst of a lively bunch of workers who will doubtless give their pastor hearty co-operation as he leads them on to greater things.

Word comes from Mrs. C. E. Weidner, that Brother Weidner is sick with the "flu" for the second time in a month. She states that she has symptoms of the same malady and is fearful it will get her down. Both Brother and Sister Weidner have promised articles for the paper which they assure us will be forthcoming as soon as they are recovered. We thank you both.

Brother Hamilton reports the Ashland church work in this issue and expresses the confidence of the church in the leadership of Brother J. A. Garber. There seems to be a spirit of unity and of expectancy which bespeaks growth during Brother Garber's pastorate. He will be nobly assisted in the Sunday school by Brother A. C. Hendrickson and his efficient corps of workers.

A goodly number of our Evangelist family have written words of appreciation of the new cover page and new arrangement of the paper. We thank you for your kindness, Brethren, and hope with the continual co-operation of every member of our large family, that our church paper may become more and more practically serviceable and spiritually uplifting as well as more attractive.

Brother Ankrum shows great faith in keeping optimistic through a scourge of "dudemie" (it is a new but happy term, and must be one of Brother Ankrum's own coinage) such as Garwin, Iowa, has experienced. But then, why should we not be hopeful in the face of the promise that all things will work out for good to them that love the Lord and are called according to his purpose?

That Sunday school challenge issued by the Waterloo Brethren school is still working on the nerves of some of our people. Brother Oberhoitzer's good people of Fremont, Ohio, have called the challenge, and Huntington, Indiana, is in on it, too. The latter named school is expecting to carry away the gold star, though we notice they are keeping quiet about it. That is, they are not talking out loud, lest the Flora school should hear. Maybe Flora is playing the same trick.

Brother Goughnour has been acting as nurse while his wife and son were sick with the "flu." But they have recovered sufficiently for him to carry out an engagement for an evangelistic meeting at Masontown, Pa., for which place he leaves on Sunday night, the 12th. When two bundles of energy like Brethren Goughnour and Shively get together on a job there can scarcely a stone be left unturned that might bring success. Brother Goughnour also promises an article in the near future. Thanks.

From Goshen comes the report of the revival meeting held under most unfavorable circumstances. But why should any one say it was a failure though the results were not what were expected. Let us not be ready to call any meeting a failure, wherein man faithfully co-operates with the Holy Spirit in bringing the message of saving grace to sinful men. We may not see certain results for which we had hoped, but we must wait for the harvest in God's own time. It is he who "giveth the increase."

We are pleased to see the Ashland College correspondent on the job again and hope he will be a weekly visitor. Everybody is interested in what goes on at the college, especially since so many are investing some of their surplus cash in the institution. This is the most important spot in the brotherhood now. And it is a place where everybody is intensely busy. Just this last Sunday besides Dr. Furry, whose trip is mentioned in the "Notes," Dean Miller preached at Rittman. Prof. J. A. Garber preached in the college chapel in the morning and in a downtown church in the evening, and Brother Gnagay preached in downtown churches both morning and evening, while a number of the theological students go out regularly to preach over Sunday.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

Did You DO It?

Did you send your report to your District Director? Mine is just ready to go in this mail. Delayed? Yes, just a little. Does not that sound natural? It does to me. I did not think that two-thirds of the time would pass before I had started my report to my District Director, but that is what the calendar tells me. Of course there is still plenty of time to get in, but if another church with the same progress has beaten me to him, that church will stand highest in the counting. So, it will be in the final standing in 1920.

Will You Directors?

Will you remember that you are to mark on your return cards, the relation of the coming of these reports? Simply mark on the cards, which was first, second, etc., as they came to you. Keeping these cards for the permanent records, we shall know for all time who are the prompt men.

My Report. Perhaps it will hearten some discouraged pastor to know that my report contains just one more "P" mark than "G" mark. This time, they are all one or the other. Next time some may be lost, but we are not going to admit that any are lost this time. We hope to fill the remaining months of the year so full of "pep" and energy that we may make "G's" out of all those nine "P's", before next reporting time.

Even the Goal Nine

You bet, Mr. Business Manager of the Publishing House, North Manchester does expect to come in out of the cold and rain before long and get on the Honor Roll along with the churches that do not have to get so many subscriptions by a good many. When we appear there, it will be with the longest string yet, I believe. And it takes a good lot of courage to even try to make it, and I believe it can be done.

Sunshine

I like to call it sunshine when a man writes me a good letter of encouragement. Well, I have two letters since I wrote last week that ought to help every one of us to go forward. One says, "we must go on with the Program as if nothing had happened." That missive said a good deal more, but that is the important sentence. "As if nothing had happened," takes a mighty powerful imagination, I'll admit. We know that a plenty has happened when we scan the records of the last few months, but we can go on—go right straight on—even if we can not draw so heavily on our imagination as to believe that "nothing has happened."

Another

Another of these sunshine letters said, "Go forward and make the Goals as far as we can." That sentence comes from one of the aggressive leaders of the church as you may well guess when you read it. "Go forward" is the very center of the teachings of our Christ. His program is always forward. No delay; no vacations; never backward, always forward. So, we go with God when we go forward. Blessed privilege! Blessed fellowship! Happy man with such an opportunity! Send in your report so that we shall all know you are going forward.

Best Yet

There is one way and but one that we may expect this report to be the best yet. That is in the number of reports we may get. I have no hope that we shall exceed the gains of last year in this first report. But we can gain in the number of reporters and we pray that this may come true. Erase the black in the hand book for next year. We ought to be ashamed of the black stuff. It was yellow at the conference.

Too Late?

No, it is not too late to get your report to your District Director. Of course, you can not get it there before January 15. But you can reach him in time so that it will get to me by February 15. You may have a good excuse for not doing it before now, and we do hope that you will not keep the black lines black by not reporting at all. Keep your church on the map.

A Secret

In my next letter, I may be able to let out a secret. I shall have something good to tell you soon and I hope that you will be looking for it so that you will have a lot of sunshine, when it comes. Cheer up.

Do You Agree?

I hope so. A funny little story is going the rounds that might teach us something worth while. It is told of a certain negro who was before a judge for a divorce. "What is the matter Sambo?" Sambo stammered and the judge put in, "Incompatibility, I suppose." Again Sambo stammered, not getting much enlightenment by the judge's big word. "Can't agree, I presume," suggested the judge, trying to help Sambo out of his embarrassment. "Oh, yes, we can agree," replied Sambo. "We can 'gree, all right; the trouble wid us was that we couldn't 'gree on the same thing at the same time." The time is here for us to "'gree on same thing at the same time." February 15, is latest date for District Directors. Help them by sending in your report.

"NOW THEN, DO IT."

BAME.

"Tomorrow you will live, you always cry;
In what fair country does tomorrow lie,
That 'tis so mighty long ere it arrive?
Beyond the Indies does this tomorrow live?
'Tis so far-fetched, this morrow, that I fear
'Twill be both very old and very dear.
'Tomorrow I will live,' the fool doth say:
Today itself's too late; the wise lived yesterday."
—Selected

"Today is ours; what do we fear?
Today is ours; we have it here.
Let's treat it kindly, that it may Wish, at least, with us to stay.
Let's at our business, banish sorrow;
'To the God belongs tomorrow.'—Selected.
NOW THEN, DO IT." BAME.

OHIO CHURCHES, TAKE NOTICE!

The Ohio Four Year Program director has received but three reports to date. Every report should have been in before this notice reaches you, but unless a great many folks do some quick work, they will not arrive on scheduled time. I am dependent upon you. Without your co-operation my hands are tied, but with your help I can make sure that Ohio reports will reach General Director Bame "on time." Don't put it off another minute, send your report by return mail. If it is not what you had hoped, send it anyway; you will find many others in the same situation. "No report" will show up worse against us than reports showing lack of attainment. Come, let us put across a complete report.

Your servant the Ohio Director,
GEO. S. BAER,
Ashland, Ohio.

GENERAL ARTICLES

Teaching Church Ordinances By Miles J. Snyder

The subject of this article ought to be of universal interest. Practically all denominations assign a large place to church ordinances. In a sense they are to a church what bones are to the body. Because of their utility the visible church has form and strength. While they do not constitute the life of the church, yet through them the invisible spiritual life finds expression in the world.

It is not the purpose of the writer to try to prove by the scriptures that the observance of church ordinances is a necessity on the part of the Christian believer, and essential to the largest growth and noblest character. As well try to prove to a man with good sight that the sun is shining at midday. All men know, or may know, that ordinances are set forth in the Bible. That is a question that needs no argument.

Instead I want to call attention to the fact that they are admirably adapted to our everyday wants and needs, and that in keeping of them there is great reward. Nor is the writer concerned about those who are seeking to know how little they can do and still be saved, but rather those who sincerely desire the attainment of the highest good and the largest development of spiritual life and power. The question, "May one be saved without keeping the ordinances?" is very foolish. Much rather should we be concerned as to how our observance of them may become a real factor in the growth and development of a truly religious life and character.

All rational beings recognize the limitations of the human mind. "Man is of the earth, earthy," and cannot readily grasp abstract spiritual truths. He needs the help of concrete, material things which come within the range of the senses to be as stepping stones in his efforts to rise into a knowledge and understanding of spiritual things. It was to meet this common need that the ordinances, or symbols, or sacraments, of the New Testament were chosen and set apart and authorized. Herein is their distinct purpose and exceptional value.

Furthermore, ordinances preserve the truth originally given. Verbal statements of truths may be variously interpreted from generation to generation, and in time may be entirely lost. But a fixed symbol holds the original truth unchanged through the years. As bottles preserve the precious ointment from wasting, so the ordinances preserve the truths they contain and send them on unimpaired down across the centuries of time. The embodiment of truths in symbols, therefore, is of greatest value, providing, of course, the symbols are preserved unchanged.

In addition to aiding us in comprehending spiritual truth and preserving it unchanged, the ordinances of the church are a witness to one's faith. "Faith, if it have not works, is dead in itself." They also afford unmistakable tests of obedience. "If a man love me, he will keep my word." It is utter folly to say we love Christ and then wilfully ignore his commandments relating to the observance of church ordinances. And again, they are perpetual means of grace in the Christian life and a loving memorial of Christ. "He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, abideth in me and I in him." "This do in remembrance of me."

In teaching the ordinances of the church, the practical value of them should always be strongly emphasized. They are valuable not only because they are scriptural, but because of their utilitarian possibilities; they are perfectly adapted to the needs of the spirit-life. They should be kept not only because we ought to obey God, but because they contribute to our highest good and largest life.

One of the golden opportunities for teaching church ordinances is to new converts. Faithfulness in observing the sacraments of the church will depend largely upon how the start is made in the Christian life. When a seeker after the truth is led to accept Christ, the fulness of the church program and life ought to be intelligently presented and clearly explained. If the new convert is started in the church observing the sacred ordinances in a way to receive the spiritual blessings to be derived therefrom, the passing years will witness a growing faithfulness and loyalty in the things which make for spiritual development and righteousness. But, if there is neglect and indifference in the beginning, the disastrous results sure to follow will be very hard to overcome. Through these lost opportunities and resultant sad conditions, it can be said now, as in Paul's day, "For this cause many among you are weak and sickly, and not a few asleep."

And not only should the minister concern himself in teaching church ordinances, but the faithful members of the church, and especially parents, have a solemn responsibility here. Sometimes one's example exerts a greater influence for good than a dozen sermons; and the kindly word of encouragement from a friend often awakens impulse and will that lead to action.

One only needs to consider, even briefly, the truths embodied in the outstanding ordinances of the church to see both the needs and possibilities of ready obedience.

Take for instance the ordinance of baptism. Here we have symbolized a change of state, cleansing from sin, burial of "the old man," the putting on of "the new man," and the resurrection to a new life. What a remarkable array of Christian fundamentals!

In the ordinance of feet-washing there is symbolized spiritual cleansing which the Christian needs in his daily walk of life, humility of spirit, and willingness to serve unselfishly. Is there less need of these things now than in Christ's day?

In the love feast, or Lord's supper, we have a symbol of Christian love portraying fellowship and brotherhood and social equality. What a different world this would be if all artificial racial and class distinctions were obliterated!

And in the communion of the bread and wine there is symbolized confession of sin and guilt, and atonement for it, the promise of spiritual life, assurance of oneness with Christ while growing in his likeness, and an earnest or foretaste of heaven with delightful social enjoyment in the Kingdom of God.

What vital thing is there that is related to the Christian life or conducive to Christian growth that is not embodied in the sacred ordinances of the church? Of course, I am not contending for a blind observance of them merely for the sake of rendering a formal obedience. There is neither value nor spiritual life and power in any mere ordinance. All sacraments are a means and not an end. Whether they have any real and abiding value to us depends upon how we keep them, for the efficacy of an ordinance lies in the participant's fulfillment of the conditions whereby the blessings are given. The thought that should always be remembered is that in the ordinances rightly kept we have beautifully, concretely, and strikingly set forth the great fundamental principles and truths of the Christian religion; so that instead of being empty forms to be lightly cast aside they are full of spirit and life.

Sometimes we hear people say, "There is nothing in this or that particular ordinance for me." Well, that is probably true for the one who says it. Certainly it should not be expected that there would be anything in an ordinance for the person who has never kept it. But the one who has never made the test is no competent witness. The promise is only to the doer, and he who fails here misses the rewards of privilege accepted and duty done. Jesus said, "If ye know these things blessed are ye if ye DO them;" not if you read or talk or wonder or speculate or argue about them!

In considering this subject we must not forget that we are living in the twentieth century, instead of in the first when ordinances were instituted in the Christian church. Ours is what has been called "a practical age." Authority is everywhere being questioned. The church and its ancient forms must cope with the present. Today men face the ordinances with the question, "What difference do they make?" The question is, "Are they really worth while?" They must stand the pragmatic test.

In teaching the ordinances we must bear all these things in mind. And we can do it without fear or hesitation, for, viewed aright, they have a most practical value in the religious life of today. They are both scientific and psychological. They are not accidents of time and place, but as expressions of the wisdom of God, they are perfect symbols of vital and fundamental principles that are universally applicable and which all may understand and from which all may receive help. Underlying them are laws just as well defined and certain in operation as the laws of seedtime and harvest or of physical growth. Organic life requires food and exercise; spiritual life likewise grows and develops. By meeting the conditions of the laws of the ordinances there follows spiritual life and growth and strength. These symbols suggest religious or spiritual truths, at once elementary and fundamental, which, when acted upon, make of us new creatures possessing powers of conduct, service, sacrifice, and piety which we did not have before and which can not be gained otherwise. The permanent and paramount value of any ordinance always lies in the significance of the truth for which it stands; and its observance is highly important because when the symbol is neglected the truth back of it will soon be forgotten.

These then are some of the considerations to be taken into account in teaching the ordinances of the church. Something more is needed than to quote the Bible to prove they are authoritative. That is readily granted. They must be vitally linked and related to the life we now live in a reasonable and practical way or they will not make the appeal they should to the modern man. The keeping of them is important not only because they are scriptural, but because they are conducive to spiritual growth and godliness. Every Christian needs just what they are designed to supply. They are not empty symbols unrelated to daily life, but are perfectly adapted to our common experience and adequately meet the crying needs of the soul. The faithful keeping of them does make a great difference in life and character. If faith in God, living the Christ-life, obeying the commandments, does not produce the highest and sublimest type of Christian character, then what will? The ordinances will never become powerless or obsolete because the principles and truths they symbolize are divine and eternal. What "sons of disobedience" may say about their futility is as nothing compared with the commanding voice of Jesus Christ. Man's assumption is not God's wisdom. The ordinances of the church embody the infinite wisdom of God intent upon man's salvation and growth in Christ-likeness and happy, yea, thrice blessed, is he who accepts that wisdom by a living faith and manifests it in works of joyous obedience.

What Will Put Power Into the Church?

By Robert F. Porte

This is an interesting question to every church worker. Its answer will lighten the burden of the Kingdom of God on earth a great deal. We are anxiously looking for ways and means to encourage interest in our churches and it may surprise you to know that power is the thing of interest. It is the potential energy hidden in nature that begets a lively interest. We look with awe upon the mighty engine because of its power. After all, power comes from the presence of life, whether it be in nature or man. Man has organized nature and used the possibilities to his advancement. God has endowed plant life with a hidden power that brings change and color to the landscape. The very world about us is alive with energy waiting for some use and challenging our co-operation.

The church that is interesting to me is the church that does things. I believe my idea is not new but is the experience of many others. It is the church with a purpose and a program that creates a lively interest in its members and community. Not the church however, that spends its time on trifles but the church that really fulfills the mission of the church. The early church was alive with activity and possessed a power that resisted the oppression of formidable foes. The interesting church is not necessarily the largest or most beautiful but must possess the very thing that the individuals around it need so much. Our churches need power in order that we may carry the load resting upon us. I would not suggest the elimination of any organization or duty but would suggest we seek to increase the volume of power.

The one out-standing way of inducing power in our churches is through the really converted constituency. This is old and somewhat commonplace to some, but is the very foundation of the road to power. The individual must be purified and cleansed to do his best. By conversion, I mean to suggest that the individual has staked his dearest treasure for the success and triumph of the church on Jesus Christ. If we would be willing to die for the sake of the honor and triumph of the church we would be unconquerable. The difference between merely belonging to an organization and being a vital part of an organization is quite apparent. The person who is not truly surrendered to Christ and his work can never be a power. The influences of the world will increasingly prevent it. The possibility of power will be greatly increased by complete insulation from sin.

The church should not be merely a helper on an equality with other agencies, but should be the power house and the foundry of character. The church should be so exalted by the genuine character of her members that the world would look to the church in the hours of deepest need with confidence of help. We have been over-anxious to exercise the humanitarian side of the Master's example of conduct to the impoverishment of the inner source of power. We need to pray for eyes to distinguish between what is sinful and what is holy and right.

The next step that seems very vital to me in making our churches powerful is that of Christian enlightenment. Do your members know what the faith of Jesus Christ means? If they do you will have a unit of supreme power. The doctrines of the church to which I belong ought to be the embodiment of Christian ideal and teaching toward which I will diligently strive. The individual who belongs to a particular church because it is the most popular and largest in the town is nothing but a cork tossed upon the billows as far as his Christian service goes. And further, let me suggest that this is why quite frequently we notice the power of the big church under proportion to the power of the little church around the corner. If a church has doctrines that are implicitly believed and heartily accepted, and an organic union is effected of such members, that church cannot help approaching the place of greatest power and usefulness. The only unity of the denominations that will bring a powerful force will be the union based upon the doctrines of Jesus, accepted just as the Master gave them to the disciples. The church's power depends, I believe, upon her devotion to the commands of her Lord.

The church that will possess power must be a church whose members are one in purpose and action. The only thing for the individual members to specialize on should be the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus in all the world. I believe that the great program outlined by our church and the similar programs of the other churches is a sign of returning to awakening power. Any church that pulls away from these endeavors is absolutely headed for oblivion. The influence of such a church at home or abroad will be an example of the theory of limits. Education, foreign missions, home missions, all benevolent work, must receive united support from every member and every church, if we individually or collectively are to have power. The business man or woman must be just as consecrated to the service of God in the church as the minister. If this program which I have just mentioned be carried out we will have properly equipped institutions which will mean rapid extension, better service, and a sin-cursed world saved from the way of death. We must be consistent in our individualistic and social ideas, by combining these forces and factors in the right proportion. The extreme individualist loses his power by the lack of use through the social channels. He will lose his soul just as the man in the parable of the talents lost his reward through the lack of use of what he had. The extremist in the teaching of the modern social doctrines loses his power by paying a road to the fountain and forgetting to see that the fountain itself is cared for. The social theory loses its size and intensity by the over extensivity of its alleged power. I am endeavoring to leave this thought; that we as parts of the organism of the church find our greatest strength not in self-annihilation in the organization nor by too boldly and baldly heralding our own dogmas or ideas, but rather uniting our efforts for the one supreme glory that shall attend the efforts of all Christ's disciples truly united. The glory of the Christ and the salvation of the world is a greater gain than the fact that any individual has shown himself to be superior to his fellows. We win if we contend lawfully in the Christian race.

The last, and perhaps the most important, step in making our churches powerful is to make the church a spiritual church. By a spiritual church I mean a church that is honored by the abiding presence of the Holy Spirit at every service. The success of the first Christians is explained by the fact that they had the presence of the Holy Spirit. The Jews refused the leading and teaching of the Christ and crucified him when he claimed to be their Messiah and what the Jew reaped is an evident fact of history. It might be a surprise to some to know that many Christians are doing with the blessed third Person of the trinity what the Jews did with the Son of God. They refuse the Holy Spirit's leading and his teaching, and crucify him by denying his divine origin and work. The future of the church or people who despise the Holy Spirit will be like the experiences of the Jew who despised the Christ. I am not an alarmist nor a pessimist but no people can achieve success in saving the world, which all admit is the purpose of religion, unless we are led and guided by God's representative on earth, the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is the agent of God carrying his secrets to us and making our questions known to him. The church member who never reads his Bible nor prays will absolutely lose interest in the church and his own soul. A dependent spirit-directed church is a powerful church. An independent, rationalistic, non spirit-directed, doubting church is as weak as the man of Sin would care for. What does the private soldier know about what is in the mind of his superior officer? He simply obeys when the word is spoken without question. What business have I or you, mere mortals, to expect to know God's thought or to endeavor to demonstrate to God what his commandments mean. When God's Word says "Go ye" it is ours not to question why but to go directed by his Spirit and if necessary to do and to die. The spiritual church is a church in which the Spirit has his way, and where the Holy Spirit has his way God is supreme, and Jesus is revered and worshipped as Savior.

Change Cars

I was down town one day in Dayton, and wanted to come home. I took a Third street car, for I knew that was the one that would take me to my place. In about twenty minutes when I thought we ought to be home, and looked up from my paper, to my surprise, I was at the extreme other end of the city. I had been riding on a Third street car all right, but I was turned around in that city, and I got an East Third instead of a West Third. Do you know that the best thing in the world I could think of for me to do was to change cars.

When you see you are on the wrong train, why don't you change cars? What is the use to be going in the wrong direction and keep on going when you know you have to turn around and come back? It is a waste of energy. Every mile you go in the wrong direction means two miles; yes, it means three miles, because you have to make the one mile and make it back again and then make the mile in the right direction, which should have been the first one made. The life that you have, the opportunities that are before you and the ability that the Creator has blessed you with are things for material uses in this world. We are to use and not to abuse these God-given faculties. When one sees that he is beating the air and climbing unsurmountable obstacles and trying to swim a river that cannot be passed over, in other words, trying to defy the inevitable, it is simply a matter of being on the wrong train. Change cars.

How often we find a farmer behind the counter; or again, how often does it occur that whenever a man has health that is insufficient for any other occupation he is directed to the ministry? If he has not sense enough to learn anything else he is sent to the farm. A large majority of men would be found mauling a horse over the head with a club if he would get into the wrong stall, but there is no one to maul the man who gets on the wrong train. He only awaits the reward of merit that fate has for him in the end. So the more sensible thing to do, my dear friend, is to examine your ticket and see whether or not you are on the right train. If you find that you are not, change cars. The earlier you do this in life, the sooner you will reach your desired haven. It matters not how much money you have, it matters not what knowledge you may be in possession of—the more knowledge and more money, if on the wrong train, the faster you will travel in the wrong direction. Would to God that some kind canopy might thunder out above you in tones that reverberate through the universe, "Change cars!"

By E. M. Cobb

WOMEN AND THE WORLD WAR

Never before have women played such a large part in war as in the late world war. Heretofore it was only the men who went forth to do battle, while the women remained at home to care for the fields and the flocks. In this war the women not only kept the home fires burning, but also did a great part in the actual carrying on of the war.

Thousands of these women were scattered along every battle line, risking their lives and giving themselves as freely, as unselfishly and as courageously as men did, to drive from the earth all fear of the iron heel of Prussianism. They were found in the base and field hospitals, and canteens and dressing rooms, in the Y. M. C. A. huts—everywhere, and were an indispensable factor in carrying on the war. And to them the men must bow in grateful recognition when they think what might have happened without their help.—B.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

Forty Kinds of Fools By Charles A. Bame, D.D.

TEXT—"Professing themselves to be wise they became fools."—Romans 1:22, 23.

These are the words of the philosopher of the church. The wisdom of man is foolishness with God. Man's egotism very often gets him into trouble and makes a fool of him. Good old Young in his "Night Thoughts" says at thirty man suspects himself a fool, knows it at forty and reforms his plan." And again, "men may live fools but fools they cannot die."

Christ found a great many fools in his day, and was not slow to use the term. With resurrection lips he called some of his own disciples fools because they were slow of heart to believe. In the mind of God egotism, foolishness and infidelity go together. So said Paul in this text: "When they professed themselves to be wise they became fools, and then changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image of corruptible man, then four-footed beasts, then birds, then snakes, and lizards—"creeping things."

Solomon was a great student of life. His seven hundred women gave him a good chance. Let us go to him a bit to study this "fool" question. He says, "He that uttereth a slander is a fool." There is a slander of attitude. All we need to do to slander another is to shrug our shoulders or put our hand across our mouth to pass the slander on; but to use our own lips is to sting our own character more than the one we slander. Some of these foul stories that are told about our fellowmen grow about like the crop of Kansas corn. I tell it to illustrate: News comes from Kansas that a boy climbed a corn-stalk to look at the sky and that the stock is growing up, faster than the boy can climb down. He is clear out of sight. Three men have taken the contract of cutting down the stalk with axes to save the boy from a horrible death of freezing, but the stalk grows so fast that they cannot hit twice in the same place. The boy is living on green corn and has already thrown down three bushels of cobs, and in their despair they have telegraphed to Dayton, Ohio, for an airship to bring him down. You laugh at that, but it is a story no larger in its slanderous aspect than many a story that is told about poor, innocent Mary Smith.

Solomon also says, "he that is perverse in his lips is a fool." That is, a man makes himself a fool when he lies, yet how much of the lie there is in life. Many a man here would not have the wife he has if he had not lied to get her. Many a woman would not have the husband she has if it had not been for the drugstore. Many an official would not hold the place he does in the church if he had not been such a good liar. Business liars, salesman liars, society liars, church liars, lover liars, why there is no end to the thing. But "he that is perverse in his lips is a fool." I do not say it; it is written in God's book. Do you want to know where they all go? Rev. 21:8 says "The abominable and murderers and whoremongers and sorcerers and idolators and all liars have their part in the lake that burneth with fire." Do you like the gang? It is not such a small sin after all, is it? Cut out your lying.

Jesus tells us about a rich fool. The old man looked out on his vast fields of ripening grain and said to himself, "what am I going to do? My barns are bursting now and I have vast crops unharvested. What will I do? I know, I will tear down my barns and build larger and there will I bestow my goods and then I will say to myself, "soul thou hast much and to spare, take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry." And God said to him "you are an old fool, tonight you will die." It would not be so bad if he were the last one but I venture that there are one hundred right here who are living in the same spirit of that fool.

Of all the rich fools I ever heard of, however, the new-rich are the silliest bunch. The kind that get a big fortune handed down to them that they never help to make, but are so ready to spend; or the kind that get rich on a mine or oil or something of that kind.

One of them came into an automobile salesroom inquiring about a car and said: "Do you know, sir, that we can't just hardly make up our minds what car to buy. Maybe you can help us. We are debating between a gasoline and a limousine. Which one really smells the worst." But the money fools are not all rich. There are a lot of slouchy, grum, sour-faced fellows, running around clamoring against everything as it exists, making themselves and others miserable because they do not have a million, imagining that poverty is a pass-port to the pearly gates. It isn't, "Thou shalt not covet" was written to the poor man as well as to the rich man. The man who is unhappy in his poverty is as bad as the fool who is unhappy with his money. These poor fools remind me of two boys and a turtle. The boys were playing along the banks of an old canal down in New Jersey and ran into one of those large specimens about as big as a tub. One of them caught him by the tail. The turtle snapped at him and rather than lose the turtle he lost his foothold and slid into the muddy water, being towed by his prey. He screamed for help and had not his playmate come to him he would have been drowned. He got his prize but played the fool in getting it.

One of the most detestable fools in the world is the egotistic fool. He is the biggest man in town in his own estimation, but the merest pup of a thing in the minds of many. Jesus said, "Do not sound the trumpet as the hypocrites do," but the egotistic fool is always sounding his. He says, "There are just two Christians in town, so far as I know, Mr. Davis and myself, and I am not too sure about Mr. Davis." He says, "There are two reasons why I always talk to myself: I always like to hear a sensible man talk, and I like to talk to a sensible man." He says, "Two things I can't understand: one, how the world got on without me before I came; the other, how it will get on without me when I am gone." How long does the knowledge of man last anyway? Several hundred years ago a great astronomer laid off the heavens and counted the stars and reported that there were just 1023. For three hundred years he was undisputed. Then another great astronomer counted and said there were 1026. But now each new stronger telescope swings into existence more millions, and the wisdom of yesterday is foolishness today. Egotism never got anybody anything.

A DOOR KNOB TAG

A tag printed in black and white was hung on the door knob of every house in a certain parish on New Year's morning. The tag bore a reminder of that New Year Resolution that had been made about church attendance and urged that they begin carrying it out the first Sunday. An interesting series of sermon subjects as well as some music specialties was announced. The Young Men's Bible class in co-operation with the pastor had put them there. Their reward was a one hundred percent increase the first Sunday. This ought to work at other times as well as at New Year.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

What Counts for an Efficient Sunday School

By E. E. Frantz

The above and similar subjects have been so frequently discussed in convention and in print that we cannot hope to say anything new, however its importance will justify the restatement of the chief elements involved.

FIRST: The Teacher.

However much emphasis may be placed upon good organization and other secondary appliances, the bald truth still remains; namely, that the only things absolutely essential to the existence of an efficient Sunday school are consecrated and pedagogical teachers, and regular and receptive pupils.

It is impossible to place too much emphasis upon the teacher and teaching because it is here and here only that instruction and the soul-winning touch takes place. Better by far to have good instruction and no organization than to have perfect organization and little else.

Method in teaching, secondary to subject-matter only, should have due attention. The too common use of the "Lecture Method" is perhaps the chief criticism upon our teaching and this is often excusable due to lack of separate class rooms, yet the all-important value of self-activity in education should not be overlooked, therefore pupils should be permitted to do, to say, and to participate as freely as possible during recitation period.

When a thing so rare as a good teacher is found she should not be transferred to other duties which are secondary, for she together with others of her kind constitute the SOUL of the school.

SECOND: Equipment.

Next perhaps in order of importance are those conditions which contribute to quiet and successful class work. The importance of separate class-rooms equipped with suitable tables, chairs, black-boards, maps, and other illustrative material are second only to that of the teacher, and reasonable effort should be made to acquire such equipment.

These conditions will contribute much toward that quiet and orderly procedure which are necessary in those moments of warm soul-to-soul touch.

THIRD: Organization.

All are agreed that, as the numbers in a school increase and as classes multiply, organization becomes more necessary and more complex, requiring the time and energy of more workers whose duties become more and more differentiated. For example; the pastor, school officers, department officers, class officers, and others in charge of social affairs, all have their special work, yet all aim at the same end; namely, to interest to hold more and more people under forceful Bible instruction.

Efficiency of any school is increased by necessary and judicious organization, but it may be hindered by over-organization which seeks at all costs to reach certain set goals, which utilizes the time and energy of many that should appear in classes surcharged with the soul winning truth.

Finally, if pastors, teachers, officers, and pupils all do their best, there still remains the responsibility of the church laity which owes its constant and zealous support to make the school what it should be,—a responsibility which can be discharged by no one else.

Reports on the Challenge

Fremont, Ohio, Jan. 3, 1919.

I am pleased to tell you that the Sunday school of the First Brethren church of Fremont has accepted the challenge of the Waterloo Sunday school. We hope that many others will also join in the race

Respectfully yours,
H. M. OBERHOLTZER.

Ashland, Ohio, January 8th, 1919.

To The Sunday School Brotherhood:

It has already been announced editorially in the Evangelist that the Ashland Sunday school had accepted the Waterloo Challenge, but I wish to make that announcement official. We have accepted all seven points as outlined by the Waterloo cohort, and are after the high star.

A. H. HENDRICKSON, Superintendent.

TRAINING SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS IN JAPAN

Christian Japanese of Osaka recently gave $100 to the Sunday School Association of Japan with which to purchase a teachers' circulating library of the best Sunday school educational books, to be loaned to English-speaking Japanese workers. This indicates the deepening interest in the religious education of the youth in Japan.

Sunday school leaders have been fostering this movement for years. Already some twenty-five Sunday school books have been produced in Japanese, a number of them written by Japanese. The teacher training course has now 22 classes enrolled and provides for recognition of complete work by certificate.

The Summer Training School at Karuizawa has been very successful. Every province in Japan was represented last year when eighty-four were registered. The subjects of school organization, Sunday school pedagogy, etc., are presented by Sunday school experts, notes taken and recognition given. A Sunday school exhibit adds to the effectiveness of the training.

THE AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION

Nine hundred and twelve churches have grown out of the schools organized in the last eleven years.

In one hundred years it has circulated $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 worth of Bibles and Testaments and religious works, and has organized 131,814 Sunday schools (an average of over three schools for each day in 100 years). Into these schools have gathered 699,034 teachers and 5,179,570 scholars.

WHITE GIFTS OF VICTORY AND PEACE

The following "White Gifts" were received since last report:

Highland, Pa.,	$ 15.50
Peru, Ind.,	13.43
Linwood, Md.,	20.00
Altoona, Pa.,	29.12
West Alexandria, Ohio,	5.00
Hagerstown, Md.,	100.00
Ardmore, Ind.,	5.42
Berlin, Pa.,	60.00
Uniontown, Pa., (additional),	2.18
Roann, Ind.,	60.00
Gratis, Ohio,	15.68
Meyersdale, Pa.,	60.00
Masontown, Pa.,	10.00
Elkhart, Ind.,	34.77
Allentown, Pa.,	5.20
Falls City, Neb.,	42.84
Flora, Ind.,	30.60

Total $509.74
Previously reported, 259.50

Grand Total $769.24

ALBERT TRENT,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

MISSIONS

Missionary Possibilities of the Central West

By G. T. Ronk

Last year's survey revealed possibilities for church extension in every district, judged by the size and location of present groups of Brethren who might serve as the nucleus of new churches. But the survey revealed something more: that in a long view of the church's future its great future lies west of the state of Ohio, in the middle and far west. This is from no inherent disposition in the people of the last named sections but simply because we are getting started too late in the eastern sections and the population is already crystallized in denominational moulds in the middle class on whom our hope must rest. The increase of the shifting industrial classes and the foreign element further complicate the problem, making any great advance laborious and slow in the extreme. Brilliant opportunities will always be present, it is true, but nothing of the open nature that still faces the church in the west.

Migration has played a large part in the spread of all denominations in the United States. Especially is this true among the Brethren bodies, so true that a new church is practically an impossibility without a sprinkling of the old stock for seed. Real Brethren churches, true to spirit, cannot be grown short of a generation, notwithstanding showy evangelistic results. Our faith is after all a culture requiring personal illustration, teaching and the growth through time. A general realization of this will be most salutary for our mission enterprises. It should cause us no alarm for it has been so from the beginning. Did not the early apostles build on the foundation of the Jewish synagogues throughout the Roman Empire? Even so our greatest success will lie along the lines of Brethren migration.

The general lines of this migration can be stated graphically thus: beginning in Somerset County, Pennsylvania, the greatest migratory center of Brethren peoples, from Myersdale draw a line through Chicago to the point where Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa meet, thence southwest to the center of Kansas; from the same point of beginning draw another line through Dayton, Indianapolis, and on to central Kansas. These two lines form the actual route of migration of Brethren peoples from Pennsylvania and Virginia west. On the ledge of this great triangle or within fifty miles of them you will find practically all the Brethren peoples of the section of the central United States. Add, if you wish two braes to the low pitched roof thus formed, one from Indianapolis to Goshen, another from near Quincy, Illinois to Waterloo, Iowa, with a ladder running from your roof near Quincy down to the floor of your house in Kentucky and you will complete the lines of all Tunker churches. The ladder is the line of migration of the far western Brethren, known also as the Wolfe Brethren, who arrived in Illinois first and started a string of churches, out of connection with other Brethren in America, and unknown to many of the eastern church, but later uniting with the eastern church.

To complete the figure, start from Philadelphia, running through Altoona and Conemaugh to Johnstown, thence south through Myersdale and Hagerstown to southern Virginia, thence back to Philadelphia, and you will get another triangle whose legs represent quite closely eastern Brethrenism in all branches today. The original lines of migration here, I believe, were rather from Philadelphia through Lancaster county to Myersdale, thence north and south in parallel lines to central Pennsylvania and Virginia, but the triangle represents pretty well present conditions.

Beginning in Central Kansas, run through north of Denver, Colorado, near Idaho Falls, Idaho, through Spokane to Seattle, Washington, thence south to Los Angeles, California, thence east and north to Central Kansas, and you get another triangle that bears on its legs the western churches, the mass of western isolated members, and the greatest field for church extension in the world.

Thus in three great triangles we find our opportunities as we proceed west; with the opportunities growing progressively as we go on into country less crystallized in everything but sin. Per capita wealth among the middle classes, general culture, liberality, openness to conviction, breadth of view and public education likewise increase in the same way toward the Pacific coast (contrary to the general impression of eastern people) until in the coast states there is found the highest paid teachers and most rigid tests in the country. But, on the other hand, utter infidelity, foreign cults, Christless worldly churches, fanatical spirit movements and "what not" prevail. While in educational work the writer once visited a rich county in this country where there were two towns of from three to five thousand, at least ten thousand people, some of the richest mines in the world, an educational system second to none in equipment and exactions, yet but two churches in the county, a tiny Catholic chapel open once a month, and an open side tabernacle for a holiness band in a secluded valley far from the population centers. This can be duplicated in many places in the west, though there are many well churchified cities.

The problem of the central west is far different as a whole. Sentiment is not nearly so crystallized as in the east nor is there the unchurched condition of the west, neither the unbelief, opposition, or radicalism. In fact wherever there is a nucleus of Brethren the time is opportune and the need urgent. Another generation and many opportunities will pass forever. Now is the time to get in though it be with but a small beginning. Territory should be pre-empted and the doctrine taught, for the east is steadily moving west.

Viewed as such possibilities are practically unlimited in this great area of the first triangle. Groups are numerous which would form a nucleus for strategically located churches from which whole counties could be indoctrinated with the whole gospel plea. There is a hungering for such a message and a field when once the project is properly launched. The first and last great lack is for men to do this work. God give us men! Men who are not seeking a career but a service and who are willing to go out in the spirit of the foreign missionaries or like a St. Paul from group to group to stir up the people to remembrance. The field awaits; successful methodology has been worked out; the task waits on men—successful men who have found themselves in regular pastoral work and will launch out in this great work of the church. May God grant us the faith and devotion to make our possibilities into actualities.

MISSIONARY NEEDS

Twenty years ago John R. Mott, at the head of the Student Volunteer Movement, asked for 50,000 young men and the money to support them in his program for the evangelization of the world in the present generation. We gave 265,000 young men, and transported more than two million men to England and France, and these men were ready to give their lives, while we at home were pledged to support them to our last dollar.

If we had heard the voice of the prophet and evangelized the world, Germany included, then there would have never been a world war. Are we ready to heed the call?

SOME MISSIONARY HARDSHIPS

A missionary in Korea, when asked what constituted the real hardships of missionary life, said that it was not in the danger of murder or robbery, or in living in uncomfortable homes and eating strange food. A trip into heathen territory, described by this missionary, is illustrative of one of the many kinds of hardship. "We happened in the home of Mr. Yi, more poverty-stricken in manners than the average Korean. This home consisted of grandfather and son, four grandsons, all married, several great grandsons, all married, and a host of servants; and all, it seemed, spending their whole time in the guest room. But the chief trial came when I sat down to eat. They had never dreamed the world held such a sight. The knife and fork I used, the small size of my mouthfuls, the absence of red pepper in my food—in fact all I did was the subject of unconsented conversation. Here I stayed for three days, never having one moment to myself. I got near to the people, but was worn out mentally and spiritually by the contact, and it was a relief to get home and eat and sleep in peace again. I know now how the Master must have felt when the Pharisees crowded about and freely commented on his eating with unwashed hands."

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

Set Your Society in Order. By J. A. Garber

No, this does not imply that there is general disorder. It is a blunt way of asking all our societies to prepare for a rapidly approaching birthday celebration. It is only three weeks until

Christian Endeavor Week, February 2-9

If the intervening days are consecrated to careful preparation the eight days of special effort will prove most fruitful in results. Study the daily program, outlined below, with a view of determining as early as possible what your society should and will do. Remember "Low aim, not failure, is crime."

Christian Endeavor Day comes on the first Sunday. It should be a time of Endeavor rallying throughout the entire church. Do your work so thoroughly that when the day closes there will not be a teachable person who has attended any service that does not know the history and leading principles of Christian Endeavor. Tell your story in the Sunday school. Have it told in the church services. Perhaps your pastor will tell it.

Other Great Days: Monday is fellowship day. The idea is to consider your relationship with the union in which you share membership. Attend the meeting, if one is held. Check up on your standards and note your standing. Tuesday evening may be used for a patriotic service, consisting of appropriate music, talks from returned soldiers or letters from those yet away and a consideration of urgent civic duties. Wednesday is church loyalty day. Surprise the pastor with a hundred percent attendance from the Endeavorers and with some special contribution to the meeting. Thursday is planned to introduce a comparatively new feature, Christian Endeavor Alumni. All who have given ten years or more of service may be organized into an alumni association. Why not have an Endeavor luncheon and have the older members give reminiscences with responses from some of the younger ones. Friday is set apart for the Intermediates, while Saturday is devoted to the Juniors. The idea is to provide a good time meeting for both, inviting other children who may be encouraged to join these societies.

Decision Day is reserved for the second Sunday. It is the time of ingathering. Then an opportunity will be given for decisions and one may decide to become a Christian, an Endeavorer, Quiet Hour Comrade, Tenth Legioner, Patriotic Servant, Life Work Recruit. Here is another chance to make good on our Four Year Challenge. If any goal has not been reached plan to attain it at this opportune time. Advertise the meeting in a most attractive way. Provide an interesting meeting with the program hereinafter mentioned and supplied by our Life Work department on the occasion of Ashland College Night.

New Life Work Superintendent

Henceforth we present a likeness of Brother Edwin Boardman, Jr. To many of our Endeavorers he needs no introduction. Quite a number learned to know him personally in recent General conferences, and those that were not privileged to form a personal acquaintance will remember him as entertaining director of social functions, an energetic leader of college yells and an enthusiastic director of conference singing. He became interested in Christian work through our society in Philadelphia. Feeling himself definitely called to the ministry he came to Ashland College for the needed preparation, and will graduate this coming June. He has been a leader in college functions, and has exhibited a spirit of fine loyalty. He is a student volunteer, and is preparing to go to Africa as a herald of glad tidings to a benighted people. Thus training, experience and consecration make it possible for him to enter wholeheartedly upon his new work. We earnestly solicit the undivided support of all our young people in his behalf. You did splendidly by Brother Lambert, the former successful incumbent, and we are happy to believe that you will yield hearty co-operation to the superintendency of Brother Boardman. All together for our most successful Christian Endeavor Week and Ashland College Night.

EDWIN BOARDMAN, JR

Life Work

By Edwin Boardman, Jr.

Life Work Recruits, more Life Work Recruits and then more Recruits than ever. This must be the story of the immediate years of Christian effort.

What am I to do with my life, is a question facing young people today. The call of the world comes loudly: "Young life hear my call. See I have fame, material wealth and ease to offer those who will devote themselves unceasingly to me. Seek to do my will and I will give you all that your heart can desire." The plea is strong and appealing and many young lives on the threshold of mature experience are lured by the white lights, limousines and apparent luxury. So, year after year finds increasing numbers of young people giving their whole time to the professions and the great world of industry and commerce.

All unheeded goes the voice of the Master of men as he calls for young life to enter his service. His pleading voice—"Come, follow me"—falls on deaf ears and we fail to note the beckoning hands which would show us our task. Can it be possible that we hear the call of the material world and cannot hear the World Maker as he calls us to a spiritual service? Yes, this seems to be the truth of the matter and the shame is ours.

This age is a needy age and its supreme need is the life and teachings of Jesus. This has been true of every age but we are confident that it is most true of our present time. Prussianism with its emphasis on "might makes right" and "the survival of the fittest" has been crushed, but as this monster expires behold a deadlier spirit arises in its place. Bolshevism with its emphasis on anarchy, chaos and world dominion is a foe to be feared. A recent editorial in the Saturday Evening Post describes Bolshevism as "hell let loose" and we believe it as we view wretched Russia today. We say the world is at peace but every issue of our daily papers denies the fact. Peace conferences can be held, national boundaries may be established and theoretically all may be lovely but until the turbulent, rebellious spirit of man is calmed, conquered and consecrated by divine power, history will still record "one death struggle in the darkness twist old systems and the Word."

The Christian leader holds the key to the future and this is the reason we are urging young people to enter the service of Jesus Christ. A Life Work recruit is one who dedicates his or her life to Jesus for very definite Christian service. Preachers, teachers, doctors, dentists, printers, athletic directors, and music teachers are a few of the many lines of activity open to Spirit filled men and women who would surrender their whole life to Christian service. These are the factors that will really help to "make the world safe for democracy" and best of all will "make democracy safe for the world."

The Life Work department of our National Christian Endeavor work is especially interested in recruiting for Christ. Our work is two-fold:—(1) to help young people to decide through the Spirit their life course; (2) to strive to interest these recruits in vital preparation for their life work.

On the second Sunday in February we expect to make a drive for $350.00 to aid Ashland College in its efforts to keep the chair of Religious Education adequately supported. Prof. J. A. Garber has done and is doing excellent work in this department and he deserves our hearty support. An extended announcement will be made in a later issue of the Evangelist regarding "Ashland College Night."

All inquiries regarding Life Work should be sent to me at Ashland College. If I can help any young life in their Life Work choice, I am at your service.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

OVERCOMING DIFFICULTIES

It yet belongs to the old year, to report for the Baltimore Brethren, the first difficulty overcome—the securing of a place for worship. After months of searching there was nothing left on the horizon, but the gracious officer of the Arlington Presbyterian church, to use their frame building on Sunday afternoons in which they hold their Sunday school in the morning.

The next difficulty to meet is to get this spacious room somewhat filled. I found no new faces on my return from the Ridgely revival, where I had gone to help, while trusting for the doop to open in Baltimore. My leaving also gave fine occasion to discover to the people Brother William's ability as teacher and leader. He has proven himself a credit to his former church, Warsaw, Indiana. My absence worked out much good in other lines but not in attendance. How to get our ranks increased, is a problem made the more difficult, since the after effect of a sprained knee has put a new limit on the number of doorsteps a day. That this difficulty be speedily met is our additional prayer request brought to distant helpers pledged to stand back of us. There is more than one way for the answer to come. I am thinking of the girls at Winona conference who desired to get the actual training in city church work. If you see the opportunity, as we see the occasion, write. But the cause calls for immediate action, and some of our women, who have the spirit of the early Mary, have promised to go out with me this week. Might this be one purpose of my trial—Christmas blessing.

It is the testimony of Christian workers, that there never has been a time when difficulties have piled up as now. I am willing to accept also the personal lesson in it, as brought out by the Christmas messages sent by friends who did not know how well it applied. "In quietness and confidence—strength"; "Go slowly, you are too ambitious to accomplish much in a short time." I confess I was never more so than now. But no thought has come with greater force than what Dan Crawford brought a few years ago from the interior of black Africa, so Ezekiel too has become my torch-bearer for the year. The prisoner by the river Chebar, who could not run himself, God gave him to see the Throne on wheels doing the running for him (Ezkl. 1;10).

"Face to face with all the mad, unaskable questions of destiny here, I have my sacred solution at last. Am I stuck fast in a seeming conspiracy of circumstances, no advance possible? Then the throne of God is on omnipresent wheels, and he can run where it would not be safe for me to try. These whirling wheels of my God are in consoling contrast to the Chebar chains.—Up to this point God's throne was revealed as the most unmovable thing in the universe. Seated on the Rock of Eternity, there was the high throne of God, unshaken and irrevocable. But here I see the same throne whirling on these wheels of celestial celerity. God immovable, yet always on the move; God unchangeable, but always here and there for the sinner of the soul."

VIANNA DEWILER.

5105 Wilson Ave., Arlington, Baltimore, Md.

ASHLAND, OHIO

Having been without a pastor for a year the church at Ashland has chosen Brother J. A. Garber to minister to them, he giving to this service as much of his time as his other duties will permit.

The activities of the church here, as elsewhere, have been interrupted and handicapped by the epidemic. Meetings of all kinds were suspended for six Sundays, during October and November, necessitating the postponement of some special services and a complete abandonment of one, at least, in which the church was looking forward to a great blessing, not only to the people locally but to every one participating. I refer to the Bible Institute and College Rally which was to have commenced the last week in November.

On November 17, an installation service for the new pastor, the Sunday school superintendent, and departmental officers was conducted. It was a new kind of service for this church, and was very impressive. The charge and exhortation to the church by Dr. J. Allen Miller, the charge to the pastor-elect by Elder A. D. Gnagey, and the response by Brother J. A. Garber were reminders that not all the responsibility rested upon the pastor, but that each individual member of the church has a personal responsibility and that the success of the church depends very much upon how well we co-operate with the pastor and one another in the service of the Master. The Ashland church rejoices in having secured the leadership of Brother Garber and intends under his direction to make most, if not all the Four Year goals. We will strive by united effort to that end.

The Sunday school has accepted the challenge of the Waterloo Sunday school and the superintendent, A. C. Hendrickson, and the officers and teachers are planning in addition for goals of our own to strive for.

J. L. HAMILTON.

HOME MISSION NOTES A Fine Suggestion

A certain board of missions, not ours, received the following letter written on that historical day, November 11, 1918. Only one of the 1,631,748 members in that church thus showed his appreciation of the coming of peace. He wrote: "On the day that announcement is made that Germany has seen the light that right is more than might, I wish to assist in spreading the gospel that 'Truth shall make you free' to other enslaved peoples, even though their bonds be those of spiritual ignorance, and not the cruel restrictions of a military despot, and accordingly as a 'Thank Offering' for God's greatest blessing today, to me as well as to the rest of the Christian world, I hand you herewith my check for $500 to assist in spreading Christ's gospel of freedom."

How many of our readers will get this suggestion and act upon it? It is not too late. Churches that have not taken the Thanksgiving offering for Home Missions should do so at the earliest possible time. Only thirty cents per member is the amount asked. Every church can reach the goal. How many will? Pastors, it is up to you to frame the answer.

Open Windows

One good brother sends a generous contribution for Kentucky mission work and writes: "In spite of illness and affliction the Lord has prospered me, so that my tithe permits my sending you the amount named."

Faithful tithing opens the windows of heaven. If every member of the Brethren church would test God's plan and pay the tithe to God's work faithfully one year the whole world would be astonished at the results both in dollars and spiritual life and souls won. This would mean a multitude of souls won to Christ where now only a few are won.

Alarming Indeed!

"Zion's Herald says that statistics recently published show that there is occasion for serious thought concerning the work of the Methodist Episcopal church. While the denomination has made an apparent net gain of a little more than 30,000 in the last year, it is said that the church is indebted to foreign fields in Southern Asia for more than 29,000 of that number. The alarm is set in the fact, according to these statistics, that the church in America has gained only about a thousand members in twelve months."

What is the net gain in the Brethren church in the past twelve months? We sing "Here on business for the King," but actions speak louder than words always. The vital question is, What are we doing as individuals and as local churches, as ministers and laymen to win souls? May 1919 be the best year for the salvation of many both far and near, that the Brethren church has ever known.

G. C. CARPENTER.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

Our regular annual business meeting and election of officers took place as usual on New Year day afternoon and evening. The members brought their lunch baskets well filled and all ate supper together in the basement at about 5 o'clock.

Brother N. W. Jennings, our new pastor, and his wife arrived from the East Tuesday noon and it was a great pleasure to have them with us on this first meeting of 1919. Brother and Sister Bell of Long Beach and their family were with us in the afternoon and for the supper as visitors. This gave us all, and them too, much pleasure in renewing old acquaintances and making new ones. Elder R. H. Miller, pastor of the South Los Angeles Church of the Brethren was also present as a visitor and was much pleased with the character of the meeting.

There was a good attendance of our people and a fine Christian spirit was manifested in all the deliberations. The reports for the past year were not as good as they should have been, partly owing to the fact that all during the latter part of the year we were without a regular pastor and partly owing to the prevalence of the influenza. With a new pastor and the epidemic on the wane we are expecting to go forward in this new year and accomplish some fine results this year. An excellent set of officers were elected to serve the church and there seemed to be general satisfaction with the outlook for workers in the different departments.

One of the best things that was done was the raising of a large part of the indebtedness that has been hampering us for several years. This amounts to about $2,000. One good sister had made the proposition that if the church would raise $1,000, she would give $500 toward clearing off the debt. At this meeting the church accepted the challenge and raised in all $1,500 that evening and have the greater part of the last $500 in sight. There was a fine spirit of co-operation in this and all were much pleased with the result.

Brother Jennings has announced the topic of his first sermon next Sunday morning and it is "Going Forward."

One of our own members, Brother Harry Toler, who had been ill with influenza for several weeks during October and November, and since the influenza ban has been lifted, has been bringing us some good messages from the Word on Sunday mornings and evenings, was shown some appreciation of his efforts by the meeting voting him $35.00 extra pay.

The officers of the Sunday school gave out some plans that ought to result in better work and greater results for the present year than was accomplished during the year just closed.

A. P. REED.

4910 Wadsworth Street.

"FLU" NOTES FROM GARVIN

There have been few reports from here of recent date. Immediately after our District conference all plans had been made for our meeting with Brother Coleman of Leon, Iowa as evangelist. When he and I arrived on the scene from the conference the "fluemic" had made such a spread that it was inadvisable to hold the meeting. We now expect to hold the meeting in the spring. We have had no services of any kind at the church since the 6th of last October. Some of the members think that we will not be able to have services until spring. The epidemic is raging in the community at the present time. While there have been and are a number of cases there has only been one death in the community. While the regular plans and work of the church will be interfered with to a great extent, there are many things that are not of our choosing. There are some of the goals and points of the work of the church that we will not be able to handle while we have no services, but I am optimistic that we will be able to go ahead with good progress when it is possible for us to once more engage unhindered in the services.

One of our boys has given his life for liberty and is now beneath the turf of old France. It was during the last stage of the fighting that Brother Raymond Peterson made the supreme sacrifice. Raymond was a splendid, congenial young man. He was faithful in his attendance at services and a hard worker. May we at Garvin be remembered in the work of the Kingdom.

FREEMAN ANKRUM.

ASHLAND COLLEGE NOTES

After the holiday vacation the activities on the hill are moving along very smoothly.

Dr. Furry made a flying trip to Columbus recently to confer with the State fuel commission.

It is not probable that we will have any of the regular activities on the third floor of the College on account of the ruling of the fuel commission—"must conserve fuel." The literary societies will perhaps meet in the library room.

The students who have come in from the west and east of Ohio report lots of snow and cold waves. Here in Ohio we have had scarcely any snows as yet. Our share may be on the way.

We are glad to have several of the soldier boys with us again after the demobilization on December 21st.

We have been deprived of the use of the furnace in the chapel for several weeks on account of re-arranging it to burn coal. Sunday school and church services have been held in other rooms of the college building.

Work is quite scarce over Ashland for a few weeks and many of the students are out of their usual afternoon employment.

We are glad to report that Dora Zimmerman, a former student, is making good in her studies at Kings Oratorical School in Pittsburgh, Pa.

We are glad to have the smiling face of Joe Gingrich back behind the College Book store counter again. He spent the holidays with his people in McAllistersville, Pa.

The semester exams are near at hand and we are looking ahead fitting ourselves for the combat, to meet it with a determination and a will to go over the top.

W. R. DEETER.

FLORA, INDIANA

Our friends may wonder why things have been so quiet at Flora since we came. We have not been quiet because we wished or expected to be. The reason for it is that the "flu" invaded our midst. Out of the twelve Sundays, we have been at Flora, we have only had services five Sundays. Twice the ban was placed on the schools, churches and all public gatherings. There have been a number of sad deaths in the community. Almost a third of our homes have had sickness in them and three were saddened by the silent messenger.

Early last fall, we had planned for a series of meetings and the fall communion about Thanksgiving time, but they had to be postponed indefinitely. However, we are glad to report that the Flora church has received six additions. Two by letter and four by baptism. Two business men from neighboring towns were those received by baptism.

On the Sunday before Christmas we opened our services again, and are now planning to use General Foch's tactics by winning the victory on the counter-attack. So on New Year day we had an all day meeting at the church. It was again decided by the church to put the Brethren Evangelist into all our homes for another year. The officers of the Sunday school were elected for 1919. We have been very much pleased to find the Sunday school here in such excellent condition. We have in Brother Sylvester Whetstone a first-class superintendent. He knows the school and understands the work, and has it in fine condition for a greater future. He is ably assisted by a fine bunch of workers.

One thing noticeable about the Flora church is the number of workers it has sent out into the work of the church. We recently had Brother Earl Flora, one of our young men who is making good in a pastorate in Pennsylvania, to preach for us. We all appreciated the excellent message he brought us. Last week two of our loyal workers, Brother and Sister Russel Humber left for Lost Creek, Ky., to help in the school work there.

We are expecting Brother Beachler January 5 to begin his work in this congregation for Ashland College endowment.

S. C. HENDERSON.

GOSHEN, INDIANA

The Goshen congregation held their quarterly business meeting on New Year's evening. The business passed off in a pleasant way. Some changes were made in the officers of the Sunday school. Brother Roscoe who has been our faithful superintendent for a long time was urged to continue, but he felt that he had had the place long enough, and insisted that some one else be elected in his stead. The lot fell to Brother Irvin Duker, who is well qualified to fill the place. Brother Duker had been the faithful teacher of the Young Mens' class known as the "True Blues." Brother Herman Roscoe was always on the job, so he was called to the superintendency of the primary department.

Both church and Sunday school were well attended Sunday, January 5th. Brother McInturf continues his weekly calendar. It proves to be a newsy little leaflet. Our pastor is lately seen with more than the usual smile, caused by the arrival of a little daughter at the parsonage.

The evangelistic meetings conducted at this place by Brother L. S. Bauman closed with one confession. The meetings closed at the end of three weeks just when it should have continued at least two weeks more. Quite a number of the members of our church were down with Influenza, but the attendance was all that could be expected under the "flu" conditions. The last night of the meeting the house was crowded. If truly we are the Lord's children we should learn to trust him when we are working under his banner. The world did not close her doors. The theaters, movies, pool rooms, and places of that sort remained open, but God's house must close and his work cease. This should not be so, nor will it be when we stand shoulder to shoulder and have on the armor of our Captain and have a will to work. We hear it whispered in the distance that the meeting was a failure. This is not true. God alone knows the seed sown where it may lodge and bring forth fruit to his harvest. Those who think it a failure should have heard the powerful sermons delivered and backed up by the BOOK. Brother Bauman made many warm friends in Goshen. This was proven by the free-will offerings taken each night for him as a token of our appreciation of his efforts. Our pastor is emphasizing the evangelistic spirit also, and may we give heed to it. Some of the boys are returning home from the government's service. But the very sad part of it is that some dear ones will never return to their friends in this world. It was very sad when the news came that Brother Floyd Ganger died in France. He was a brother of Sister Frank Inbody, and a member of the young men's class of our Sunday school. He will be greatly missed.

M. E. HORNER, Corresponding Secretary.

OAK HILL, WEST VIRGINIA

On account of the "flu" in our family mixed with neglect, we have failed to report the Gatewood meeting. Brother Jennings came back and finished the meeting begun in the fall at Gatewood and Mossy.

As I said, our family has been sick and I haven't been out anywhere or seen any who attended the meeting, so I know very little to report.

There were nine baptized and there are others to be baptized yet. We hope the meeting was a success both in building up the church and bringing others to Christ.

The work at Oak Hill and Salem is moving on in the same old way.

The closing of all church services is the worst thing that could have happened just at the close of the revival at Salem.

I suppose church work is badly crippled everywhere. There was a called business meeting at Salem not long ago to consider hiring a pastor, but it seemed that not enough of the members knew of it, anyway only a few went, and Brother A. B. Duncan thought it best to wait until they could get more of the members together.

I am sorry for the mistake in our report of the meeting at Salem some time ago. There were forty-eight conversions instead of eight as our report read in the Evangelist. I don't know who made the mistake. I wrote at once to correct the mistake but never saw it in the paper. I suppose it got lost.

The first death from "flu" in our neighborhood occurred on Friday evening, January third. The victim being Brother Walter Johnson. He was a member of the Brethren church. He leaves a father, mother and brother and sister, a wife and six children. He was buried in the Odd Fellows' cemetery at Oak Hill. On account of the illness of his mother and his oldest child the funeral was postponed until some time in the future. Jan. 6, 1919.

ESSIE BOOTHE.

HUNTINGTON, INDIANA

Brother J. W. Brower sent a list of thirty-five subscriptions to the Business Manager and enclosed this letter to the Editor, intended for publication. We are pleased that Brother Brower appreciates the Evangelist so much, and because he appreciates it, we know his people will too. The letter follows:

Dear Editor:

We deem it a great privilege indeed to place our very worthy church paper in these homes. We regard our Brethren Evangelist as one of the greatest needs of our church development. With George S. Baer, A. D. Gnagey, and R. R. Teeter at the head; with Charles A. Bame's "Four Year Program Page," J. A. Garber's and G. C. Carpenter's "Young People at Work," W. H. Beachler's "Campaign Notes," the inspirational and instructive articles of the Associate Editors, and the messages brought through the other departments, I know it will be a great help to any Brethren home or congregation.

Since beginning the work here, as pastor, January 27, 1918, there have been added to the church thirty-five very substantial members. The work was going forward in every department following the revival led by Brother Thomas just before General Conference, "but"—I was going to use a little word with three letters, but will not. Let us follow Saint Paul in Philippians 3:13-14.

Our Sunday school during the quarter just ended made slight gains in attendance and offerings over the preceding quarter which we think is fine considering conditions. The "Goughnour Contest" is on in full blast with seventy-five per cent of the attendance present and the offerings going considerably "over the top." And say, I want to tell you a little secret, "We are going to win that gold star." But don't tell Flora, Indiana, for it might discourage them.

I want to say in closing that old Satan is here in full force, we are fighting him to the death, and will win. Pray for us.

Yours in the name of Christ,
J. W. BROWER.

COUNSEL FOR CONVERTS

Giving your heart to God is the best thing you have ever done. The next best thing you can do is to "hold fast to that which is good," and go on to perfection. Conversion is only the beginning of the Christian life and character. It is the promise of God that having begun the good work in you, he will also perfect it. But God needs your co-operation. You must do your part. If you do your part all will go well and be well. Of course, you will be tempted and tried, but not above what you are able to bear.

There are some things you must do if you are not to lose your religion. You must pray without ceasing. To stop praying is like quitting breathing. "Prayer is the Christian's vital breath." You must pray fervently, frequently and privately.

Next you must feed on God's Word. You should let no day pass without spending some time in devout study of God's Word. No one can keep in close, living touch with God if he forgets and neglects the Bible. No one can keep up a real prayer life very long except he commune also with God through his Word. Only when you delight yourself in his Word do you get the greatest blessings from its study. Have a fixed program, if necessary, but to feed on the Word from the love of it is better.

It will also be a means of grace to support the gospel according as the Lord prospers you. Bringing offerings unto the Lord is as essential and helpful to the Christian life as praying itself. Some people are cheerful and liberal givers before conversion, but most people, young or old, have that to learn after conversion.

Next, be a worker. Be a soul-winner. Experience is worth a good deal in Christian service. But the only way to get experience is to get it. It comes by activity, not by idly waiting. Would you grow spiritually, would you get a larger vision of God, would you keep yourself in the bonds of peace with God and become rooted and grounded in the faith, be a ceaseless, tireless worker for Christ and the church? A praying, paying, Bible-loving, soul-winning Christian advances in the divine life, his heart becomes fixed, and he is kept by the power of God unto salvation for ever.

EVANGELIST HONOR ROLL

The following churches having met the requirements laid down by the Brethren Publishing Company regarding the placing of the Evangelist in the homes of the congregations are entitled to a place on the Evangelist Honor Roll.

Church	Pastor
Gretna, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	Edwin Boardman
Washington, C. H., O., 2nd Yr., L. B. Wilkins
Ankenytown, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	A. L. Lynn
Ashland Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	J. A. Garber
Beaver City, Neb.,	C. M. Pierce
Morrill, Kansas,	A. E. Whitted
Lanark, Ill., 2nd Yr.,	B. T. Burnworth
Waterloo, Iowa,	H. L. Goughnour
Muncie, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	J. L. Kimmel
College Corner, Indiana,	D. A. C. Teeter
Hamlin, Kansas,	Geo. E. Cone
Allentown, Pa.,	A. L. DeLozier
Johnstown, Pa., 3rd Ch.,	Geo. H. Jones
Milledgeville, Ill., 2nd Yr.,	M. J. Snyder
Portis, Kansas,	Roy Brumbaugh
Fairhaven, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	B. F. Owen
Long Beach, Cal., 2 Yr.,	L. S. Bauman
Burlington, Indiana,	W. T. Lytle
Carleton, Nebraska,	Z. T. Livengood
Falls City, Nebraska,	H. F. Stuckman
Summit Mills, Penna., ...	E. D. Burnworth
Mexico, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	L. W. Ditch
Lordsburg, California,	Thos. H. Broad
Salisbury, Penna.,	E. D. Burnworth
Flora, Indiana,	W. T. Lytle
Los Angeles, Cal., 1st, 2 Yr. N. W. Jennings
Nappanee, Indiana,	C. E. Kolb
Berne, Indiana, 2nd Yr., ...	W. F. Johnson
Louisville, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	Geo. S. Baer
Johnstown, Pa., 1st Ch., ...	J. F. Watson
Sunnyside, Wash.,	Chas. H. Ashman
Denver, Indiana,	L. A. Myers
Bryan, Ohio,	G. L. Maus
Elkhart, Indiana,	H. H. Wolford
Sidney, Indiana,	L. A. Myers
Loree, Indiana,	W. T. Lytle
Linwood, Maryland,	E. M. Riddle
Conemaugh, Pa., 2nd Yr.,	L. G. Smith
Akron, Ind., (New Highland), D. A. C. Teeter
Pt. Scott, Kansas,	Mrs. L. C. Webb
Clay City, Indiana,	Geo. W. Kinzie
Roann, Indiana,	W. E. Ronk
Tiosa, Indiana,	Ora I. Oxley
New Paris, Indiana,	Ora I. Oxley
Fremont, Ohio,	H. M. Oberholtzer
Postoria, Ohio,	M. S. White
Oakville, Indiana,	A. R. Staley
Berlin, Penna.,	I. B. Trout
North Liberty, Indiana,	C. C. Grisso
Dutchtown, Indiana,	Homer Anderson
North English, Iowa,	W. H. Miller
Fillmore, Calif.,	Sylvester Lowman

Prepare for Service.—There was a brier growing in a ditch, and there came along a gardener with his spade. As he dug around it and lifted it out, the brier said to itself: "What is he doing that for. Does he not know that I am only an old worthless brier?" But the gardener took it into the garden and planted it amid his flowers, while the brier said: "What a mistake he has made! Planting an old brier like myself among such rose trees as these!" But the gardener came once more; and, with his keen edged knife, made a slit in the brier, and "budded" it with a rose, and by and by when summer came lovely roses were blooming on that old brier. Then the gardener said: "Your beauty is not due to that which came out of you, but to that which I put into you." Just so can God cause the most glorious of roses to grow out of such poor dried sticks as we all are.

IN THE SHADOW

COWGILL—Harlan Page, was born in North Manchester, Indiana, January 15, 1849, and died in the Marion, Indiana, Soldier's Home, October 22nd, 1918, aged 69 years, 9 months and 7 days. He was one of six children, three of whom crossed the Great Divide preceding him, and two of whose whereabouts not much is known by the family. He was married to Emily Jane Weekly at Roann, Indiana, in 1872 with whom he has lived in happy wedlock ever since.

He united with the First Brethren church of this city more than 10 years ago, and remained in good fellowship to his death. A few weeks before his death, he called for the elders of the church and was anointed for the healing of the body. He was unafraid of death but longed to live and enjoy his family if it were the Lord's will. He died full of faith that all was well with his soul and that he was going home to give a good account to his Maker and Master.

In 1864 when this country was engaged in the civil war, at 15 years of age, he ran away and enlisted for 100 days, and served to the end of the conflict when he was honorably discharged. He was a member of the 138th regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry and the memory of those days was a bright page to him and the object of much of his thought and conversation in later years.

CHARLES A. BAME.

KNAP—Loren Austin, son of John and Etta Knapp, was born on the Knapp farm, 4 miles east of North Manchester, Indiana, January 24, 1892, died in Ranzac, France, October 29th, 1918, aged 26 years, 9 months and 5 days.

All of his life was spent on the farm with his parents. Answering the call of his country, he went to Camp Sherman, Ohio, on June 24th last. After less than two months' training there, he was transferred to Camp Mills and from there, sailed for France about the first of September, being a member of the 84th Division, Co. L, 334th Infantry. A letter, dated October 15th, was received from Loren saying that he was ill but, trying to shield his parents from worry, he did not wish them to know of it. So, when a telegram was received last Thursday telling of his death, it came as a thunderbolt out of a clear sky, to them. The official notice says his death was caused by pneumonia.

Loren is remembered as a young man of fine ideals and clean character. Honest, unassuming, faithful to duty, he was a young man that the country can ill afford to lose. His grave, "somewhere in France" is one of the seeds sown that is springing up in the world ridding it of Kaiserism, oppression and servility. Not in vain did he live.

Thus, the first star of the more than thirty on the service flag of the First Brethren church, as well as the first of the township has turned to gold. At the little village of Ranzac, France, he sleeps the sleep of victory, while we live to enjoy the fruits of his sacrifice.

The sympathy of the entire community is bestowed on his parents and brother and sister whom he leaves behind. The memory of his sacrifice for his country will shine as a halo around them and the family name as long as freedom and democracy are cherished. Peace to his ashes and salvation for his soul.

CHARLES A. BAME.

SHOEMAKER—Willow, daughter of Brother and Sister Merle Shoemaker, of influenza pneumonia, aged three years. Funeral at the home near North Manchester by

CHARLES A. BAME.

FARLEY—Millard Byron, son of Millard and Alice Farley, was born December 5, 1900, died December 14, 1918, aged 18 years and 9 days. Pneumonia following influenza was the cause of his death. He graduated from Chester high school last year at the age of 17 and would have graduated in a business course at North Manchester College next spring. It is no mere post mortem statement that Byron was a young man of exceptional talents and gracious spirit. Perhaps the finest tribute that could be paid to him is to state that no one can remember him saying a mean or harsh thing about anybody. He never quarreled nor indulged in the sins of many young men of his day. At 14 he united with the First Brethren church and to its services and its Sunday school he has been a faithful attendant. The community will mourn with the parents and other relatives in his early passing of the Great Divide. He leaves a father, mother, sister Lela, and brother Eudell.

CHARLES A. BAME.

FLORA—Merit Flora departed this life December 11, 1918, at his home near Chili, Indiana, at the age of 63 years. He united with the Brethren church at Roann, in 1891 and was always a loyal and consecrated member. Since 1901 he has served the Center Chapel congregation as deacon and trustee and was one of the charter members of this church. He leaves to follow a devoted wife, two sons and two daughters and a large circle of relatives. One son preceded him only seven weeks. Funeral services were conducted from the home near Chili by the writer, assisted by Brother Willis Ronk, pastor of the Roann and Center Chapel churches. May the Lord greatly bless the bereaved family.

L. W. DITCH.

FROST—William Harvey, was born September 25, 1838, departed this life at his home in Leon, November 7, 1918, aged 80 years, 1 month, 12 days. He left a wife, seven children, thirty grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, as well as two brothers and two sisters. The deceased was a member of the Presbyterian church, and the father of Sister Belle Evans. Funeral services by the Brethren pastor.

G. T. RONK.

FROST—Malinda Jane, was born in Licking county, Ohio, January 30, 1838, died at her home in Leon, Iowa, December 11, 1918, aged 80 years, 10 months, 10 days. Her husband had preceded her to the other world by 3 days. To him she had been married 57 years and was inconsolable at his loss. She too was a member of the Presbyterian church and was laid away by the Brethren pastor. A numerous family grieve the loss of devoted parents.

G. T. RONK.

DALE—Homer, born in Decatur county, Iowa, December 16, 1895, died in France, October 12, 1918, and was buried there in the land of his forefathers. He was a member of the A. E. F., leaving his home on May 25, 1918, to join the colors. He was a member of the Methodist church but attended the Brethren

Sunday school and was enrolled on the service flag of the Brethren church.

G. T. RONK.

ROBERTS—Earnest Vere Roberts was born May 24, 1891, died November 23, 1918, aged 27 years, 6 months. He became a member of the Brethren church in January, 1915. He was married to Helen Deek, December 8, 1915 with whom he lived happily till his sudden death from the epidemic. He was one of the widest known and best loved young men in his county and his death seems most untimely but the Father knows best. Funeral services from the home.

G. T. RONK.

ALLBEE—Laurel Allbee died at her home in Des Moines on November, 1, 1918, aged about twelve years. She was brought to Leon for interment the service being held from the home of her grandparents by the pastor of the Brethren church. She was a niece of Sister Worden, formerly attended services at the Brethren church, and was a child of beautiful promise. We dare not complain when the Lord claims for himself these flowers.

G. T. RONK.

SHIERY—On December 26, 1918, at the age of 34 years, at his late home in Dallas Center, occurred the death of J. E. Shiery. He had not been well for about one year and so the dread influenza found him an easy victim. He leaves a wife and three children besides three brothers and two sisters. Funeral services conducted by the undersigned.

R. F. PORTE.

McCULLUM—Harriet Bernice McCullum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray McCullum, died on December 29, 1918 at the age of two years, nine months and 25 days. The parents have the sympathy of many friends in the loss of this bright little girl. Funeral services conducted by

R. F. PORTE.

ANDERSON—Dora, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. Anderson, was born at Stanwood, Iowa, December 3, 1889 and passed away at the home of her parents November 5, 1918, after an illness of pneumonia following influenza. She was aged 28 years, 11 months and 2 days. She leaves to mourn her loss, her aged father and mother, four brothers and one sister. She had devoted practically her entire life to her parents and the duties of the home. She was held in high esteem and leaves many friends to mourn her departure. Services at the home and burial at Rose Hill, cemetery, north of Toledo, Iowa, by the writer.

FREEMAN ANKRUM.

PETERSON—Raymond O., was born in Marshalltown, Iowa, January 19, 1894, and made the great sacrifice upon the battlefield of France October 7, 1918. Raymond went to Camp last July, and was a member of Company K, 47th Infantry. He leaves to mourn his loss, the father, mother, one brother and two sisters all of the home. He was a member of the Carlton Brethren church, a faithful attendant, willing worker and possessed an inspiring personality. Raymond was a splendid type of American manhood, with a smile and a cheering word for all. Many hearts were filled with sadness when the wires bore the fateful message, for Raymond was blessed with a host of friends, who mourn him. Memorial services will be held for him in the Carlton Brethren church when the epidemic permits.

FREEMAN ANKRUM.

HAYNES—Elpha Wilbur, youngest son of Marion and May Haynes, was born October 6, 1893, in Carlton township and died at his home in this vicinity, December 30, 1918 of pneumonia following influenza. On April 12, 1917, he was united in marriage to Miss Kittie Turner, whom he leaves to mourn his loss with his widowed mother, four sisters, and two brothers, besides many relatives and friends. He was a boy of good disposition and habits, and will be greatly missed by his loved ones and friends. Services at the cemetery by the writer.

FREEMAN ANKRUM.

CHRIST MAKES ALL MEN FREE

By Rev. Thomas Wilson Dickert

Tune, "Battle Hymn of the Republic"

In the harbor of our country stands a statue large and fair,

Which the friendship of two nations long ago erected there,

That the world might learn the lesson which its torch is meant to bear:

How Christ makes all men free.

CHORUS

Glory, glory, hallelujah!

Glory, glory, hallelujah!

Glory, glory, hallelujah!

Our Christ makes all men free.

At the gateway of the nation that's the marvel of the world,

'Gainst this emblem of true freedom oceans' waves in vain are hurled

As in blazing light its motto to the nations is unfurled:

That Christ makes all men free.

It has been a lamp of safety to the ships upon the sea,

And it signifies the blessings God would give humanity;

It will ever be the guardian of world-wide democracy,

For Christ makes all men free.

As a harbinger of peaceful progress it has ever stood;

And, though war has cast a shadow o'er a world now drenched with blood,

It points forward to the day of universal brotherhood,

When Christ makes all men free.

Christianity's the culture which the world shall ever need!

'Tis the statue's silent message that men everywhere should heed:

Whom the Christ shall crown with freedom, they shall e'er be free indeed;

Yes, Christ makes all men free.

COMMUNION NOTICE

The members of the Brethren church at Bryan, Ohio, will hold their semi-annual communion service on Sunday evening, January 19, beginning at 7 o'clock. All of like faith are cordially invited to enjoy the blessings of the service with us.

G. L. MAUS.

Business Manager's Corner

There is in the city of Ashland a large manufacturing plant that is given almost entirely to the manufacture of toy balloons, balloons of almost every color, shape and description. Though the balloons are mere toys in themselves yet they are supposed to fill a need of the day as they are used for advertising purposes, but in their deflated condition they are entirely useless: they must be "blown up" before they can fill the place they are intended to fill in the advertising world. But many times as they come into the possession of children an attempt is made to make a small balloon look like a "big" balloon by inflating it unduly which frequently results in a blowing up or an explosion. Moral—a toy balloon can be made to carry passengers across the country.

Some years ago I was in a telephone office talking to the manager and as I mentioned the further growth and development of the system he remarked that he did not want another phone on the system, that any increase would be a detriment and loss to the system. This might seem strange at first, but when it is remembered that telephone systems are installed in units and that one unit can care for only so many phones and that when the unit is once full any additional number installed will require an additional unit in the system and that there is a great possibility of not securing enough additional phones to pay for installing the new unit, the possible loss is easily understood.

Students of boy psychology know that there is a period in the life of the growing boy when he is no longer a boy and he has not yet become a man. It is the awkward age, the self-conscious age, when he doesn't know what to do with his hands and falls over his own feet. He has reached the stage when the only thing that will keep him from "blowing up" is for him to really "grow up" and become the man that nature intended him to be.

Application

The Brethren Publishing Company is now in the condition that is described by all three of the above illustrations. It is too big to be called little and it is too little to be called big. It is like the awkward boy, or the toy balloon or the telephone unit. It must now "grow up" or "blow up." It can no longer fulfill its mission without going forward. The present equipment and working force are taxed to the limit, and any little accident or slight interruption of the work causes unavoidable delays. Our equipment must be enlarged and the working force must be increased to make it possible to get our work out on time as it should be at all times. A few cases of sickness and a few other interruptions cause some, yes entirely too much, of our Sunday school supplies to go out late. This is a condition that should not be allowed to continue, and it will not be if the churches and their pastors will stand by the work of the Brethren Publishing Company. The Company has reached the point in its development where it must GROW up or BLOW up. Which shall it be? That very largely depends upon the co-operation of the pastors and churches with the Publishing Company in the development of its plans. More business must be had by the Company and you must help us to secure it.

It's Up to the Pastors

The help we need is the help the pastors can give and just at the present time the best help that can be given is that of getting the Brethren Evangelist into the home of every family in the Brethren church. We are asking nothing impossible nor impractical. Many churches have succeeded and many more can do likewise, if they only will. The latest addition to the Evangelist Honor Roll is that of the Huntington, Indiana, mission, with Jonas W. Brower as pastor in charge. Here the subscription list was increased exactly SIX HUNDRED percent. You say it does not speak very well for the work previously done and we admit it, but we can name scores of other churches where the field is equally fertile as well as similarly unworked. Both the man and the hour are needed to bring about great things in the world, but there are more hours than men apparently. What has been done by many can be done by many more. Brother pastor, will you be one of the many who will help us grow?

R. R. TEETER,
Business Manager.

"THE KING OF SONG BOOKS"Herald of Praise

Edited by Dr. H. W. Stough, Dr. W. E. Biederwolf,
Prof. E. O. Excell and Bob Jones

The Latest and Best Song Book Out. Try it in your Sunday School, your Prayer Meeting or your Revival Meeting

PRICES

Best Manila Binding, 15 cents per copy (postpaid)
One hundred, $13.00 (not prepaid)

Flexible Cloth Binding, 20 cents per copy (postpaid)
One hundred, $18.00 (not prepaid)

Cloth Board Binding, 30 cents per copy (postpaid)
One hundred, $25.00 (not prepaid)

The Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 4

JANUARY 22
1919

The BRETAREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETHREN -

The New Brethren Church at Fillmore, California

Dedicated December 15, 1918

(See report in this issue)

Thus saith the Lord of hosts; Let your hands be strong, that the temple might be built. Zech. 8:9.

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918. Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

The King of Pity and of Love Is Calling You—The Editor, ...	2	The Christian and Daily Prayer—G. W. Rensch,	9
Editorial Review,	3	The Sunday School,	9
Other Churches' Programs—Charles A. Bame, D.D.,	4	The Call from Kentucky—G. E. Drnschal,	10
An Open Letter to Illiokota—B. T. Burnworth,	4	HOME MISSION NOTES—G. C. Carpenter,	10
The Heart of Evangelism—G. C. Carpenter,	5	The New World Campaign—Prof. J. A. Garber,	11
Gratuitous Service—Edwin E. Jacobs, Ph.D.,	5	Ashland College Night—Edwin Boardman, Jr.,	11
The Place Music Holds in Worship—Miss Hazel Keiser,	6	News from the Field,	12-15
Christ's Challenge to the Church (Sermon)—H. M. Harley,	8	Business Manager's Corner—R. R. Teeter, D.D.,	16

EDITORIAL

The King of Pity and of Love Is Calling You

There comes to Christian America a call so urgent and so compelling that she dares not ignore and continue to wear Christ's name. It is a call to a duty so vital that he who directs the mouthpiece of a church that prides itself in its loyalty to the spirit and word of Christ, cannot fail to pass on to his brethren and remain true to his trust. It is a call so inseparably interwoven with the plainest and most sacred obligations of human kinship that he who bears it cannot be unresponsive and remain human. It is a call from the "King of pity and of love" to minister in his name to those who are hungry and naked and sick and in prison.

Mr. Cuddihy in The Literary Digest for January 18, 1919, describes vividly the distressing condition and the appalling need:

Four million Armenians, Syrians and other war sufferers in western Asia are practically without food, clothing or shelter, the vast majority helpless women and children. More than a million and a half have been deported. Nearly a million have been brutally murdered and massacred. Four hundred thousand children are orphaned. It can be said that there are no more children left under the age of five, all having perished from exposure and disease. For every hundred births there are from two to three hundred deaths. The newly born children die almost immediately, their mothers having nothing to give them but tears. Deaths . . . are increasing from day to day with appalling rapidity. The homeless—a pitiful stream of women and children—wonder aimlessly through the streets of their wrecked villages.

All winter long they have slept in nooks and corners, in alleys and by the roadsides, with no blankets, no covering whatever, their clothing the merest rags. The women clasp their wan-faced children to their breasts and on their faces is written the pitiful story of their utter despair.

Throughout the length and breadth of these countries there is no food save bread, the dry crusts of bread that they receive at the hands of charity. No meats, no soups, no vegetables, no sugar, less than a pound of bread daily, and even this poor morsel has often to be shared with others. "A poor old woman, faint with hunger said to me today," writes one of the devoted workers, "Sahib, the bread won't go down. I soak it in water, but it sticks in my throat."

"Wheresoever I go," a missionary reports, "I see men or women fallen on the street dead or dying, and little emaciated children stretching out their wasted hands 'for just one shahie for bread,' tears running down their cheeks, and still more awful are the little ones sitting propped against a wall, listless and torpid, indifferent even to food, waiting quietly for death."

"Just now," says another worker, "I have been interrupted in my writing. A Jewess has come to tell me of a woman who staggered to her door begging, late last evening. She was allowed to spend the night in a corner of the house and this morning she was dead. 'Won't you please send some one to bury her,'" implored my caller.

Such pleas are frequent now. There are more dead than buried in Armenia. Men and women once in good circumstances and self-respecting, now hungry, helpless, friendless, crawl away like animals, out of sight, die unseen, and lie unburied.

There is no joy of victory in these distraught lands; but only the cries of an agonized people to whom peace has brought neither benediction nor blessing; neither rest nor respite; lands where the war has left an awful human wreckage in its wake; a great Kingdom of Grief filled with the cries of mothers and of orphans, a distressed people prostrate with desolation, numbed with suffering, having no partnership in the great joy of a liberated world.

No sons, no fathers, no brothers are returning victorious to their homes in Armenia or Syria, for their villages and their cities have been razed and ruined and lie in dust and ashes, and the men by the thousands and hundreds of thousands have been pitilessly murdered or barbarously deported.

Many such scenes of terrible and tragic suffering are in the very lands where Jesus walked with his disciples; where he had compassion on the multitudes and fed them and healed them and comforted them.

But that is nough, Mr. Cuddihy, stay the description, for our hearts are strained with pity. The call of these homeless and starving millions has pierced the most callous among us and stirred human sympathy to its depths. The pitiful cries of those in distress have reached our ears. Their prayers have ascended to the throne of God and have descended into our hearts, and we see them as our own kin in the flesh and rise to meet their needs. Would that every Christian heart would thus respond to this appeal coming from a land fallen among thieves more disastrously than any other. It is Christian America's opportunity and it is our individual opportunity and privilege to be a "Good Samaritan" to stricken Armenia and Syria, pouring in their wounds the healing balm and supplying them food from our Inn of Plenty. If ever there was a time when our sympathy should be measured by the need of a starving, dying people it is now. This is our Christian privilege and duty.

The American Committee for Relief in the Near East, under the able leadership of Cleveland H. Dodge, is appealing for a minimum of thirty million dollars "with which," says the committee, "we can, humanly speaking, save every life." The Literary Digest, after careful investigation, declares that every dollar will go for relief without a cent deducted for organization expenses. The call is urgent. Send contributions to Cleveland H. Dodge, Treasurer, Room 190, No. 1 Madison Ave., New York City.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Brethren Garber and Boardman are coming to the Christian Endeavorers again this week with some very definite things. No Endeavorer can afford to miss these messages.

Next week's issue will be a Christian Endeavor number and we believe we can safely say that there is something good in store. Young people, get set for Christian Endeavor Week.

You will not overlook the new department in this issue, "Our Devotional." Brother Rensch writes this week on "Prayer." As you read it make it your devotional, that is the purpose.

A word from Brother Lytle states that the evangelistic meeting in progress at Burlington had resulted in six accessions to the church at the time of writing. Let us pray that many more may come to the Fountain of Life.

The Ministers' reading course recommended by conference is ready and those desiring to take up the work should write at once to Dean J. Allen Miller, (Ashland, Ohio), chairman of the committee. The other committee members are, Dr. J. L. Gillin, Prof. J. A. Garber and H. L. Goughnour.

There is to be a conference on "World Evangelism and Vital Christianity after the War" held at the Moody Bible Institute, February 3-7, at which some very prominent churchmen and religious leaders will speak.

Brother Hazen, the wide-awake superintendent of the Fostoria Brethren Sunday school reports the work of the mission at that place and we notice they have been very busy practically all year. And now that they have induced Brother White, who is engaged in business at that place, to preach for them, we shall look for still greater growth.

Now is the time to get your Four Year Program reports started toward your district director if you expect to be on time. You surely can't be uninformed about it after all that Brother Bame has written about it. It's simply a question of getting at it; isn't it? Well, "now then do it."

Brother A. E. Thomas is now in Columbus helping Brother Christiansen in an evangelistic campaign. They will appreciate the prayers of the brotherhood in their earnest effort. From there Brother Thomas goes to Muncie, Indiana, where he begins a similar campaign with Brother Kimmel. Brother Thomas states that he will be open to a call to a pastorate about April or May, when his evangelistic season closes.

Such assurances of prayer as that which Sister Mary A. Snyder gives in this issue makes us feel stronger for our task. I am sure Brother Bame will feel its staying influence, too, as Brother Teeter has felt it for three years, and others have felt it. Thank you, Sister Snyder, for your prayers. And we are praying for you that you may soon have your voice back again and be fully restored to health. But we don't think your prayers will be any more effective when spoken than now when they are only "thought." For God hears the voice of the heart and not of the lips.

Because the question has already come up, I want to state that I have been advised that it has been the policy of the Brethren Evangelist for years not to run pictures with death notices except in cases of persons who were quite generally known or had occupied positions of prominence in the church. And I am sure you will understand the reason for it when you stop to think of the number of death notices we publish every week. It is also advised that your obituaries as a rule be not extended write-ups.

The entire Evangelist family will be glad to get a glimpse at the beautiful new church at Fillmore, California, and also to see the delighted face of the pastor, Brother Lowman. Who wouldn't be delighted after having received such blessings from God as Brother Lowman and his faithful co-workers have recently enjoyed. It is a church that we are proud to welcome into the Brethren fraternity. And did you notice that this youngest church of all is on the Evangelist Honor Roll? How did they do it? Ask them. At any rate you will all admit that Fillmore deserves a place on "first page." All the new churches dedicated this year will get "first place." What state will have the next?

We were somewhat relieved when Brother Beachler said "That's all for Pennsylvania for a while," for we were living in mortal fear lest we should have to buy a new thermometer. She kept pushing the mercury towards the top until it looked as if it might be pushed out. When "Old Pennsylvania gets to giving she doesn't seem to know when to stop. We never thought she would hit the endowment trail so hard. But when you get the mother state of Dunkerism back of a proposition like college endowment and a man like Beachler directing the campaign, you may rest assured that it will be done up right. I said, we were relieved. But now that man Beachler has gotten Indiana stirred up again. And the Hoosiers are about as bad as the Dutch when it comes to giving. Those Flora people struck a $2,000 score to start with. Where will it stop? Indiana may push the star, Pennsy's mercury and all out at the top before she quits. Well, we'll get another thermometer ready for any emergency.

Still they come! What comes? Who comes? Yes, "what" and "who" both. Evangelist subscriptions, Honor Roll churches and pastors alive to the importance of a church paper in the hands of their parishioners! All these are coming, and it seems that nothing can stop them. They are coming this week from Fillmore and Whittier, California, Dallas Center, Iowa, and (for our item mentioning Milledgeville, Illinois and Huntington, Indiana, was cut out last week for lack of space) another church from the Illiokota district and one from the Indiana. Ohio, you will have to pull a little harder on the traces. But Ohio is getting ready for some hard strokes. She'll be there on the home stretch. By the way, do you know how much more anxious our people are to write for the Evangelist since the subscription list has grown so large? Everybody wants to write, because they feel that it is worth their time. And since we want the folks to keep on wanting to write, just keep on sending Brother Teeter long lists of subscriptions.

SPECIAL NOTICE—Louisville, Ohio, Sunday school started something. They are so well pleased with the new dress of the Evangelist that they are anxious to help improve it still more. And of course there will always be room for improvement. This is what they agreed to do. The editor is to get whatever illustration or picture he thinks appropriate for the front cover page and send the bill to them and they will pay it. It is not likely to cost more than four dollars. But then that doesn't matter, they want something nice, and something with a message, and that bunch of loyal workers is willing to pay for it. It occurred to us that some other schools might think we were partial if we did not give them the same chance to help in this way. If there are any others who want in on this proposition, write us. Or if you prefer to send an offering of three or four or five dollars to make up a fund for brightening up the first page, that will probably be more convenient for you and for us. I am sure Louisville will be willing to do that too. Any school sending an offering of not less than three dollars will be given the privilege of having their name accompany the "cut" they pay for, in some such manner as the following: "By courtesy of the Louisville Brethren Sunday school." Do you want in on it? If so, write the editor at once.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

Other Churches' Programs

Last year, nearly one half of our churches did not report. Many reasons enter into the failure but doubtless some did not have a good reason for not getting into print. Now, in this letter, I'd like to tell you that we are not alone in trying to do something worth while in the kingdom. Big programs of reconstruction are being put on by many of the denominations. Just this week in one of our big continental dailies, were these two editorials that are worthy of the most careful thought of our people. I hope that you will count them worthy of your time. They have a big bearing on what we ought to do. Here they are:

Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist churches will begin active preparations tomorrow in their respective denominations for the big campaigns in reconstruction and the raising of millions of dollars to push the work of the church in home and foreign mission fields, educational institutions, and social work in downtown centers of big cities all over the country.

Presbyterian Foresight

While many agencies that have made much more noise about reconstruction have been muddling over their blue prints, demanding legislation or waiting for the other fellow to make the first move, the Presbyterian church in the United States has stepped out boldly and started something.

The church does not call what it is doing "reconstruction," but it is the best sort of reconstruction nevertheless. Designated the "New Era Movement," the program calls for the expenditure of $75,000,000 within the next five years in ways that will benefit society.

Yesterday the sum of $1,000,000 was appropriated to increase the salaries of 6,500 pastors in 1919. Just as chaplains were invaluable in the armies of Foch, so will clergymen of all denominations be needed in the social readjustments upon which the world now is entering and the end of which no man can foretell.

The Presbyterians are to be congratulated for their foresight. Able men will be needed in the ministry in the years ahead and plenty of them. And you must permit an able man to hold up his head in the corner grocery if you expect to get out of him all that is in him.

Altar and pulpit are bulwarks against that which is most feared by thinking men today. When they fell in Russia—dragged down, it is true, by the Czar—Bolshevism rose. The cloth, under any name, represents that which is constructive. In the ratio that it is free and respected a country will prosper.—Chicago Herald and Examiner.

Now, let me remind you that these are not all the programs being promoted. The Baptists had one going before we had ours started. The Church of the Brethren has one which will be given a new impetus, doubtless at Winona Lake, next year. So have others.

In the Race?

Now, if we do not do our best while the larger denominations go forging ahead, where will we be in the race? If we do not report, our showing will not be as good as is our race. See? Of course you do. Now, we have an advantage over many.

Our Advantage

We had a start of most of them. We made a mighty good start last year, too. We can recoup much this year. Here in North Manchester, we are accepting every challenge that comes along and getting the benefit of all that goes with contests. "The King's business requireth haste" and we ought to go at our work with renewed zeal with each renewed glimmer of the sun. "Make hay while the sun shines."

A Judgment

Just today, I had a talk with a prominent business man, a banker. He gave it as his matured judgment that the sinful world is passing through some direct intervention of Providence. With all the sorrow and suffering, the world has not turned to God. A plague that seems very contagious where it develops and yet which develops where contagion never could have carried it, is a mighty strong argument to such a conclusion. Are we as busy at the Master's business as we should be?

Are We Consistent?

Church leaders are often found these days among those who argue that revivals should not be held because of the "flu." At the same time, they are as busy at their business as they can be regardless of contagion that flaunts them in the face. Today, I placed with both of the town papers, an "ad" in which I say something like this: "A Revival! Yes! Why not? Everything else goes right on. Business, lodges, pool, movies, dinners, parties. Our children go to school. Are church people the biggest cowards? Is church work the least important? We believe not. We shall prove it. Revival begins at The First Brethren Church next Sunday." Let us not be caught by the subtle arguments of the Devil, so as not to be found watching when the Master comes..

BAME.

AN OPEN LETTER TO ILLIOKOTA

Dear Illikotians:

I feel constrained to thus write to you for I fear you may have lost your "Four Year Program Booklet." If you were at conference at Dallas Center you know that the pastor, superintendent of the Sunday school and presidents of the Christian Endeavor and of the Sister's Society were given each a book. If you were not there and have not received such a book by mail write me at once, if you are one of the above named officers. You will find these books to be absolutely indispensable.

Now open the book and you are confronted by a post card. Please fill out your report and address the card to me and be sure and mail it at once. All reports of the Four Year Program should be in my hands this month. As a district conference we hold second place in the brotherhood, a fine record indeed showing that we have made a strong and steady effort together. We must not fail now. I thank you in advance.

Very sincerely,

B. T. BURNWORTH, District Goal Director.

P. S.—Please send with your report your first quarterly apportionment for District Missions.

B. T. B.,

Secretary of the Mission Board.

GENERAL ARTICLES

The Heart of Evangelism By G. C. Carpenter

(The following article by Brother Carpenter dealing with personal work, is the first of a series of articles on Evangelism.—Editor.)

Do you know how the Young Men's Christian Association began? A young man named George Williams came to have a vital, close, personal acquaintance with another person, the Lord Jesus Christ. It made George Williams a new man to know that person, it made his life all over. What did he do in consequence of this new personal relation? HE SET OUT TO INTRODUCE OTHER YOUNG MEN TO THIS PERSON, JESUS CHRIST, WHO HAD BECOME THE REDEEMER OF HIS LIFE. Bishop McDowell made the above statement in a recent address before the Conference of Federated Churches and concluded the statement with these significant words, "And that, in the heart of it, in the great big depths of it, in the inaccessible heights of it, is EVANGELISM, that one person, who knows Jesus Christ as his Redeemer, should introduce other people to Jesus Christ, that he may become their Redeemer."

The greatest need in the church today is not more meetings of any of the many varieties, not more organization, not more evangelists, not more preachers, but that the burden of the tragedy of lost and condemned souls might rest with tremendous weight upon the laity of the church. The heart of evangelism is both in the pulpit and in the pew. If only one side of this organ of evangelism is active the result is a critical and dangerous condition. And it is that condition with which the church must deal today. Long ago the great preacher, Spurgeon, said in London, "It is the business of the preacher to fill the pulpit, but it is the business of the laity to fill the pews. There has never been such a thing as an empty church when all the laymembers did their duty." Every minister ought to be a personal worker, that being one form of his ministry, but his work must largely fail unless the laity of his church are busy introducing people to Jesus Christ. And therein is the greatest need of the church today.

There is no sufficient excuse for not doing this work. Every person who really knows Jesus Christ as his Savior must and will set out personally to bring his brother and his friend and his neighbor to his Christ for their salvation. Timidity is of Satan. Trying to get to heaven without living for others is paradoxical. Pleading inability to argue Scripture is not in order. Another well says, "Men are not brought to Christ by being beaten in an argument. It is the beauty, the persistence, the tenderness of an interest, it is the consistency of a testimony, that wins men to Christ." It is the tender heart interest in another that is needed in the church today, more Andrews to go out after Simon Peters. Many try but give up all too easily. The Bishop says, "I asked a young man if the young woman he had been paying court to had agreed to marry him." He said, "Not yet." "How many times have you asked her?" "Every time I have seen her for three years, and when I have not seen her I have telegraphed her or telephoned her or written her; there is never a day that the girl goes to sleep without knowing I want her." I said, "How long are you going to keep that up?" Then he said a perfectly fine thing, "UNTIL I GET HER OR SOMEBODY ELSE DOES." There must be a persistent and tender and unwearied interest, a testimony as clear as the sunlight, a life consistent and earnest. Even the weakest lay member of the church can with an overflowing heart of Christian love be an evangel to co-operate with the pulpit in bringing the unsaved to the cross.

The blessing that accrues is double, souls are saved and the soul-savers are kept saved. Souls become rich in eternal wealth. Two brothers in Ohio, one a cripple and the other a strong athlete, grew to manhood on the farm. Both were educated. Both came to Christ and united with the church. The time came to consider their careers in life. The athlete said, "I will be a farmer and stockman. I want to get rich." He prospered and succeeded in getting rich. But his health failed and in his zeal to lay up riches on earth he cut out the church and lost his zeal in the work of the Kingdom. The cripple said, "I will go to the Northwest and mine will be a Sunday school career." The Lord prospered him and greatly blessed his efforts, and when he died there were a "thousand Sunday schools organized" to his credit. When the rich brother died scarcely any one mourned, but when the crippled brother died thousands of people in four states wept. The reward that comes to the true evangel, minister or layman, is inestimable and imperishable.

"Deeds not words" was the keynote of the life of Theodore Roosevelt. He was a man of words but his words were backed by deeds. He made his profession good. "No man since Lincoln's day had so many followers among the plain people." This was in part because of his heart sympathy with the masses and also because his entire life was one of "affirmative action." A favorite text of his was, "Be ye also doers of the Word, not hearers only." And the motto he set for himself early in his youth was, "Better faithful than famous." His active life brought the word "strenuous" into common use. He was known as the greatest apostle of the "strenuous life," yet he often exhorted the people to lead the "simple life." He taught himself never to cry "quits," no matter how severe the bludgeonings of chance. He was a true patriot. It was his proud boast that he was of no section but was "straight United States." Would that the laymen of the church were all "strenuous" in "affirmative action" and straight Kingdom of God.

"And Andrew brought Peter to Jesus." Andrew lives in Peter. Ananias lives in Saul of Tarsus. That faithful mother lives in her boys whom she gave to the Lord. That faithful minister lives in them whom he led to Christ. In whom will the laymen of the church of today live when they depart this life? Jesus came to seek and save the lost, and he said, "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you." The heart of Evangelism is in personal soul-winning.

Gratuitous Service By Edwin E. Jacobs, Ph.D.

There seems to be a notion abroad, that it is not only proper and desirable, but even possible for certain classes of men to give their services wholly or in part gratuitously. It seems to be a time-honored notion that those who engage in any form of socialized work should look elsewhere other than their present job for a livelihood. To mention the wholly trivial and unimportant matter of salary, with which one is to feed and clothe one's children, when dealing with such organizations as the Y. M. C. A., the public schools, colleges, the church, or any other form of socialized work, is the sin positively unpardonable. Did a teacher or preacher ever ask for an increase in salary? Now let the arguments begin to show how utterly impossible it would be. There is, first of all, the poor taxpayer. He must be considered. Then there too is the matter of endowment and other demands without end. Fie! and shame on such an unworthy member of these high professions who would ask for an increase of pay!

The mere matter of properly feeding, doctoring, and clothing one's children sinks into utter nothingness when compared with the high ideals of certain professions! Even the beginner in these callings ought to know better than to ask for more pay. Does not plain living and high thinking go hand in hand? Is not the slave to appetite, even a small or normal appetite, something of a disgrace to the intellectually elect? Ought not the comforts, not to say delights of this world be taboo to those who are dealing with the "higher values" of life? Is not the making of a life giant high above all else in the world? When one is thus seeking bread, may he not after all be getting a stone? And those who are seeking a fish, may they not in reality be receiving a scorpion?

But really, the clothing and shoes of such consecrated men and women will wear out for there seems to be no special providence as there was with the Israelites to make them wear forty years, although by much repair and saving and methods of dry cleaning, they may be made to go considerably over half of that awful stretch of time. Men and women who serve the state as teachers as well as those who serve the church in like manner must live, or almost live, after all. Their needs and tastes are quite human. Do you see that rich banker going there in his high-powered automobile? Well, what in the world would a very tiny and humble teacher in the grades want with such a piece of machinery, any way? Have you seen his library of buckram, half-calf, gold stamped? Such books give such a classy look to the library! But as for the humble man who really wants to read, let him be content with such books as come from Leary's Old Book Store (Philadelphia, Pa.) or Long & Hummel (Columbus, Ohio), and as for the automobile and butlers and valets and servants—some are so utterly low in the scale as not to be able to appreciate them anyway. Are not some of us to be hewers of wood and drawers of water, so that some are born to walk and some to ride, although "all are made of clay?" So plod along, ye teachers and preachers, ye mental toilers of earth, take no thought for the morrow but let the other fellow take the thought and the comforts and joys.

Now, gratuitous service, oh what a joyous and blessed thing in the abstract! Oh, how pleasant to think about, for when the cold of winter chills this thought gives a warmth and a glow that nothing can remove, unless the winter cold becomes a bit too intense. But in the concrete, pure and complete and unadulterated gratuitous service does not exist. In the last analysis it can not exist. It is only a beautiful thought conjured up to make some of us feel good. That is all, for if one gave his service unstintedly to charity, still he would have to be kept while doing his task. Now there are only two ways that this being kept may be accomplished; either his own job must keep him or some other man's job. Suppose I decide to give my whole time to work that does not keep me and my family. Who will keep them? Some other gratuitous job? Hardly. Either my friends, my wife, or children or an inherited estate, if I were so lucky as to have one, must keep me or else a job that does pay must supply my living. There is no other way. Hence all men could not give their whole time to work that does not pay for, if they were to rely on inherited wealth, then that wealth would have to be gotten by some one who did work for pay.

It is utter nonsense for a college, church, or public school board to assume that they can keep good capable men or any men on starvation pay. It is more than nonsense, it is a sin. For every man not only has a right to the four following but it is his bounden and Christian duty to provide them; the maintenance of proper living conditions while he is at his task; the keeping, clothing, feeding and doctoring of his children; the giving of them a start in life, either by money, or by a training and education; and the laying away of enough to keep him off of public charity when he is old. This is the minimum Christian duty along these lines and nothing less is right. Professor Carver of Harvard some time ago wrote a book called "A Religion Worth Having," and this was his thesis in part, that one has a religious duty in the above named lines of endeavor. For while one may be willing to give his services for small or insufficient pay, one still has a duty to his family, which duty is the highest and most sacred of all worldly obligations.

And hiring boards which are paying less than a living wage, in so far as they are able to pay more than they are now paying, are committing sin and those who are willing to accept this little pittance thrown even unwillingly to them, are committing no less a sin if thereby they are robbing a family of the things which they should have in order to make their lives blessed, fruitful, and complete.

I speak for two things in this paper. First of all, I want to call attention to the utter nonsense of assuming that one can give a lifetime of service and not be paid anything to speak of for it, for back of everything one uses, there is expressed an economic endeavor and if one does not earn enough to keep himself, then some one else has to do so for him. That makes him in so far a pauper and a public burden, a parasite, and a stick-tight on the economic system under which he ekes out his miserable life.

Secondly, I speak for the family of the man who toils with insufficient pay. There are countless thousands of children born now who have their chances of a decent and honest life put in jeopardy because their parents are forced from sheer economic necessity to neglect them. If the public school boards, the managers of great businesses, and hiring boards generally, have any doubts about this, it is high time that some one should at least lead them towards the light. If you have a right to ask me to work for insufficient pay, then I have as good a right to ask it of you, regardless of who you are or what your business is. Sin is sin, no matter who commits it or where, and error is error wherever found, and it is about time that the nonsense of the blessedness of working for about half pay be properly aired.

The Place Music Holds In Worship By Hazel Keiser

Music claims a great part in any program, and especially in a religious service. Yet how frequently we find it undervalued, considering the great good it brings to countless souls.

A writer has said that without music we would have no avenue of approach to God. How true this is! Nothing will melt hardness of heart and unlock the bolted doors of the inmost soul of man more quickly than music rendered by a spirit-filled person, overflowing with the love of God. From the singer's soul and by his music God's love is passed on to another life.

Of all the definitions of music that we have seen none satisfies as well as that of Luther, who said, "Music is an art which can calm the agitations of the soul." He realized, no doubt from the part music played in his work during the reformation, that nothing could give such calmness and comfort when the heart was troubled nor inspire such hope when depressed, and nothing can induce such a sense of restfulness when weary in body and mind. In this way music has played a large part in the busy world throughout the ages. Even as far back as Saul's time, we are told that he and his people summoned the aid of musicians to drive away the evil spirits, leaving their soul refreshed and in peace.

If music has such value, how important it is that we should have the very best music in our worship. After six days of hard labor, with the mind intent on business, many men often enter God's house on the Sabbath day tired in body and mind, still holding on to the tasks of the world. In a condition like this, nothing is more important and more helpful in preparing the mind and soul for the worship to follow than a soft, quieting, prelude. It consoles the mind just as it lulls the tired baby to rest.

And then, much should be made of the songs of praise and prayer. During the reformation, it was said of Luther that he made more converts by his hymns than by his preaching. To do the greatest good, these hymns must come from hearts that are in harmony with the great music Master, God, for then they will reach the souls of listeners and make their minds ready for, and hearts receptive to the word which is presented. Every singer should use what talent he has in praising God with his whole soul. We should say as Jenny Lind once gave answer to a friend, "I sing from the heart; realizing that my voice is a gift from God. I always feel in singing that I am singing to God and from God; it is the only return I can make unto the Lord for the gift he has bestowed upon me." When every one can truly say this we can feel certain that we are pleasing God in our worship, and extending his kingdom in the hearts of men.

Music is a great means of inspiring and thrilling the souls of men. Who has not been spurred to greater service and inspired to live a better Christian life after having heard songs with soul-stirring melodies sung with religious enthusiasm and in a spirit of praise to God. How often we have heard it said, "that song just puts new life in me. I know I can work harder now." Such singing stirs our feelings and sends us forth with light hearts to do our daily tasks, and to do them more nobly.

But more than merely inspiring worshippers to nobler living and greater service, those who sing have an opportunity of singing the word of God into some unconverted soul. The hymns and songs are the choir's direct message to the world as truly as the preacher's sermon is his. Therefore it should sing to the glory of God, sing with spirit and with power, sing with the hope of calling men from darkness into light, from the paths of sin back to God.

Then again, good music often attracts people to the house of God who would not come otherwise. Sometimes people, who are indifferent to religion, have no care for the preacher and no desire to hear his message, come to listen to the music. And occasionally a person is found, who even when he considers the sermon dry and unhelpful, and is wholly deaf to any message which the words of the songs may bear, attends simply for an hour of entertainment, for the pleasure received from the music alone. And in a moment when he is least expecting, "all things are possible with God," some message which the music brings, thoroughly pierces his soul and he is either made to think seriously for the first time, or is converted entirely. As it was possible for God to so instantly pierce the heart of Saul and change him into a true follower, just so is it possible for him now, to act through the power of music in changing men's hearts.

We are told that music is of divine origin, that it takes three to write a hymn—God, the writer of the words and the writer of the music. History tells us that all great writers of music, especially of sacred music, have received their inspiration while seated within some church or cathedral. So it was with Gounod, who was observed, day after day, sitting in a corner of Notre Dame cathedral, receiving his inspiration from that noble temple, as he worked busily on that widely known and remarkable production, "The Redemption." If, then, we must consider God as one author, with the other two authors depending on him and the things made sacred by association with him as well as the wonders of his world for their inspiration, should we not give full honor to the one great and only real Author of music and recognize the power he can exercise by it? As he has done in the past so he can today, use this wonderful work of his in turning the hearts of men to him and in converting them even instantly to his righteous ways.

Again sacred music encourages prayer. It produces a prayerful atmosphere which makes those present feel the need of communion with God. Many silent prayers have been made to ascend to his throne by the delivery of some quiet, peaceful hymn, and, in turn, God has sent back his message of "be ye not afraid, I will be with thee," thus making his children feel the safety and the assurance with which they can encounter the evils of this world and, at the same time, making them realize the satisfaction which God has in their attempts to do good. It is quite safe to say that often these prayers come more deeply from the heart than many prayers made audibly. And nothing is more needed in making our worship more acceptable to God than hearts overflowing with the atmosphere of prayer.

That which the world lacks most today is a sympathizing heart, one who considers the troubles and trials of others, and who is right willing to lend a helping hand at any time. But it is sad to say that in this busy world we are so likely to become thoughtless, thinking only of self and leaving others to work out their own salvation, when perhaps their way is much rougher than ours. In such times we need often only the right music, music coming from a soul inspired of God, to change our selfish hearts and give us a sympathetic nature, ready to serve "others" rather than "self." In this way many whom the sermon cannot hold are kept within the church and away from the snares and temptations of the world.

Yet, in spite of all the good that comes from music, and in spite of the sacredness with which each song should be sung, we find that music is often abused. It is sinful thoughtlessness on the part of any one to call for a song to be sung while windows are being adjusted, or as a cover for any other disorder. If songs are worth singing, they are worth choosing and handling with the same degree of conscientiousness that is bestowed upon the sermon or prayer, for they, as much as any other part of worship, are messages to and from God.

Good music is as important in the Sunday school as in the church, because it instructs, inspires and influences young minds in a wonderful and far-reaching way. No one can tell the influence of sacred music.

Longfellow so forcefully brings out in his poem the lasting effects of a song within the heart. His poem reads as follows:

"I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For who has sight so keen and strong,
That it can follow the flight of song?

"Long, long afterward,———
The song, from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend."

Just so if we require good music in the Sunday school it will find root in the heart of some child and will grow, and in time will blossom forth into good thoughts and deeds, both so necessary for Christian living and friendship. And in this way foundations may be laid for the building of good characters in the future.

Let us learn to value music highly and use it rightly. And let us have a better understanding of its wonderful influence and its important place in worship. Remember the words of that man of God when he said that music affords a great avenue of approach to God and leads men to higher and more lasting things, and that it is a means of making life dearer and heaven nearer.

"The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, or whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." (John 3:8). We know that the wind listeth to blow where there is a vacuum. If you find a tremendous rush of wind you know that somewhere there is an empty space. I am perfectly sure about this fact: if we could expel all pride, vanity, self-righteousness, self-seeking, desire for applause, honor and promotion—if by some divine power we should be utterly emptied of all that—the Spirit would come as a rushing mighty wind to fill us.—A. J. Gordon.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

Christ's Challenge to the Church

By H. M. Harley

TEXT, John 20:21

The time of special evangelistic effort is even now upon us, and a few thoughts along the line of our opportunities and responsibilities for personal evangelism, should be particularly apt just now. And in order to find our proper place in the world, as ambassadors for Christ, we must first of all consider the mission upon which Jesus himself was sent into the world.

God saw the sinful condition of men, and he knew where sin would eventually bring the human family. He loved mankind, and looked down upon them in pity. And so he sent his Son Jesus into the world, to tell men of his love for them, and of his power and desire to save. Jesus recognized his mission early in life, even at the age of twelve and often during his ministry he referred to the fact that he must do the work to which he had been called.

Now, Christ's mission was not completed until he laid down his life for the world. But before he did this, he knew that his message of love and good will must be taken up by someone and heralded down through the ages and around the world. And so he called to himself, first the twelve, and later on the seventy, and he asked them to take up and con- that they were to go out among men everywhere as his representatives, as those entrusted with divine authority, and they were to serve as ambassadors for God. The words, "I send you," read in the original Greek, "I charge you;" "I charge you to go forth and accomplish this commission of mine in the world." And while these words were addressed in the first instance to the apostles and to the early church, yet they were meant as well, and with no less force, for every individual who has ever named the name of Christ, and all those who have found a haven in the church of Christ today. All such persons does Jesus send forth, to work his works upon the earth. As Jesus came to work the works of his heavenly Father, so all who are partakers of his salvation, are sent out by him to do the Father's work, each according to his calling, and according to the gift he may have received. To every man and to every woman there is given a work to be done. To all Christ gave the charge to work in his vineyard. And none need fear lest they will not be able to do anything worth while. When our Lord first gave this charge, the account says that "He breathed upon them, and said to them, 'Receive ye the Holy Ghost.'" He gave to them the Holy Spirit to strengthen, to enlighten and to put life into their words and power into their efforts. And this same Holy Spirit is granted richly to all who have really given themselves to God, to do their Master's work in the world. Christ promises the Holy Spirit to all who desire to know and to do his will, and through him they not only receive strength and enlightenment, but he, the Spirit, promises to help and prosper them in every good work.

And we must remember, in taking up this work of Christ in the world today, that we are to do the work of God, even as Jesus himself did; that we have God's authority for our efforts, even as did he; that we, in the doing of this work, have the favor and help of God, as did he; and that we shall likewise be rewarded for our faithfulness, by being owned and made heirs to heaven's same good that Christ himself received from the Father.

A revival in the church is the result of several things: one or more persons letting the Lord Jesus Christ be not only their Savior, but really their Lord and Master; those persons faithfully studying the word of God to know his will; praying earnestly in his name, that his will may be done in all things; and faithfully witnessing to his power, in order that he may enter into lives round about them. When the mind of Christ becomes the mind of one or more persons in the church, when his burden becomes their burden, and his desire their desire, then a revival is sure to manifest itself.

Charles G. Finney, one of the world's greatest revivalists, said that there are three requisites to a true revival of religion; first, devout prayer and consecration; second, house to house visitation and third, personal contact of Christians with unbelievers. These three methods have all been tried and proven effectual. And where there are lacking, no other thing that is substituted will bring any results worth the while.

If you were to ask me what one thing is necessary for the Christian worker, I would answer without hesitation, "Personal holiness." No gifts, however brilliant, no labors, however diligent, can take the place of this. We must first of all examine and judge ourselves and put away all known sin, if we would draw another soul to Christ. If we cherish or practice known sin in our lives, God will not hear us as we pray, and the world will not be influenced either by our words or efforts. We must be "living epistles for him. And more, we dare not be too sensitive to the things that others may say or do. We must be loving, forgiving, long-suffering and always return good for evil.

Then, next to personal holiness comes prayer. Every revival worthy of the name has been born in prayer. A true revival costs lots of prayer and an agony for souls. tinue the work that he himself had started. He told them Many entire volumes have been filled with wonders wrought through prayer. And what prayer has done for others, it will do for you and yours. Have you any loved ones out of Christ, whom you would like to see saved? It matters not where they are, whether at home, in the West or the Southland, or whether even across the seas, the shortest route to them in any part of the world is by way of the throne of God. You can lift up a prayer in Pittsburgh today, and God will answer it, even unto the uttermost parts of the earth. This has been demonstrated beyond dispute. And listen, if you would see a true revival in your midst, parents must pray for their children, wives must pray for their husbands, Sunday school teachers must pray for their scholars and young people must pray for their associates, while the whole church must pray earnestly for the unsaved. Get the people to praying, and a revival will be the result.

But prayer of itself is not enough. If we would bring about a true and lasting revival, we must work as well as pray. There is such a thing as superfluous prayer. A person prays too much when he makes prayer a substitute for work. It is no use asking God to do for us what he expects us to do for ourselves or for others. I believe that there are those to whom we are bound to extend the offer of salvation, for we have more influence over them than any others, and when we refuse to extend the offer of salvation to them and content ourselves merely with praying for them, our prayers will not go very far. The shirking of the man who prays and the praying of the man who shirks are equally displeasing to God, and will prove equally fruitless in bringing about any results. There are many people in the church who sit down and let souls die in sin under the plea, "I am not led," or "If the Lord opens the way," and maybe God has been waiting all these years for that very person to do just that very thing, small though it may seem to be. The scripture says,

(Continued on page sixteen)

OUR DEVOTIONAL

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Christian and Daily Prayer

By G. W. RENCH

Our Scripture Lesson

"Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving; Withal praying also for us, that God would open unto us a door of utterance, to speak the mystery of Christ, for which I am also in bonds: That I may make it manifest, as I ought to speak" (Col. 4:2-4).

Our Meditations

There is a great lack of appreciation of the place and power of prayer in our lives. What a large place it occupied in Paul's ministry of the Gospel, and how he taught the duty of prayer for himself. As ministers, we do not realize how much we need the prayers of the laity. To the Thessalonians he requests prayer: "Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may run and be glorified, even as it is also with you." Mark how that prayer for the success of the gospel is bound up with prayer for the preacher of the gospel. The figure carries us to the race course. It represents the gospel as a runner—a contestant—in the course of life. The triumphant finish is in view. Rejoicing in heaven over the one sinner that repenteth, is a thrill of mighty triumph. He wants prayer for the triumph of the gospel, which he afterwards saw in Ephesus, when multitudes came together and made a bonfire of their bad books. That was a great race, and what a splendid finish.

Then, to the Colossians, he reminds them that he is in Rome, a prisoner, dwelling in his own hired house, meeting many people. That the widest latitude of success to the gospel may come in that great city, he urges prayer that God may open doors for the Word. That prayer was founded upon the conviction that "God is living and present and powerful in providences that open the way for the preaching of the Word. And the answer came, for to the Philipians he wrote, "Now, I would have you know, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the progress of the gospel; so that my bonds became manifest throughout the whole praetorian guard, and to all the rest; and that most of the brethren in the Lord, being confident through my bonds, are more abundantly bold to speak the word of God without fear." Yes, this is Paul, of like nature with other men, urging brethren to pray that open doors may be presented while he is a prisoner, for the Gospel of the Son of God. Oh, yes; pray for your ministers, brethren. Pray for an opportunity of speech—"that moment when one word of love and light" will win some obstinate soul to Christ. Pray for the opportunity of example, when in the moment of great tension, a storm of passion may be quieted by the spirit of Jesus shining through the life. Pray for the opportunity of great sacrifice, when such an example may open the eyes of selfish hearts to the beauty of being "hid in him."

Our Prayer

"Father in heaven, banish hate from our lives, and dread, and the last trace of selfishness. Let no guile linger in our hearts. Spirit of God, enlarge us, and steep us, with thyself. We would rise to our high heritage as God's own children and comrades. We want the wide vision, the lofty aim, a spirit always noble, a heart quick to feel, and a hand strong to serve. Oh, for a love that will pierce through barriers, and touch the unlikely to new life! We want to be of use—not dribbling out our days in pampering self, or in fretting over failures, or in moping over losses. We would walk with thee—above the fog; or, if that be better for us, through the fog, serene and buoyant; magnets, drawing the disheartened to us, and with us into thy peace and gladness." May this veteran pastor's prayer begin the year for us.

After the Revival--What?

One answer to this frequent question was suggested by a letter of inquiry. It was written by Brother Ora C. Paul, of Muncie, Indiana. His thoughts follow: "In view of the fact that by the requirement of the Standard of Excellence each Brethren Sunday school must have a Teacher Training class in order to make Point 5 or lose the 1919 seal, and because of our own need of trained workers, we are interested in the New Three Year course. We are looking forward to a revival in February, and will want to organize our class about March first."

This forward-looking plan will commend itself to others who are wondering what they may do to conserve the results of the revival. Obviously enough the best method of conservation is training and enlistment. It accords perfectly with the apostolic injunction: "The things which thou hast heard among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." The most effective means of such committal is the training class. Full proof will be found in a study of "The Educative Process in Religion" by Dr. L. L. Garber.

J. A. GARBER.

Explanation On Counting

According to Brother Goughnour, points on attendance may be gained from Sunday to Sunday by a two percent increase over the required amount for the preceding Sunday, though it will mean more to your school if you try for a two percent over the preceding actual attendance, if that was above the required amount. Here follows Brother Goughnour's own words written in response to inquiries:

"To make the contest valuable there ought to be a two percent increase over the first Sunday's attendance, if the first Sunday's attendance is more than sixty percent of the enrollment. If the first Sunday's attendance is less than sixty percent, the requirement should be a two percent increase over the sixty percent. However any Sunday any school has its two percent increased based on sixty percent the first Sunday qualifies in attendance.

H. L. GOUGHNOUR.

Elkhart, Indiana, Jan. 19, 1919.

This is a little late but please announce that the Sunday school of First Brethren church, Elkhart, Indiana, accepts the challenge of the Waterloo Sunday school to contest as announced in Evangelist. We could not announce it sooner on account of no teachers' and officers' meeting during the "flu" ban.

A. J. WINELAND, Superintendent.

II. H. WOLFORD, Pastor.

La Verne, California, January 6, 1919.

The LaVerne Brethren Sunday school accepts the challenge of the Waterloo Sunday school for a month-month contest.

MRS. J. A. McCLELLAN.

Carleton, Nebraska, January 13, 1919.

Our school is in for the four months' contest. We stated last Sunday, January 5 and intend to carry it through to a finish.

J. D. KEMPER.

Listie, Pa., January 9th, 1919.

The Listie, Pennsylvania Brethren Sunday school accepts the challenge of our sister school (the Waterloo, Iowa school).

C. J. LARMON,
Superintendent.

MISSIONS

The Call From Kentucky By G. E. Drushal

Under the above caption, we shall try to suggest some things that must enter into the Call from Kentucky, though the time finds us mighty busy. Getting the religious services under way again, school also starting up now, and with the "flu" among our dormitory boarders and no nurse on hand, make a very very anxiously busy combination.

"The Call from Kentucky" has purposely not been pressed any for the last two years. The purpose of this was that the Kentucky work might not interfere with some of the other activities of the church in any way, but that those other needs might be met and cared for before presenting the larger Kentucky program. But we now believe that the time is near, if not here, when the needs of the work of our brotherhood in Kentucky are calling for more help. We believe this to be true of the field generally and also of Riverside. As a denomination we must expand and enlarge, OR ELSE LET GO OF WHAT WE HAVE ALREADY POSSESSED. We can hold things about even for a time, but the time will come when there must be enlargement, or else decay will be the inevitable result. This is naturally true of all such work, and especially true of our work in Kentucky at this time.

First, the Call from Kentucky is a call from a real mission field. There are not a few, who doubtless have come to think that the mountaineers of Kentucky must have developed to the place where they could be classed as those not in need of outside help any longer. Fourteen years ago there were at least two people in our brotherhood who thought that the work of changing the older order of things to the newer and better would be only the work of a couple of years. But they now see differently. They have, ere this time, found that the things that have been lived by a people for generations are not so quickly and easily thrown off. They find that the change is a matter of growth, and that much of the better things have to take time to grow up in the lives of the younger people. And even this growth, in the younger, is often retarded by the old order of things still existing in the older people. Here in the mountains, as elsewhere, the older people do not change their habits of life much. This is natural.

But much of the conditions existing fourteen years ago still persist in many places. It is true that into Eastern Kentucky during the last few years have come much capital used in coal development along the railroad line. But this affects only principally the places along the railroad. But back from the railroad line there are many large areas where conditions are still quite similar to what was found at Lost Creek. There are also places, and some quite large ones, along the railroad, which are holding out their hands for the gospel. These railroad places are susceptible of quicker financial development than those inland. But please do not understand me to say that many of these places do not have any religious services. They do have such, possibly monthly or quarterly. BUT THEY PRODUCE PRACTICALLY NO RESULTS. Ninety-eight to ninety-nine percent of the people do not know Christ in such places, in our judgment.

Secondly, the Call from Kentucky PLEADS FOR AN ENLARGEMENT OF OUR FIELD OF OPERATIONS. There must be more places of religious services established. The needs of the destitute places call for this. The needs of the places already established call for this. The demands for the continued life of our mountain work call for this.

This enlargement in turn calls for volunteers for service, volunteers who are possessed with the unconquerable Christ spirit, volunteers who after they have put their hand to the plow do not look back nor become discouraged, and who are deeply and fully equipped with much common sense.

And this enlargement of operations calls for a larger financial basis, for a time at least. This does not mean that giving is not to be preached and practised here. The older places are now putting that pressure on as heavily as possible, and the new ones will. There will be good financial returns in due time. But with this the program of enlargement which the Call is now sounding, including the enlargement of the field and the better equipment of Riverside, calls for a larger financial program for awhile. This program must not thwart or throttle any other enterprise of our brotherhood. There must be mutual development in all the activities of the church. This will give opportunity to help the needy everywhere and thereby lay up treasure in heaven, the place of our future abode. "He that putteth his hand to the plow and looketh back is not fit for the kingdom of heaven."

HOME MISSION NOTES

By G. C. Carpenter

Twenty Stars

As you read the report of Home Mission receipts as given by Orion E. Bowman, Secretary-Treasurer, you will find twenty stars that indicate that only twenty churches have thus far gone "Over the Top" with the Thanksgiving offering. That means that only twenty churches have reached the thirty cents per member average. It will be noted also that the First Brethren church at Washington, D. C., sent the largest amount among the star churches, which amount was seventy-five dollars. One hundred stars should be added in the next report. What will your church do? Make good, of course. To reach the goal of $7,500 for this year over $3,500 must yet be contributed. The Brethren churches should reach this goal in the modern, Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. fashion. If we reached the goals set for us in the war drives, how much more should we reach our goals in the drive for the Kingdom of God!

Sixty-five Churches

Thus far sixty churches have responded with Thanksgiving Mission offerings. No church should make excuse because of the "flu" conditions that have hindered public services for a time in many places. Where there is a will there is a way. The other seventy percent of the Brethren churches should respond at once. Those that have not reached the goal should not give it up.

No Time to Spare

One girl in Riverside Institute says, "The studies that I take this year are Bible, Arithmetic, Composition and Rhetoric, American History, History of Kentucky and Physiology. The 'flu' hurt me very badly, my temperature was 104."

Tithing Weekly Salary of $12.50

One faithful, aged brother writes, "I am keeping books for this firm, getting only $12.50 per week, but we are tithing and can save some besides." The Lord will make the remaining $11.25 go farther than the whole amount would go, if the brother had been dishonest with the Lord and robbed him of his share. "The tithe is the Lord's."

"My Partner in Business"

A faithful young brother writes, "The Lord, who is my partner in business, has certainly been wonderfully blessing me. In a short time I have cleared up $485 in cash. Pretty good for both the Lord and myself. His portion is $48.50 you know. He is a great fellow to work with and I want to be worthy of his partnership."

"Little Brown Church Tithing Band"

There are at present nineteen members in this band and others are expecting to adopt the tithe as a minimum of their support of the Lord's work. The writer recalls that at one time, while he was pastor of the First Brethren church at Warsaw there were 55 active tithers in the Band at that place, and the showers of blessing that fell upon that work were doubtless due in no small measure to this fact. With tithing always comes a deeper spiritual life, hence the opening of the windows of heaven. The Peru church wants to open those windows directly above Peru.

Bryan and Milledgeville—Twins

Brother G. L. Maus, pastor at Bryan, Ohio, writes, "Enclosed find check for $40 from the Bryan church for the Kentucky support fund. This places us in the class with those who have reached this goal of twenty cents per member for Kentucky. Trusting that all the churches will reach this goal as well as all the rest and that at next General Conference we will have reached all these important goals." Brother Miles J. Snyder,

(Continued on page 16)

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

The New World Campaign By J. A. Garber

Knowing that its membership consists of young people who are constantly dreaming of better things the officers of the United Society have aptly sensed the desire of their constituents and wisely outlined a campaign of

Mobilization for World Brotherhood

Its successful promotion requires a World Union committee of three or more forward-looking persons in each society. Ten duties of wide range have been suggested for the performance of this special committee. 1. To keep the society informed as to the proposed plans for world brotherhood, like the League of Nations. 2. To encourage the support of world-wide Christian Endeavor as a promotional agency. 3. To promote, as the opportunity allows, international acquaintance through international intervisitation. 4. To encourage correspondence with Endeavorers of other lands as a means of cultivating closer fellowship. 5. To keep the aims before the society in each meeting, devoting at least one to this particular task. 6. To organize study classes using text-books designed to advance world brotherhood. 7. To distribute literature advocating international fellowship. 8. To help provide workers, and their support, for the rehabilitation of Christian work in war-stricken lands. 9. To encourage Endeavorers returning from service, who are capable and worthy, to list as Life Work Recruits. 10. To keep constantly before the Endeavorers the world-wide, democratic, humanitarian and Christian ideals of the new era. All of these activities will help to realize the aims of this great movement, which are epitomized in the motto "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren."

Believing that this large program of far-reaching consequences can become effective and fruitful through the localizing of specific needs, the naming of particular agencies, the suggestion of efficient methods and the statement of definite goals, those responsible for its execution have proposed the following

Local Program of Work:

1. Christian Endeavor Membership

The Need: To bring up the membership of our Christian Endeavor societies so as to fill the ranks depleted by war and render the strength of the societies adequate to their great new tasks:

Agencies: The lookout committee, the Sunday school committee, social committee, and society officers. All of these have their share in the work of recruiting.

Methods: New members' socials to which each Endeavorer will be expected to bring one possible new member. A canvass of the Sunday school, with invitations to join the society. A similar canvass of the community; the placing of an empty chair next to the chair of each member, who is expected to fill it with a new member obtained by himself. The division of the society into two sections, with a contest to see which section will obtain the largest number of new members in a given time.

Goal: As many young people in Christian Endeavor as there are young people in the local Sunday school.

2. Larger Giving

The Need: The enlarged work which Christian Endeavor should undertake calls for larger gifts to Christian Endeavor; and the enlarged work of the church calls for enlarged gifts from Christian Endeavorers to current church expenses and denominational missions.

Agencies: The society treasurer, at the head of a society finance committee.

Methods: The adoption of a society budget; frequent reports of the finance committee to the society; a canvass of the society presenting the claims of the Tenth Legion; raising money, if desired, by means of bright and helpful entertainments, as well as by direct giving.

Goal: Every society during 1919 to give twice as much as any year before, the gifts to be apportioned to the local church, and denominational home and foreign missions, and the work of Christian Endeavor.

3. Evangelism

The Need: The church greatly needs recruits to do the larger work that opens before it.

Agencies: The lookout committee, prayer meeting committee, and music committee.

Methods: Emphasize the prayer meetings whose topics are suggestive of evangelism. Form a personal workers' class. Divide among the personal workers those that are not church members, and strive in every way to persuade them to accept Christ and join the church. Hold frequent private meetings to report and consult regarding this work. Pray much for this task. Obtain the help and advice of the pastor.

Goal: Every Christian Endeavorer in your society a church member.

4. Patriotism

The Need: In order that our country should do its part worthily in the new order of the world, it should be purified from the evils that exist here, and strengthened in every way for its world-wide tasks. Particularly, as the prohibition amendment to the national constitution is so near ratification, there is need to push it to complete success with all the force of the churches; and after the amendment is ratified, there will be need to see that it is thoroughly enforced, and then to go on toward the still more glorious goal of a saloonless world.

Agencies: The temperance and good-citizenship committee.

Methods: The appointing of a temperance and good-citizenship committee in every society where one does not already exist. The strengthening of the society meetings on civic and temperance topics. The planning of temperance mass meetings, obtaining speakers, furnishing music, and advertising them widely.

Goal: The full realization of our Christian Endeavor slogan: "A saloonless nation by 1920, the three-hundredth anniversary of the leading of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock, and a saloonless world by 1930."

5. World Brotherhood

The appointing of a World Union committee in the local society, and its activities according to the suggestions made above.

Ashland College Night

February 9th is the day especially set apart for Brethren Endeavorers to remember Ashland College. Programs are in the course of preparation and will be sent out upon request. Every Endeavorer ought to have a part in the victory we expect to report. Leaders of Endeavor societies will help in the "drive" if they will report how many programs they will require.

Our goal has been set with three very definite objectives in mind: (1) A new life work recruit from each society. This goal will only be reached through prayer and preparation. Every young man and woman—yes, every Endeavorer—ought to come to the decision time with a prayerful, willing spirit and then as the call of a bigger, nobler task comes they should honestly decide what to do.

(2) Three hundred and fifty dollars are needed. The money will be apportioned thus: $300 for Ashland College—chair of Religious Education; and $50 for the National Christian Endeavor expenses. In this day of big achievement it seems to me we ought to raise $500.00. Last year something like $400.00 was sent in and we ought to better the record this year. All that we raise over $350.00 will be put into the permanent endowment fund of the College.

(3) A greater spirit of enthusiasm and real loyalty to Ashland is our third goal. This is something we dare not overlook; What if the College hasn't come up to your expectations. Is it going to help matters along if you keep on "bumping" the school? Remember you only get as much out of an institution as you are willing to put into it. Stand back of the College and show your fine loyalty. Boost! Boost! Boost!

Just a word to the pastors. Now is your time to get in some personal, heart searching work with your young people and thus pave the way to that Life Work decision that some young soul should make.

The Angelus for February 2nd and 9th will have some items of interest for College night.

Send requests for programs and the members desired to either J. A. Garber or myself.
EDWIN BOARDMAN, JR.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

CANTON, OHIO, HAPPENINGS

It has been entirely a matter of forgetfulness and neglect and not because of any likes or dislikes in the matter of editors or officials, that there has been no report of the work at Canton for a long time. Personally I shall continue to give my support to the Brethren Publishing Company no matter who is at the head of affairs with the Company. It is as much my concern as any one else in the church and so my obligation is as large to it as any one's else.

Canton has experienced no startling upheavals in the work of the congregation during the last six months. The attendance at the various services of the congregation has not diminished, though we cannot say that it has greatly increased. Part of this stationary character of the crowds is due to the set-back which we experienced along with all churches, in the seven-weeks ban under which we were placed by the "flu" epidemic. But I must hasten to say for the Canton church that she has "come back splendidly from the effects of the ban. And Waterloo's challenge, which we have accepted, will doubtless help to bring us back more quickly to the pre-ban status in attendance and offerings.

Financially the work at Canton is the best it has ever been. But of course it would be too bad if any report from a growing organization did not show development in its finances as well as otherwise. The report of the financial secretary at the yearly business meeting on January 8, 1919 showed the gifts of the congregation to have increased constantly during the past three years. In 1916 the gifts of the congregation increased $460.41 over 1915; in 1917 the increase was $621.33 over 1916; while in 1918 the increase was $231.20 over that of 1917, and the total for 1918 in receipts from all organizations and auxiliaries was $2,386.66. And it is due the congregation to say that the pastor received an increase in salary for 1918 and at the meeting on January 8, received a call for another year with increase in salary. Some of the above results are to be attributed to the very efficient work of the financial secretary, and the business-like methods which are in use in the gathering of the funds.

With the large number of deaths everywhere from the ravages of the influenza the Canton congregation has, as yet, lost none of its members. There were deaths among members of some families and some of our regular attendants at church and Bible school have been taken by the Grim Reaper. But the active membership remains intact. For this we thank God. And we are looking forward to a season of ingathering about the time of the spring communion.

Christian Endeavor work continues to tax the ingenuity of the active membership to maintain its existence. In the city the lure of the larger churches, with paid choirs and orchestras and modern-day preaching, together with the picture shows, which are open on Sunday despite the law, make it mighty uphill work to hold the interest and allegiance of the young people. But there are the faithful few who delight the heart of a pastor always and make sure the ultimate results of all efforts put forth for Christ and the church, and these we have, too, and for them we continue to pray and work. We are planning to co-operate as largely as possible with the plans of the United Society and the Ohio Christian Endeavor union, as well as the County Union, for the advancement of Christian Endeavor, and are hoping to see some good accomplished.

Taking all conditions into account we are hopeful for the work at Canton, and we are looking forward to our fourth year's work with the good folks here with considerable confidence and hope. But we want to assure the readers of the Evangelist, and all the brethren, that we need their prayers, for it is "not by might, nor by power, but by (God's) Spirit" that any great good is accomplished; and so in his fear we go forward, aspiring to larger and better things than we have ever yet accomplished for his cause.

Fraternally,
DYONIL BELOTE.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

This time the news comes from the Flora, Indiana, church, and I consider it very good news. Just about a year ago the Flora people dedicated a splendid new church, and it was not the part of wisdom to make the canvass for College endowment immediately after that event. Consequently we waited a year in order that Flora might recuperate. And as we have taken up the last lap of our work in Indiana we decided to begin with Flora. We started on Sunday morning, January 5th, and was there just one week. The Flora church has many country members and it took a great deal of time to cover the field.

Brother S. C. Henderson became pastor of this congregation last fall. He has had the same experience practically all pastors have had, viz., his plans have all been held up or upset altogether, because of the epidemic. Nevertheless he is right on the job and hoping that things may soon take a turn for the better. Brother Henderson entered most heartily with me into the campaign, as I knew he would. I found him very anxious to have his church go over the top for Ashland College. In this he was certainly not disappointed.

Flora went $2,000 and I am bound to pronounce that splendid in view of the fact that their dedication is only one year in the past. I have scarcely been at a place where the number of people who did nothing was so nearly an incident as at Flora. What I mean is this, that practically everybody whom we approached did something for the cause. The Liberty Loan idea appealed strongly to the Flora people, and so I got the largest number of Liberty Loans there I have received at any place.

I must say that the Flora people are a most hospitable people. The home of Brother Amos Clingenpeel was my general stopping place, but I was made to feel at home in many other homes besides. Brethren Walter Pearson, Albert Clark and John Humbert used their cars freely in getting me around. You will note that I say "cars;" there are not many Fords around Flora. The land around Flora is so black and deep and rich and valuable that Fords don't seem to thrive very well there. Well, we had a fine time at Flora. Our services each night were well attended considering that there was still some "flu" at nearby points. Our last service on Sunday morning the 12th, was exceptionally well attended and it was very apparent that the Flora people felt good over what had been accomplished for Ashland College.

The Sunday school at this place is coming rapidly to the front. Brother Sylvester Whetstone is the superintendent. He enjoys the confidence of the people, and has a Sunday school vision, and I predict splendid things for the Flora Sunday school under his leadership. Brother Henderson also recognizes the importance of the Sunday school and is fully acquainted with the organization and methods of the modern Sunday school, and I am sure these two men will do some good team work.

On my first Sunday at Flora, Ex-Governor Frank Hanly had a union temperance meeting in one of the Flora churches and that deprived me of the evening service. However, Brother Lytle got wind of this and he invited me over to preach for him that night. I went. Lytle don't like to see anybody idle around him, and that is why he is a good pastor. I have reached the conclusion that one of the best ways to keep church fights at the minimum is to keep church members so busy they won't have time to scrap. Anyhow, I was glad I answered Lytle's call. It was a fine service. Brother Lytle had just begun a meeting and general appearances pointed to a successful meeting.

The reports will be from Indiana now until Indiana is finished.

WM. H. BEACHLER,
Campaign Secretary.

GLOVER GAP, WEST VIRGINIA

I was not a little interested when I read Brother Baer's introductory remarks, as he took up the editorship of our beloved Evangelist, when he asked the help of all its patrons, saying that those who could write should do so, and those who could not should pray. I was reminded of my great uncle who was a constant exhorter. On being asked why he could make a much better prayer than address, replied, "It is a great difference between talking to God and talking to men." So when I think of what Brother Baer said, I remember that there is a great difference between talking to God and talking to 20,000 readers of the Brethren Evangelist. God will accept our poor jumbling jargon and understand it. So many of us can pray better than we can write.

Well, I am glad to know that we have a God like that who can understand all our needs, frailties, and peculiarities. If we shout aloud he can hear; if we write he can understand and if we think he knows our thoughts.

Now, Brother Baer, rest assured that there is at least one isolated member of the Evangelist family who will think a prayer for your daily success, and if my speech comes back again I will then ask petitions in words. As we loved Brother Teeter and his jurisdiction, we also feel the same towards you.

I am daily thinking a prayer for Brother Bame and the success of the Four Year Program, for I am greatly interested in it.

I think only success for Brother Baer in his new position for his many friends throughout the brotherhood will give him their co-operation, I am sure.

Sincerely in his name,
MARY A. SNYDER.

FILLMORE, CALIFORNIA

Dear Evangelist Readers, and all the Brethren and Sisters, Greeting: I am writing you to tell you that we have dedicated another church for the Brethren. This cuts off another one of the 40 churches proposed in the Four Year Program.

Just a restatement of the work done here since last May. The Mission Board of Southern California moved their tent to Fillmore. This ten when all up will seat more than 800 people. We used the smaller size here. Brother Louis Bauman was the first evangelist with all the other five churches co-operating. As a result of this meeting some 27 people came into the church. And on July 2nd, 1918, we organized into a working body, but still under the care of the Mission Board. From this humble start we have gone on from one victory to another.

It was planned from the start that we should build a church building in Fillmore. So at our district conference held at Long Beach, it was decided to build, and an offering was raised that totaled more than $1,200.00. That was a fine start for a building for we had paid $1,700.00 cash for our two lots, situated almost in the center of the town, so on the first of August we broke ground for the church which is of the bungalow style of architecture with a main auditorium seating 250 and a primary room on the side of this seating almost another hundred, the two thrown together by sliding doors. There are besides, a study 14x14, three class rooms and a dressing room. In the basement there are toilet rooms, an up-to-date kitchen and one large room 40x50 that can later on be fixed for class rooms.

For this structure we have spent more than $11,500.00, and our fellow townsmen say it is a credit to the town. This could not have been possible at all aside from the Mission Board and the faithful members of the other five churches. Many of you know our Brother N. C. Neilsen of Long Beach, California, a man small of stature but towering head and shoulders above the average church member for his untiring zeal and love for God's cause, and for the Brethren church. Brother Neilsen has fathered about four or five of these churches and helped them to victory in Christ's name. And, as I said to the Board last Sunday at the dedication service, I have been from ocean to ocean and have seen a good deal of church work, but I have never run across as loyal a bunch of Christian men banded together to do Christian work as these men, for they not only have prayed and had a vision, but have gotten behind this movement with their money and with their lives.

On Sunday morning, December 15th we met in the first service of the day in charge of Elder A. V. Kimmel from the Whittier church, who had pioneered this work. With some 35 or 40 of his people he motored here and was here for Sunday school. They had come 80 miles. How is that for Sunday morning? And they got here in time for Sunday school too. We had a large attendance at all the services of the day. Elder Kimmel preached for us in the morning and afternoon, and had charge of the dedication which was at 3:00 P. M. On December 15th in the morning service when the invitation was given a splendid mother and her grown daughter came forward for membership, and at the evening service a young man came forward. Then we asked for money and our folks did themselves proud. We received over $1,600.00 in cash and pledges, making a total of over $4,500.00 given since May for lots and building. We praise his great name, for all good things come from God. And it is through Jesus Christ we are saved to serve, with our money and lives. Any time any of the brethren come to the coast we expect a visit from them.

SYLVESTER LOWMAN
Pastor of the new Fillmore Church

S. LOWMAN, Pastor.

FINANCIAL REPORT

Receipts for December, 1918 (This includes The Thanksgiving offerings of 55 Brethren churches which have reported).

Scott Michael, Polk, Pa.,	$ 20.00
Interest on daily balances,88
Mrs W. A. Price, Nappanee, Ind.,...	5.00
Mark B. Spacht, Williamstown, Ohio,	2.00
*Allentown, Pa.,	33.00
*Sidney, Ind.,	20.12
Mrs. B. Musser, Nappanee, Ind., ...	3.00
Mrs. Lillie Warren, Silver Lake, Ind.,	3.00
May Paul, South Bend, Ind.,	1.00
*Tiosa, Ind.,	15.60
W. P. R. Shank, Brookville, Ohio, ..	5.00
First Brethren, Dayton, Ohio,	133.85
Buena Vista, Va.,	2.50
Beaver City, Nebr.,	30.00
North Liberty, Ind.,	40.00
White Dale, W. Va.,	30.50
J. S. C. Spiekerman, Maryville, Mo.,	4.50
D. W. Early, Grand View, Wash., ..	5.00
Aaron Showalter, Adrian, Mo.,	5.00
Friends, Strathmore, Cal.,	15.00
*Huntington, Ind.,	16.20
Mr. and Mrs. Richard Harding, Turlock, Cal.,	15.00
Jacob Thomas, Mt. Etna, Iowa,	5.00
Mrs J. R. Kimmel, McLouth, Kans.,	5.00
Sergeantsville, N. J.,	13.00
Mrs John Dintaman, Wooster, Ohio,	5.00
*Hamlin, Kans.,	25.40
*Ashland, Ohio,	70.00
*Telford, Tenn.,	25.00
A. Grisso, Sidney, Ind.,	1.00
*Martinsburg, Pa.,	30.02
Maple Grove, Kans.,	6.00
Maurertown, Va.,	50.96
West Alexandria, Ohio,	9.35
S. Cook and family, Harrisburg, Ore.,	5.00
Highland, Pa.,	10.00
New Lebanon, Ohio,	14.10
Carleton, Nebr.,	74.19
Roanoke, Va.,	22.35
*Fosteria, Ohio,	6.50
Mary J. Shank, Lockwood, Mo., ...	1.00
Masontown, Pa.,	25.00
*Linwood, Md.,	26.35
Gratis, Ohio,	30.00
Fillmore, Cal.,	16.32
Nampa, Idaho,	3.00
Arda L. Hedrick, Hallandale, Fla., ..	1.00
Laura E. N. Hedrick, Hallandale, Fla.,	5.00
Long Beach, Cal.,	125.00
Hamlin, Kansas,	5.00
*Peru, Ind.,	34.20
W. O. Ringler, Somerset, Pa.,	1.00
Mrs. B. F. and Gladys Rouch, La Paz,
Ind.,	1.50
Annie M. Rorabaugh, Conemaugh, Pa.,	2.00
R. K. Steiner, Sterling, Ohio,	5.00
Cloypool, Ind.,	3.65
*Bryan, Ohio,	60.00
Dayton, Va.,	13.00
Dutchtown, Ind.,	15.25
North Manchester, Ind.,	73.55
Denver, Ind.,	10.00
*Washington, D. C.,	75.00
Pleasant Grove, Iowa,	15.00
Prosperity, W. Va.,	8.00
Pleasant Hill, Ohio,	5.81
J. O. Harrison and family, Hart-ville, Ohio,	4.00
Hagerstown, Md.,	62.23
J. M. Tombaugh, Hagerstown, Md., ..	5.00

Russell Humbert, Flora, Ind.,	45.00
Pittstown, N. J.,	12.10
*Campbell, Mich.,	63.28
Orange Minear, Minburn, Alta, Canada,	200.00
*Morrill, Kansas,	51.74
*Canton, Ohio,	45.50
Niekerson, Kans.,	3.00
Jos. A. Price, Unionville, Iowa,	5.00
Mrs. H. D. Lampert, Shiloh, N. J.,	5.00
Berne, Ind.,	75.05
*Berlin, Pa.,	63.90
*Ankenytown, Ohio,	24.00
*Fremont, Ohio,	27.82
Cerro Gordo, Ill.,	13.25
*Louisville, Ohio,	59.75
Susan Bezona, Redondo Beach, Cal., ..	5.00
S. M. Ruby, Philadelphia, Pa.,	10.00
Nappanee, Ind.,	25.00
Interest on daily balance,	1.86
J. H. Peck, Marvel, Texas,	5.00
Lavern, Cal.,	11.00
Roanoke, Ind.,	4.80

Total Receipts from Sept. 1, 1918 $3994.71

P. S.—Churches marked * are Star churches having contributed 30c per member.

Our Goal is $7500.00 for Home Missions this year. Just a little over one-half of this amount has been contributed by a list of faithful supporters individually and by 55 Brethren churches. What about the remaining 125 Brethren churches? Do you not want to be counted on the list of Home Mission contributors? We realize that this year is an extraordinary one, but we must not take a backward step.

Can I not hear from each one of the remaining churches at once with a splendid offering aggregating at least 30 cents per member? Will not the churches who have not reached this goal take an extra offering to reach the goal?

Thanking all who have helped in the past and trusting that we can again reach our goal this year, I respectfully submit this report.

ORION E. BOWMAN,

Secretary-Treasurer.

Dayton, Ohio, January 8th, 1919.

FOSTORIA, OHIO

A summary of events happening at the First Brethren church and Sunday school at Fostoria, Ohio, since March 17th, 1918:

March 17th—Observed South American Day in the Sunday school.

April 17th—A delegation of Sunday school workers spent the day at Fremont in attendance at the Ohio State Conference.

May 12th—Observed Mothers' Day; Brother White addressed us.

May 26th—Two received into the church.

August 8th—Organized an S. S. C. E. Sister Baringer of Fremont assisted in the organization. Literature committee secured 1) subscriptions for the Woman's Outlook.

August 11th—Brother White was extended the call to preach.

August 11th—Church voted to send Brother C. B. Newcomer as delegate to National Conference at Winona Lake.

August 18th—Observed African Mission Sunday in the Sunday school.

September 5th—Church paid $10.00 toward the burning of mortgage on the Washington, D. C. church.

September 15th—Church voted to place the Brethren Evangelist into all Brethren homes, the Y. M. C. A. and the Public Library.

November 24th—An offering lifted for National Home Missions amounting to $6.50.

December 29th—White Gift Offering lifted amounted to $10.00.

For the past two months or more Brother White has been conducting the mid-week prayer services. His subjects have been the doctrines of the church. These have been well treated and all feel profited by them.

The Sunday school received into the treasury $106.01 from March 17th to January 1st, 1919, including 38 Sundays.

Four Sundays of the year we were closed on account of the "flu."

R. ALGER HAZEN.

"THAT'S HIS LIMIT!"

A strange sort of a subject that! But wait a minute and we will tell you where we got it. You know we gave up a mighty good job out in California, and came east this winter to enter into an evangelistic campaign. After driving our little Ford (wife and children accompanying us) from Long Beach, California, where the waves of the Pacific toss and romp in all their glory, through to National Conference at Winona Lake; and, then on to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Albany, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, and back to Clay City, Indiana, we held just one week of a revival when a state order closed our meeting on account of the "flu." We found a mighty fine little bunch of Brethren at Clay City, ready for business, and were sorry to have to leave them. But the best we could do for them was to promise to return and finish the meeting for them before our return to California this spring. This we will do in March, if all goes well.

Well, we passed on to Dayton, where we were to hold our next meeting and found them just closed up also because of the epidemic raging. And it was raging,—27 dead persons lying in an undertaking establishment at one time near the church,—that was enough to make any man think things! Our thinking then and since has made us believe that this whole thing is nothing less than a pestilence,—one of the pestilences to which our Lord referred in Matthew 24:7. During practically five weeks at Dayton we, (wife and I) spent two weeks in bed with the "flu," our principal occupation being to watch the hearse go by the window carrying the dead to their last earthly resting place! But the Lord was kind to us, and restored us, through the ministrations of kind hands that we shall never forget, to perfect health. I never felt better, and more like preaching just a little longer than now. (Poor Long Beach!) And Mrs. Bauman never weighed what she now weighs. She refuses to get weighed, so I do not know how much that is. In Dayton, after the lifting of the ban, we were able to hold only two weeks of the revival that was to have continued four or five weeks. Through the insistence of the pastor at the next point of service that he could not possibly hold his meeting in January, and that I should keep my engagement there at the time set, we passed on from Dayton, leaving Brother Cobb to finish his own meeting. It is said to be mighty poor policy to "swap horses in the middle of the stream," but when you have an expert "horseman" like that Cobb at Dayton, it can be done, and was done. For I understand that he lined up twenty-five or thirty in the week following our farewell. There is a Cobb in the Brethren ministry. There is another Cobb in professional baseball. From what I have learned of these two men, they must be related in some way. At least, they both must have had the same sort of ginger-bread to eat when they were boys. However, we shall miss the point we want to make, if we fail to state here that while we were in Dayton in revival work for those two weeks, there were three accessions to the church. Two of these were by letter, leaving but one confession. (We have not yet gotten down to the "Billy Sunday" style of calling all who can be persuaded to step to the front and shake hands with our celebrated (?) personage confessions.)

Our next point was Goshen, Indiana. Here we expected one of the greatest revivals we ever held; and, from the standpoint of the field and the opportunity of the Brethren there, that expectation was, and is, but reasonable. Goshen has a mighty fine bunch of good folks (and cooks, too,—none better in all this broad land). From the standpoint of their treatment of an evangelist and his wife, they were superb. We never expect anything better this side the grave. But say, we preached three weeks there as hard as we ever preached in all our life, and there was but one confession. Now, we candidly admit that we would gladly preach three weeks again for that same confession. But why were there not many more? Various reasons will be offered. In the first place, we preached for two weeks almost entirely to Christians, simply because we thought they needed it! We would not have done it surely had we thought otherwise. Most churches do need it in the beginning of a revival. Then, after we began turning our attention to the unconverted, the pastor informed us that in the third week of the meeting, the "flu" had laid low members of twenty different families of the church,—an increase of from two to twenty families in one week. While conditions were as bad or worse in the memberships of other churches not holding any revival, we could hardly blame the revival for this sudden epidemic which had not before reached Goshen to such an extent, yet it seemed to be the judgment of some that the meeting should close. Certainly, we did not want to take upon ourselves the responsibility for its continuance under those conditions, and closed when we should have begun to see some results. Yet candidly, we were not optimistic about results had we continued. Conditions were abnormal. Moreover, with all due respect to the Goshen folks whom we learned to love, I think it but right to say that what they really need there most of all, is a "Peace Conference," in which grievances of long standing should be buried out of sight. After the "Peace Conference," then you could look for one of the greatest revivals in Goshen this brothererhood of ours ever knew. The material is there for it. Thus, with one single confession, we had our third attempt at a revival cut short by the "flu." Yet, in those three weeks we should have seen fifty confessions, but we didn't!

Berne, Indiana, where we were to have spent one week, and Camden, Indiana, where we were to have held our next revival, both were closed at that time by the "flu." We began to think (almost sorely) of a big Bell holding down our work at Long Beach, drawing our salary; and, likewise because of the "flu," he did not have to even sound his "clapper." But as Alva McClain recently wrote us, "Bell always did have a perverted sense of humor!"

Brother Thomas, pastor at Milford, came to our rescue, and saved us from enforced idleness once more by inviting us to Milford, just south of Goshen twelve miles. We found Brother Thomas a royal lad with whom to work and greatly enjoyed his fellowship. He has the courage of a lion, and if his church is not lined up for efficient service, it is not because he has lacked in courage in telling them plainly of the fact. Some evangelist once went into a church and told the inhabitants thereof that it was not a revival they needed, but a funeral. We were kinder than that and used the word "resurrection" instead, but a funeral. We were kinder than that, but the Brethren church is the liveliest church in the town." Even the pastor of another church told us that. But upon inquiry, we found that that was not saying extremely much. And unless some power shall awake the sleeping Christians of that town to a sense of their duty to God and the unsaved in that community, the churches might as well close up shop. We never saw a place to which the words of Revelation 3:14-19 could more appropriately apply than to the spiritual conditions in Milford. I think the pastors of the town will approve of what I am here saying. We stand ready to take off our hat to any man of God that can go into that town and spiritually quicken it unto the salvation of souls. Let us pray for Brother Thomas, that God may use him as a mighty instrument for spiritual awakening in Milford. He will surely do the best he can. God graciously used him at Beaver City, and we trust that he may yet be wonderfully blessed at Milford. There were two Christians who applied for membership in the church, and one other who came to the church by way of the great confession.

Now note: one confession at Dayton, one confession at Goshen, and, one confession at Milford. The total time put in, eight weeks. This takes us back to our subject. While at Milford, a certain person asked Brother Thomas how many confessions we had in the meeting to that date. Brother Thomas replied, "One!" This person then, jokingly or seriously, (it matters not which), replied: "That's his limit!" Say! there is more truth than beauty in that so far as our present experience in evangelistic work is concerned. But—but—BUT—the sad part of it is, that that was not merely MY "limit;" but, at Dayton, it was, for two weeks at least, the "limit" of nine hundred members and a pastor working with me. At Goshen, it was the "limit" of six hundred members and a pastor working with me for three long weeks. At Milford it was the "limit" of two hundred members (!)—I could not learn exactly the number—and a pastor working with me for three weeks. Now, there you have it; one thousand seven hundred members with large Sunday school memberships as well, three pastors, and an evangelist worked eight weeks and one and one and one were the limit of confessions! Of course, there were extraordinary conditions, especially at Dayton, where we were only two weeks and where another week's effort by the pastor did bring a revival. But these figures are worthy of study. Where were these "extraordinary conditions?" Was the "flu" to blame? Was the evangelist to blame? Were the pastors to blame? Were the members of the churches to blame? Is the war atmosphere to blame? Or are all these things to blame? Or is something else to blame? It is an unusual condition that confronts us. Next week we shall use our best judgment in giving a candid answer to these questions and, if the medicine belongs to the evangelist, pray for him that he may take it gracefully. We certainly have been frank in telling the most painful experience we have ever experienced since we first attempted to preach the gospel.

We understand that the editor is planning a series of articles which will deal with evangelism in its various phases. We therefore felt that a full statement of our experience might be food for thought as those articles are read.

At this writing, we are in Camden, Ohio, trying for at least our "limit." But, some way or other, we have a very hopeful feeling coming over us in the two days we have been here, that we may exceed our "limit." This church is neither large in numbers nor strong in financial power. But they seem to have the spirit, the determination, the readiness to do anything in their power and the consecration that spells success, even in extraordinary times. We believe that God will bless a people such as he has here, and hope to send good news in a couple of weeks. Somewhere we have read in the good old Book, "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith?" That being true, money may sometimes be a positive hindrance to a church possessing it and poverty, a help. But, we will finish next week!

LOUIS S. BAUMAN.

Camden, Ohio, January 10, 1919.

MINISTERIAL AND CHURCH EXCHANGE

WANTED—Resident pastor for the Highland Brethren church, on or before April 1. Interested pastors please write to z MRS WILLIAM PIATT, Secretary,

R. D. 1, Marianna, Pennsylvania.

We will be open to a call to a pastorate immediately at the close of our evangelistic season, which will be probably around April or May.

A. E. THOMAS,
1159 Harrison Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

100	000
95	000
90	000
85	000
80	000
75	000
70	000
65	000
60	000
55	000
50	000
45	000
40	000
35	000
30	000
25	000
20	000
15	000
10	000
5	000

COLLEGE
ENDOWMENT

Watch Indiana Raise the Star and Push Pennsylvania Out at the Top

Business Manager's Corner

How It Is Done

The Business Manager's notes will be especially brief this week as he is afflicted just now with what would be considered by many as the "flu," and he has just now got off the couch to try to write this short message.

The Evangelist subscription list is growing rapidly and churches are winning places on the Honor Roll every week. Some people ask how to go about it to win such a place. Brother I. B. Trout tells how it was done in Berlin, Pennsylvania. He says: "First, We decided it ought to be done. 2nd. We decided to do it. 3rd. We did it." Now doesn't that look easy? Why shouldn't any church in the brotherhood proceed along similar lines and succeed equally as well? Of course at Berlin they appointed a live committee of three to make a complete canvass of the congregation to collect two dollars from those who would pay that much and then to collect whatever they could from others until they had enough to send the Evangelist into every home in the congregation where there was even one member of the Brethren church.

Three other churches that won places on the Honor Roll since we wrote our notes last week are Fillmore, California; Dallas Center, Iowa and Whittier, California. It was a commendable achievement at each place. Fillmore is one of the very newest congregations in the brotherhood and their pastor, Sylvester Lowman, decided that a Brethren church should feed on Brethren food and placed the Evangelist in every home in the church. Dallas Center, Iowa, is one of the older and more conservative congregations and Brother Porte found he had a man's job on his hands when he undertook to win a place on the Honor Roll for that church, but regardless of the size of the job he succeeded. Whittier, California, is still a new congregation. It has been but a few years since A. V. Kimmel opened the work at this place, but it had been a success from the start. It is not a mushroom church but has had a steady growth until after about five year's work sixty-three Brethren families are listed for the Evangelist which raised their subscription list ONE THOUSAND percent. And yet there are some people who think the Business Manager crazy when he said two years ago that the subscription list of the Evangelist could be increased from twenty-five hundred as it then was to SIX THOUSAND as it ought to be, and, please God, it will be before this campaign closes. Brother Kimmel did not try to force it on the Whittier church but LED them into the project gradually until he was able to secure a unanimous vote of the church to include it in the budget.

Other churches are still working on the project and still others that won a place on the Honor Roll last year are working to repeat the performance. We surely appreciate what has been done and would like to be able to find time to write a note of appreciation to each one who is helping to do this great work. It is a good work, and should be continued.

R. R. TEETER,
Business Manager.

(Continued from page 10)

pastor at Milledgeville, writes a similar letter and encloses a check of the same amount. Thank you, brethren, may others go and do likewise.

Ravenna

It is probable that a new station will be added to our present work in Kentucky. Plans are on foot at present to try out the new field at Ravenna under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Haddix and brother Thomas Allen. Brother Drushal considers the field a needy one and promising of results.

Nurse Needed

The teaching force now at Riverside will be able to handle the work, some local help having been secured, but the need of a nurse is still pressing.

In North China, where Dr. Eddy held meetings there was a subsequent mobilization of Chinese Christian activities, some of the results were as follows: In Peking 543 men and 332 women held 524 meetings and reached an audience of 61,000. In Manchuria 6,000 workers took part, and 1,000 villages were reached.

Christ's Challenge to the Church

"As ye have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men." We can never hope to reach the non-church goes until we have called out a consecrated people, who are willing to go anywhere or do anything to get men and women in touch with Christ and the church. Here is where the work must begin.

Few women have left as noble a record behind them as Florence Nightengale, and when asked what she thought was the secret of her beautiful life, she replied, "If I were to give you any information concerning my life, it would be to show how a woman of very ordinary ability has been led of God to do in his service what he has already done in her. I have worked hard and I have never refused God anything."

When we talk about arousing the church and the community through a revival effort, we must remember that we cannot undo in a week or two what sin and the devil has been carrying on for months, or even years. It is impossible to bring about an extraordinary condition or meeting in the ordinary state of mind by using just ordinary methods, or by giving no more than just the ordinary amount of prayer or service. If we would undertake to stir up others, we ourselves must first be stirred. It takes feeling to engender feeling, even as it takes fire to kindle fire.

There is told a beautiful story of a Scotch village, in which many years ago all the hearth fires had gone out. It was before the days of the match. And the only way people then had of rekindling their fires was to find some hearth where the fire was still aglow. The search of these villagers was fruitless, until at last they found a flaming hearth away up on the top of a steep hill. One by one they made their way up the hill to this hearth and lighted their peat, put it carefully in a pan, shielding it from the wind, and soon again the fires were burning throughout the entire community. Remember, friends, God has plenty of fire on the hill. Climb up into his divine presence through the path of personal consecration, and he will take the live coal from the altar and lay it upon your heart and lips, and both cleanse you from sin and empower you for service. And do not forget that it is not so much a matter of being able to do, as it is of being willing. After having looked up for the necessary strength and guidance, if we will put forth our best and honest efforts to accomplish the task, our efforts will not have been in vain. God is able for every task, and the Spirit is willing and ready to lead us into every good thing. It is up to us whether or not we really want to be and do for him. God says, "Be ye doers of the Word." What can we do?"

Pray for cleansing, pray for others, search the scriptures, walk not only in his way, but out of your way to get folks to the service. Do some singing, visiting, shining, remembering all the while that the whole joy of the Christian religion is not in the knowing, but in the doing of the good that has been revealed to us. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the Tree of Life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

Just this one illustration and I am through. At a cashier's desk in a large store there is a notice which reads, "Don't delay for one minute charging up goods that you have sold. No matter who may be calling you, the rule of this house is that you enter the charge first. It has the right of way. In spite of clerks or customers or anyone else, charge the goods. Business is business."

Christ's charge to you and to me is, "Even as the Father hath sent me, so send I you," and no matter what else may press itself upon us, if we would be about our Father's business, we must learn to put first things first, we must put ourselves into a position where we can really prove of service, and then give his charge to us the precedence in our lives. And if we will do this, we will truly be "Workers together with him," and shall be, with him, heirs to heaven's good, whether for the life that now is, or for that which is to come.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR IS THIRTY-EIGHT YEARS OLD FEBRUARY SECOND

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 5

JANUARY 29
1919

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETHREN -

DR. FRANCIS E. CLARK

Father of Christian Endeavor

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED SOCIETY AND THE WORLD UNION

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

The Training School of the Church—Editor,	2	Greetings from Boston.....	11
Editorial Review,	3	Items from the President—Prof. J. A. Garber,	11
Christian Endeavor and Our Four Year Program—Dyoll Belote,	4	Workers Together—Edwin Boardman, Jr.,	11
The Exaltation of Service Above Self—Dr. L. L. Garber,	5	Three Statements of Jesus Concerning Missions—W. R. Deeter, ..	12
The Challenge—J. A. McInturff,	6	Home Mission Notes—G. C. Carpenter,	12
The Holy Spirit as a Factor in Evangelism—L. S. Bauman,	6	Rio Cuarto, Argentina—C. F. Yoder,	12
A Creed for the New Year (Sermon)—B. T. Buraworth,	8	News from the Field,	13-15
The Christian and Temptation—M. A. Witter,	9	In the Shadow,	15
Of Special Interest to Sunday School Workers—A. D. Gnagey, ...	10	Business Manager's Corner, ...	16

EDITORIAL

The Training School of the Church

Christian Endeavor is the training school of the church. That is saying nothing new: the statement has been made so often that it has become commonplace. But it is so true that it seems new to every situation because the institution is so increasingly practicable. For more than a generation it has served Christ and the church by training the young people in religious activities and in all manner of practical Christian service. It has been so indispensable that no church has been willing to do without it in some form or other. It has been indispensable because it has always stood for the training of young people, for therein lies the hope of every church.

When Dr. Francis E. Clark, as a young pastor, had received a goodly number of young people into his church at Williston, Massachusetts, he sensed the need of activity and training for them if they were to be held for the church. An organization was effected with the idea of training for service uppermost in their minds. The young people were held and trained; and so successful did the experiment prove to be that it was tried out by other churches and soon its value became quite generally recognized.

The little organization so easily adapted itself to churches of every creed that it almost immediately became a movement of inter-denominational relations, holding great conventions and launching campaigns of national significance and inter-church interest requiring inter-church co-operation. And by means of a wisely conducted propaganda it spread rapidly around the world, following the missionary extension movement of every denomination into every new field and, in some instances, blazing the way for the church. But everywhere it has given first attention to training and equipping for service those whom the church through its evangelistic endeavors has brought new and untried into its fold. An organization with a history of such phenomenal and persistent growth and such wonderful accomplishments to its credit must be organized along lines that are vital and inspired and directed by a spirit that is divine.

It's very name indicates that it's field of endeavor is with young people. It has set itself to the task of training those who are of a trainable age. In that it is wise. Experience tells us that it is hard to teach an old dog new tricks, and if perchance it be done, in the same length of time a dozen puppies could be taught the same tricks with the prospect of longer life of service and greater efficiency acquired. The same laws of fixity and plasticity apply to the old and young of the human species. There are and must be organizations for the rescue and revitalizing of human wrecks, but such is not Christian Endeavor's prime purpose, else she could not lay claim to begin a training school. Her great aim is to so direct youthful energies, that from the outset of life they may be consecrated to Christ and dedicated to and trained for service in the church. It aims to so lead and train those who are of a plastic age that they will realize an ever increasing growth in quality of life, in holiness of aim and in efficiency of service. And this most worthy aim has been Christian Endeavor's appeal and defense. For if young people can be inspired, directed and trained so as to spend their lives for Christ and the church, there soon would be no need for rescue agencies.

Christian Endeavor is worthy of being called a training school because it gives to its young people not only theory but practice. The principle on which it works is "Learn to do by doing." And this principle is fundamental in human advancement and essential in all education. Every successful pedagog takes into account the importance of getting the pupil to act out the theory explained in order to a clear understanding of it. A mathematical principle is never thoroughly understood until the pupil follows it in the working out of a problem. Young people cannot understand the importance and worth of public prayer, nor can they acquire the ability to pray publicly by listening to lectures on the subject, they must be induced to do some actual praying. They cannot become public speakers even in a very small way merely by reading a book on how to speak in public, they must actually make attempts at speaking. They must try to do the thing they would learn to do. That is the very thing Christian Endeavor encourages—the doing of things for Christ and the church in order to acquire the ability to do them well. And so it is a most practical and efficient training school.

Christian Endeavor not only trains but it trains for the church. Loyalty to the church is written in its unchanging slogan. It never forgets the church of which it is a part; all its training is done with an eye single to the largest possible service to the church. The practice in leading the Endeavor meetings makes it possible for its young people to lead the prayer meeting of the church. Their work on the Missionary committee gives them knowledge and training for the carrying on of the church's larger missionary activity. The society's presidents are trained to conduct the business of the church, its secretaries are trained for record-keeping and its treasurers are prepared for managing the finances. Christian Endeavor is to the church what domestic science schools are to the cook and housekeeper, and what agricultural schools are to the farmer. Young people get in Christian Endeavor both the theory and practice (in some measure, at least) of nearly all the varied forms of church organization, government and activity.

Christian Endeavor has been a very loyal and worthy child of the church, always obedient, active, unselfish, co-operative, ever planning, organizing and training not for self, but for Christ and the church. Everywhere it is a part of and works in the interest of some church. It trains young people for the church. It encourages the devotional life in order that young church members may be more genuinely Christian, teaches tithing, personal work, temperance and community service in order to bring its young charges to the church with the deepest consecration, the truest obedience and the greatest usefulness possible. And for all this devotion to the church and training in its behalf it asks only a place of continued service in training the young church of God, a service which, thus far, no other organization has been able to do so well.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Has your church sent its report to your Four Year Program Director?

Brother Hubbard writes a letter this week from Washington, D. C., where he is engaged in commercial work.

He who is unwilling to suffer for principle will some day suffer for the want of it.—Rams Horn.

Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, that is the stuff life is made of.—Franklin.

Don't overlook President Furry's announcement on page 16 concerning the opening of the second semester at Ashland College. That is where Brethren young people should be.

The editor noticed last week after the paper had gone to press that some items of personal mention had been left out in the "assembling." They are included this week.

The series of articles being run on "Evangelism" will not appear in the order in which they were planned, because the "flu" has interfered with the prompt arrival of some, yet they will all be in due time and we hope will prove of great value to the brotherhood.

Brother W. R. Deeter's "College Notes" show that the young preachers as well as the professors at Ashland College are keeping in touch with the practical side of the ministry as they are studying the theory. They are contributing a real service to the church as they make their way through school.

We have spoken editorially about Christian Endeavor, but would urge that you do not fail to read the "Greetings from Boston" as well as everything else on that page. Read also Brother Belote's article on the "Four Year Program Page." Christian Endeavor is worthy of this prominence at least once in a year.

Brother DeLozier is using his rare command of languages to good effect in the Allentown high schools. And we dare say that from this community service will come, as has already been noticed, and in more ways than one, fruitage that will be abiding. The pastor's opportunities for service are not limited to the pulpit and the homes of his parish.

You will notice the change in arrangement of certain departments this week. "Our Devotional" is given all of page 9, "The Sunday School" is given page 12 and "Missions" is put on page 13. The putting of the mission page next to the "News from the Field" does not detract from its value, but rather enhances it. For these letters from the churches are more widely read than any other part of the paper. And much of the material on the mission page will be closely akin to the news department. This week "Missions" bristles with good things. However, there are and will be good news in all the departments and every page will be kept valuable, so don't fail to read any part. We ask especially that our readers will make the "Devotional" of real personal value.

The Warsaw, Indiana, Sunday school is the first to follow the example of Louisville in offering to pay for a "cut" for front page. Brother Albert Ronk their pastor, writes that they like the idea and that a check for a sufficient amount will be sent in a few days. Thanks to dear old Warsaw, our old "home sweet home." Who will be the next?

Keep on sending in your church news. Everybody wants to know what your church is doing. And please, send your reports in time to reach the editor not later than Friday noon, if you wish them in the following week's issue. Address all matter for publication to Editor, The Brethren Evangelist, Ashland, Ohio. Business matters should be sent to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company.

Prof. J. A. Garber was with Brother Kolb and his Nappanee Brethren on Sunday, January 26. The occasion was the graduation of a class in Expert Endeavor. We shall expect a report soon. During Brother Garber's absence from the Ashland church of which he is pastor, Dr. Miller preached one of his characteristically inspiring and instructive sermons.

Brother Ashman gives a good report from Sunnyside this week. He and his loyal people certainly improved their time while the ban was on. It's no small thing to pay off half a church debt amounting to $3,000, when you can't even have a meeting. And they are planning some aggressive work on the Four Year Program as soon as Mr. Flu leaves the community.

It's just as popular as "flu," this getting on the Evangelist Honor Roll, and it will have just the opposite effect on your church work. So don't try to avoid it. Three more churches report they have "got it" for the second time. See the Business Manager's Corner. Brother Teeter is tickled over the in-rush of subscriptions, and why shouldn't he be? We are too. It makes the paper more valuable.

Brother Shively has reason to be gratified over the splendid financial record of the Masontown church and Sunday school, for it indicates in a large measure the depth of consecration. That "Loyal Men's Bible Class" is certainly true to its name. It must have made Brother and Sister Shively feel good to have such a prominent part on the Christmas program. We can sympathize with you, Brother Shively.

A letter to the Brethren Publishing Company in December has been brought to our attention. It states, aside from the request of a change in address for his paper that Brother M. V. Garrison of South Bend, Indiana, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Campbell church of Michigan and that his address will be Lake Odessa, Michigan. That part of his letter intended for publication will find a place in our next issue.

This week we have an encouraging letter from Brother Paul Miller of Spokane. It is encouraging because he states that the "flu" has not permanently hurt the church. They are soon to be in an evangelistic campaign with Brother Ashman as preacher. Those whose hearts have been touched by the heavenly Father to help in the building of a church at this place should send their money now.

In the city of Chicago, for 1914, there were 3,614 divorces to 33,897 marriages; for 1915, 4,116 divorces to 31,509 marriages. Sixty-four percent were childless. Over 20 percent secured divorces during the first year. Only 3 percent were home dwellers. The cases for 1914-1915 affected 4,337 minor children, of whom 1,999 were girls and 2,338 boys. By far the greater number of those divorced were introduced at dances rather than at home or at church.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

Christian Endeavor and Our Four-Year Program

By Dyoll Belote

At our last General Conference the writer was surprised to overhear a discussion among some of the younger ministry of the church as to the feasibility of the Efficiency plans laid down by the United Society of Christian Endeavor. Now it appeals to me that these brethren are either ignorant concerning these plans of the United Society, or else they have never tried them out to see what results their inauguration will bring. It is in the hope that some may be stirred to an effort to reach a larger number of these goals—and which are a part of our "Four Year Programme" goals—that this discussion is written.

May I take our Programme, item by item. First, we have the endeavor set before us to attempt to deepen and strengthen the spiritual life of the membership of our beloved fraternity. How shall we do it? Of course we will have no difference of opinion, at least not on some things that must be done. There are two universally accepted requirements for the deepening and quickening of spiritual life—absolutely necessary to the maintenance of healthy spiritual existence. These are Bible study and prayer. If ours is anything like a common experience in the ministry, then we certainly need to find some way to get people to give time somewhere to the study of the Bible and to prayer. For it is a sure thing that they do not attend the mid-week prayer meetings (too tired to come, or it is a long way from their home to the meeting place, or else they are indisposed and cannot come). Now all these arrangements can be largely overcome by securing the pledge of these parties to become Comrades of the Quiet Hour in the Christian Endeavor society. And the purpose of this movement is to secure the promise—and its keeping—by the members to spend at least fifteen minutes each day in Bible study and meditation and prayer. And we know how the family altar has disappeared from many homes, then why not urge the private observance of this devotional period?

Again, for an intelligent and zealous heralding of our "distinctive plea, principles and practices" we must have a constituency which is acquainted with the Word. Again the Christian Endeavor prayer meetings offer an opportunity for systematic Bible study at the Sunday evening meetings and in the home preparation for participation in these meetings. And the Brethren church courts the commitment of its membership to honest, consistent Bible study, for we claim that an unbiased study of God's Word will make Brethren. And the very pledge of the Christian Endeavor society calls for denominational loyalty.

We have been frequently warned of the constant depletion of the ministry of the church, with its certain ultimate results unless arrangements are made to recruit men to take the places made vacant in the ranks by death and other causes. And again the Christian Endeavor movement comes forward to assist the church to overcome this almost universally prevalent state of affairs by the workings of the Life Work Recruit department of the society. Our programme calls for the gaining of 75 new workers for the ministry and distinctly Christian work until 1920. Where are these recruits coming from if not from and through the work of the Christian Endeavor society? At least this department of the society's activities may be made an effective assistant to any other plans formulated for recruiting the ministry.

Lack of space forbids me to enter at any great length into a discussion of all the ways in which the Christian Endeavor movement with its efficiency plans will prove a real factor in the attaining of the goals of OUR Four Year Programme. But of the fact I, at least, am certain; though I have not been able to accomplish as large results in every congregation as I am convinced is possible where every member of the society enters heartily into the working of the larger plans of the movement.

It may be that some will think or argue that the Christian Endeavor movement is too methodical or mechanical, that it sets too many objectives with limit, instead of just "expecting great things from the Lord." May it not be that we have been too long aiming at nothing—and hitting it too frequently. Personally I have felt that the objectives of the Christian Endeavor society have always been reasonable, Biblical and yet flexible enough to admit of expansion as the ardour and activity of the Endeavorers have made expansion necessary.

I therefore stand as one to sponsor the "Efficiency plans"—or any other plans—that the United Society may propose. I may not always be able to attain the objectives it sets in the work of my own congregational unit, but I still believe that "Not failure, but low aim is crime." I cannot compel my hearers to accept all that I may preach to them, but that does not excuse me from holding out the highest ideals possible for their emulation. And so I shall continue to attempt to accomplish some good, as much as possible "For Christ and the Church" by joining in most heartily in the working out of every plan which offers any opportunity to further and hasten the accomplishment of the great purpose of God in sending Jesus Christ into the world, viz., to fit men here and now for largest service in the kingdom in its earthly manifestation in the hearts and lives of men, and for fullest enjoyment of the kingdom in its final consummation in the presence of God.

TO THE MARYLAND-VIRGINIA WORKERS

A report from every church, in time to be properly registered is our hope and prayer. Fill out the first card in your Hand Book at once, and that report in itself is one big credit mark for your work. Please do not fail to report because your work has been hindered by the "flu" for we are all in the same boat. Let us thank God that it is no worse, and move forward in his work. Let the cards roll in now.

L. G. WOOD, District Director,
1118 Gilmer Ave., N. W.,
Roanoke, Virginia.

Four Million starving refugees in Western Asia are calling to us for their very existence. Most of them are decimated, exiled, homeless widows and orphans, who are dying at the rate of 50,000 a month. These sorely stricken folks have been the victims of what Henry Morgenthau, former U. S. Ambassador to Turkey, describes as the "single greatest horror ever perpetrated in the history of humanity." Will the Brethren church do her share of this stupendous task of binding up the wounds of those who have fallen among thieves?

GENERAL ARTICLES

THE EXALTATION OF SERVICE ABOVE SELF

By Prof. L. L. Garber, Litt. D.

"It is a disgrace to die rich," was the favorite statement of a much monied millionaire. In his living, this man carried out in large degree the sentiment of his saying, and he is consequently known far and wide for his constructive charity and princely benefactions. Multitudes are happier, wiser, better, because of his attitude toward others. Museums, hospitals, art galleries, public libraries, simplified spelling, constructive movements in public education, the Hague Peace Palace, and the present momentous movement to organize the world into a League of Nations so that the war god may be dethroned, the Janus gates forever closed, the crowning step in political organization be achieved, and the vast energies of humanity turned from waste and destruction into co-operative peaceful accomplishments,—all bear eloquent testimony to efforts of this man to serve others rather than to gratify merely his own personal, social and sensuous appetites.

Akin to this man in spirit is another also of our own time, of quite different type. This man gives not great wealth but his unique genius and untiring efforts in earnest and useful service. He too feels that his life opportunities and what he has should not be wasted or squandered upon himself. No "pink teas," fashionable follies, "innocent pastimes," or custom-made inanities consume his energies and waste his hours. He works when he can, sleeps when he must, eats to live, recreates when recreation promotes strength and efficiency. For the varied and multifarious contributions of this serving genius to human comfort, welfare, and progress, we are indebted in more ways and in greater measure than can be detailed and specified in many pages.

Suggestive and typical examples of the passion for service are these two men: the one of the constructive consecration of wealth to service, the other of a like consecration of time, talent, and opportunity. The wealthy, indeed, are awaking to a new sense of their social responsibility and opportunity. They realize more definitely that they are not so much owners as stewards. They feel more keenly that of the abundance they possess much came as a happy accident, as a fortuitous gift, or perhaps as the partial result of the working of imperfect social arrangements. They appreciate more than ever the fact that the whole social organization, that every special organization promoting human betterment—as the church and Sunday School, that the high morals, the clean thinking, the industry and effort of every individual who in any way contributed to the happiness, comfort, or welfare of our common humanity, each and all have been partners and co-workers in creating what any or all of us are privileged to call our own and use as such. Hence these wealthy are less haughty, less wasteful, less selfish, less self-centered, but more considerate, more thoughtful, more ambitious and energetic and patient in their efforts to consecrate themselves and theirs to a service that rises above self.

The conditions created by the late war strongly accentuated and increased the desire for service. Old customs were abandoned, traditions shattered, habits changed, so that the innate longings of men and women had an opportunity to assert themselves. Many who heretofore had felt it their duty to do nothing or found nothing to do have felt for the first time the joy of activity and the satisfaction of creative effort. Out of this they have acquired the invaluable habit of industry so that from this time forward the customary social futilities, the card table, the frivolous talk, and the petty round of nothings will seem empty as they are. Anew have their days been consecrated to service in great

Caught up in this same passion for service have been not only the calloused and indifferent, but also the great mass of men and women everywhere. Who can calculate the number of their gifts or measure the magnitude of their sacrificial service! Men and women of all ranks, villages, townships, counties, and organizations, have contributed a great ideal with a generosity and magnanimity in comparison with which all former giving seems trifling and small. More beautiful and more significant still is the similar gift by these persons of themselves to great causes. These number in their shining ranks men and women of all races, creeds, and conditions. Their example and service is beyond praise and make us glad and proud to belong to a brotherhood of humanity which may be attached to such glorious issues and stimulated to such magnanimous expressions of human endeavor and service.

"Ah, there is something here,
Unfathomed by the cynic's sneer,
Something that gives our feeble light
A high immunity from night,
Something that leaps life's narrow bars
To claim a birthright with the hosts of heaven;
A seed of sunshine that can leaven
Our earthly dulness with the beam of stars.
And glorify our clay
With light from fountains elder than the Day;
A vexing, forward-reaching sense
Of some more noble permanence;
A light across the sea,
Which haunts the soul and will not let it be,
Still beaconing from the heights of undegenerate fears."

A new age of service has dawned upon the world. Nationally as well as individually the tendency to exalt service above self is manifest. We are hearing strange glad notes these days; notes that ring with a lofty idealism; strong notes from world leaders such as Woodrow Wilson, Lloyd George, Premier Clemenceau. To the old selfish standpoint politician the idea that the power and resources of a nation might be used for any purpose other than selfish and private ones or be employed to right or avenge other than some personal concrete injury was unthinkable. To such as he the world is really a crowd of aggressive grasping individuals, each trying to get as much as possible for himself, and hence it is unwise and dangerous to act from any other principle. But a nobler and truer ideal is in the ascendency. Appeals to the old selfishness and isolation fall upon deaf ears. The gospel of Love is becoming universalized. As nations we are coming to feel that we must feed the hungry, clothe the naked, succor the distressed, help the unfortunate, see that truth, justice, and honesty be made national principles, and demand that peace and good will prevail between nations. This will mean the exaltation of service above self, or at least the exaltation of self through service, and to this high plane we are rising, confident that as "man is incurably religious," so he is also incurably idealistic.

? ? LET US ASK OURSELVES ? ?

Does the good and the ideal need to be sugar-coated with free lunches, entertainments, and vaudeville in order to appeal to men?

Have we made the church and religion too cheap?

Have our concessions to physical gratifications and social standards destroyed the power of our gospel?

How can the church adjust its demand so as to call out the ideal passion for service and arouse and utilize the heroic in men and women?

The Challenge

By J. A. McInturff

These are days of extreme trials, thrones are falling, kings exiled, governments crumbling and the social order shadowed by Bolshevism. Never before has the world been in such a "time of trouble." This is the day of testing. Old things are passing and what shall remain? Shall the church remain? Yes, but it must change. The Protestant church has ceased to protest and has joined hands with the very "beast" it once saved men from. It has lost discipline and is corrupted because any one who will "pay" can be a member. Character is no test of continued membership. The church has lost its standing because the world is in the church. She is weak because her "samples" are no better than the world offers at a lower price. She has lost her Bible in that she fails to teach its contents and is unable to present a consistent claim to the Book as authority. How many churches can open the Bible and square their practice by the Word? How does the modern life of a church member compare with the life and teaching of the "example?" There are vital questions because they present the world view of the church. If the church is to remain she must change, in teaching, practice and character. The challenge of the church today is not to do but to be. We have long tried to do that which we were not, let us change and be what we ought and then do.

Now the question is, has the church the power to throw off the corruption and the moral degeneracy with the breaking of the chains which have been drawn to a painful grip in the last few years? Can she re-establish her charities which are now in the hands of societies. Will she awake and save herself from the destructive critic or the legal and political Rome? If the church awakes the questions of adaptation and community interest with church attendance will solve themselves. The church must change. Men will work with something alive but they reluctantly handle the dead.

The needed change must come in a new and higher spirituality. There must be a new presentation of the Bible by our new life. A new seriousness must possess us, with a deeper interest. Real faith will stand, and the church which will square with the Book need not fear. We must protest and condemn the claims of sin, and especially the black sin which comes as a "religion" which would rob us of our faith and liberty with our Bible.

From all over our land we hear the cry of church indifference. Leading church papers plead for the young people to "return." Finances are wrecked, missions lagging. Fear is on every page of the papers coming to my desk. What is wrong? Nothing, this is just what we are. Parents are indifferent and sinful; church members live in sin; not a few never pray; they have a kind of belief (?) in Christ but no atonement, believe in a kind of ethical heaven but no hell and live a kind of Judas-life—that is the condition. The church must get on her knees. I would not be surprised if we must go even deeper before the change which will not only make the church more spiritual, but will purify and cleanse it so that it will go forward triumphantly. The future church will be clean and pure. This is the day when we are being tried and the pure of heart will stand. In the coming years the church will come to her own, and will serve men. "I am with you to the end."

The Holy Spirit as a Factor in Evangelism

By Louis S. Bauman

"That's his limit" has been the sneer that has caused more than one faithful pastor or evangelist to feel as though he had missed his calling at the close of his pastorate, or evangelistic effort, on which he has spent his best heart's blood almost in vain. But now, let us go deeper into the failures in our present day evangelism.

First, let us consider for a moment some of the excuses that are often offered for smallness of results. We frequently hear it given as an excuse that the community in which the revival was held was not sympathetic. However, the greatest revival this world ever saw was on the day of Pentecost, when the preaching of a single day "added unto them (the church) about three thousand souls" (Acts 2:41). And we will have to confess that the very city where stiff-necked Jewish mobs surged to and fro, crying, "Away with him! Away with him!" but fifty days before, and where he trod the winepress alone, was hardly to be considered as a sympathetic community. The gospel is noted as having made its most tremendous strides in communities antagonistic, rather than in those sympathetic.

Sometimes, failure is laid at the feet of "an unpopular preacher." But on the day of Pentecost, they had a revival, and we dare say that the most unpopular one of the twelve was the principal spokesman of that day. The popular young man would more likely have been John, whose influence with the Jews was greater than that of any other; while, Peter—well! had they so soon forgotten his base denial of seven weeks before?

Sometimes, lack of organization is blamed for failure. But let us remember the terrible disorganization that followed in that little band of disciples after the crucifixion of their Leader. There was nothing that we would call organization on the day of Pentecost save the informal organization of a prayer meeting; yet, they had a mighty revival!

Man is born to excuse-making "as the sparks fly upward." And the more the blame lies with himself, the greater his inclination to make excuses for his failures. The "flu" comes in handy these days. It assists us to get rid of some of the old time-worn excuses. But when all is said and done, there is just one great outstanding reason for practically all failure in evangelistic work so long as the God of Pentecost is still alive. (We would not go so far as to say that there is but the one cause for failure; for, we read that "Jesus himself did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief"). That one great outstanding reason is the failure of the church (by which word we mean laity, pastor, evangelist, deacons, and all the rest of the organization) to become a channel through which God can pour forth the power of the Holy Ghost.

An American clergyman once invited a friend, who was an English clergyman, to accompany him on a trip to see the great Niagara Falls. Standing at the foot of those Falls, the American clergyman pointed to the vast fall of water, saying, "There is the greatest unused power in the world!"

The Englishman answered: "Ah! my brother! Not so! The greatest unused power in the world is the unused power of the Holy Ghost!" And he was right.

"And, behold," said Jesus, "I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high" (Luke 24:29). "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me" (Acts 1:8). And on the day of Pentecost, that promise was fulfilled, and the "power" fell. We all know the result. And we must be persuaded that the great lack of the professional church today is to put herself in the place where she can again become the recipient of that same old-time power. We have manufactured a lot of modern machinery and tried to substitute it for that "power," but in vain. Surely, God is able to infill with power today as then, whenever he can find a vessel meet for the filling.

The Holy Spirit is the mightiest of all factors in evangelism, because his presence in the church means personal rightness with God and men on the part of the membership of the church, without which there can be no great revival. Said a Brahmin to a Christian missionary, "I have found you out. You are not as good as your Book. If you Christians were as good as your Book, you would in five years conquer India for Christ!" "Physician, heal THYSELF!" It is useless for the church to ask others to yield to the Spirit until she herself does so. Even David, under the law, understood the real secret in the life of a successful soul-winner: Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy Holy Spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation. THEN will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee" (Ps. 51:11-13).

The presence of the Holy Spirit in evangelistic effort means united effort, without which no real victory is possible. They had a revival on the day of Pentecost; but, "they were all with one accord in one place" (Acts 2:1). "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. * * * for there the Lord commanded the blessing" (Ps. 133:1, 3). There must be peace in God's house before its message of peace can be effective before the world of unbelievers.

The presence of the Holy Spirit in the congregation means unwavering faith in the power of God; and, likewise a lack of self-confidence which gets the eye of Christ. "Without me, ye can do nothing." When the Holy Spirit is ignored, the tendency is to exalt the evangelist or the pastor, or the church itself, instead of Jesus Christ, and God is mightily grieved. Jesus said of the Holy Spirit, that when he should come, "He shall glorify me" (John 16:13). We have seen whole cities talking about, and glorifying an evangelist, while the name of Christ was hardly mentioned by the glorifying multitude! No wonder modern evangelism has "a black eye!"

The presence of the Holy Spirit brings forth a real passion for the unsaved, which is so essential to evangelism. A man of Ethiopia was sitting in his chariot reading Isaiah the prophet, but utterly without an understanding of the message of the prophet. "Then the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot. And Philip RAN thither to him" (Acts 8:29, 30)—most certainly he did! When the Spirit has his place, there is no loafing on a job like that! "I say the truth in Christ, I lie not," cried the greatest evangelist and soul-winner of all time, "my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost, that I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart; for, I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh" (Rom. 9:1-3)! When a spirit like that—a passion like that,—dwells in a congregation of believers, a revival is inevitable. But that spirit has never been known except where the Holy Spirit is recognized and honored.

The presence of the Holy Spirit means a revival built upon a true knowledge of the plan of salvation,—the preaching of "the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation" (Rom. 1:16). The true revival is founded upon the preaching of the great fundamental truths of the gospel, and not merely the excitement of warnings and exhortations, as necessary as the latter may be. The true revival must establish men in the faith, and not bring forth merely to spring up for a season and then fall away. Now, the Holy Spirit doesn't waste much time on philosophy, sociology, science, art, etc. Listen! "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself. * * * He shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you" (John 16:13, 14). Yes, "The Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, * * * shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, WHATSOEVER I HAVE SAID UNTO YOU" (John 14:26). Study carefully the matchless sermon of Pentecost, that brought forth that greatest of revivals, and you will find that it was because Peter stood squarely upon "the impregnable rock of the Holy Scriptures" that conviction swept over that multitude and brought it in penitence to its knees.

The Holy Spirit is a mighty factor in all successful evangelism because where he is you will ever find a spirit of enthusiasm. Cold storage plants with steeples on top turn swiftly into hot houses with ten thousand windows open toward heaven's warm and healing rays, when the Spirit of God is present. On Pentecost, it waxed so warm that the frigid unbeliever mockingly said: "These men are full of new wine!" They spake truer than they knew. It certainly was not the old "wine" that did the work on Pentecost. How many times I have been in a church that only changed its frozen face long enough to frown when some old-fashioned saint wandered in long enough to shout, "Amen!"—yes, how many times have I been in such a church and wished that they might somehow get "full of new wine!" "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

The Holy Spirit instantly calls for the spirit of prayer, whenever his presence is felt. We can never forget the story of the child with the dumb spirit, foaming and gnashing with his teeth, described by the sacred writers, just after relating the story of Christ's transfiguration. The disciples utterly failed to cast forth the dumb and tormenting spirit, when just a word from the Master healed him perfectly. "Why could not we cast him out?" they asked. The Master replied, "This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting" (Mark 9:29). And does not this hint to us the story of our oftentimes defeat? But the presence of the Spirit of God means prayer; as it is written, "The Spirit himself maketh intercession for us with groanings that cannot be uttered. And he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God" (Rom. 8:26, 27).

The presence of the Holy Spirit assures the spirit of testimony. "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me" (Acts 1:8). The spirit of testimony is a factor of tremendous power in evangelism. "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost and began to speak;" "and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the Word of God with boldness;" "on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost, for they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God." Thus and thus and thus do we constantly read in the Acts that the presence of the Holy Spirit unloosed the tongues of the disciples, and started them forth testifying for God. "And they overcame him (Satan) by the blood of the Lamb and the word of their testimony" (Rev. 12:11).

The presence of the Holy Spirit means surrender to the will and work of God, whether it means constancy in attendance upon the services of the church, or the going forth to do personal work, or the engaging in definite and prevailing prayer all the night long. "The Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him" (Acts 5:32). Surrender to the will and work of God means evangelism and revival in any church where it may be found.

We now hear some one say, "Ah! It is doubtless true that it is the lack of real experimental fellowship with the Holy Ghost that accounts for the small 'limit' of so many of our revivals. But, it is a subject so full of mysticism that we shun it!" My brethren, we grant you that there is much of mystery about it. Nevertheless, we know that something happened on the day of Pentecost, and that something that happened then can happen again. O, that something that happened then, we want to happen again! We do not understand the mysterious power of electricity, either; but, we harness it and we use it. We do not understand the mysterious power that enables the hand to obey the brain, but we make the hand obey the brain,—we use the power we understand not. So we can harness and use the Holy Spirit, the mighty power of God, though the great mystery of that indwelling power we may not fully understand. God has very definitely set forth in his word the means whereby we may become the channels for the old-time power of the Holy

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

A Creed For The New Year. By B. T. Burnworth

TEXT: I believe, help thou mine unbelief. Mark 9:24.

The familiar narrative found in Mark 9:14-29, describing an agonizing father bringing his epileptic boy first to the disciples and then to the Master for healing, has an important lesson for us just now while the new year is yet young. The particular truth that I am concerned about here is that set forth in the twenty-fourth verse, teaching the importance of belief. Without faith it is impossible to accomplish anything of importance. Never was a treatment more justified in its operation than that administered by the Master to this too importunate clamor for bodily healing, which resulted in turning his attention from physical distress to a sense of need and a contrite prayer for the grace of faith. Let us take a spiritual invoice thus early in the new year and see what we really believe as a working creed for 1919.

1. I Believe in My Job.

Of course a man always has a job and a woman has a position whatever be the nature of that work. But nothing takes the sparkle out of the eye, the elasticity out of the step, the vigor out of life, like the feeling that we have a poor little insignificant task. I believe God has a job for every man, and one that is big; he has no small ones in his repertoire. It is our business to find that job and do it. I recall how in my first pastorate of being told of a wonderful janitor they once had at the church, a kind of janitor now almost extinct, who took pride in keeping the house of God. The Psalmist was right when he exalted that job by saying "I would rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness for a season. The sexton should be the best man in the community, for a good sexton is worth more than a poor deacon. Very few janitors have ever been as big as this so-called 'small job.'"

My job may seem to be unimportant but the important thing about it is that it is my job. If I were an usher I would study the art of ushering. I would endeavor to seat the aged as comfortably as possible, with a view to their proper distance from the register or radiator, and also from the pulpit if they did not hear well. And I would use discretion in seating young people who have not developed the faculty of self-control and by tact I would try to see that their behavior was proper. Yes, I would believe in my job thoroughly, and do believe in it. And I will do my work the best I can, knowing that no one can do my work for me, and no one can take my job. The other man has his own job and must do his own work as I must mine.

When Mr. Roosevelt was President he seemed so cheerful and so carefree that he was asked how it was that he could hold such a responsible position and not be careworn. "He replied, 'I like my job.'" If I were a member of the choir, I would sing to the glory of God. If I were a Sunday school teacher I would consider the most important thirty minutes of the week those during which I stand before my class. May God keep us true to our tasks, to ourselves and true to God, then I know we shall be happy and successful this year.

2. I Believe in My Fellow Man.

To love faith in my fellows is to do myself greater harm than them. There is a vast difference whether I believe all men are thieves until proven honest, or whether I believe all are honest until proven thieves. The one makes a world full of thieves and the other makes it full of honest men, which it is. Preachers can testify that everywhere you go you will find good people; people who are good neighbors; Samaritans to the afflicted; large, tender, generous hearted folks, true friends to men and true to God. They are in every community. God did not segregate the good and the bad and leave any one community wholly bad. Everywhere there are people worthy of confidence. I want greater faith in common humanity. Not to have it, is to be out of joint with society; important as I may seem to be I must get back in line. I believe, therefore, that there is no more good in all men than we may know or are willing to admit, and as the salvation of many men may depend upon our confidence in them, let us believe in them. Because of the wonderful hope of salvation I believe in my fellow men.

3. I Believe in My Church

I can't say that without qualification, for it is not a perfect church because it is made up of individuals like you and me. But despite the fact, I believe it is the most powerful organization on earth ever will be. There are more in it that are good than bad and always it has enlisted the very best wherever it has been established. I believe in the church because it has been a great white shining light throughout the ages, flooding the pathway for the feet of the struggling and straying. It is the organic union of like-minded peoples, that by precept and example has instilled more courage and good cheer and pointed out the way of salvation more plainly than any other institution known to man. It is the one original divine institution. From it there has gone out a rich influence that has been the inspiration of all other benevolent and beneficent organizations, from the Y. M. C. A., Red Cross, W. C. T. U., to the Prohibition party. The church to the sinner is like America to the homesick khaki-clad soldier; it is both home and mother. For the church is the mother of all good and is the home of the soul.

I believe in my church because I believe she is going to make many changes in the near future for her own good and that of her posterity. She will throw off her swaddling clothes of tradition and clothe herself only in the essential garments of salvation. That change will make no longer impossible salvation to those that cannot pronounce our "Shibboleth." Yes, I believe the church is the branch God has thrown in the bitter stream of civilization and it will sweeten, purify and sanctify every life and institution through which it is permitted to flow.

4. I Believe in My Home.

I have been in homes where I had my private bed and bath and sat at the table on full leather diners. My home is not like that. I have been in homes where there were no carpets, little furnishings of any kind, children ragged and unkempt. My home is not like that, because both of these homes are extreme. My home is just an average one. I believe I could change my profession and add to its luxury, but after all its the best home on earth for me. I don't know that my home would suit some folks, but it contains some things that can't be purchased on the bargain counters of the world. Its motto is service, and its reward is love. Many a boy across the sea is longing for home now. Some have a vision of a home on a boulevard or the avenue, some of the humblest cottage, but they all make the same kind of a heartache. It does a man good to be homesick at least once in his life. I believe in my home because it is the place of dignified parenthood and sanctified childhood, a place where God is no stranger and where the dust is kept off of some of the Bibles all the time. It is an average Christian American home and I believe every man should have a home.

5. Lastly, I Believe in My Country.

First, because it is made up of my fellow countrymen no better and no worse than you and I, and I can't go back on either of us. It may even be the best country on earth

(Continued on page 16)

OUR DEVOTIONAL

The Christian and Temptation

By M. A. Witter

OUR SCRIPTURE—James 1:1-15

"My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. . . Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him. Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man: but every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed (vs. 2, 3, 12-14).

OUR MEDITATIONS

The certainty of temptation. No Christian can escape being tempted. There is no such thing as living above the plane of temptation. Christ was tempted though living a perfect life and all who follow in His leading will find that the same evil one is still as ready to attempt the ruin of Christ's followers as he was to wreck the plan and purpose of the Lord himself.

As the Christian advances in the spiritual life growing in the likeness of his Master he will find the old temptations of former days loosing their attraction. He may overcome the temptation to gross immorality and the baser forms of sin so that they no longer appeal to him. But in the room of the former temptations there appear new and more subtle attractions aimed at the fellowship between the believer and his Lord with the purpose of wrecking that fellowship.

A trinity of tempters. Satan, the leader and ruler of the hosts of wickedness, never wearies in the use of his original weapon, the lie. "He is a liar from the beginning." "He is the father of lies." "He is also called 'the great accuser.' He aims his lies at the loving purpose of God in the salvation of man. He falsely accuses God to man charging him with unkindness, indifference, or even with cruelty. The evil one would have us believe that all of the suffering and heartache of the great was the result of God's indifference and unconcern. He would charge God with being either helpless and impotent in the face of great problems or heartless and cruel in withholding relief from the sufferers. The tempter points to the wicked man "spreading himself like a green bay tree" and whispers that sin is no barrier to success. Again he points to the suffering child of God and suggests that that is the way God rewards the faithful. In a thousand cunning ways his cunningly devised lies seek to embitter the heart of man against the loving heavenly Father that maketh all things to work together for good to them that love him.

The world which lies in the wicked one joins in his attack on the love and faith of the believer by presenting all of its alluring attractions and by its extravagant promises of pleasure, gain, success, popularity, and power. With its countless attractions varied to every condition of life the world does not fail to make its appeal in some form or another to every child of God. To those on lower planes the world allures to indulgence and excesses, to another class the temptation is to selfish and heartless application to gain, to still another the appeal is to do the good thing and the kind thing for the sake of the applause it will bring, to another class the world offers its praise in exchange for a surrendered conscience. And to all of these allurements the flesh, the old carnal nature adds its appeal. How the flesh shrinks from every sacrifice, how the flesh seeks ease, how the old carnal pride responds to the world's appeal and promises of praise and success, how willing is the flesh to join hands with the world and the devil in deception and every wicked device that would further the selfish plans and purposes,

The focal point at which all temptation is aimed. Temptation may assume a million different forms and may seek to allure, to drive, to crush, to intimidate, to benumb, to harden, or in countless other ways to cause the tempted to sin; but whatever the form of the temptation or the form of the sin to which it leads, the ultimate aim of every temptation is to break up the loving confiding faith of the believer in his God. That end may be cunningly concealed but only there can the world, the flesh, or the devil really win a victory over a human soul. When the tempted yields to the temptation and sins the guilt of that sin causes the sinner to dread the face of God, and that sin stands as a barrier between the soul and God until it is removed by repentance and confession. This is true of every sin, and herein lies the terrible consequences of sin,—SIN BREAKS THE FELLOWSHIP WITH GOD. It matters little in the final outcome whether the sin is one of a loathsome nature abhorred by all or whether it is a sin of more favorable standing from the viewpoint of the multitude of men, if it succeeds in separating a soul from the blessed fellowship with God, then its fiendish purpose is accomplished.

"The way of escape." When the malignant design of the tempter is understood it will be easy to recognize as temptations everything that tends to interrupt full confidence in God and full assurance of his loving favor. Fellowship with God maintained unbroken means victory over the tempter. The channels of communication with God must be kept open through constant use. Worshipful reading of the Word of God daily is one of the channels of communication. By worshipful reading is meant that reading in which we wait with rapt eagerness to hear the voice of God in every line as we read. The reader that takes up the Bible with the prayer, "Speak to my heart, Lord Jesus," will not proceed far until he finds abundant reason for praise and thanksgiving. Here is another channel of communication that must be kept in constant use. Praise and thanksgiving, not the formal and cold rendering of dutiful thanks but the adoring, worshipful thanks that looks up to the heavenly Father with fervent heartfelt praise and gratitude for all things, but above all for just himself, for his love as revealed in Jesus Christ, and for his willingness through the Holy Spirit to reproduce in the believer the Christ life. Who can hear the promises of God and understand such loving provision made for his welfare without fervently praying that God might have his way fully in his life. And who having come to realize the fulness of the salvation that is in Christ will not be eager to carry that salvation to just as many of his fellowmen as possible! Here then are some of the ways of maintaining that sweet unbroken fellowship that means victory over the tempter, worshipful Bible study, fervent heartfelt praise, the prayer of faith, the life of full surrender and of faithful witnessing for Christ.

OUR PRAYER

Our heavenly Father, we thank thee that thou hast promised not to suffer us to be tempted above that which we are able to bear, and for the way of escape that is provided at every time of temptation. We thank thee that we can know through the revelation given in thy Word that thou art not the source of temptation but that thou art ever ready to give complete victory when the tempter assails us. We thank thee that we can know that thou dost permit the temptation only that we may be blessed in the victory over the tempter. We pray that thou wilt ever help us through the Holy Spirit to recognize the tempter in every attack that he may make upon us. We pray that we may ever be mindful of thy presence and thy promises just when we need thee most. Grant, we pray thee, that every temptation may serve only to make more real and more blessed the fellowship with thyself and that the victory that thou givest us may bring glory to thy blessed name.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

By A. D. Gnagey

I have reasons to believe that others besides the regular readers of THE BRETHREN TEACHER will be interested in the contents of a publication which has for its object the promotion of the cause for which the Sunday school exists. In this brief review I wish to call attention to the Review Section which was added to THE TEACHER beginning with the last issue of the year-1918. This section is developed to the discussion of themes vital and fundamental to the growth and development of the Sunday school. In its enlarged form THE TEACHER covers a much wider field than formerly when practically all of its pages were given to the treatment of the regular Sunday school lessons.

Witness, for example, the contents of the February issue:

Holding the Teen Age Pupil, W. H. Beachler
Sunday School Survey H. H. Wolford
The Ten Commandments in Modern Life

..... Dr. J. Allen Miller
The Joy of the Teacher ... Margaret Sangster
A Teacher's Creed: What I Believe.
Making 1919 a Year of Triumph.

Editorial:

The place of Emphasis in The Sunday School.

Still Room for the Religious Teacher.

No Unimportant Part.

Messages to Sunday School Teachers.

Surely these are themes of vital interest to all to whom the cause of the Sunday school lies close at heart. That the reader may know that others besides the teacher will find something of interest in these articles, I take the privilege of reprinting here in part the contribution by W. H. Beachler on "Holding the Teen Age." Following an introduction in which Brother Beachler shows wherein the Sunday school has failed, he says:

I may say that I have in mind two considerations which I regard as fundamental in their relation to the solution of the teen age problem. However, I shall speak of those last. I want first to mention what might be called minor considerations, and yet I regard them all as important in their way.

For example, the co-operation of parents. In endeavoring to hold the teen age pupils in the Sunday school we ought to give ourselves the advantage that comes when there is co-operation on the part of the parents. And yet, I am not unmindful that many of the pupils with whom we have to deal come from homes where the parents care nothing for Sunday school and are not Christians. Nor am I unmindful of this, that sometimes the pupil that is the most difficult to hold has the best kind of parents. Thus in seeking a solution for the teen age problem we must go deeper.

Again I recognize the value of having organized classes for teen age boys and girls, also of having closed class rooms for each class where this is possible, and I further recognize the importance of having men teachers for boys and lady teachers for girls, and I recognize that in so far as is possible the singing and general exercises of the school session ought to be designed to appeal to boy and girl life—I say I recognize the importance of all this, and where it is possible these things should all be brought to bear in a school in the attempt to hold the teen age pupils. And yet, I am aware that many a school has severe limitations and simply cannot give itself the advantage of the different things I have mentioned. In other words, I know that many a school cannot do as good as it would but it must simply do the best it can. And anyhow I don't believe any of the things mentioned here go quite to the root of the matter.

Thus I am led to say that in my own opinion the first, fundamental thing in holding the teen age pupil in the Sunday school is to lead that pupil to Jesus Christ and get him soundly converted. I have come to the conclusion that when once a boy or girl loves the church, and the Sunday school, and the Bible as only a regenerated heart can love it, there is no longer a teen age problem with that boy or girl. It is possible that we have been looking all too much in the Sunday school for the difficulty, and too little at the boy or girl. We must not forget that if the Sunday school needs reformation, the boy and girl need regeneration. And maybe after all the shortest road to the solution of our problem is not great Sunday school conventions (I believe in conventions) but great revival meetings. At all events I am coming more and more to believe that at the very bottom of the teen age question is a question of evangelism. To spend less time "fixing," and "doctoring" and "readjusting" our Sunday school machinery and more time in an endeavor to lead each boy and girl to Christ, represents in my mind, the surest solution of our problem.

And coupled up with this consideration is the teacher consideration. If it is important that the teen age boy or girl should have the right teacher before he or she is a Christian, it is even more important that that boy or girl should have the right teacher after he or she IS a Christian. When it comes to the teen age problem the teacher is of paramount importance. And perhaps the most tragic misfits in the average Sunday school are to be found in the men and women who stand before the teen age classes as teachers. Even if I could, space would not permit me to attempt to paint what a successful teacher of boys or a successful teacher of girls is like or is not like. All I do say is this, that the most difficult thing confronting the average Sunday school is to find just the right man for the teen age boys and the right woman for the teen age girls. And in many a school they are not to be found at all, because THEY ARE NOT. I simply mean that in many a Sunday school there will be no efficient teachers of teen age boys and girls until those Sunday schools get busy and single out promising young people and train them for that particular work.

Thus to sum up, my thought is simply this: If we will successfully hold the teen age pupil in the Sunday school, thus reducing the awful loss which confronts us, and thus stopping up the leaks, we must keep clearly in mind that the pupil who is a Christian and in the care of a real, qualified teacher is the easiest pupil to hold. But as long as we fail to make soul winning and evangelism the outstanding goal of our endeavor, and as long as we disregard the matter of training and qualifying our teen age teachers, just that long will this appalling loss go on, and just that long will the Sunday school continue to fail at the most vital point in its work.

WHITE GIFTS OF VICTORY AND PEACE

The following "White Gifts" received since last report:

McKee, Pa.	$ 5.00
Milledgeville, Ill.	15.00
La Verne, Cal.	35.00
Bryan, Ohio,	16.00
Fostoria, Ohio,	10.00
Roanoke, Va.,	10.68
Mexico, Ind.,	34.06
Gretna, Ohio,	22.94
Spokane, Wash.,	6.35
Fairview, Ohio,	15.36
Campbell, Mich.,	35.67
Dayton, Va.,	5.00
Louisville, Ohio,	90.75
Claypool, Ind.,	5.51
Waterloo, Iowa,	121.06
Total	$428.38

Previously reported 769.24

Grand Total, $1197.62

We wish to correct the following errors in our last report—Linwood, Maryland, should have read $10 instead of $20, and Roann, Indiana, should have read $70 instead of $60. This makes Roann's contribution just 100 percent better than last year.

ALBERT TRENT,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

"WHY GO TO CHURCH?"

"Do you inquire, Why do I go to church?" asks Mr. John Wanamaker, the great Christian merchant. "You might just as pertinently inquire, Why do I eat? or Why do I sleep?" In further reply, he said:

"I find one is just as necessary to my well-being as the other. I could eat well and sleep well, and yet be a very miserable man without the spiritual uplift that comes only from an attendance upon the Divine ordinances. Then, again, it is a great privilege to touch shoulders with the earnest Christian men who are interested in promoting Christ's Kingdom upon earth."

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

GREETINGS FROM BOSTON

My Dear Fellow Endeavorers of the Brethren Church:

I am delighted to hear of the splendid work which you are doing in your united capacity for the advancement of the kingdom of God, and to read the list of Christian Endeavor Experts from the Nappanee society, and their fine standing at their examination.

It was also very gratifying to know that you intend to make so much of Christian Endeavor Week, for the advancement of the special good causes in which you are interested. I trust that Ashland College Night as well as all the other evenings of the week, will be a great success.

With affectionate greetings to everyone who reads these words, I am

Faithfully yours,
FRANCIS E. CLARK.

My Dear Mr. Garber,

I thank you for the opportunity of sending a brief greeting to the loyal Christian Endeavorers of the Brethren church.

For more than twenty-eight months I have been practically laid aside from my regular work as the result of an automobile accident.

During these months of opportunity for quiet meditation, after thirty-five years of active service in Christian Endeavor, I have found no reason to change my opinion that Christian Endeavor is one of the great Providential agencies for the bringing in of the kingdom of God; and I rejoice in the little part that I have been privileged to have in its development.

In these days we are thinking of the more than 170,000 of our comrades in the United States alone, who have responded to the call of the colors and have met the challenge of enlistment, training, service and sacrifice for the freedom of the world. I wish that these four watchwords might be written deep upon the heart of every Endeavorer and hung upon the wall of every prayer-meeting room, as a challenge to us, to whom is committed the task of making a world worthy of the sacrifice they have made.

Wishing you every success in the new year of service, I am

Sincerely yours,
WM. SHAW,
General Secretary.

Let Us Do It Now

We most heartily approve the watchwords suggested by Dr. Shaw. They represent the presuppositions of our Four Year Challenge reproduced below. When planning it we had in mind the enlistment of at least two thousand new Endeavorers who should enter the greatest training school of the church to learn how to serve in sacrificial ways. The extent to which these aims have been realized can best be determined by each local society. Once more we have come to a period of judgment and enlistment. Now is the time to judge impartially our past achievements and check up our present standing. And February 2-9 is the acceptable week to enlist young people in Endeavor work and Endeavorers in the various activities thereof. In this way they will be trained for service in the church, as indicated by Brother Belote in his article.

PROF. J. A. GARBER

(Without Brother Garber's consultation we decided this Christian Endeavor issue would not be complete without his likeness.—Editor).

Our Four Year Challenge

	General	Pennsylvania	Indiana	Ohio	Kanemorado	Illiokota	Southern Cal.	N. Cal. and Wash.	Maryland & Va.	Michigan
1 Young People's Societies.....	30	6	5	4	3	3	2	2	3	2
2 Junior and Intermediate Societies...	35	6	5	5	4	4	2	3	4	2
3 New Christian Endeavorers.....	2000	500	475	400	115	115	130	125	110	30
4 New Church Members.....	400	95	85	75	30	30	25	20	25	15
5 Army of Patriotic Service.....	3500	750	700	650	345	345	235	215	200	60
6 Quiet Hour Comrades.....	2500	575	550	525	160	160	190	170	130	40
7 Tenth Legioners.....	2000	500	495	450	100	100	150	125	60	25
8 Dollars for Missions.....	2900	500	490	440	110	110	140	110	75	25
9 Life Work Recruits.....	100	22	20	20	10	10	7	5	5	2
10 Christian Endeavor Experts.....	500	105	100	95	40	40	40	30	30	20

"WORKERS TOGETHER"

Great responsibility rests upon each pastor during these days. God is insistently calling young lives into his service but because some young hearts have not been personally brought face to face with the call they are passing it by heedless of their error. It is at such a time that the minister or Sunday school teacher should make their influence count for God in a very special way. You can touch some young life for God and the very fact that you have been called to be "a fellow worker together with him" should fill your heart with a deep sense of obligation. Such Christian leaders should try to fill the next days prior to February 9 "just full of personal interviews and by this means seek to help some young soul to the decision point. Ofttimes a heart to heart talk in which various obstacles have been met and cleared away has helped a young life into the place of definite and life long service. Many of the students in Ashland College now—who are preparing for Christian service—are here chiefly because someone took the time to show them "the fields white unto harvest" and pointed out to them the need—yes the glory—of personal consecration to the King's service.

Besides the personal interviews it would be a fine thing to follow the Christian Endeavor meeting with a strong missionary sermon or a fine consecration theme. If February 9 is not a suitable date you could move your Ashland College night service back a week or two. The service will be more effective if the pastor is there to encourage and help the young people in their efforts.

EDWIN BOARDMAN, Jr.

Organize Study Classes

We are glad for the classes in Expert Endeavor that are being reported. One is in progress at Lost Creek, the teacher is Miss Haddix who completed the course with us at Ashland. Christian Endeavor week should witness the organization of many additional ones. Every society should seek to graduate at least the number apportioned it in the Challenge. Then mission study is the service-theme for February and March. Definite information acquired in this manner will enable all to pray more earnestly and cause them to give more liberally when the foreign missionary offering is received at Easter. Brother DeLozier, the departmental superintendent will announce the several books from which selections may be made. Meanwhile the missionary committee may be doing advance work, striving to enroll as many as possible. Decision Day meeting offers a fine opportunity to register students for either or both of these classes.

J. A. GARBER.

Keep your face always toward the sunshine and the shadows will fall behind you.

In the meanest mortal there lies something noble.—Carlyle.

MISSIONS

Three Statements of Jesus Concerning Missions

(A Talk to Children)

Let us recall these statements of Jesus concerning missions. We will assume that each verse indicates what we are to do with different parts of our body. Jesus had been talking with his disciples near Jacob's Well, in Samaria, about meat which he had to eat that they knew not of. He was to do the will of his Father, and to finish his work. The harvest was already ripe for this, and he tells his disciples to do something with their eyes. Listen to the words, "Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields, that they are white already to harvest." What were they to do with their eyes? "Lift them up, and look about." Perhaps some of our boys and girls have taken a hike in the country, when one member of the party has said, "Look, see that object in the distance?" And immediately you raised your hands to your eyes to shade them and looked steadfastly until you saw the object pointed out.

You did not take a hasty glance, but a searching look. That is what Jesus wants us to do when he says, "Look, see the harvest that needs reaping." He wants us to look carefully over the village or city and see the grain that needs harvesting. There are boys and girls, men and women who need to be brought to the Sunday school and to the church. There are those out of Christ who need to be brought to him, and he wants us to bring them.

Now, if sheaves are to be gathered in the harvest field, what are needed? Reapers, of course,—workers, laborers. In order to get them, Jesus told his disciples there was something to do, that you and I do morning and evening on our knees. Pray. "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest."

Anyone with this prayer on their heart and lips can help to answer it. It will be the means of preparing and possibly influencing many to go and preach the gospel. So if you pray for the Lord to send forth laborers, you must not be unwilling to go, if he should send you.

There was a third thing those disciples were told to do. This time they were to use their feet. Jesus said, "Go." Yes, and Mark 16:15 tells us where they were to go, and what they were to do. Let us repeat it together: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to the whole creation." Wherever men are found, we are to proclaim the glad tidings of salvation, through repentance of sin, and faith in Jesus Christ. It should be told to every human being who can hear and understand it. By neglecting the call to "GO" some may be lost. Who will dare risk the life of some unsaved soul by refusing to go?

W. R. DEETER.

HOME MISSION NOTES

"Digging Potatoes for the Kingdom"

"The Continent" says there are a lot of good ways to keep a church going in an emergency and then suggests one of them. A church at Fairbanks, Alaska, this year found itself in a precarious condition, on account of adverse business conditions. As a result almost the whole membership of the Fairbanks church moved away in a body. The church had been raising $700 a year on its pastor's salary. But how could they do it now? The potatoes did it. The potato crop in that vicinity had been very large, but the laborers to dig them were few. So the women and girls in the church hired themselves out as diggers and turned the money earned into the church treasury. And the quota was raised! And the account closes with this statement, "That's the kind of stuff our Alaskan Christians are made of! They're worth standing behind." What about the members of Brethren churches where the mission boards are helping support the work? Are they worth standing behind?

From Beer to Sausages

It is reported that the Annheuser-Busch Brewing Association plant at St. Louis, the home of "Budweiser" and one of the most extensive brewing plants in the world, is to be the scene of pork packing before the first of March. Better make sausages than beer. Every such victory is a victory for the church.

Life-Work Recruits in Kentucky

The superintendent of the Kentucky Life-Work Recruit Association gives reports from a goodly number of young people who have consecrated themselves to Christian service, as the Lord may direct them, and among the number are the following:

Miss Ina Bowling, Lost Creek, Kentucky, writes, "I have not yet taken up my life work. Am in school preparing for it. In the meantime I am willing to do anything I can for Christ and his church."

Miss Stella Morris, Lost Creek, Kentucky, writes, "I have not begun my life work yet but hope to soon. I am going to school at Riverside and hope it will not be long until I can take up my work."

A Good Testimony

A Mr. Loveland, speaking in a great conference of Mountain Workers at Jackson, Kentucky, said: "I don't know what church school that is at Lost Creek but I do know they are doing a great work. It is my business to get into hundreds of these homes, and the homes around Lost Creek are the cleanest, and the men are living cleaner lives. I find they are more truthful and honest and they have a brighter look on their faces. That is the kind of work that is needed in the mountains."

"No Nurse Yet"

Brother Drushal writes lamenting the fact that they have no nurse yet, and says that one is very greatly needed.

G. C. CARPENTER.

RIO CUARTO, ARGENTINA

At this Thanksgiving time we have much reason to be thankful in Rio Cuarto. The blessings of peace are beginning to appear even though it will require a year or so to have everything normal again.

We have enjoyed good health although a large proportion of the people have been sick, principally with the gripe. Public schools were closed a month before time on this account but we kept on with our meetings though with somewhat diminished attendance.

I recently visited two of our Sunday schools in the country. One is conducted by Brother Luis Lujan in connection with a private school which he teaches in an Italian colony. The neighbors came in and we had a very respectable crowd for the preaching service and all seemed quite in sympathy with the message. Brother Lujan is doing a splendid work and at the same time is developing himself. He is a native and adapted to the kind of work he is doing. From this point which is about thirty miles from Rio Cuarto I went fifteen miles further to the French family of whom we have written before. Here we had another preaching service with much blessing. A young lady, Paulina Gaychet, teaches the Sunday school at this place and does very well.

Our young men are having good success with their meetings for Bible study on Saturday evenings and the open air meetings on Sunday afternoons reach scores that do not come to the church. We are expecting Mr. Howard, the Sunday School Director for South America, the latter part of this week. Quite a number are expecting baptism at the end of this month.

C. F. YODER.

The American Board, which is the oldest foreign missionary society in the United States, was organized June 29, 1810. During its history it has sent out over 3,000 missionaries, of whom 679 are now in service. In the 724 churches which have been organized by these missionaries, there are now enrolled 86,979 members. The total receipts from the beginning have been $47,944,182.60; for year 1916, $1,247,715.99. That is a splendid record of long service, but if Brethren people will stand by our own Foreign Board, it will make as honorable a record according to our numerical strength.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

ALLENTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

An old adage says: "Do not speak unless you can say something that is better than silence." Perhaps silence would be better in our case, especially when we have so little to report. The "flu" hit pretty hard also in our city. The churches were closed for three weeks and then the epidemic or (pandemic) broke out afresh and it looked for awhile as though the services would have to be discontinued again.

I must say that the authorities here were more consistent than in some places of which I have heard, for the saloons were closed a few days after the churches were permitted to open. The police court of our city bore the usual testimony that John Barleycorn is the chief disturbance maker among us. Throttle him and you diminish crime.

Mrs. DeLozier, baby and I, all three had the influenza, but we are thankful that nothing of a serious character developed and we soon recovered, except for the tired feeling which seemed to linger.

Due to cool evenings setting in, no more street meetings were held among the Italians after conference. Indeed nothing has been done as we are patiently waiting for warm weather again when, if our Father spares us, we shall begin the street meetings earlier in the season.

Meanwhile I was called upon to teach Latin and French in the Allentown high school and have been filling that position ever since September 17th. This may not result in much advantage to the church, and yet, the fact that I have nearly two hundred young people under my voice five days per week may not be without meaning to our work. Already a few of the students have attended our service unsolicited. Others have expressed their desire to do so, but said that their parents prohibited them. Lutheranism and Reformedism are almost as exclusive here as Catholicism usually is. This is the wall which we are up against. There is a fine lot of young people in our city, but all are under a tremendous ecclesiastical restriction.

Brother Beachler made his canvass here and secured near $800 for Ashland College. His messages were much enjoyed by all and his stay with us was entirely too short. He has partly promised to come back some time again that he may at least learn more about our Pennsylvania Dutch humor.

Our Communion service was well attended, 80 percent of the members having been present. The S. S. C. E., the Y. P. S. C. E. and other auxiliaries are keeping their various activities alive. The Sunday school moves along as usual. Our Christmas entertainment was a success and an offering was lifted and sent for the Kentucky work and the Seminary at Ashland. The children decided to forego the treat and send money for the Armenian relief as they did last year. Our offering for this amounted to nearly $25.00. Our Thanksgiving offering was $33.00. Our last Easter offering was $50.00 (less than fifty members here).

Thus you can see that while we are a small church, we don't believe in keeping all of our money at home either. Some small churches want to be helped instead of helping, but this is not our spirit, for we believe our Lord knew whereof he spoke when he said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Brother A. E. Thomas has paid his annual visit to Allentown ("There's a reason") and brought us a very timely message one Sunday morning and also lent the inspiration of his presence at the other services.

1918 passed very swiftly and 1919 is before us. We pray that God may lead us forward this year.

If you want to pray for difficult places, put Allentown on your list.

"Sell is all for des mol."

A. L. DELOZIER.

SUNNYSIDE, WASHINGTON

We are patiently enduring our second round of the "flu." The first was an attack, but this is a siege that promises to continue six weeks. The Brethren homes were largely spared the first time and if the "ban" had not been on we could have continued our work with very little hindrance, but this time the "flu" is entering almost every Brethren home, not even sparing the preacher's. Consequently many of our plans have been demolished. Rally Day, Communion, Thanksgiving, Christmas offering and Christmas program, January-the-First-all-day meeting, Evangelistic campaign—all were made impossible, in fact, were cancelled. Some will say, "You old pessimist." No, but neither have we been drugged with that happy, go-lucky, false optimism that ignores existing conditions and walks about with its eyes shut. The devil has been having his inning, but we have put a few over him anyhow.

We have much for which to be grateful. Not a member has been taken by death, so far, from the epidemic. We have been drawn together in mutual sympathy and helpfulness. Our faith is stronger through the testing. Many we believe have been taught the value of individual devotion while deprived of public fellowship. So, after all, "all things have worked together for good to those who love and serve the Lord, who are the called according to his purpose!"

We have a $3,000 church debt here. While the ban was on, we proposed securing $1,000 of it. It was the only form of united church work possible. Without a public appeal or gathering, without a new fangled method but with simply the giving plan, we asked the members to line up. We asked for $1,000, but secured $1,500. In fact during the last 18 months, we have never asked for at specified amount in a special offering, but that the Brethren went beyond it. They believe in the whole Bible and are determined that the Brethren church here shall be made permanent and her witness true.

Just as soon as the "flu" lets up, we are going after the Four Year Program goals. Our plan is to appoint four Key-men and have each appoint one for each goal assigned. The method work will be done by them. Thus the pastor can give himself to proclaiming the Word and not be made a financier or executive. The church is a Bible studying church and the pastor must preach the Word not just lecture.

CHARLES H. ASHMAN.

FROM NAPPANEE, INDIANA, TO WASHINGTON, D. C.

On Sunday, July 28th, I preached my last two sermons to this most excellent congregation. Three weeks previous to this I had presented my resignation to take effect August the first. I did this because I had so earnestly desired to go to the front as a chaplain. My time would not have expired with this church until October 1st, 1919. So naturally they were surprised to hear of my going. But my mind was fully made up. I have never been so anxious to do any one thing in all my life than that of obtaining a chaplaincy. Still after all that I have sacrificed, fate has planned it otherwise. The church received my resignation with all kindness, although reluctantly. Our work together had been so pleasant. We had not done so many great things. Yet God had blessed our efforts in a small way. The Nappanee people are enthusiastic and thoroughly BRETHREN. All the nice things that could be done for a pastor and family were done for us. We shall never forget those days of our closing pastorate. Just one kind deed after another! The Alexander Mack class gave me $25.00 as a present. The church proper gave me a full two weeks' vacation. And then when it came to the last evening (shall we ever forget it?) 250 were at the train to say goodbye and God bless you. A fine basket of eatables had been packed for our supply to our future home. How thoughtful this was, as well as kind. As long as memory lasts this shall be one of the most beautiful pictures. It was grand and glorious!

Brother Kolb has indeed one of the greatest honors that could befall him, in being the pastor of such a body of people. I pray for his constant success in this field. Our church has the lead there, and is doing a great work. The Church of the Brethren and the Methodist Episcopal are close seconds.

During the 22 years of pastorate in the Brethren church I was greatly blessed of God, never being without a church as pastor one moment, and served some of the best churches in our brotherhood.

At Conemaugh, Pa., God gave me the crowning grace of my life. In the erection of this beautiful church I was so happy. But there comes a time in our life when we must think of our immediate needs. So since I have been deprived of the greatest desire of my life, that of going as a chaplain, I have decided to enter the commercial field. At present I am connected with one of the largest department stores in our National Capitol. As for wages, better than what I ever received in the Brethren church. Not that I am grumbling, for the church always treated me as fair as any pastor should ask. But I have often heard the remark made by unthinking people, "that he could not do as well elsewhere." This has been proven conclusively wrong in my case, as in many others that have been known.

Of course as every one so well knows no politics have been played during this war. That accounts for a great many things happening different from what we want. It does not yet seem possible to me that I am not to be granted the great privilege of helping the boys. And after my own boy went to camp the grief of my heart was greatest. But only the other day I got a kind letter of thanks from a proper source, informing me that all papers in the case might be had by requesting them at once. I HAVE NOT ASKED FOR THEM, NOR SHALL I. If ever the need arises in the future, "HERE AM I, SEND ME."

I appreciate what Dr. Teeter has done for us as editor. HE HAS DONE WELL, and each of us will do our best to make Brother Baer's incumbency pleasant. Let us help him in every way possible. This is the way to succeed. LOVE TO ALL THE BRETHREN IN HIS NAME. I AM YOURS, IN THAT BLESSED HOPE.

429 G St., N. W. L. O. HUBBARD.

MASONTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

This congregation still lives, in spite of the ravages of the influenza. But in common with many other organizations, we have not accomplished what we had hoped to do, if it had not interfered with our plans. We began the last quarter of the year 1918, with a rousing Rally Day, in both Sunday school and church and it was indeed a day of big things for us. On the evening of that day, we followed the custom which has been common with us since my pastorate began here, and had the Hon. Wooda W. Carr, a prominent attorney of Uniontown, to bring us the message, and it was heard by a splendid audience, which could not but have been of much help, as he eloquently pleaded for the enthronement of our Lord. With the impetus which the services of the day gave, we were expecting great things during the closing weeks of the year, but then came the "flu" and its consequent quarantine, which closed all our churches for a period of four Sundays and left a feeling of fear and uncertainty, even after it was lifted, so that we have not really recovered from it yet. We had planned to begin revival services on the first Sunday of November with Brother H. L. Goughenour leading us, and of course, that became out of the question. When we re-opened our regular services, we found a much diminished attendance at all services, and in spite of every effort to overcome this handicap, it still persists. However, it seems to be gradually yielding and we hope soon to be back to our old averages.

Under the leadership of our splendid young women, the children and young people of the Sunday school, gave the best entertainment on Christmas night, which it has ever been my privilege to witness. Santa Claus stuff is taboo, and the Christ child was magnified as the infant Savior of men. One of the features of the program which was highly exciting to the pastor and his wife, came near its end, when they were called to the platform by the superintendent, Brother Kratz, and in the name of the congregation, were presented with a purse, containing almost $50.00.

Something like this has happened at every Christmas time since we came here, but it always touches our hearts deeply, since we take it as a tangible expression of confidence and approval upon the work we are trying to do for the congregation and the community.

On the evening of the first day of the new year, the congregation assembled at the church in annual business session. It is indeed a pleasure to participate in such sessions, when such unanimity of sentiment prevails. So faithful had all officers of the church and Sunday school been that practically no changes were made for the year ahead. Even the pastor was included in this for he was unanimously asked to remain with the congregation for another year, and a substantial addition was made to his salary. The annual reports for both church and Sunday school were very gratifying. The financial officers reported receipts of $2,147.16, which does not include the $1,833 which was paid cash, on college endowment, nor the $50, which was contributed to the work of the Anti-Saloon League. And this is from a congregation whose active membership is less than 150. The average attendance of our Sunday school for the year, was 101, which is less than in former years, but the offerings for the year were above $700, which I consider exceptional. It is all the more so, because no special effort was made along that line. We have a class of men, of which I have the honor to be teacher, whose average attendance for the year was 20, and whose offerings were $328.77, which does not include monies spent on the class, but contributions to the regular treasury of the school. No one knows better than myself that money is not everything and that of itself it is helpless, but I believe that its free bestowal is an indication of interest which, in this case, at least, is highly encouraging.

We are now in the beginning of an evangelistic campaign under the leadership of Brother Goughenour, and I hope to have splendid things to report at its close. This is the fifth of such campaigns which he has conducted here, and none of them have been without great help to the cause which is dear to all our hearts.

MARTIN SHIVELY, Pastor.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON

Well, we have the same story others repeat in regard to the "flu." We have been under either ban or quarantine for three months. Sunday morning, January 5, was the first Sunday we have had unhindered service for that time. Of course it has set us back in our work quite a bit, but it does not seem to have permanently hurt us. If last Sunday's turnout is any indication of what is to come, we will soon be back to our old place and even better.

We are planning to hold our revival in February this year with Brother Ashman of Sunnyside to preach for us. Just what can be done at the present condition of things it is hard to say, but "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Has not the gospel the same old power today it had at Pentecost? Our God is able to pierce the spiritual chill that is sweeping over the church and the world today, and warm the souls of men with his love. Pray for us that God may be with us in mighty power.

As to our building, we got the most of the cement work done before the cold weather set in, and fully expect to finish as soon as weather will permit in the spring. In the meantime Spokane is paying up her pledge of $1,200 to the building fund made last September in our building drive. Many good brethren have written to us that they were going to help us substantially very soon. Send it in now brethren, we will need it by the time it gets here, and it will make our work much easier by sending it in early rather than late. Everything now depends upon the $2,500 to come from the brotherhood at large, as to whether our difficulties will increase or diminish in fully establishing this work. May God bless all who have helped this work and are continuing to help so splendidly. The Mission Board has done and is doing all in their power to make Spokane a success and our hearts are filled with gratitude for it. But the ability of the Mission Board to help, depends entirely upon the support they receive from the brotherhood. It won't be long till Spokane will reverse things and be a giver instead of a receiver. That's the most blessed way.

We have "made" goal 7 of the Four Year Program and expect to make goal 9 before long. With the work still in its formative stage it is a little difficult to keep all the aspirations of the national work in the full light and place they ought to have, but we're pounding away. The Four Year Program is certainly the greatest thing denominationally and congregationally that the Brethren church ever attempted. May God encourage and give wisdom to its leaders. It is vision we need. "Where there is no vision the people perish."

R. PAUL MILLER.

ASHLAND COLLEGE NOTES

The furnace has been installed under the chapel room and we are having chapel services each day, after having been deprived of the use of the room for a couple of weeks.

Brother Boardman was called to Middlebranch to conduct a funeral recently. He made a quick trip going over one day and back the next morning ready for his studies. Eddie is bell ringer for class periods.

Marie Lichty and Amy Puterbaugh ate dinner with Mrs. Lynn and Mrs. Deeter on Sunday. The husbands of the two latter were away preaching on that day. The girls report a happy day together.

The editor suggested that perhaps some of the Evangelist readers might be interested in knowing what the theological students are doing for the Brethren church and where they are preaching while making their way through school. So we report concerning the activities of the following students and some of the professors:

A. L. Lynn is preaching at Ankenytown alternate Sundays. He has served this church about three years, having lived there before coming to school in 1917. The other half of his time he serves the Zion Hill congregation.

Benjamin F. Owen has charge of the Glenford mission and the Fair Haven congregations. The former he has served for nearly four years, the latter eighteen months.

Edwin Boardman is on his second year with the Middlebranch church of half time, and has since last November been in charge of the work at Gretna, Ohio, also.

Elwood Rowsey has been in charge of the Mansfield mission for nearly two years. He has recently been over to Williamstown as a supply two Sundays, as they have been without regular preaching services for several months.

Fred Vanator is serving the Homerville church since last June when the former pastor, B. S. Stoffer was called into army work.

Dr. Miller has had charge of the Rittman mission since last summer, going over every two weeks.

W. R. Deeter was called to Oakville, Indiana recently for a Sunday service, and has hired to them for half-time work till the end of the present school year. He will hold them a two weeks' meeting in February.

Dr. Furry has been supplying at the city Congregational church for several months.

Brother Austin Staley, who was in school two years is in charge of the work in his home congregation. From recent reports we learn that his work is moving along nicely. We are glad to know this, and wish for him and his people more of the good things in Kingdom-building work at Udell, Iowa.

Brother Clayton Starn supplied the pulpit at Mansfield on a recent Sunday while the pastor was away on other work.

The girls of the school have started a gymnasium class which meets twice a week. The instructor is former Sergeant Neichwitz. The latter will also instruct the boys twice a week on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. The floor of the "gym" has been oiled and other improvements have been made which makes the room appear the neatest looking we have ever seen it. The new electric lights are fine.

Mrs. Benjamin Owen has been out nursing in a few of the homes in the city for some time. There is still some "flu" lingering here and there.

Your humble servant has been trying to help in the Ashland Mission Chapel for several months, giving them blackboard chalk-talks, along Sunday school lines and general church work. In this place are a lot of children who would get no Christian instruction at all if no chapel services were held. In looking around one can often find mission work to do close to his own door-yard.

W. R. DEETER.

IN THE SHADOW

SILBERMAN—Heister George Daniel died December 3, 1918, aged 7 months and 5 days. Death was due to pneumonia. Brother and Sister Silberman are members of the Allentown Brethren church. Funeral service was conducted at the house by the writer. May God comfort them in their loss with the realization that "of such is the Kingdom of heaven."

A. L. DELOZIER.

WOGOMAN—Irvin Bernard, son of Argus Wogoman, was born December 31, 1916, and died December 27, 1918, after a six days' illness.

He is survived by his father and mother, one sister and two brothers. Funeral services at the home conducted by the pastor. May God bless those who are sad.

J. A. McINTURFF.

GANGER—Floyd Gosford, son of Isaac Ganger, was born in Goshen, Indiana, March 28, 1891. He united with the Goshen Brethren church, December 1, 1916, and was a loyal and consecrated worker, taking keen interest in all the activities of the church. He was one of the leading members of the "True Blue" class. He registered for the draft at Elkhart, Indiana, where he was working, and was sent to Camp Taylor, Kentucky, on October 6, 1917. Later he was transferred to Camp Shelby, being identified with the 139th Machine Gun Battalion. From Camp Shelby he was sent to Camp Merritt, and left for overseas June 11, arriving in England June 27, the first of the "True Blues" to arrive overseas. He was transferred to the 116th Supply Train, and saw much service on different fronts as a messenger truck driver. Later he was transferred to Second Division of Headquarters Troops. On December 26 a telegram was received telling of his death of acute nephritis. In the last big drive he made unusual efforts to remain in the service, although physically unfit. He was engaged to be married to Miss Hazel Schrock of Goshen. His father and one sister survive.

J. A. McINTURFF.

HELMAN—Mrs. Myrtle Hazel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Peterson of Goshen, Indiana, died December 25, 1918. She received her education in the Goshen public schools and at Goshen College. She became a member of the First Brethren church and remained faithful until death. On June 24, 1915, she was married to Mr. Lorenzo G. Helman, to which union one son was born, which died in infancy. Mrs. Helman was one of those beautiful characters which we love to cherish in memory. She is survived by her husband, father and mother, one sister and three brothers. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor and Brother G. W. Rench.

J. A. McINTURFF.

CRIFE—Florence Elizabeth, aged 8 years, 3 months and 25 days, departed this life December 3, 1918. Florence was stricken with the dreaded influenza from which, despite the best of medical attention and care, she did not recover. She united with the church during the winter of 1917-18. Florence was the daughter of our Brother and Sister O. N. Crife. The parents are comforted in the fact that they brought up their daughter in a Christian home and that she early gave her life to Christ. May God richly bless the parents and little brother in their sorrow.

H. H. WOLFORD.

CRIFE—Luella Day, wife of Clarence Crife, died December 8 from pneumonia, following influenza. She leaves her husband, one daughter, Pauline, one son, Max E., her father and mother, one sister and two brothers. Mrs. Crife has been for years a member of the First Brethren church of Elkhart. She loved the church and was always willing to do her part. At the time of her death she was president of the S. S. C. E., and superintendent of the Home Department of the Sunday school. She was a member of the Loyal Women's class of the Sunday school. The church will greatly miss her service and presence. Thus death takes from our ranks young and old, and at times our most active workers. May God richly bless the family and keep them faithful to his most blessed service. Funeral services from the First Brethren church by her pastor.

H. H. WOLFORD.

OAKS—Cryll W. Oaks was born near Mineral Point, Pennsylvania, April 23, 1893 and died November 21, 1918, at his home in Youngstown, Ohio, of Spanish influenza. He was an industrious young man, esteemed by his fellow-workmen, and a good man. At an early age he united with the Brethren church and continued in that faith until called home.

Besides a host of friends who mourn his loss, he is survived by his mother, one sister and five brothers. The funeral service was conducted by L. Garvin Smith, of the Conemaugh Brethren church.

RASBACH—Mrs. John Rasbach, died at her home in Conemaugh, Pa., January 2, 1919, of a complication of diseases, aged thirty-five years. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Good of Conemaugh. She was united in marriage, January 24, 1901, to Mr. John Rasbach, by the Rev. J. F. Koonz. She was a member of the Conemaugh Brethren Church since childhood, taking active part in the work of the church. Before her death she was anointed and expressed her willingness to meet her Lord and Master. Besides the many friends who mourn her loss, she is survived by her father, her husband, one son, one daughter, two brothers and three sisters.

Funeral services were conducted by L. Garvin Smith, pastor of the Conemaugh Brethren church.

GROVE—Helen Lenora, daughter of Brother and Sister L. O. Grove, died November 28, of Spanish influenza, aged three years and six months. Little Helen was a choice flower of humanity that gladdened all with whom she came in touch. She was called into the spirit-world before she had scarcely time to unfold, nevertheless she left a sweet fragrance that shall not soon be forgotten. In the absence of the pastor of the Conemaugh Brethren church, the funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Earl Flora, of the Vinco church.

BURKHART—Sister Viola Burkhardt, of Johnstown, departed this life Sunday morning, December 15th. She was sick only a few days when she was called to her heavenly home. Her death was due to pneumonia. She was aged 18 years, 3 months and 22 days. Sister Burkhardt was a faithful member of the Third Brethren Sunday school and church and will be sadly missed in their activities. She was a granddaughter of Elder Stephen Hildebrand and the daughter of one of our most faithful and active members of the Third church, Mrs. Dr. Burkhardt. A large circle of friends and relatives mourn her early death. Funeral services by her pastor, the undersigned.

GEORGE H. JONES.

WISE—Sister Florence Wise, a quiet earnest Christian girl and member of the Third church departed this life to be with her Lord. Her death means a sad loss to the Sunday school which will miss her regular attendance and example. Sister Wise was just stepping over the threshold into womanhood when called home. She was 18 years of age at the time of her demise. Many friends grieve over their loss and her gain. Funeral by the pastor.

GEORGE H. JONES.

GRIFFITH—Sister Ethel Hill-Griffith departed this life for her heavenly home after a long siege of tuberculosis of the throat. She left to mourn their loss, a husband and child. She was a member of the Third Brethren church. Funeral services by the pastor.

GEORGE H. JONES.

IZOR—Mr. George Izor departed this life, January 5th, 1919, at his home in Gratis, Ohio, after eight years of suffering. He was 64 years, 4 months and 25 days old at the time of his death. Funeral services by the undersigned. Interment in Gratis cemetery.

GEORGE H. JONES.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

MILLER-MILLER—The marriage ceremony of Charles J. Miller and Nina B. Miller was solemnized at the parsonage of the Conemaugh Brethren church on December 21, 1918, by L. Garvin Smith, pastor of the church. Both are members of the Brethren church.

The best wishes of their many friends are that peace, prosperity and happiness may accompany them through many years of life.

Business Manager's Corner

THE PENNSYLVANIA DUTCH AND THE SPIRIT OF THE WEST

One of the greatest combinations of efficiency is the tenacity and perseverance of a Pennsylvania Dutchman permeated and overwhelmed with the great spirit of the west. Any one who has spent any number of years among the people of the states west of the Mississippi river must have noticed the firm grasp on the land and the industries of these states held by men from the old "keystone state." The same observation may be made of the work of the church in these states. We know there is a natural tendency on the part of emigrants who go westward to "seek a fortune" to neglect the things of the soul and it has been frequently claimed that many of them never take their religion west of the Mississippi river or across the Rocky mountains. In a measure this is true, but on the other hand those who do take their religion along with them make it count for righteousness and for God. This is to be observed especially among the western Brethren churches, the substantial membership of which is of Pennsylvania descent.

During the past week we have had demonstration of this from three of our western churches, namely, Beaver City, Nebraska; Morrill, Kansas and Waterloo, Iowa. Of course this had to do with the Brethren Evangelist subscription list. All three churches go on the HONOR ROLL for the second year and all three sent checks or drafts for the full amount of their bills, the largest coming from Waterloo, Iowa where the subscription list is even larger than it was last year. This year Waterloo sends ONE HUNDRED SIXTY THREE subscriptions, accompanied by full payment. In this instance it is the combination of a Pennsylvania Dutch pastor (We think Goughnour sounds like Pennsylvania Dutch) and the vim of the middle western city of Waterloo that brooks no defeat.

(Continued from page 7)

Ghost. But it is not the object of this article to deal with that phase of the subject. It is a very simple proposition, however, calling for surrender, cleansing the temple, seeking only the glory of the Christ, and receiving by faith.

O, my brethren, let us who are of the ministry, give ourselves to the study of the secret of that power, and know that the revival we seek is not to be worked up by infinitesimal jackcrews working from beneath, but by the supernatural power of the Holy Ghost poured forth from the divine agencies above! The church is sick unto death with "forms of godliness, denying the power thereof." She is slowly dying with a sort of professional evangelism, born of men, carried on by men, and failing with men. The Holy Ghost is the only effective agent of the mighty God of battles in all this world today; and yet, the Holy Ghost is but a sort of theoretic belief with a large mass within the church. God help us that he may be given his rightful place, and become the real, conscious presence and power that God hath ordained him to be in this age of grace. Only as we shall give him greater recognition shall we be able to meet the challenges of Omnipotence, who, too often calls and challenges us in vain—"PROVE ME NOW HEREWITH, IF I WILL, NOT OPEN YOU THE WINDOWS OF HEAVEN, AND POUR OUT A BLESSING, THAT THERE SHALL NOT BE ROOM ENOUGH TO RECEIVE IT!"

You timorous churches listen! The plan does work or a church like the Waterloo church would not repeat the performance. Yet last year at Winona several members of the Publication Board tried to convince the Business Manager that the plan would not hold out, that it is only a temporary movement. Shame on you! You owe Waterloo and these other splendid churches an apology, and you ought to offer it to them.

"For want of a vision people perish." And I can name several large and splendid churches that need this vision in regard to placing the Evangelist in all the active Brethren homes of the congregation. This vision should come through the pastor, but it may come through some good deacon or a devoted sister in the church. But the Vision must come. What church will be the next to catch this glimpse of great possibilities for building up the kingdom of Christ and incidentally the Brethren church?

An Explanation

Last summer we began transferring our mailing list to the new stencil system we have adopted, but the large transfers have been made during the last two months as many subscriptions expire in December and January. We have been sending the large lists to Cleveland, Ohio to have the stencils made, and we have had no trouble of any kind until the first week in January. On January fourth we sent a list for stenciling and in some unaccountable manner it got lost in the mails in the short seventy mile trip from Ashland to Cleveland. This list included names from Goshen, Indiana; Uniontown, Pennsylvania; Masontown, Pennsylvania; Leon, Iowa; and several other churches. Some of them failed to receive any paper for two weeks. But we think we have the matter straightened out now and we have mailed the back numbers to these subscribers so we hope everything will be lovely from now on.

R. R. TEETER,
Business Manager.

The Second Semester opens February 3.
New Students may enter at that time.

ASHLAND COLLEGE ASHLAND, OHIO

The world today demands Christian Leadership. The old order with its crass materialism and autocracy has failed. The new order with its ideals of Democracy and Brotherhood will succeed.

The potential leadership of the old world has been practically annihilated. Where shall those be trained who must take the place of intellectual and moral leadership of the next generation?

The world today looks to the Christian Colleges to supply this leadership.

ASHLAND COLLEGE

invites young men and women to multiply and consecrate their powers of service. It offers high grade instruction under competent instructors at the minimum cost and at the same time seeks to maintain a vital Christian atmosphere.

OFFERS

regular college courses leading to the Bachelor's degree; Courses in Education for those preparing to teach in the public schools; Courses in Religious Education; Pre-engineering, Pre-medical; Courses admitting to the best schools; Courses in Voice, Piano and Expression under competent teachers; Courses in Bookkeeping and Shorthand.

For further information address:

W. D. FURRY, President,
Ashland, Ohio.

(Continued from page 8)

today; I verily believe it is, and I would defend my country as long as I thought she was in the right, as I believe she was in the recent world struggle. However, it is not a perfect country, for we are not perfect. But I believe in my native land because "as goes America now, so goes the world." Perhaps God is working out a part of his divine plan by giving us this leadership in which our Allies trust and the enemy hopes. I believe in it because it is a land of ideals, not expediency; principle, not policy; and where we may follow Christ and worship God according to the dictates of our own consciences and need not bow to any man. It is a land of freedom and a preacher of equity and justice which is righteousness.

These things I believe; in my job, my fellowmen, my church, my home and my country and if there are other equally great things that I do not believe in, then "Help thou my unbelief." And today, with yesterday gone forever, and tomorrow may be never, help me to be true to this creed every day in the year of our Lord 1919.

This is an age of demonstration, for every kind of merchandise and for ideas. Christ has had his demonstrators ever since he first called a disciple. Today, we that profess to follow him need to remember that we are Christ's demonstrators.

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 6

FEBRUARY 5
1919

The BRETAREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETAREN -

THE CROSS

is the human measure of infinite love, sacrifice and forgiveness, the appealing note of the gospel, the secret of Christ's drawing power and the gateway to human service for God in all time.

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918. Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Universal Military Training as a Permanent Policy—Editor,	2	A Commendable Example—Prof. J. A. Garber,	10
Editorial Review,	3	Life Work in Christian Endeavor—E. A. Rowsey,	11
Benevolences the Issue Before Us—H. H. Wolford and H. E. Roscoe, ..	4	They Are Planning—Prof. J. A. Garber,	11
The Word of God in Evangelism—Dean J. Allen Miller,	5	Carry On—Edwin Boardman, Jr.,	11
What Will the Realization of Goal Six Mean?—W. H. Beachler, ..	6	From Our Youngest Missionary, Marguerite Gribble,	12
What If Germany Had Won?—Dr. J. L. Gillin,	7	Home Mission Notes—G. C. Carpenter,	12
"For This Is Right" (Sermon)—J. L. Kimmel,	8	News from the Field,	13-16
The Christian's Love for Souls—R. Paul Miller,	8	The Tie That Binds,	16
Equipping an Efficient Sunday School—Albert Trent,	10	In the Shadow,	16
The Supreme Aim in Teaching—Mrs. L. G. Wood,	10	Business Manager's Corner,	16

EDITORIAL

Universal Military Training As a Permanent Policy

Will America come down to universal military training at last? Having conquered militarism in Germany will she yet be conquered by it? Having demonstrated her ability, unhampered by professional militarism, to rise to an emergency with rapidity, power and invincible dash unequalled by and impossible to any European militaristic country will she now surrender that ability for that which she has proven to be inferior? Will she permit the glory of her idealism to be dimmed by demonstrating her own lack of faith in it? May God give us the faith and the courage to say "No," very emphatically. The predominance of good sense in the American populace warrants us in saying "No," even in the face of a militaristic lobby and a few militaristic law-makers at Washington. We will not trade our heritage of inexhaustible latent strength capable of being transformed on demand into indefeatable activity for a pottage of militaristic glory and strength which fades and diminishes with the increase of professionalism.

Nevertheless there is that danger. A group of militaristic politicians and professional military men are endeavoring to bring about that very condition. And if protest is not made by the populace, the pulpit and the religious press, it is possible they may succeed in their schemes.

Universal military training is not necessary for our national protection nor for the meeting of critical issues. The quickness with which an army of two million men was trained and transported across the Atlantic was a marvel to our own eyes as well as to the eyes of Germany. But we could have put the same number of men trained into the field on this side of the Atlantic six months sooner. In case of a foreign power desiring to attack us it would take them as long to come to our shores as it did us to go to European shores and in that time we could be prepared to more than equal them. And as regards our neighboring nations there are none that could match us in a contest and moreover none maintain a large standing army nor require universal military training as a permanent policy.

On the other hand, it would make our self-protection less secure, because it would decrease the fighting value of our American soldiers. Their efficiency in the late world war was due in a large way to the dash, enthusiasm, and conviction that a great and righteous cause called forth. In every war that was the secret of the invincibility of American soldiery. But make them professional soldiers or encourage the professional spirit and you take away that quality. They will become machine-like soldiers of no more value with their backs against a wall than German soldiers proved to be. Train our young men for the farm, the shop or the profession and not for the battle, and if the battle does come, as we pray it may not, it will come only after great provocation which will put fire into their blood and they will fight invincibly and without fear, and not as professional soldiers who are more wary than brave.

Universal military training would involve a large and needless financial burden upon the country. Such an expenditure if put into technical, agricultural and professional training or used to build good roads would be infinitely more profitable and of greater protection.

Such compulsory training if only for a year, would rob young men of one of the most important and most critical years of his life, most important in the preparation for useful employment and most critical in the formation of life habits. Army life at this age would open up a great danger point to character and would tend to deflect many from really useful vocations and callings. It would mean a needless interruption in the preparation for service and possibly waste the inspiration in many a youth for industrial, social or moral advancement.

Universal military training would tend to build up a military class which would be not only useless, but would become heartless, cruel, arrogant and domineering. It would thwart the will of the people and hamper their freedom. All that the military class did mean for Germany it might come to mean for America. Furthermore, it would encourage the development of a barbarous fighting spirit among the populace, and we would find ourselves ere long both seeking and finding a quarrel. It is impossible to train a nation for war and the people of that nation not become fired with a desire for war. If we attempt to make Americans over the Hun program they will become Huns.

A great military machine such as would be built up would constantly suggest to American youth of the growing generation that we still depend more on might than on right, and that we still consider might superior. Our boasted victory of right over might would seem like a myth to them. And how could we convince them otherwise when constantly displaying a fear that the right might be crushed and needed a strong sword to defend it.

Moreover, our continual preparation for war would give the lie to our professed desire for peace. In the days of the Kaiser's glory no great weight was attached to his peace talk when with drawn sword he was commanding every German to prepare for world conquest. It is not becoming of sincerity to preach one thing and practice another. If we sincerely desire peace we must prepare for it with a faith in other nations equal to that of which we consider ourselves worthy. If we are not sincere, but only seeking to play the double role, in whipping Germany we have only whipped one of our own kind and the war was fought in vain. The more we train men for war the more will we build ships and guns and all manner of engines of war, and the more we do that the more will other nations do the same thing. The more universal training for war becomes the farther into the future is placed the day of universal peace and the longer delayed the day when nations shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks.

One thought more that comes very close to the life of the church. Universal military training would impede the great work of evangelizing and Christianizing the world. The minds of needy Christless people would be quickly prejudiced against a nation that trained all its men for some possible war. They would not readily receive a religion that permitted of such war-like activities and silent threats. And moreover, militarism would not encourage on the part of those practicing it any great and widespread willingness to preach the gospel of peace to the lands lying in darkness and sin. Militarism is itself of the kingdom of darkness and would not inspire a movement against itself. A house divided against itself cannot stand. Introduce militarism and you quench the desire for the spread of a message of peace, for the spirit and love of peace will be crowded out. But introduce the message of peace and militarism will stay out.

Use your influence by petitioning in behalf of churches, Sunday schools and various public assemblies, as well as individually, your representative and senators in Congress, that they oppose universal military training as a permanent policy of our government. This is your privilege and duty.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

There are two things quite popular just now among the churches, namely, going over the top on the College endowment proposition and putting the Evangelist into every Brethren home.

Brother Reed reports the royal reception extended by the First church of Los Angeles to their new pastor, Brother N. W. Jennings. Notice also that the good people at that place did not forget in the midst of their enjoyments the war-stricken Christians of Armenia and Syria.

Brother Leatherman reports that he is up against a stiff proposition in Ripon, California, but he has the courage to face the task with determination and confidence in God that the Brethren cause shall eventually win out there.

A sergeant of a regiment came up to an Army Scripture Reader on the field and said, "I know what you are." "Oh, sergeant," replied the reader, "and what am I?" "You are a range-finder for heaven," was the brief reply.—Christian Age.

Sister Mary Pence writes this week from Limestone, Tennessee. She tells the same story of "flu" hindrances, but in common with the spirit of practically all of our leaders she is eager to get back into the work with unhindered liberty. In the meantime, the White Gift offering is not being forgotten.

The church at Falls City, Nebraska, has had perhaps the most disastrous visitation of the epidemic of any of the churches yet reported. But in the midst of their sadness the people and pastor are trustful in God and hopeful that all will finally work out for good to them that love the Lord.

College Corners is heard from through its live pastor, Brother Anderson, who is proud to be able to say that both his churches are loyal and wide-awake. College Corners went over the top on the Endowment proposition, and we are expecting to learn at any time that the Evangelistic Honor Roll has been gained.

The work at Hagerstown under the wise leadership of Brother Cover is making advances in spite of some interruptions. Two accessions to the church were realized during the preparatory services for the communion. Judging from the good offerings to missions, we judge that the people have not been without instruction along this line.

The "flu" has made interruptions in the work at Linwood, Maryland as elsewhere, but the people there are recovering from it under the efficient leadership of Brother Riddle. Perhaps his faithful ministrations to the sick during the epidemic helped to keep the interest alive in his people. That his people love him is shown by their generous gifts for the comfort of him and his.

Prof. J. A. Garber preached a fine sermon on "Practical Christianity" in the College chapel on Sunday morning. Brother Gnagey Editor of Sunday School Publications, preached in the Methodist Episcopal church of Ashland, Sunday evening, the pastor being sick, President Furry preached in the Congregational church morning and evening and Dean Miller preached at the Rittman mission.

The White Gifts are still coming in, and the largest yet is reported this week. It comes from the Conemaugh church. Brother Smith's people seem to have the habit of doing things on a big scale. It would be a fine thing if all of our churches would catch the Conemaugh spirit and way of doing things. See the amount in Brother Trent's report among the "News," it was crowded out of the Sunday school page this week.

Let every isolated member send an offering to Brother Herman E. Roscoe, Goshen, Indiana, for the support of the superannuated ministers. And every other Brethren should do his or her part when their church takes the offering for Benevolences on February 9th. Churches that find it inconvenient to receive this offering on the Sunday set for that purpose should take care of the matter on the very first Sunday possible thereafter.

Indiana is still being heard from on the College endowment proposition. Some of the smaller churches were recently visited by Brother Beachler and generally he finds they are anxious to do their bit. Some of the small churches, especially the mission points, are able to teach the big "established" churches some things about giving.

Brother Lyon comes to the readers of the Evangelist with a report, an appeal and an outlook. He reports that the Washington church has made such splendid advancement that their present building is inadequate. He asks for individuals to covenant to pray definitely and regularly that God will "touch hearts." And he looks forward to a new church building, possibly a memorial, that will enable the work to go forward unhampered. The editor wishes to be counted among those who will pray definitely for advancement of the Washington work and the touching of hearts by the finger of God.

Our little African missionary, Marguerite Gribble through the mind and hand of her mother, gives us an interesting account of an experience common to missionaries, that of "waiting for boats" and of God's answer to prayer. From the letter we learn that the Gribble party is still waiting at Brazzaville in French Equatorial Africa, and have had some sickness. The "flu" is some traveler to have followed them all the way to Africa. Let us pray that they may be given health and strength, and soon may be guided triumphantly into Ubangi-Shari-Chad their desired destination.

By the way, was that Thanksgiving offering ever taken? I know you, some of you, were unable to take it at Thanksgiving time because of the "flu" epidemic. But you know the Thanksgiving season has been extended this year so that all might have opportunity to get in on the Home Mission offering. And it is quite important that every church does its share in order that the Home Board shall be able to carry out its plans without embarrassment. You may have just neglected taking your offering, or it may not have seemed convenient. But whatever the reason for delay, the fact remains that the offerings of some, yes many of the churches have not reached Brother Orion E. Bowman of Dayton. People who are "slow pay," no matter how good their intentions, cause terrible embarrassment sometimes. Don't delay, but "do it now." For further reminder see Brother Carpenter's "Home Mission Notes."

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

Benevolences Is Now the Issue Before Us

From the Benevolence Director

The American people during the last few years have nobly responded to the support of young men who have gladly gone out to fight the battles of the nation. They have been fighting for noble ideals and purposes. We have tried to give them every comfort possible whether in camp, at home or over the seas. The American people will see that they do not come to want in years to come. But while we have given the young their full share of our means the American people have not forgotten the men who years ago gave their strength of manhood for the nation. I refer to the veterans of the Civil War. A sufficient pension is provided for them. They will be provided for as long as they live.

The Brethren church is providing for its active pastors with salaries at least sufficient for their living. Nor will the church ever fail to provide for their active men. But are we doing our best for the men who fought the battle of the church in other years? What about the veterans of the Cross? They gave the best of their lives for our beloved church. We rejoice in the fact that they had the courage to stand for their convictions in a day when it would have been much easier to have compromised. They believed so much in the great fundamentals of our church and the Word of God that they were willing to suffer for it, not in body but in wholly inadequate salaries. Today they are unable to earn a living. Have you, brother, seriously thought of how small a pittance we are giving them? How far does fifteen dollars a month go toward providing them with a living, especially when some of them are maintaining their own homes? Shall we be less loyal to veterans of the Cross than to veterans of the nation? The nation provides a home for its soldiers. In this home every comfort is given them. We do not even provide a home for them. Nor do we pay them enough to be cared for in other homes. They must be dependent upon their children and friends. Is it not time for the church to face this disgrace and adequately recompense these men?

As now provided for by National Conference the Board of Benevolences can only hope to pay fifteen dollars per month. Even this can not be done unless there is a most generous contribution by the church. The Board only asks for a gift equal to ten cents per member in your congregation. This will enable you to meet the demands of the Four Year Program. Meet this demand, but above it see the need of these men and graciously give until a larger monthly allowance can be given them. Make glad the hearts of our superannuates by saying, with larger gifts, "Give them more."

Do you realize that if one of these men needed a suit of clothes it would take at least two months' allowance to buy it; that it would take a half-month's allowance to buy a pair of shoes; that during the winter season it would take nearly half the allowance for one ton of coal per month; that if our brother still maintains a home, he and his good wife could not possibly live on the allowance. Give this call a few minutes consideration. We are sure you will enlarge your gifts.

Brother pastor, now is the time for you to make an earnest and insistent plea to your people. Will churches this year, as they did last year, blame their pastors for not presenting this call to them? Not only must we present this call but in some way bring the church to a noble response. If this call has been provided for in your budget insist that it be sent in now. Notices are now or soon will be in the hands of every pastor. Make the announcement next Sunday. We beseech of you to feel the responsibility God places upon you and honor God with a liberal gift. Above honoring the Board and reaching the Four Year Program make gifts that will be an honor to the God whose you are and whom you serve.

Send all money to Herman E. Roscoe, Goshen, Indiana. Mr. Roscoe is a layman, a cashier in a well known bank. Your money will be properly credited and cared for. His appeal on this page reveals to you his hope for the church and spirit of willing service to the Master.

Date February 9th. Superannuated fund. At least a sum equal to ten cents per member in your church.

H. H. WOLFORD,

An Appeal for Benevolences

Sunday, February 9th, the members of the Brethren church again will be given an opportunity, which should be considered a great privilege, to contribute of their means to the support of the superannuated ministers. We have quite a number of pioneer preachers of the faith who have served their time in the building up of the church of Jesus Christ and have performed their tasks with honor to God but with very little profit to themselves, as the world counts profit. So we find them in the evening of life with little or no means of support for themselves or families, and it is to this matter that we find it necessary to lend our efforts at this time.

The writer notes with much pride the new spirit that is being manifested among the brethren at our National conferences in regards to the perfecting of a church program that is worthy of our best efforts. We are growing and as we grow we must make room for still greater growth. We are co-ordinating and co-operating in a spirit never before seen, and this must be a source of great satisfaction to both the leadership and the laity. We are engaged in a mighty effort to endow our college at Ashland and we will succeed beyond our hopes. The results already obtained in many ways from the inspiration of the Four Year Program are encouraging, and we have just started. We have every reason to expect from it all that was hoped for.

It appears to the writer that we should have created a foundation or fund which would take care of our pastors who have served faithfully but who have never had salary sufficient to enable them to save for the day of old age and inactivity. This idea surely must appeal to all of us, especially to progressive pastors and laymen, as a part of our program for the future. Surely it fits in well with our present splendid program of advancement.

But until we reach this ideal we must do the work at hand by following out our custom of taking a yearly offering. Our Four Year Program calls for an offering of 10 cents per member. This seems like a very small sum in this day when we are giving in such large amounts to other benevolent institutions, but we shall do well to reach the goal in each and every church. To those who find themselves unusually blessed with the material things of this life, know what it is to have all the necessities and comforts and are filled with the spirit of our Master, who taught us the blessing of giving rather than of receiving, we would say, remember in a large way these faithful needy men of the superannuated class. If we give in a manner in keeping with our circumstances we shall at least do credit to ourselves by this effort to show our gratitude to those who are depending so much on us for their material support. Let us make our 1919 offering the largest in the history of our organization.

H. E. ROSCOE,
National Secretary, Board of Benevolences.

GENERAL ARTICLES

The Word of God In Evangelism By Dean J. Allen Miller, D.D.

The theme under discussion is at once among the most important that can engage our attention. It relates two fundamental concepts of our Christian religion into one tremendous proposition. The Word of God as committed to the church is a divine deposit, an entrustment, a will to be executed. Evangelism is a divinely imposed function of the Christian ministry in particular. The two are inseparably connected. The Word of God can not be presented in its power and in its winsome attractiveness apart from its essential character as an evangel. Neither can evangelism do its effective service for Christ and humanity apart from its own dynamic which must always remain the Word of God. The New Testament evangelist therefore has no choice either as to the character of the message he is to bear or as to the specific tasks assigned him by his Master. To fail in either aspect is to fail in the work of an evangelist. It is therefore worth our while to study the subject under consideration seriously.

In the first place then let us consider briefly the importance attached to the work of an evangelist. Some very simple gospel teachings lie at the basis of this work. God revealed his will to men through Jesus Christ. Men are sinners and as such are lost. Lost sinners need salvation. This salvation is provided in a most wonderful and gracious way by God through the Lord Jesus Christ. Men are weak and prone to err and they need divine guidance and divine enlightenment. This guidance and enlightenment is freely bestowed upon all true believers in the gift of the Holy Spirit. The life of the Christian becomes meaningful and purposeful. In the present life he shares the heavenly Father's goodness and love and in the life to come he is the recipient of blessedness, power and peace. There is hope for the hopeless; there is strength for the helpless; there is power for weakness; and there is victory and life's goal realized potentially in every believer in Jesus Christ. The Evangelists must never forget that their message is primarily a message of love and hope, of life and happiness. It is a message of good news from the heavenly Father to his lost and erring children.

Let us look also for a moment at the objectives the evangelist has set before him. These objectives the Word of God itself sets forth. They are not of the man's own choosing. If he seeks the blessing of God upon his work he must strive to realize these objectives. He must hold them uppermost in his prayer, in his sermon, in his personal efforts and in his testimony to his Lord. What are these objectives? They are mainly two. All else is subservient or included under these two. First, the evangelist's primary objective is the winning of souls to Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ is Lord of all men as well as their Savior. It is the evangelist's supreme endeavor to bring men to an open confession of Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior. He seeks to win men from their sins and to commit them definitely and positively and for all time to the Lord Jesus Christ. Thus he builds up the church numerically. There is a second objective, and it is scarcely less important than the first. It is to edify the church. The church needs again and again to be called back to an appreciation and an appraisal of its obligations to its divine Lord. The church is constantly in danger of lapsing into indifference; of neglecting to care for the most vital interests committed to her; of growing insensitive to the will of God. The evangelist is needed in every congregation of believers to arouse, to enthuse and to empower anew every member for service.

Having thus very briefly set forth the importance of the evangelist's work and the main objectives for which he strives let us consider his message. It is here that we shall see the vital connection of evangelism with the Word of God. For the sake of clearness let us briefly note the dominant characteristics of an evangelist's work and of his sermon.

1. The work of an evangelist can not be done apart from the constant use of the Word of God. I refer here to his personal work among the people; that work which the successful evangelist does outside the pulpit. In dealing with the problems of men and women the Bible must be his constant appeal of authority and wisdom. The best handbook ever yet compiled for personal work is the gospel itself. The evangelist must know his Book as well as his man. And as he must deal fairly and sincerely with the man to win him so he must with the Book to experience its power as an effective weapon in his hand.

2. The evangelist's message from the pulpit must have a note of authority and finality as of God. He has no right to deal in glittering generalities when discussing the eternal issues of the souls of men. Neither has he any right to substitute for the positive authority of the Word of God on the issue of life and the destinies of men's souls mere human opinions and soft and smooth inventions of men. The Word of God says, Men are sinners. It says, Except a man be born again he can not see the kingdom of God. It says, There is salvation in none other than in Jesus Christ. It says, The blood of Jesus Christ his son cleanses from all sin. These and other such teachings essential and fundamental have the tone of finality and absolute divine authority back of them. Only the Word of God can give the evangelist a message that will compel attention because it is authoritative.

3. The message of the evangelist must center in Jesus Christ and his redeeming acts. Practically all we know of the person and the work of Jesus Christ we learn from the gospel and the rest of the New Testament. No man has an evangel without Christ. The world has no word of hope except in Christ. Christ must be central in every sermon that would win men to him. Too many sermons are barren,—yes, too many meetings as a whole are barren,—because Jesus Christ instead of overshadowing all is himself overshadowed by some puny human self. Then as to the work of Jesus, his life and its teachings, his sacrificial death and burial, his resurrection and ascension—these are ever first in the message that would really win a man to salvation and the new life. But the only source whence our full knowledge and meaning of them is to be drawn is the Word of God. An evangelist just can not be an evangelist in the New Testament sense and not preach a full gospel.

4. The message of an evangelist must be one of good news. The only good news he is called upon to proclaim is to dying and sinful men. And what such men need most of all is a message of hope and pardon, of a new life and a new chance to make good for God. Pardon for sin is one very essential element in this message. Hope to retrieve a misspent past life is another element. Power to keep one from failing and falling having once been recovered by God's grace is needed. Well, just to put it in a word, the evangelist's message of "good news" is the good Word of God itself. He can not preach without it. He has no good word without it.

5. Finally the evangelist's message must be one that inspires to righteous endeavor. He calls men to salvation, that is, perfect soundness, wholeness, completeness of life. He calls men to a life of high endeavor and holy motive. He insists that peace and blessedness will ensue upon a genuine obedience to God's will. To enforce all this his constant appeal must be to the Word of God. The Word of God must become a living, throbbing, impelling force in every new life begotten of the Holy Spirit through an evan-gelist's appeal. How can he make the appeal and vitalize it apart from the living Word? How can a man be drawn from his old and too often satisfactory ways of living to a new and self-sacrificing way without a sufficiently strong and impelling motive? And how can a long life and life endeavor be sustained, often under most trying and difficult and even painfully self-sacrificing conditions, without divine help and renewal? To all such questions there can be but one reply. It is that apart from the power of the living Spirit of God in the life and the living Word of God to instruct and inspire, earth can afford no adequate motive for living, to say nothing of supplying a motive for self-sacrificing surrender in arduous service of others.

And so the present writer concludes that apart from the Word of God there can be no evangelism. An evangelist has no message apart from that drawn from the Word. He is like a soldier disarmed when he loses the Word of God. And how unequal the fight with the Hunnish forces of evil when the edge of his sword is turned! The sword of the Spirit is yet the Word of the living God. And this sword is yet two-edged and sharp disclosing not only the thoughts of men but the will of God.

May Brethren evangelists be noted for their powerful gospel preaching. May they sincerely honor the Word of God in their life, their work, and their preaching so that God may honor them with their proper rewards.

The Word of God and evangelism stand inextricably bound together.

What Will the Realization of Goal Six Mean to the Brethren Church?

By Wm. H. Beachler, Director of Goals Six and Eight

Goal six has been called the "Recruit Goal." It calls for an increase of seventy-five in our ministry and missionary force by 1920. I am asking that we shall think what the realization of this goal will mean to the Brethren church. In the statement of my subject I am assuming that its realization is a certainty.

Seventy-five new recruits to our ministry and missionary force in four years will mean first, that the Brethren church has given proof of her spirituality and consecration. Only spiritual, consecrated denominations are yielding forth workers for definite service for Christ in anything like a commendable degree. Second, it will mean that our list of pastorless churches which is distressingly large will be materially reduced. Third, it will mean workers ready at hand to enter fields in the home land which are ripe and beckoning to the Brethren church. And fourth, it will mean that we as a church will have the necessary workers to enable us to more fully assume our part in the great work of worldwide evangelization. These are some of the outstanding results which will follow the realization of goal six. Surely there is inspiration in the contemplation of such results! They are results really worth while.

Up to this time I have been assuming that we are sure to gain this goal. But, on the other hand, suppose we do not realize it, then what? Are we to then and there conclude that that part of the Four Year Program was a failure? Now, then, notwithstanding what I have already said, I am going to say frankly here and now that I have serious doubts if we will realize goal six. True, the final results may show that my doubts were unfounded (I sincerely hope they may be). Nor do I mean as General Director of this goal that because I may have some fears in the matter any man who is at all responsible for the success of this goal shall in any way slacken his efforts; by no means.

But suppose we do fail (and I am not looking for a soft place to light) I shall by no means consider that particular part of the Program a failure in the strictest, largest sense. I maintain that something which will have held the attention of the leadership of the church constantly to the thought of recruits to our ministry for four years is bound to produce results, if not now, then later, and cannot therefore be considered a failure. If we only enlist thirty of the seventy-five I shall still feel that goal six has accomplished a great purpose. I have no doubt at all that in the many years to come young people will find their way into definite service for Christ and the church as a result of goal six in our Four Year Program.

Hence I consider that we have every inducement to go forward and do our very best in the interest of goal six. For if indeed we might not reap as much from our labor by 1920 as we desire, yet we may have the full assurance that we will reap ultimately.

For the rest of the time let us consider the field from which these recruits are to come and some of the agencies which will have, or ought to have a part in the work of enlistment. From where are these recruits to come? Not from the skies. No, they are on earth right now. They are real, live young men and women, and for the most part they are in Brethren Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies. And while I am not overlooking the important responsibility which rests upon Christian parents and pastors in this connection, yet I must feel that our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies hold a peculiarly strategic place in determining whether or not these prospective recruits will find their place in the definite service of our Lord and King.

And as Director of the "Recruit Goal" I want to urge upon all of our societies that they make the "Recruit Goal" truly their goal, and that they use Ashland College Night to the fullest possible extent in getting young people to enlist definitely for the ministry or missionary work. This, it seems to me, will be putting Ashland College Night to the highest possible use.

In instances where churches have no Endeavor societies why could not our Sunday schools observe Ashland College day in their session of February 9th and at that service why could not pastors or superintendents give opportunity to young people to enlist in definite Christian service? May I urge this upon the serious consideration of our pastors and superintendents in such churches as have no Endeavor societies. Surely if this matter is approached prayerfully and carefully by our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies on February 9th, much can be done toward realizing goal six, and promoting the kingdom of heaven. May it be so.

One way to make your church prosperous and to help all the goals in the our Year Program is to see that your church is a praying church. Prosperity in church work is inseparably connected with prayer and the very life and growth of the church is dependent upon prayer. It is written, "My house shall be called a house of prayer." We must never lose faith in prayer. We must never abandon prayer. We must never lose the spirit of prayer. A church can get on for a considerable time without singing, and can go on indefinitely with indifferent singing. A church may do well with poor preaching, and even without preaching of any kind. But a church without prayer is no church at all. We might as well expect a man to live without breathing as to expect a church to live without praying. Pray for the minister. Pray for the sick and afflicted. Pray for the children. Pray for the lost. Pray for the community. Pray for one another. Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he may send forth laborers into his harvest. Pray without ceasing. Pray everywhere. Let the church be characterized by prayer, filled with the atmosphere of prayer, and crowded with the trophies of prayer.

What If Germany Had Won?

By J. L. Gillin, Ph.D.

Did you ever stop to think what would have been the effect on our religious thinking, if Germany had won in the war? It is well within the range of possibility that she might have done so. When one thinks of the situation in France last July, it is not hard to think that she might have conquered. A man told me only a few days ago that just before the American army got into the fight in France some of the allied commanders had a conference at which General Pershing was present. At that meeting it was seriously discussed whether the allied commanders should not give up the fight. The decision to keep up the fight, according to the story, was due to the pleadings of General Pershing who urged that the American people would not understand the matter if they threw up the sponge without giving our boys a chance to show what they could do.

Now, suppose that the Germans had won. Suppose that today France and England were prostrate before the victorious hosts of Germany. Suppose that Germany had Paris and London within their power; had captured our armies over there; and had arrogantly imposed heavy indemnities upon the conquered after visiting every insult upon them. Might has now triumphed over right. The ideals of justice for the weak and pity for age and sex have been flung to the winds of lust and rapine. Arrogance has now flung down into the dust the gentleness of humility and love. A nation which has spurned every counsel of righteousness for the counsel of selfishness, which has trampled every law of man and God beneath its feet, and which has outraged every decency achieved through the struggles of the countless ages of human history, has won its own brutal and merciless way. It stands unchallenged. Its God is the merciless and unChristian god of blood and iron. What would we now be saying about the justice of God who permits such things? What effect would such a victory have had upon our sense of eternal fitness of things?

Well, fortunately for us, had such a thing happened, in the Book which has preserved for us the record of God's dealings with people in former centuries we have told us how God's people reacted to just such a situation. That was what happened in the days of the Babylonian exile of the Hebrews.

Few of us have ever appreciated what a crisis that exile brought to the Hebrews. It certainly was a very severe test of their faith in a just God. How could they reconcile the fact of exile from Jehovah's land and temple with a belief that their God was a loving and just God. Were they not Jehovah's chosen people? Had there not been numerous signs that they were the objects of his special care? Had Jehovah not driven out the inhabitants of Canaan before them in order that they might have a land for Jehovah? Had not Jehovah revealed his will to them alone of all the peoples of the earth?

Moreover, in spite of the fact that the prophets told them that their land was destroyed because of their own sins against Jehovah, was it not true that with all their sins they were a better people than the Chaldeans and the Babylonians who were oppressing them? (Hab. 1:13). How could a just God permit a brutal, merciless and uncircumcised people, who were strangers to the covenants and alien to the promises of Jehovah, to punish them who with all their faults were still Jehovah's special people? With all their sins were they not more righteous than the Babylonians? How could their God be just if he permitted the Babylonians to devastate their land—these Babylonians who dashed little children against the stones and violated the women, and destroyed Jehovah's own house?

These and many other questions did arise in the hearts of those Hebrews who thought at all about the matter. Doubtless that explains why so many of those who were carried away into captivity renounced their faith in Jehovah, like the contemporaries of Jeremiah who went down into Egypt and worshipped the Queen of Heaven (Jer. 44:15-19). No wonder Ezekiel had such great difficulty in keeping up the courage of those who were carried with him to Babylon. No wonder that only a "remnant" were faithful and came back to the Land of Promise.

In our case we shall have no difficulty in reconciling the outcome of the war with the conception of a just God who rules in history. But, had we been defeated while fighting unselfishly in the cause of righteousness, what answer could we have made to our own questionings, or the inquiry of our taunters: "Where is thy God?" Would we have had the prophets who could have given adequate answer to that question in the day of defeat? The greatness of the prophets of Israel lay in the fact that they once and for all time gave an answer to that hard question which not only was based on the facts of sin, but on the assumption that God is a God of justice. Israel had been guilty of social injustice. The rich had oppressed the poor; the noble, the peasant; the favored forgot to sympathize with the unfortunate; and men preyed upon their less fortunate brethren. Social injustice had cleft asunder the body of the nation. There was no bond of sympathy holding them together as one social unit, every part of which was in lively sympathy with every other part. While Babylon was also guilty of such things, Israel was the guiltier because she had been the recipient of God's special revelations through the law-givers and the prophets. To her more had been given, therefore, of her was more required.

The ancient answer has significance for us today. Let us see to it that in this land of liberty and democracy the church of Jesus makes that liberty and democracy instinct with the spirit of the prophets and of Jesus. For be advised that the slogan of the Bolsheviks of Russia is also liberty and democracy. The church will utterly fail in its opportunity if it fails to see to it that the ideals that have won out in this war are permeated through and through with the spirit that was in Christ Jesus.

If the outcome of this war makes us feel satisfied with ourselves and with our social righteousness, God pity us. The Chaldeans and Babylonians made that very mistake. The Rabshakeh whom Sennacherib sent to take Jerusalem said, "And am I come up without Jehovah against this land to destroy it? Jehovah said unto me, Go up against this land, and destroy it." That was true, but he forgot that the God of righteousness would require at his hands the punishment for the sins of his own people in due time. If we come out of this war with the feeling that God has no fault to find with us as a people, simply because we won against Germany, let us be warned by the answer of the Hebrew prophets.

FORGOTTEN? OR IGNORED?

I mean, is the veteran of our religious warfare forgotten that he is left to subsist as best he can, sometimes depending on the charity of friends and neighbors? Or is he simply ignored. Out of kindness we endeavor to believe the former. But oh, how long drawn out is the forgetfulness of the Brethren church. We have waited so long to show any worthy evidence of gratitude for the aged minister that many of them have gone beyond the need of our help. But there are still a number left amongst us. Their heaven-turned faces and scars of many battles and victories are sources of inspiration to us who are still in the van of the battle. The fruit of their toil is all about us, we are daily feeding upon it. And yet we forget their simple needs when they gave their all to make possible what we now enjoy. I would not be so rude as to say we have purposely neglected them, but they have been neglected even though thoughtlessly. And the consequences are the same.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

For This Is Right By J. L. Kimmel

TEXT, Ephesians 6:1

In the first verse of this most wonderful chapter of this most wonderful book, the great apostle to the Gentiles lays down in one word the law of human conduct—right. It is almost beyond our comprehension to think that all nations and tribes with their different languages, dialects and idioms could be governed by one single word—right.

But this word expresses a truth, not of human origin, but an immutable law. It has come to us from God, brought out of the very depths of eternity. It has therefore, become an innate principle, planted by God into the very soul of man. It would not be absolutely necessary to have it written in the Bible, for the barbarian recognizes it, as well as the Christian. If, for illustration, a strong man should strike and abuse an innocent little child, every one would condemn the man, and say it was not right for him to abuse the child. If, therefore, this law of right, is the declared will of God, where must we look for it? It is partially expressed in nature, more fully revealed at Sinai and completely taught by Jesus Christ the Lord.

As the standard of time is the sun and the standard of color is the rainbow, and the standard of measurement is the star, so the standard of human conduct is Jesus Christ the Son of God. His life was perfection, never did he do wrong. His life was righteousness personified, never did he sin. His life was God incarnate, never did he make a mistake. He taught, but his teaching excelled that of every other teacher. He spake, but he spake as never man spake. He suffered, but by his suffering he convinced his enemies that he was God incarnate. He died but his death was a triumph and a conquest, and from that day to this men have stood and looked with amazement upon the life and death of him, who is called the Christ.

If we intend to do right therefore, we must discriminate between right and wrong, between good and evil, between God and Satan. In order that we may do right, we must know what is right, and then do it—do it at all hazards, do it at any cost; sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish we must do it, because truth is immortal and will prevail. But men are too willing to do right only when it is convenient, when it does not cost anything. They are too apt to put convenience and self interest first and make right a secondary matter.

But how do we know when a thing is right or wrong? My answer is, go to the standard of truth, God's Word, and you shall know. Ask yourself the question, "What would Jesus do?" Talk it over with him, and you shall know. No, you need not go to Ella Wheeler Wilcox, or to the Cosmopolitan, or the "ouija board"—God forbid that any of our ministers should for one moment consider such erroneous doctrines. There is but one standard of truth and that is God's Word.

When Peter and John were brought before the great Jewish Sanhedrin for healing the cripple at the temple gate, they were instructed not to preach any longer in the name of Jesus, and they might enjoy their liberty. But these men of God replied, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you, rather than unto God, judge ye." With these men of God the question was, "Is it right," not "What will happen to us? Will we get our liberty or will we have to remain in prison—but is it right in the sight of God? Is it right to get from three to five dollars a day for your work, every day of the week, and then go to the house of the Lord on Sunday morning and give a penny to the cause upon which the salvation of the world depends? Is it right to sell your wheat for two dollars and twenty cents per bushel and your eggs for sixty cents per dozen, then stay at home on Sunday morning, and not even give the Christ who died for you a red copper, when you should be giving him dollars and praising his holy name besides? Will you let a good man speak to you for a few minutes as to what is right? "The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart; the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes; the fear of the Lord is clean enduring for ever; the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether. More to be desired are they than gold, yea than much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb. Moreover by them is thy servant warned and in keeping of them there is great reward.

Is it right to reject the Christ, who died for your sins, all your life and expect to go to heaven and walk upon golden streets when you die? The greatest sin of all the sins of all the ages, is the rejection of the Son of God, the Savior of the world. O, the ingratitude of the human heart. O how men will warp their consciences, dull their moral sensibilities and cripple their usefulness, because they are not willing to even consider the right.

My friend is your conduct right? Is your relation with God right? Is it right for you to withhold from God your time, your talents, your life, when Christ has so much need of all these?

What this old world needs is more conscience—more conscience in the pulpit, more conscience in the pew, more conscience in politics, more conscience in business, more conscience in the store, more conscience in the shop, more conscience in the kitchen, more conscience in the parlor, more conscience on the farm. Oh, for a quickened religious conscience, that will compel a man to walk a mile to pay another a penny rather than not pay him at all. Germany lost her conscience and the collapse came. She said the judgment day will ask no questions, but the judgment day is already asking more questions than Germany is able to answer. Better look out for the judgment day for it will surely come. Better do the right and do it now and a great reward will be in store for you.

Let us be honest for a single moment, and ask ourselves the question, "Would it be right for God to reward us with the reward of the righteous when we come to the end of life, take us to heaven, give us mansions to live in and a throne to sit upon, when we have never been willing to do right here? Would it be right to expect our Lord to "Carry us to the skies

On flowery beds of ease
While others fought to win the prize
And sailed through bloody seas?"

OUR DEVOTIONAL

The Christian's Love for Souls

By R. Paul Miller

What a profound lesson for every Christian soul! Yet how sadly neglected! How seldom observed in life! How freely have we Christians imbibed of the spirit of the world which says, "Love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy." How we love those who love us, and dislike those who dislike us!

How often have I retreated to my study after a severe strain amid the round and strife among men, sat down with my head between my hands and asked myself what impression I have made upon those I have just dealt with. What is their estimate of my Christianity? Am I remembered for my strong likes and dislikes, or for my generous love and compassion for all? Have I manifested my faith and discipleship as Jesus said all his disciples would? "By this, shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." Have my words been words of love and kindness? Have they shown a great heart instead of a small soul? Have I caused them to have greater respect for Jesus and the religion which bears his name? Have I shown them that the heart of Christianity is love, overspreading love?

How prone we are to draw the limits of our love according to our own selfish souls. This is what the Pharisees and Scribes were doing, and what Jesus was condemning in our lesson. The law said "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (Lev. 19:18). But they narrowly reasoned, "Who is my neighbor?" (Luke 10:29), and said an enemy could not be a neighbor, therefore, they were not duty bound to love enemies. In this way they had drawn the limits of their benevolence into a very small radius, thus forming "classes" and "cliques." This resulted in their having practically no dealings with others than of their own class, much less to strive to reach out and do them positive good in the name of the loving God, whom they professed to serve.

Such a love as this is what is commonly found in the world and carries no real weight of virtue in it. That's why Jesus said, "If ye love them which love you, what reward have you? Do not even the publicans the same?" In other words, if our love as Christians is no greater in its measure, or broader in its scope than those who make absolutely no profession at all, how does the love of God dwell in us? What have we more than they and how can we lay claim to more?

How sad, yet true it is that numberless Christians really show less love for "Others" than many worldlings do. The worldly people serve to be seen of men while the Christian is supposed to be moved by the impulse of love divinely planted within his soul. How the knowledge of this fact should shame us, awaken us, and spur us on to seek God's face and closer fellowship with him that we may in turn reflect God's love to love-hungry souls.

"But how can we love those who seek our hurt, who speak evil concerning us falsely, who rejoice to see us fall, who secretly plan our disgrace?" Such love is a divine gift and is not known outside of Christ. It is a spark of that love with which God so loved the world. And was it a world filled with friends and sons that he loved? No, but a world filled with enemies.

And that love has been turning enemies into friends and sons for two thousand years. Ah, here is a secret of the Christians' love for souls: it makes friends of enemies and brethren of strangers. If we would just love our so-called "enemies," we would find that we did not have very many enemies. Most of our enemies are born in our own souls. We estimate them on the surface as enemies, then we treat them as enemies and soon they take the role of enemies towards us. If our hearts had been filled with love for souls we would have made them friends, and perhaps brethren.

The thing that drew the multitudes to Jesus was not his beauty, or his power, so much as his love for them all. They knew the moment they saw him that he had a heart flowing over with love for them; that in him they could find one to help lighten their burdens, comfort their sorrows and bring them to God. And as he was, so should we be in this world. How often have we met big, kindly, Christian men who made us to feel that in them we had a friend and confidant even though we had never seen them before. They have hearts filled with love for souls, that's what draws others to them.

But are we to love strangers and unbelievers with the same love that we love our families and brethren in Christ?

That is impossible; for they do not bear the same relation to us. But we are to love them to the saving of their souls; to see in each precious life, a soul for whom Jesus gave his precious life to save; to see in each one, a soul that may be lost if we do not speak to him about Jesus; to see in each one a soul as we once were, without peace, without hope, without God in the world, strangers to his love and family. How glad we were that some one had a love for our souls enough to lead us to Jesus!

O, how blind we are to the need, the crying need all around us. How censorious and critical we are of the sinner, instead of having love and compassion for him.

Two Sunday school workers were walking down the city street one winter day. They soon came abreast of a poor drunken fellow being gayed by newsboys and others. They too smiled at his predicament and spoke with disgust of such a character. They were almost past him when he slipped and fell into the gutter and there he lay, too weak to rise. With self-righteous remarks they continued on their way without a thought of helping the poor man. At this moment a door across the street flew open and a refined looking woman hurried across to where the drunken man lay. Helping him to his feet, she wiped the mud from his bloated face with her handkerchief and took him to her home. The Sunday school workers went on remarking that such men were not fit to be helped. But the woman bathed his face, gave him a bath, a clean bed to sleep in, and when he had slept off his stupor she gave him some clean clothes of her husband's to put on, and that evening she and her husband took him to a little mission nearby. He heard the message of Jesus' love for sinners. And when the plea to accept Jesus was given, he arose and with tears streaming down his face went to the front and cried to God to save his poor soul. He was gloriously saved and became a strong Christian worker. But I wonder where the poor man would have been if that woman had had the same brand of Christian love for souls that the two Christian workers had? May we search our own souls to see whether we are following the Sunday school workers or that true Christian woman. Do we not really despise the fallen and outcast? Would we not really have been afraid of getting our clothes soiled if we had helped that man in the gutter? Do we not withhold our love from those who most need it and lavish it on those who appreciate it least? O, that we would let the Master make our cold hearts warm, make our small souls large and great, and merciful, and make our love like his, that we might seek to save the lost. If we just had a vision of the awful procession of lost souls filing past the gate of death, I believe the love of every one of us would burn into a never-dying passion for lost souls.

Moody once told of a man who could never understand why some people were so concerned about the salvation of others. One night he dreamed that he entered the gates of heaven and soon the Savior appeared and led him to the battlements of the eternal city. Looking out into the haze, the Savior said, "Do you see them?" He answered, "I see nothing." Still looking the man finally said, "Now I see, its a great procession on the dark world I have just come from. But there is a terrible precipice there. Those in the procession are blind-folded. They are all going over the precipice. Why does not someone warn them and turn them back?" Sadly the Master answered, "There is no one there who cares." Awaking from sleep the man went out and gave his life to saving men.

O merciful Father in heaven, save us from ourselves. Take from us our stony hearts and give us hearts of love for souls. Forgive us for our selfishness and coldness of heart. Make us to realize the awfulness of being a lost soul. Reveal to us the glories of salvation. Give us a vision of eternity, the shortness of life and the certainty of death. Pour into our hearts a stream of love from thine own great heart, that we might in turn love and seek the lost till the last member of the "Church" is safe in the fold, and Jesus comes to gather all his own. In his precious name we ask it. Amen."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

EQUIPPING AN EFFICIENT SUNDAY SCHOOL

By Albert Trent

The question of furnishing our schools with the necessary equipment to make them as efficient as possible is a serious problem with every thoughtful superintendent. The material equipment for Sunday schools set forth by the writers of books, journals and general literature, as being necessary for successful work, is rather bewildering to the officers of a school of average enrollment, without even considering the schools having an enrollment of only a score or two or less, and the cost of up-to-date equipment makes it an equally perplexing problem to the smaller schools.

It is evident however that material equipment is an essential factor in every successful school. The character, the quality and quantity or extent of this equipment, must be determined by the officers of the individual school. The value of pictures, maps, charts, etc., to make vivid to the eye and clear to the mind gospel truths can scarcely be overestimated. The mind is similarly impressed with sound through the ear and truths in this way indelibly fixed. The smaller children are easily interested and readily grasp facts through what we may term the muscular sense in the use of sand tables, blackboards and the handling of articles, patterns and models of tools and implements from Oriental lands and ancient times. There are also many things in the line of furnishings that may be used to make the Sunday school home a beautiful and attractive place. The wise teacher will use all of such means at her command as ready gate-ways by which strong and lasting impressions of truth may be made upon the soul of the child.

Churches constructed in accordance with modern plans to accommodate their schools on the lines of present day efficiency, with separate sections for each grade and separate class rooms, and having the financial means find that an elaborate furnishing of material equipment is not a difficult feature. But where a school must be held in one room, and the only means for separating classes consists of a few curtains, it becomes a real problem to decide upon the kind of equipment that will prove most effective.

I am convinced also that excellent work is being done in many of our schools in limited environments, and conducted under disadvantages, with scarcely any up-to-date furnishings except a thoroughly devoted, consecrated corps of officers and teachers. Therefore, those of us who cannot have an ample equipment in this line, at this time, need not necessarily be discouraged, but let us press forward under existing conditions, endeavoring to make our efforts approved of God and effective through the right use of the word of truth.

The conscientious superintendent, however, may also feel that there is a reasonable limit to the amount of money to be spent in this way, as long as the evangelizing of the world has not been completed. Many thousands of dollars are spent annually by the schools of America for mere comfort, attractiveness and ornamentation, that would accomplish more in the Master's cause if given to the Belgians, the Armenians or to gospel-less people of other lands.

We are living in a wonderful mechanical age. The tendency has been to emphasize rather over much the mechanical phase of the work, and possibly, to the neglect of the real function of the Bible school. Am I wrong in the thought that the future tendency in Sunday school work will place a greater emphasis on heart culture? I think some one has said, "If mechanics could save the world the world would be saved already."

The most effective equipment, the most valuable asset, the greatest attraction that any school can have for boys and girls and for men and women, is a corps of consecrated teachers who have the grace and ability of making the Word a living issue in the lives of those whom they teach.

The Supreme Aim In Teaching

By Mrs. L. G. Wood

This is a subject of very vital importance, and one which calls for the definition of that which is supreme. When we discuss the "Supreme Aim" of Bible teaching, we are not merely discussing ideals, but also that which is fundamental in the achievement of the ideals. Teaching is "causing another to know" and when we take into consideration the Sunday school teacher's text-book—the Bible—we conclude that the supreme aim is to cause another to know God. The Bible is God's revelation of himself and its right use is attained only when he is made known.

1—The first and supreme aim is to bring the living pupil and the living word into such close personal contact as to constitute a relationship. To do this the teacher must know her pupil as well as her text book. One has wisely said, "A whole minded Christian teacher must know God, love God, obey God." When the pupil has been led to decide for Christ, the work is only properly begun.

2—The second step in the supreme task is to direct the pupil in this new found relationship in the constructive work of character building. The idle convert is in graver danger than the unconverted.

It has been beautifully said that the "the school is a garden of souls and the teacher is the horticulturist." The teacher herself must know how to study and grow and give expert guidance to the pupil.

The home is the soil in which the young plants grow and this suggests the widening of the teacher's responsibilities in the attainment of the supreme aim. She will secure the hearty co-operation of the home, where it is possible. Here difficult work will be found in dealing with both the growing pupil and adult. It is possible the teacher will sometimes find in the case of adult pupils, that the work is not only constructive but reconstructive, this will make the task still more difficult, but the supreme aim will justify the greatest effort. Regardless of the age of the pupil, the teacher's fundamental task is to impart a right conception of God, the Bible and the church.

3—The third step in the teacher's supreme aim is to inspire to service. To make God known, and direct growth in the building of a strong noble character is not the climax of the teacher's aim. It is to inspire the pupil to make the investment of his knowledge and the forces of his character in the greatest of all enterprises the extension of Christ's kingdom on earth. The teacher must not be satisfied with making an impression on the mind of her pupils, in fact, she can not know that there is any impression being made, but by the expression drawn from the pupil.

Therefore, the three-fold aim is, first, to lead to Christ; second, to establish in Christ; third, to lead to service for Christ. The greatest task God has committed to a man or woman is that of watching the unfolding of a life, and with kind understanding help it to grasp the right meaning of life.

A Commendable Example

We are pleased to quote from an encouraging letter written by Brother Roy Brumbaugh of Portis, Kansas:

I was elected teacher training superintendent of the Kanemorado District last fall, and thought the best place to begin would be at home and set a good example for the rest of the schools. Things have begun to pick up here again and we hope for normal conditions within a few weeks, but we do not want to stop where we left off. You may send me one dozen copies of "The Educative Process in Religion." We expect to start our class at once. Do not know exactly how many books we will need as yet, but feel positive this first order will not be enough.

That message is full of encouragement. It indicates that Brother Brumbaugh is determined to be more than a nominal district superintendent. It is not likely that Portis will disappoint him, for several years ago they graduated a nice class, and doubtless will do equally well with the new course. Other schools of that and other districts will do well to follow this commendable example. Hindrances experienced during the early part of the year should not be allowed to delay our training work any longer than absolutely necessary. Remember the Standard of Excellence requires a class in every school to attain the Front Line position. But more important than this requirement is the evident and urgent need of trained teachers in your school. It must be supplied. You can supply it. Will you do it? J. A. GARBER.

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

Life Work in Christian Endeavor By E. A. Rowsey

I want to have a heart to heart talk with the Ohio leaders of Christian Endeavor. That means I will be talking largely to young people. There is nothing more inspiring than youth. "Keep your youth," says Dr. Cadman, "for it comes only once to maid and man alike. Christian youthhood is so beautiful it almost fills one with a sweet pain. Great things have been done, and greater things must be done by the youth with their joy, courage and desire for sacrificial service." From this statement one is impressed with the greatness of the material out of which Christian Endeavor is built. "From such an organization," some one has said, "A new divinity will arise to change the world for the better.

Fellow Endeavorers, if our work tomorrow is a success we must busy ourselves today preparing leaders to carry forward the work. The war has taken our future poets and divines. It has robbed us of untold spiritual force. We must keep our hands on the things of faith that have been committed to our charge. Our powers must be consecrated to Jesus Christ for service as Christian leaders.

Do I hear you say: We are succeeding in this much needed work? Fine, but here lurks a grave peril. Success is full of promise till men get it; and then it is a last year's nest, from which the birds have flown. Your past achievements, present ability and natural gifts, do not bring privileges, so much as they bring duties. There ought to be an atmosphere in every Christian Endeavor society, so wholesome that a person going there would catch an enthusiasm which would kindle the altar fires for service in his or her life. When our societies reach such a stage visible results will be inevitable and the often quoted lines of Henry Ward Beecher will no longer be merely a quotation but a reality, namely, "The truest self-respect is not to think of self."

In closing I wish to speak a word more particularly to the Ohio Endeavorers. We have approximately fifteen societies in this state. If you will glance at the Four Year Program you will see Ohio's quota is twenty "Life Work Recruits." Let's make a special effort to get one recruit from each society on Ashland College Night, February the ninth. Your society should reach a climax on that night. It should go down, not only in the record book of your society, but in the hearts of all present as a mountain-top experience. Let's work and pray to make this lofty vision a dynamic reality. Pick out the members of your society who should surrender their lives to some definite Christian service, then place their names upon a prayer card, talk with them about their future work in a very tactful way. Lead them into a broader vision of life by showing them you are interested in their welfare and desire for them the biggest and best things possible.

I have four little books entitled, "Studies in Christian Heroism." The individual titles of the books are as follows—"The Call to Service," "The Triumphant Ministry," "Reapers of His Harvest," and "Heroes of the Campus." They contain many rich truths which would be helpful to any one seeking to determine a life work. They contain thrilling stories of how the world's greatest leaders made the supreme sacrifice to obey the still small voice of conscience. They would make a fine life work library for any society and we heartily recommend them. They may be secured from, "The Westminster Press, Philadelphia, Pa., for $2.00 net. You may secure these books to read by sending your name and address to me. Meanwhile, let's remember Ashland College Night and our part in recruiting for Christ.

They Are Planning

Prof. J. A. Garber

Surely! They are planning to make Ashland College Night the biggest and best event of the season. Just note the following requests:

From Miss Naomi Wilson, Elkhart, Indiana: Please send us 100 programs for Ashland College Night.

From DeMain Warner, Goshen, Indiana: Kindly send to me at once 75 of the programs for Ashland College Night.

From Mrs. A. B. Cover, Hagerstown, Maryland: Will you please send me 25 programs for College Night? And she adds: We have had a recent drive for membership netting about one hundred new members. And we desire to say: Halleluiah. Let all the Endeavorers say: Praise the Lord.

Those are inspiring messages. Others doubtless are making similar plans. If any society has failed to plan until now you will be unable to delay longer after reading about the activities of fellow Endeavorers. Programs have been mailed to every society. If they are not received let us hear from you and we will try to replace them.

Double Your Society

In one of his stirring messages Dr. Clark says that twenty thousand societies might double their membership and the rest very much enlarge theirs before 1920. Then he suggests the wisdom of launching a "doubling up" campaign.

We heartily agree with both ideas. In the Brethren church there are almost a hundred Young People's societies, not to mention the Juniors and Intermediates, that could double their membership before April 1st. The inauguration of such an effort would be one of the finest moves for Christian Endeavor Week. Let it become the specific aim of the first line of Endeavor suggested in the New World Campaign, which appeared on this page two weeks ago. To put the idea more definitely: If your society has twenty-five members now, make your goal fifty. If twenty attend regularly, strive to secure a regular attendance of forty.

The same plan might be profitably employed in connection with every phase of our work. If only six members have been won to the church through your society, seek to increase the number to twelve, at least. Where thirty persons are enrolled in the Army of Patriotic Service, multiply it by two, having sixty enrolled. If you reported twenty Quiet Hour Comrades, labor to raise the number to forty. Where there are fifteen Tenth Legioners an effort should be made to enroll thirty. If the society gave twelve dollars to Ashland College and twenty-five to missions last year, let it double the amount in both instances. Where you now rejoice with one Life Work Recruit, secure an added joy by having two enlisted. If you have graduated ten Christian Endeavor Experts, organize another class with an equal number, which should give you twenty in all. With the multiplication of your numbers by the "two times one is two" method there will come increased power and added strength for service. Christian Endeavor Week provides for these additions and we trust that every society will endeavor to secure as many decisions as possible. Follow the suggestions in the Ashland College Night program and use the enclosed Decision Card. All gains should be reported to the proper departmental superintendent or the undersigned. Who will be the first to report a "doubling-up" campaign?

Carry On

One of the great slogans of the last war is to be found in the inspiring words "Carry on." It has been the last admonition of the dying soldier to his mates. It has nerved the weakest to deeds of valor that seemed almost impossible. No man was so handicapped physically—to the British Tommy—that he could not "Carry on," or in other words, do his part like a man. And because the men so well played their part during those years of darkness from the Battle of Mons to the Second Marne battle the free nations came through triumphant.

This is my last message to the Endeavorers before February 9th, and my last word to each society and each individual Endeavorer is "CARRY ON." You know the goals we are seeking to attain on that date—$500 in real money and at least FORTY NEW LIFE WORK RECRUITS—and real effort will be demanded if success is to be ours. Do not be satisfied with a half-hearted effort. Put every bit of brain and brawn you have into the work before you, and CARRY ON TO VICTORY. Brethren Endeavorers we can do it, and if we can we ought, and if we ought we will. Let us all "Carry On," for Christ and the church.

EDWIN BOARDMAN, JR.

MISSIONS

From Our Youngest Missionary, Marguerite

Brazzaville, French Eq. Africa,
November 20, 1918.

My dear little friends:

We are growing to love Jesus more as we wait here at Brazzaville and the more we love him the more we long to go on through that door which we are daily praying may soon be opened to us, in Ubangi-Shari. The other day I was talking to Aunt Toddy. She asked me some questions. One of them was, "Where will people who love Jesus go?" and I said "To Ubangi-Shari." I couldn't understand why Aunt Toddy and mamma smiled, because I have often heard mamma say she was praying for many who love Jesus to go to Ubangi-Shari, and I believe prayer will be answered. I have been praying for a long time for the boat to take us to Ubangi-Shari, and can just hear the way it will say—"Choo-choo-choo" when it comes to take us. Daddy and mamma have told me how many, many times in their lives they have prayed for Jesus to send a boat, and then have waited till he did send one. First when mamma was so very, very sick, on the shore of Lake Albert in the Belgian Congo, and was far away from the port, mamma says native boys took little canoes and went across the Lake which had been very stormy before, but which was very quiet just then, because "God was holding the winds in the heavens" in answer to prayer. Mamma says they came back on the big boat which was to take her across and came to the very lonely little place where she was waiting on the shore of the great stormy lake.

And then mamma says there was a short, bitter night of suffering when she and daddy waited on the banks of the River Nile for another boat to take them another part of the way. It came, and the captain gave poor, sick mamma the largest and airiest of the cabins.

Then they waited and prayed for another boat in Jinja, and here too, there was a place for mamma although her bed had to be put right out on deck. Of course you know I wasn't with mamma and daddy in those days.

Another boat that mamma and daddy waited for was the one which took them from Kampala to Port Florence and mamma says she had to spend three long weary months waiting to be strong enough to take that one. But it came, and mamma was able this time to walk on board and to enjoy the beautiful voyage on Lake Victoria.

And then came those hard days when mamma couldn't get strong up in the high mountains at Kijabe, and she and daddy went down to Mombasa. They wanted to come home to America to tell you all about the many little black boys and girls in Africa who needed Jesus, too, but they had to wait eleven long weeks at the coast while mamma got strong, and the money came in little by little to take the long journey. But the boat came. Mamma says that was just before the war, and they went on a German boat as far as East London in South Africa. Then came another long wait for a boat to take them to England, and that boat too came one happy day after daddy and mamma had been speaking and evangelizing in South Africa for four months.

Then they waited a little while in London for another boat to take them back to America, where they first learned to know and love you all. That boat too came. Then you will remember how daddy and mamma and Aunt Toddy waited nearly three long years in the home land for that other boat that brought them and Aunt Mae and me back to Cape Town. But that boat came. And what a short wait we had in Cape Town for another boat and then such a little wait in Loando for still another one, and a little wait in Bona for the boat which brought us to Matadi. The very last boat we were on was the one which brought us here to Brazzaville from Kinshassa, across Stanley Pool. But they all came. And now I can not quite understand why we must wait for a boat to go to Banqui when boats are coming and going all the time, but mamma says they are not our boats, but that Jesus has one for us which he will send when all things are in readiness. So I pray, "Jesus send a boat," and I sing to a little tune all my own, "Oh, send a boat, Lord Jesus."

November 26, 1918.

I haven't seen very much of Uncle William lately, nor of mamma, nor of Aunt Toddy, for they all spend much time in Brazzaville, taking care of the sick. We have many very sick people in Kinshassa and Brazzaville. It is called Spanish influenza, and was brought to Africa by a French boat which came not long ago.

December 17th, 1918

It has been a long time since mamma and I wrote the words above. Since then we have all been suffering more or less with influenza and mamma has been very, very ill. But we are all growing stronger now and looking forward with hope to the coming of Marie and Julie and their papa and mamma. We are praying that they may be kept and used for Jesus. We too are longing to do more for him.

We all join in love to you all. Mamma prays that when Jesus comes, we may all be jewels for his crown. Lovingly, MARGUERITE.

Home Mission Notes

G. C. Carpenter

Misappropriation of Mission Money

We have heard of several churches in which mission offerings were taken and yet the money never reached the mission boards. And the explanation given was that the church treasurer was shy of funds to pay the pastor's salary and other expenses and they just had to use that money that was given for missions. If the money had been replaced soon afterward and the church officials were certain that it would be replaced the transaction might have been clothed with a questionable permit. But the usual result is that the money thus misappropriated is never replaced, and we must conclude in the first place that such procedure is wrong, and in the second place such procedure is very wrong.

Four Million

"In our Southern Appalachians are 4,000,000 American Highlanders, for generations shut off from the main current of our National life and development. Poor homes and worse schools, wretched roads, poverty, illiteracy, inefficient farming, weak churches fostering excesses and disputes—such influences have made this one of the neediest of mission fields. But no people could be more responsive and no work more full of hope. Here is the pure-blood Anglo-Saxon, needing only opportunity."—The Continent.

The Road to Heaven

While the road to heaven is proverbially rocky that is no reason why the road to church should be. The road to church in many southern mountain communities away from the railroad is well nigh impassable six months of the year, and the road to market just as bad. Pretty hard to develop a strong church in such a community. More than one missionary has organized a "road day" and did it as a real piece of religious work. A "Holiness" brother objected to such use of time by the missionary, saying he should be ashamed going around "mixing religion and the world." But the chief object in life is to make the world better. That church in a mountain community often makes over the whole country roundabout. The missionary does a great service if he makes it possible for the people to get to church. Riverside is helping to make over Breathitt County. And the Krypton church has accomplished much in that growing section of the mountains in the next county.

Thanksgiving Postponed

Brother Bowman, the Secretary-Treasurer of our Home Mission Board, will call for another day of thanksgiving when every Brethren church sends to him its full apportionment for home missions and when he can announce that the goal for this year has been reached. Pastors, it is up to you. Let nothing prevent your reaching this goal in your local churches. Show some of the spirit of that pastor who collected the full amount from his church by mail and personal solicitation while his church was closed by the influenza ban. "Now then do it!" Brother Bowman, our pastors are awake, most of them, and you will likely hear from many more churches. We hope that you will be compelled to issue a Thanksgiving proclamation before the close of the conference year.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

LINWOOD, MARYLAND

The Brethren of the East have suffered the price of upset plans during the past few months, in all church work, like others, who have reported. Two mighty attacks of the world-wide epidemic visited our section, with a heavy toll of life. It's first sweep was just in time to stop a Rally Day service for our Sunday school. The second sweep was in time to cancel all Christmas exercises and pleasures.

Our readers will recall that the Linwood Brethren Sunday school is only six months old. One hundred and twenty-five are now enrolled. Since about all have regained normal health, the attendance in every class is showing increase. Even though it was impossible to have our Christmas entertainment which had been so well planned, a treat of candy and oranges was given to all on the roll. To all who were sick, their treat was sent. When we consider that the church was closed for a period of more than a month, we feel that the Sunday school has done a good and worthy work.

Brother Charles U. Messler was elected as our first superintendent. He acknowledged his inexperience, but confessed his willingness to learn. He is a young man of consecration and prayer with an interest in children, young people and the community at large, so it is needless to say, he is becoming an efficient superintendent.

Our fall meeting had to be postponed. Brother L. G. Wood of Roanoke, Virginia was to have been our helper in this special campaign for souls.

There are more pleasant things to do than visit the sick, but not many times has a pastor had a larger opportunity for such personal service than during the past few months. It has been the writer's joy to see scores of faces lighten and hearts comforted when a little of God's Word or a prayer for strength, or both were taken into a home full of sick people.

To change the subject, our's has not been one surprise but a stream of them. From early in the fall until the present the parsonage has had its many callers and as many as three in one day, all with large baskets of fresh meat, etc. All these generous gifts make the recipients feel good in more ways than one. A stream of good things flow most of the time at Linwood. For such good care and attention we try to render faithful service.

We covet the prayers of the brotherhood for the future success of this work.

E. M. RIDDLE, Pastor.

January 17, 1919.

RIPON, CALIFORNIA

Upon graduating from Ashland College last June, and after a semi-clandestine marriage and visiting home folks near Dayton, Ohio, and Portland, Oregon, we landed on the Ripon field, July fourth.

When we were engaged for this field we were cautioned to be steeled against disappointment. Since we have been here it seems that disappointment is about all with which we have had a chance to deal. However, we have met with six months of it to date, of which half this time our church has been closed on account of the "flu."

Our work here is like that of an entirely new field. We have very few workers. The best we can say for Ripon is, that there is a big work here for the Brethren church to do. This work cannot be rebuilt to what we would term "good standing" in less than three or four years' time. Slow work. Yes, but if the work is supported it is bound to develop.

We have a good church building and a fine location. Ripon is a splendid little country town which promises to grow very rapidly in the near future. New people are moving here all the time. An opportunity is ours if we can turn the tide for Christ and the Brethren church. And God helping us I believe we can. Before the "flu ban" quite a few new people were coming our way. The young people here are practically unreached. They have grown up without the church and are now extremely difficult to reach. But they must be saved. Ripon must succeed for Christ. We will have more to report later.

N. V. LEATHERMAN.

HAGERSTOWN, MARYLAND

Since our last report, startling changes have taken place in our work. The "flu" struck us, taking a dismal toll, leaving sadness and a sense of keen loss in its wake; yet may God be praised for "He buries his workers but carries on his work."

Within a year, we suffered the loss by death of two Sunday school superintendents, both efficient and splendid leaders, under whom the school made progress. The responsibility of the office thus passed upon the shoulders of another young man under whose leadership we have progress to report.

After our return from General Conference, we began putting into operation our plans for the fall and winter work. We held our Rally Day services on the last Sunday of September with the largest attendance ever. Promotions brought a number from the Elementary Department into the main school. Their places have long since been taken by others in this department, and thus the work goes on. Following Rally Day, we held a week's meeting, preparatory to our Communion service. During this meeting two splendid young women made the complete surrender to Christ. Then . . . came the quarantine and for five Sundays we had no services. Since the ban has been lifted we are busy trying to readjust ourselves. The Sunday school again used the "White Gift" service, which was a complete success. The offering was the largest ever taken by the school and is very gratifying considering present conditions. It seems that people respond more generously to the various calls than ever before. Our response to Home Missions was splendid, reaching our goal. We held our postponed fall communion service on Sunday, December twenty-ninth. While not normal in the number of communicants, there was a deep spirit of devotion manifest that means much to the growth of the church.

We begin the new year with a hopeful outlook and an endeavor to push forward the great work of our King in an unprecedented world opportunity.

A. B. COVER.

FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH, LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

On Thursday evening, January 9th a reception was held at the church for our new pastor, N. W. Jennings, and his wife. Invitations had been sent to the other Brethren churches of Southern California and representatives were present from Compton Avenue, Long Beach, Whittier and Fillmore. A program of music, reading and addresses was rendered. Prof. Stout was present and rendered several solos in his own masterful way. The attendance was fine.

After a number of musical selections, Morris Leffler, chairman for the evening called the ministers to the platform and each one spoke some words of greeting. Brother Jennings responded in his own delightful manner. Sister Jennings, somewhat embarrassed by what she said was a new experience to her, was called to the platform and the remarks she made showed she was equal to the occasion.

At the conclusion of the program the refreshment committee was busy for a while in the basement waiting on the people, especially those from visiting congregations, and ministering such good things as would strengthen the physical man for the journey home. Every one present seemed to be enthusiastic in their enjoyment of the entire evening.

On Sunday, January 12, an offering was taken for the Armenian-Syrian Relief Drive, which amounted to $50.00.

A. P. REED.

TENNESSEE

We so much enjoy the news from over the brotherhood, we think the brotherhood may like to hear from us even though the news is mostly "flu."

Thanksgiving evening we had a very informal prayer and praise service. Aside from an article prepared and read by one member and a splendid speech by another the hour was given to prayer, songs and testimonies. It gave us a good feeling because other than our own people heartily took part. At the service the annual Thanksgiving offering was taken.

From Thanksgiving on everything and everybody was working to make the Christmas service a success. A good Christmas feeling and a good cantata bid fair to make it a happy occasion but the "flu" had planned otherwise. So to save the church from the blame of spreading the disease we called off that service and also the Sunday school, prayer meeting and the weekly neighborhood Bible class. But the disease has continued to spread all the same. The early fall siege of the plague effected only a few people compared with the number now sick. Considering the number of cases there have been few deaths but some homes have been thus made sad. Th distress and suffering in countless homes presents a sad aspect. Those of us who have been spared the disease have cause for praise and thanksgiving that God has fulfilled his promise that, "neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling." May God give us faith these days to rely on his promises and may we pray the prayer of faith that this disease may leave our shores, and other lands as well. These days of the world look very much like the fulfillment of Matthew 24:7.

We are now making an effort to collect the Christmas offering as we have had to dismiss services longer than we thought for. Perhaps better late than not at all, and better some than none. We also hope to send in our Four Year Program report.

Though many of our plans for the church have been set aside by influenza we look forward to an early date when we can strike glad hands, and sing songs of praise again in God's house.

We especially enjoy the Evangelist these days in which we cannot meet together. And though we are somewhat removed from a brotherhood in spirit, we are very near in spirit. We trust our next report may be more cheerful and that much prayer will be turned to praise. Pray for us as we do for you.

MARY PENCE.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

In the very beginning permit me to refer you to 2 Peter 3:1. Something like three years ago, perhaps, I made a very special request through the columns of the Evangelist. Quite a number responded. I asked for prayer to be offered daily, very definite prayer that our heavenly Father might touch hearts, yes, the hearts and lives of people in Washington City, so that our work here might be prospered. I praise God that those prayers have been answered, some of them in a marvelous way, and so I am encouraged to come again and thus "stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance." I am quite sure that he wants to do much more for us.

Just now I am looking over the list of names, the names of those who wrote me and promised to pray regularly and definitely, (and some of them daily) according to my request. Some on that list have prayed their last prayer on earth. They have answered the final summons. And those who have been spared I feel quite sure are still praying. But I am anxious to have others on my prayer list. How many of those who may read this will write me and say, "Place my name on the list." And how many of those who answered before will write again and renew their pledge? I don't ask you to take time to write at length; just a card will do. But whether you write me, or not, will not every one who really loves the blessed Lord send messages daily heavenward? Pray that God may continue to touch hearts; that takes in everything. But perhaps I should go a step farther. Listen! God has answered our prayers by lifting the debt on our church home, (at least that part that was promised by the church in this city) and now we are asking him for greater things. He is pleased when we come with great expectations! Don't you really think so? When God really and truly touches hearts, everything is easy!

We are now looking to him to supply us with a more commodious church home. We believe that God would be pleased to have it so. He can touch hearts and cause this to come to pass. We are truly grateful for the building we have, but the work has developed to such an extent that we realize that we could accomplish very much more with a building adapted to modern needs. And so, for some time we have been talking to God concerning this matter. He can easily touch just one heart in the brotherhood and bring it to pass! Don't you believe it? I do. Listen, once more. If I could at this moment just whisper a few things into your ear, telling you of what he has already done in answer to prayer, you would doubt no longer. Make a note of this please.

A good many things have come to pass in this city in connection with the First Brethren church, which have never been published. We are waiting for some things to announce ourselves. You will be surprised all the more when you pay that visit to the capital of the nation by and by. It is the expectation of my heart, (it has been for some time), that some of these days, our heavenly Father will raise up just one individual who will build a memorial building such as we need in this city. If that person should not assume the entire obligation personally, the proposition might be made to include one-half of the cost. In that event free will offerings by thousands, would doubtless flow into the treasury!

Well, God will work out his own plan. Perhaps we have said enough for this time. But keep on talking to God, won't you? Some of you will, I know; keep on asking him to touch hearts; that takes in all the rest, financial needs, church buildings, everything! How many will write me?

God bless you all! In his name,

W. M. LYON.

636 South Carolina Avenue,

FALLS CITY NEWS

Never have our experiences been so varied and trying as in the past three months. Humanly speaking, sadder days can never come to our people at Falls City than the days of the past months. The epidemic has visited eighty percent of our homes. In its wake are motherless and fatherless children and sorrow of the deepest kind. Eighteen funerals one after the other, and the result of the "flu" makes us wonder what is to come next. For eight weeks all activities were closed, until it was demonstrated clearly, that, closed or open, the "flu" had its way. Opening again just one week before Christmas, we moved along almost normal for three Sundays to have it break in upon us worse than ever. Instead of closing again we kept the churches and schools open, but our work is dragging very heavily, and the prospects are no better for the near future, yet we go forward in faith that it will all work out for good. To date the pastor and family have been spared, even though I have been constantly thrown directly in contact with it. We have been especially grateful for this, because there were so many things to do.

Outside of attendance at the services we are trying to maintain our standing, and will take up the task where we left off just as soon as conditions permit. Many a plan that promised well has been turned aside, but God has his purpose in it. May it all work out for righteousness. H. F. STUCKMAN.

EVANGELIST HONOR ROLL

The following churches having met the requirements laid down by the Brethren Publishing Company regarding the placing of the Evangelist in the homes of the congregations are entitled to a place on the Evangelist Honor Roll.

Church	Pastor
Gretna, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	Edwin Boardman
Washington, C. H., O., 2nd Yr., L. B. Wilkins
Ankenytown, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	A. L. Lynn
Ashland Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	J. A. Garber
Beaver City, Nebr., 2nd Yr.,	(Vacant)
Morrill Kaus, 2nd Yr.,	A. E. Whitted
Lanark, Ill., 2nd Yr.,	B. T. Burnworth
Waterloo, Iowa, 2nd Yr., ..	H. L. Goughnour
Muncie, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	J. J. Kimmel
College Corner, Indiana,	D. A. C. Teeter
Hamlin, Kansas,	G. E. Cone
Allentown, Pa.,	A. L. DeLozier
Johnstown, Pa., 3rd Ch.,	Geo. H. Jones
Milledgeville, Ill., 2nd Yr.,	M. J. Snyder
Portis, Kansas,	Roy Brumbaugh
Fairhaven, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	B. F. Owen
Long Beach, Cal., 2 Yr.,	L. S. Bauman
Burlington, Indiana,	W. T. Lytle
Carleton, Nebraska,	Z. T. Livengood
Falls City, Nebraska,	H. F. Stuckman
Summit Mills, Penna., ...	E. D. Burnworth
Mexico, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	L. W. Ditch
Lordsburg, California,	Thos. H. Broad
Salisbury, Penna.,	E. D. Burnworth
Flora, Indiana,	W. T. Lytle
Los Angeles, Cal., 1st, 2 Yr. N. W. Jennings
Nappanee, Indiana,	C. E. Kolb
Berne, Indiana, 2nd Yr., ...	W. F. Johnson
Louisville, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	Geo. S. Baer
Johnstown, Pa., 1st Ch.,	J. P. Watson
Sunnyside, Wash.,	Chas. H. Ashman
Denver, Indiana,	L. A. Myers
Bryan, Ohio,	G. L. Maus
Elkhart, Indiana,	H. H. Wolford
Sidney, Indiana,	L. A. Myers
Lorée, Indiana,	W. T. Lytle
Linwood, Maryland,	E. M. Riddle
Conemaugh, Pa., 2nd Yr.,	L. G. Smith
Akron, Ind., (New Highland), D. A. C. Teeter
Ft. Scott, Kansas,	Mrs. L. C. Webb
Clay City, Indiana,	Geo. W. Kinzie
Roann, Indiana,	W. E. Ronk
Tiosa, Indiana,	Ora I. Oxley
New Paris, Indiana,	Ora I. Oxley
Fremont, Ohio,	H. M. Oberholtzer
Fostoria, Ohio,	M. S. White
Oakville, Indiana,	A. R. Staley
Berlin, Penna.,	I. B. Trout
North Liberty, Indiana,	C. C. Grisso
Dutchtown, Indiana,	Homer Anderson
North English, Iowa,	W. H. Miller
Fillmore, Calif.,	Sylvester Lowman
Meyersdale, Pa., 2nd Yr., E. D. Burnworth
Whittier, Calif.,	A. V. Kimmel
Dallas Center, Iowa,	R. F. Porte
New Lebanon, Ohio,	L. B. Wilkins

CAMPAIGN NOTES

The report this week will include the results at Cambria, Huntington, Roanoke, and Corinth. I visited these churches in the order in which I have mentioned them.

Cambria

This church has a good record for producing preachers, it being the church in which Brethren J. Allen Miller, W. H. Miller, Martin Shively, and L. A. Hazlett were ordained to the ministry. I came to this place after the canvass at Flora. This congregation had been pastorless for a considerable time, until some months ago when Brother L. A. Hazlett took charge. The work has had its discouragements and losses in the past and the people felt that they could do but little for the cause of endowment. However, it seemed impossible to me that the home congregation of Brother J. Allen Miller should fail entirely in this great movement for the College. Accordingly we put forth a special effort and succeeded in bringing Cambria up to $103.00. However, I want to say that a woman in this congregation who has given two brothers to the ministry also gave a note which went forward making possible this showing for Cambria. I was here two nights and a day and I am greatly indebted to Sister Cameron for seeing that I was taken over the field, and for keeping me in her hospitable home.

Brother Jonathan Swihart lives comparatively close to Cambria. I had met Brother Swihart once at conference long ago. But I was anxious to see him again, mainly because I had been in the churches in Indiana which he organized, and there are certainly not a few of them. Consequently I went to see him, and it was both a pleasure and an inspiration to me. Of necessity it was a short visit but we made mighty good time while we were together. I found Brother Swihart in fairly good health and happy. His kind of religion doesn't make folks grouchy and grumpy, it makes them happy. I have met plenty of Brethren folks in this campaign who have more acres and many more dollars than Brother Swihart, but I did not meet any that I think were any more happy and hopeful than he is. Money is a fine thing to have when one needs it, but I am very sure there are some things better than money and money can't buy them either, and happiness is one of them. My visit to the Swihart home caused me to think of a good many things but space will not permit me to speak of them now. But I am glad that the privilege came to me to make this little visit.

Huntington

Huntington being a mission point I had not intended to make a canvass there for endowment. However, I was given to understand by Brother J. W. Brower, the pastor, that Huntington refused to be passed by in that sort of a way. And so from Cambria I came to Huntington and preached there three nights to fair sized audiences. On the last night I was there it was my pleasure to install the newly elected teachers and officers of the Sunday school for the ensuing year. Our stay at Huntington was a real pleasure. Brother Brower took us around in his Ford and kept us most comfortably in his home.

The result for the College was $236, a great record for a mission point. The notion is gradually stealing over me that some of our older, stingy congregations will have to go to some of our little mission churches to learn a few lessons on giving, also the relation between Christian giving and Christian growth. I am seeing new meaning every day in the two quotations: "To give is to live." "To deny is to die." My prayers are for Huntington. In a strong Dunkard field such as Huntington, our church there ought to have a great future.

Roanoke

Brother Frank Johnson from Berne is preaching at Roanoke now. There are very few Evangelists going into this congregation; and, as I have said often in former notes, I think I can see a big difference in my work for endowment in a congregation where the people read the church paper. I only got $138 at Roanoke. I say "only" because Roanoke could have done better than that and should have. I found at this place a former Ashland student, and by the generous gift he made to the cause he proved what I say often in the work, viz., that some of the most loyal, faithful friends Ashland College has are among the men and women who have been there in years past. And in fairness I am bound to say that if it had not been for the gift from that former student the report would have been rather thin from Roanoke. I will say frankly though kindly that in my judgment Roanoke church is like some more in the brotherhood in that it is dying because it keeps everything at home. That is the surest way I know of for a church to kill itself. I know it will do the work for I am seeing striking proofs of it every now and then. I had a very pleasant visit with Brother Johnson while there and Brother John Brumbaugh kept me in his home. Thanks for the kindness.

Corinth

Corinth church is three miles in the country from Twelve Mile, and Brother C. A. Stewart is the pastor. He met me at Peru with his Ford and away we went for Corinth. I preached several nights to good sized audiences, and the Reed home was our stopping place while at Corinth. To say that we were well treated in this home and in all the homes into which we went is stating it very mildly. The result here was $441. It ought to have been even $500 but we could not quite swing it to that point. Here we found another former Ashland student that hit the endowment proposition in good, sound fashion. Brother Stewart took me over his congregation in his Ford and I found in him a fine, friendly co-worker. He was anxious that his people should make good in this campaign, and I could ask for no better help than he gave me. This is also the home church of Brother D. A. Hopkins. It was my privilege to visit him in his home at Twelve Mile, and also to preach to him one night. I found him interested in the success of the campaign for endowment.

The next report will be the last from Indiana.

WM. H. BEACHLER,
Campaign Secretary.

Watch Indiana Raise the Star and Push Pennsylvania Out at the Top

COLLEGE
ENDOWMENT

LAKE ODESSA, MICHIGAN

Coming from South Bend to take up the pastorate of the Campbell church we arrived at Freepoint, Michigan, Saturday evening about eight o'clock. It was pouring down rain, but regardless of that the brethren were at the station to meet us. On Sunday morning we were taken to the church and there found a goodly number of the faithful members out to Sabbath school and for the preaching services. We are well impressed with the work here and find that the people are of a fine class. They are willing workers and all seem to be about their Father's business. We have a fine field in which to work and feel that great things can be accomplished for God here if we do our part. Let me ask the Brethren everywhere to pray for us.

M. V. GARRISON.

WHITE GIFTS OF VICTORY AND PEACE

The following "White Gifts" received since last report:

Washington, D. C.,	$ 50.00
Carleton, Neb.,	96.35
Modern Mary's Class, Lanark, Ill.,	6.60
North Liberty, Ind.,	21.52
Morrill, Kansas,	34.91
Center Chapel, Ind.,	6.25
Beaver City, Neb.,	50.00
Hamlin, Kansas,	23.30
Dallas Center, Iowa,	18.41
Leon, Iowa,	2.17
Crown, Iowa,	3.80
Conemaugh, Pennsylvania,	304.00

Total$ 617.31
Previously Reported,$1197.62

Grand Total,$1814.93
Conemaugh again leads the procession in the amount given. Last year she led all other schools and this year she beats her own record with a 90 percent increase.

You can't find Brother Smith on the financial feature.

ALBERT TRENT,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

COLLEGE CORNERS

We take pleasure to reporting to the church at large, what we are doing at College Corners. We have finished the canvass for Ashland College endowment. I was with Brother Beachler on the job. College Corners went over the top and that makes us feel that we have two loyal churches, considering the condition these two churches are in at this time. The one has just built and the other must remodel this year or worship out of doors. I believe $1,000 was an excellent gift. The Brethren church school will mean more to us now. We are glad for one thing; that when Brother Beachler has received the last dollar, and if he should be so lucky as to get more than $100,000, College Corners and Dutchtown can say they helped to do it. And if he fails, some churches can say if we would have done as good as Dutchtown and College Corners, he would have gotten more than he asked for. I told you some time ago that we were going to make the big churches step some, and we are doing it. Of course, we are stepping some too to do it. Brother Bame, "Now then do it" appeals to us and we are doing it. You see where Dutchtown went on goal 9? Now then watch College Corners do it too. We are using the same man power to do it, with the exception of a little "tire trouble." You would laugh to see Brother Beachler and I working the man power system between Brother White's and the church. Sometimes Brother Beachler would get stuck in the mud and his rubber tires would come off. I am glad Brother Beachler hit this place when he did with such roads that the famous Ford had to run on low all the time and machines stuck right in front of the church door. We were glad even to get to church on foot. But there never was finer weather overhead.

I am here first to help the church to a higher standing and a closer relationship to God, and to help the homes to a fuller and more Christian fellowship with each other. Putting the Evangelist in every home helps. There are a lot of pastors that have held our Publishing Company back and robbed their churches of the paper. And some have robbed Ashland College of students by never asking a young man to go to Ashland. These fellows are as the one who was not dead but sleeping. I did not take this job to sleep. Faith without works is dead. Surely we have a lot of dead ones or else a lot that sleep.

HOMER ANDERSON.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

LOWERY-McCUNE—Mr. Glen Lowry and Miss Gretchen McCune were united in marriage at the home of the bride, near Garwin, Wednesday evening, January 15. These are splendid young people of the community and are members of the Carlton Brethren church. We bespeak many blessings for them as they journey through life together. Ceremony by the undersigned, ROBERSON-TYREE—On January 20th, at 17 Third St., N. E., Roanoke, Virginia, Mr. Stephens B. Roberson and Miss Mable L. Tyree were united in Holy Matrimony. The ceremony was performed by the writer in the presence of a number of invited guests.

L. G. WOOD.

IN THE SHADOW

SMOUSE—David M. Smouse was born at Martinsburg, Pennsylvania, March 29, 1847, and died at Altoona, Pennsylvania, October 20, 1918 at the age of 71 years, six months and 21 days. He was married December 25, 1871 to Miss Mary Crofford. To this union were born two sons.

Brother Smouse was from early manhood a true follower of Christ. He was a charter member of the Brethren church at Altoona, the first deacon of the congregation, and for a number of years the church treasurer. For a number of years back he was known among the Brethren as "Father Smouse." He was by nature quiet and reserved, but was always ready with a word of advice and timely suggestion. He served his generation well and leaves to mourn their loss his wife and two sons, five grandchildren and a host of friends.

W. C. BENSHOFF.

Business Manager's Corner

THE BRETHREN ANNUAL AND CONFERENCE MINUTES

Many anxious inquiries have been received concerning the Brethren Annual and Conference Minutes of late. We have kept silent about this because just when we should have finished up this work before the Holidays the influenza epidemic and shortage of competent help came upon us and we were forced to lay the Conference Report aside in order to get the Sunday school supplies out. And even then many of the supplies went out late. However we have run the second section of the Minutes off the press and the third section is ready to be run. We hope to have the entire book ready to mail very shortly now, and we will mail a supply to all the pastors and ask them to help dispose of them. If the pastors do not lend their aid in this way it will mean a large loss to the Publishing House which it is not in a position to withstand at this time.

The price of the Report is twenty-five cents for single copies. Six copies or more will be sold to pastors at twenty cents each, so they may realize a small amount for disposing of them. We ask everybody to help that the entire edition may be sold out.

Mailing Troubles

All publishers are having more or less difficulty in getting their supplies delivered promptly through the United States mails. It is not for us to criticize because few of us know the complexities of the great postal system of America, but we ask all our customers to be patient as we ourselves must be in regard to the matter.

We are instituting a new and up-to-date mailing system for the Evangelist and are having the names transferred to the stencil system. This is a big task when the thousands of names are considered, and some errors may occur, and some subscribers may get two papers each week while some may be accidentally omitted entirely from the list. In either case please notify us promptly and the correction will be made.

On January fourth we sent a list of several hundred names to Cleveland to be stenciled and the entire list was lost in the mails. We have been doing our best to trace it down or to duplicate the names and we think we have them all located now, but still if any subscribers are not getting their papers we wish their pastors would explain the situation to them and let us know about it.

How the List Grows

Yes, the list grows just as the pastors or interested ones in the congregations determine to make it grow. The pastor's part has been indicated by one Ohio pastor who was the first pastor in the state to get his church to adopt the budget system for the Evangelist, and then to repeat it the second year; and only recently he took up the work in another charge and a few days ago sent in a list from New Lebanon, Ohio, that is about eight hundred percent larger than the old list. Go to it Brother Wilkins, we are with you and we trust you may be able to duplicate the achievement in the other half of your present charge.

R. R. TEETER,

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 7

FEBRUARY 12
1919

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETHREN -

PRESIDENT-ELECT LINCOLN IN MR. MOODY'S CHURCH

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Creating a Spiritual Epidemic—Editor,	2	Positive Religion in Education—A. E. Weaver,	10
Editorial Review,	3	Ashland's Afterglow of Endeavor Night—Prof. J. A. Garber, ...	11
Four Year Program—Charles A. Bame,	4	What Has Christian Endeavor Done for You?—Margaret E. Bang-
Lincoln, a Man Loved by All—Melvin A. Stuckey,	5	hart,	11
A Tribute to a Christlike Man—G. C. Carpenter,	6	Our Christian Endeavor Compass—C. L. Anspach, ...	11
Prayer as a Factor in Evangelism—Francis J. Reagan,	6	Has the Old Time Martyr Spirit Died Out?—Editor,	12
Church Unity (a Sermon)—Clarence E. Kolb,	8	News from the Field,	12-15
The Test of a Christian's Faith—Lois Frazier,	9	The Tie That Binds,	15
A Church with a Splendid Record—J. F. Watson,	10	In the Shadow,	15-16
		Business Manager's Corner,	16

EDITORIAL

Creating a Spiritual Epidemic

Churches and communities have been greatly disturbed and their normal activities have been disarranged, if not brought to a complete standstill during the last few months by the epidemic of Spanish influenza. As it swept over community, state and nation there was no activity unaffected by its presence and nothing seemed to be able for a while to stop its ravages. What if a spiritual epidemic should start in some quarter and sweep community after community as did this dread disease! What changes might be wrought! What business methods be changed! What social engagements, interrupted! What political plans, disarranged! What immorality and ungodliness, put under the ban! Who can tell what would happen if our country should be swept by such an epidemic? Whatever the changes, they would be welcomed rather than dreaded.

But whoever heard of a spiritual epidemic? Well, perhaps not many people; not very often, at least. But there have been such epidemics. One in particular, we read of in the second chapter of The Acts. And the strange thing is that the Apostles were to blame, humanly speaking, for starting it. We conclude, then, that it is possible to create an epidemic. And if it is possible, had we not better bend our energies in that direction, rather than allow our minds to be too much disturbed by the influenza and thus to help to spread it?

But how was it done? The prescription is found in the first eight verses of the above named chapter. It is quite a valued prescription and it would be well if we should use it much.

Harmony is the first essential, for we read, "They were with one accord." Spiritual zeal cannot flow from one life to another unless the various associating Christians are in accord one with another. There is nothing that so surely and quickly makes one immune to the spiritual zeal and aims of another as discord. If we want to spread a spiritual contagion in our churches and throughout the brotherhood until it shall become an epidemic, we must continue, and increasingly so, in accord one with another. Success has come to us in the past when we have worked in harmony and unity.

The second important thing is to get together. "They were all with one accord in one place." It is always true; when people are in perfect harmony they like to get together. And it is only the harmonious people who can be in one place. Discord always causes separation. So long as perfect harmony exists there will be a genuine desire to get together in congregational assemblies and in state and national conferences. And this will contribute in a wonderful way to the spread of a spiritual epidemic.

A very important ingredient in this prescription is the infilling with the Holy Spirit. "And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, . . . and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit." It has ever been that God's Spirit was manifest when his children were come together in perfect accord in his house. It is possible for us to have a manifestation of the Holy Spirit's presence in our churches today and to feel the thrill of its power in every individual life, and all this in such measure that it will appear as a rushing mighty wind. There is no reason why, if the conditions are fulfilled, there should not be a pentecostal wave sweeping over every community with such irresistible force that thousands would be received into the Kingdom and hosts of those that are feeble in life and weak in faith would be strengthened and reassured. Such a blessing waits only for God's presence and power consciously possessed by all those who call themselves by the name of Christ. When once we possess it, the fact will become evident to all beholding, we cannot conceal it. Others will catch fire from our holy zeal, and they in turn will spread the good contagion wherever they go. This infilling with the Holy Spirit, this endowment of power is the one absolutely essential thing in the creation of a spiritual epidemic.

The next natural thing to do is to speak at the direction of the Holy Spirit. "They began to speak in other tongues as the spirit gave them utterance." No one was needed to urge them to speak publicly or privately concerning the things of God. They were eager to tell the story that had meant so much to their lives. This characteristic was evident to all. And more than that, it was evident that they spoke differently than they had been wont to speak. They spoke of different things, spoke in a different tone of voice and in a different spirit. They spoke a different language, in fact; before they had spoken an earthly language, now they spoke a heavenly. And the sooner the Christian people of today come to speak in "different tongues" as the Spirit gives them utterance, the sooner will all lands be swept with an epidemic of religious fervor.

The next factor is men susceptible to the good contagion. "And there were dwelling at Jerusalem, Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven." It was these devout men, these sincere, serious-minded men, who became the good soil into which fell the good seed of the gospel, bringing forth such manifold fruit. These were the ones who, when the report of the preaching and the Spirit-filled men reached them, went out to hear them. And we will always find serious, seeking souls ready to receive the word if we are willing and zealous enough to speak it.

Another thing that will help to create a spiritual epidemic is advertising. The evangelistic campaign of Pentecost was "noised abroad." It doubtless was not paid advertisement, but it was advertisement just the same, and effective. More and more people began talking about it as the reports spread, as reports do, until every one in the community knew about it. That is one thing that helped greatly to spread the influenza scare—people were everywhere talking about it. If we had talked about spiritual things as much as we talked about the influenza, how long do you suppose it would have taken to have gotten an epidemic raging throughout the land?

Notice that the advertising and the spirit-filled men drew a crowd. "When the report was spread abroad the people came together until there was a great multitude." It is always so. People go to the place that everybody is talking about. And they will also go where it is reported that there are spirit-filled men. It would go a great way towards taking our communities for Christ and guaranteeing crowds for the churches if every preacher and the membership of every church could gain a reputation for being spirit-filled and for speaking with heavenly tongues.

It is important to remember that the mystery of the spiritual, though it puzzles men yet attracts them. "When the people came they were confounded." This was a strange thing they saw and these were strange words they heard. The Holy Spirit had transformed the disciples, they were so different in every way, and the people could not understand it. Even so, for the "mind of the flesh cannot discern the things of the spirit." It was so fascinating because it was so strange and mysterious. The more spiritual men and churches are the more mysterious and at the same time the more attractive they are. Here is a great secret of the spread of this holy contagion.

But the thing that most confounded them was the fact that every man heard in his own tongue. The language was not strange to any one; it was the language of his own heart. The words answered the deep needs of every soul, and changed their attitudes and desires. The story of the cross and the empty tomb is just as vital today as then, and men are still being confounded when they hear it in their own heart's language. Men are astonished beyond measure at the wonderfully gripping, overcoming influence of the Word when spoken by spirit-filled men in a spirit-filled church. Here is the torch that will set every soul aflame.

First, may we permit the good contagion to take firm hold of our own lives—each and every member of the Brethren church, and then may we go forth to tell it, live it and act it until a mighty spiritual epidemic shall be raging throughout the land.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

You will be interested in the Sunday School page this week. Turn to it and look and read.

A telegram just arrived from the Muncie Mission requesting the prayers of the brotherhood. Signed by the pastor, J. L. Kimmel.

The Ashland Christian Endeavorers had a most excellent meeting recently and they are sharing some of the good things with our readers in this issue.

From Cerro Gordo, Illinois, comes a word from Brother D. A. C. Teeter. He has been greatly hindered in his work by the epidemic but hopes to get things going aright soon.

Brother Z. T. Livengood enjoyed the privilege of ministering to the Waterloo, Iowa, brethren during Brother Goughnour's absence. It was doubtless a case of good friends meeting good friends.

We have another brief report from Brother Lowman, pastor of the young enthusiastic church at Fillmore, California. If that church maintains its present enthusiasm it has a bright future before it.

Brother Lytle reports his work at Burlington and Darwin in this issue. He conducted his own revival at Burlington and met with good success, ten souls having been added to the church. He is optimistic about both his churches coming up on the work laid out in the Four Year Program. Optimism has much to do with winning.

The Sergeantsville-Calvary circuit in New Jersey is reported in this issue by the pastor, Brother Sands. They have been very busy in spite of the "flu." Brother Sands knows how to make use of his neighboring ministers and missionaries and doubtless his success with his parishioners is due largely to the same ability to use people. Most folks want to be used. That he enjoys the affection of his people is shown by the fact that one good brother gave him a check of sufficient size to buy a horse.

The work at Gratis under the leadership of Brother Beekley has been moving forward. In the revival conducted by the pastor 23 souls were added to the church. You will be interested in reading his report in this issue.

Brother A. S. Menaugh reports for the Goshen church great blessings on a recent Sunday. After reading his report and remembering the recent report of Brother Bauman, it might not be out of place to recall the words of the Master: "One soweth and another reapeth."

A letter from Brother E. E. Roberts of Philadelphia, speaks appreciatively of the Evangelist and also states that the work of the Third church and Sunday school is moving along nicely. On a recent Sunday, the school reached "high water" mark, with 141 present and an offering of nearly $6.00. Brother Bauman is expected to hold a revival there in the near future.

Brother A. E. Thomas tells of his evangelistic tours for the fall and winter and of the interruptions he has had in common with other evangelists. We had the pleasure of working with him at North Georgetown and have already born witness to the good interest his preaching had created until the omnipresent "flu" stopped operations. It is encouraging to learn of the splendid success that attended his and the pastor's efforts at Columbus, Ohio.

Brother McBride a member of the Dayton church reports the evangelistic campaign conducted at Camden, Ohio, by Brother Bauman. The meeting was very successful, resulting in 23 conversions and the Camden people were able to meet their financial obligations connected with the revival without the assistance of the Mission Board. A church that is able to do things in that manner will not remain a charge of the Mission Board long, but will doubtless soon be self-supporting and helping other mission points.

Brother C. A. Stewart who is now living at Bunker Hill, Indiana, reports his work at both Loree and Corinth. We are pleased to have Brother Stewart get into print. He is one of the goodly number of Indiana's young ministers who are making good. He sees a bright future for the work at Loree, because of the bunch of exceptional young people there and also because the whole church is unusually active. Things seem to be looking up at Corinth, also. A very practical piece of service is their adoption of three French orphans, which means their support.

Brother Bame comes to the pastors and congregational key-men with what he says is his last urgent appeal for this report. If the report does not show up well it will not be his fault. He has done more than should have been required of any man. We can't recall having said that our General Director had "said enough," as he suggests, we want him to feel free to "say on" as much as seems to be necessary, but surely our good pastors and local key-men should not expect him to continually "say on" without giving any heed. This program is in the interest of the whole church and every individual church and pastor, as the General Director or any departmental director. So let us all co-operate and do it now. Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today.

Two Sunday schools have agreed to send an offering for the brightening up of first page and one has already sent in a nice check. Who else wants in on this proposition? Every school or other organization sending at least $3.00 will have the privilege of having its name run in connection with the cut it pays for. A great number of our readers are expressing their appreciation of the appearance of the Evangelist, but some have also said it would be a still further improvement if we should run more pictures in our paper. With this we are very much in agreement, and we would if we could. But at present the Publishing Company is unable to finance such a plan. And this plan occurs to us to be the way out of the difficulty. It will mean a burden upon no school, and yet all may share the joy of helping just a little. There are doubtless many schools that will be eager to co-operate in this way. Who will be the next to send us an offering of from $3.00 to $5.00? When you write, address the Editor.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

Help! Help!

The cry of despair has come from one camp, at least. Here are the words of the disconsolate cry for help:

Dear Brother Bame:

What are we to do with (Name of State)? To date but seven pastors comprising eight congregations have reported and this includes my own. If you can say anything to move them, say on; or if you can tell how to get the reports, I will go after them. Some of the largest have not yet reported. Signed _____ District Director.

What Shall I Say?

The good editor last week released me from further responsibility, as I interpreted it. As I remember, he said I had said enough, and the very next mail says "say something" so we can get reports. Now, I think I had better not say. I have thought so many things that would not look well in print, that "keep mum" would be a good motto for me. I will say, however, that if the pastors will not respond to calls for help in a time like this, they may have the chance to do the calling themselves. I want all to know that I do not spend a half day every week on this page for the name of it. I shall not appear again for a long time and if there is not a showing worth while in the number of reports, someone else can do the rest of the calling. Why do men need to be coaxed to do the thing they said they would do? Are they cowards and afraid to be measured by the progress of their fellow pastors or is there an ulterior motive? Is it criminal or carelessness?

What Leaders Say

Vice Moderator Wolford said recently in a letter to me, "To me, the church is facing the crisis of its history and no note of failure or let-up dare be sounded. I am not at all pessimistic of the final outcome of the church. But I do believe that as a small denomination we must put forth our most strenuous efforts on a progressive program of service."

Now, that has a right ring. You may be assured that Wolford will be right there with his report. But there is no more reason why he should than that you should. Wolford has it right about the small denomination. A progressive program of service is essential. If you do not agree, then read this:

The centenary program, which includes the Methodist Episcopal church in the United States and all other countries, calls for a great reconstruction effort which will mean 1,000,000 Methodists teaching, 4,000,000 praying, 50,000 new ministers, teachers, deaconesses and other religious workers, and the raising of a fund of $85,000,000.

Now, there is no mere voting on resolution in that. It has already been organized. When one of the leaders of that movement called for 10,000 laymen for a certain task, he got 50,000 volunteers; Among them were governors of states.

Think of that and then read this:

Pay Soldier Students

When Secretary Lane provides his villages of farmers for the returning soldier boys, this fund also will be ready to put in a church which will show motion pictures and have recreational equipment.

Ten thousand Methodist young men dropped out of college to enter the army and navy. All of these, who will agree to come back to college, will be promised $250 a year so long as they stay in school.

One of the big, successful pastors who is making this wonderful program in the M. E. church is Christian F. Reiser. Some of the other features of their program is strikingly set forth in the following:

It is a misappropriation of money for a church to invest thousands of dollars and then keep its doors open only one or two days a week. Most church plants can be equipped to furnish social rooms properly equipped for young men.

The boys in the army found they could have fun with basketball, wrestling and various forms of games without the acceleration or the accompaniment of booze.

Because of her social service program, Leon Trotzky, permitted the Methodist church to stay in Petrograd, when every other church was expelled.

The mission is already arranging to open churches in France, Russia, Italy, Germany, Austria and in almost all of the other European countries. She insists that to make the American type of democracy safe in the world, the American type of church must be established.

Now, I do not say that we should copy that program—indeed, we could not if we would. But many people could learn a lot from such successful men as Reiser who took what was called the "tomb of Denver" a great church building and made it swarm with Christian activity so much that he attracted the admiration of the Christianity of the entire country. We have our program; its dates are definitely set. They shall not be changed in the least; but Brethren, it is silly and senseless to need to be coaxed to do a duty so easily discharged and so full of value to the progress of the kingdom.

Most of you will have time enough to get your cards to me before the 15th of February and if you have been neglectful, just show your willingness to again enter the race by sending your belated report directly to me. That is the best possible now. February 15th, District Directors!

BAME.

(Continued from Page 7)

hear the preacher pray and plead for support, and go home to hear no one's voice in prayer until the next service. We have adopted the practices of the apostolic church to a large degree but we must swing a few more points in the direction of the apostolic home life. "Salute the church that is in their house," said Saul of Prisca and Aquila. This is the institution before which we should stand at attention. What do we mean by the church? The church is not a building made with hands, the church of Christ is the heart of a believer and his home is the place where the church lives. Sociology tells us that the family "is the most constant factor among varying social organizations." "Genetically it is the whole social world in epitome. . . the center from which flow many impulses of social life." (Blackmar and Gillin). We rise in righteous anger and cry out because the Bible is taken from our public schools and in the same breath resent its intrusion into the drawing room or an effort to have it read around the center table.

The prayer meeting is for the "faithful few" and because they are faithful the church lives, and because they are few, the church is timid and her spirit feeble, and her progress slow as she carries the faithless many on the prayers of the faithful few. The scripture says that Elijah must first come and restore all things. We are afraid he will not be popular as he was the chief prayer meeting man of his day. On Mount Carmel he "repaired the altar that was thrown down" and prayed "Oh Jehovah, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel." We can imagine him returning to close all but mid-week service, while he makes a "house to house" canvass to repair the altars that are thrown down, and as he "prayed earnestly that it might not rain" we can hear him cry, "Oh Jehovah, hear me that the people may know that thou art God." Luther set Europe on fire with "the just shall live by faith;" Calvin made men fall before God's sovereignty; Moody came after the war with "God is love;" the prophet who will turn many to righteousness in this generation must secure the co-operation of the home by family altar and reach goal one for the church universal. "Lord teach us to pray."

GENERAL ARTICLES

Lincoln, a Man Loved By All. By Melvin A. Stuckey

Among the great men who have been native to the soil of the New World, Abraham Lincoln stands the peer of all. There are two American names always closely associated, because those who bore them met so grandly all the strenuous requirements of the two most critical epochs of American history. And it may be that Washington outstrips Lincoln a little in glory, but Washington is not a product of American civilization, though he poured his life out for America and became the "Father of our Country." But Lincoln was truly the product of American soil and fought his way through greater difficulties than any other, and, typical of what America can produce and of what she stands for, he is the most popular of all American heroes. Every citizen loves his memory and is proud to call him the noblest of the soil.

There is a reason for this. It is not the nature of American people, as it is of the French, passionately and sometimes unreasonably, to idolize their great men.

The humbleness of the birth and early life of Lincoln is fascinating to American people. In this respect he bears a similarity to that of our Lord. The associations of Jesus' nativity were all of the humblest sort; the very scene of his birth was the place of poverty and toil. The birthplace of Lincoln was a log hut standing amid the silence of the backwoods. Both were of pious but humble parentage. Joseph and Mary were excellent examples of the common class, but they were careful about the training of the boy Jesus, so that he grew into such strength under God that he could not be moved. Lincoln was born into the home of a common day-laborer, who could neither read nor write, yet a man, in spite of his improvidence and ignorance, whom everybody loved. The debt Mr. Lincoln owed to his shiftless, roving, story-telling father, that pioneer of three states, and to his dear little Christian mother is beyond calculation. His mother's early death was a great grief to him. Said Lincoln, "All that I am or hope to be I owe to my angel mother—blessings on her memory."

If the boyhood of Lincoln and the Christ, and the simplicity and humbleness of their homes could be compared in detail we might find them in many points very similar. Little is known of the boyhood of Jesus, but we can imagine him going about that little home, assisting in the various humble tasks. He worked with his father in the carpenter shop. He helped his mother in the home and ran errands for her. The furnishings of the little home and everything with which Jesus was surrounded spoke of the humbleness of the parents. Yet in this humility there was the spirit of loftiness, goodness and strength. The home of Lincoln also was humble. In it there was no upholstered furniture, no carpet on the floor, no library except a few borrowed volumes of his neighbors, and few if any chairs; he did most of his studying lying on the floor before the fireplace. The very humbleness of these homes adds glory to the characters which dwelt within. In the one you find Jesus, who is to be known as the Man of Galilee; in the other Lincoln, the lowly pioneer of the West; in the one Jesus, the carpenter, in the other, Lincoln, the rail splitter; in the one is the Nazarene to become the Savior of the world, in the other, the backwoodsman to become the Great Emancipator.

Lincoln possessed certain worthy inherent qualities which characterize him as the typical American. These cause us to love him. First he was honest and absolutely trustworthy in all particulars. How much those truth bearing anecdotes connected with his life mean to the world no one can ascertain. He was too honest to be a lawyer, that is, the popular type, whose supreme aim is to win the decision regardless of means. Never would he accept a case if he did not think his client to be in the right and when a verdict was given which was not as favorable to the other side as he knew it to be just, he interposed, insisting that his opponent had been allowed too little. Absolute justice seemed to be his one aim and passion. Rightly was he called "Honest Abe," and rightly do men love him for his honesty.

We love him, because he was a brave man. Whatever was to be done he did it without fear. Lincoln was one of the very first to enlist in the Black Hawk war, and was chosen captain of his company, over his former employer. Amid countless threats of assassination he dared constantly to walk the streets of Washington by night and unarmed. But, his personal bravery was hidden beneath the splendors of his spiritual daring. He was so quiet and unpretending that the nation was long in learning that back of his unassuming manner was a will as unyielding as Grant's, when once his mind was fixed, a courage that feared no danger and an absolute firmness in the right, as God gave him to see the right. God alone knows how this land would have fared through the wild surges of that most troubled sea, had a weaker and more timid pilot been at the helm. For his bravery we may honor him.

We love him, too, for his wisdom. He had the ruler's indispensable gift—tact in dealing with men. Remember how wisely he dealt with Stanton. Recall with what infinite patience he bore with McClellan's egotism and dallying. In the supreme matter of slavery, hating the cause from his heart, feeling bound to preserve it under the constitution until the very life of the nation required its removal, how for months he waited, holding back his proclamation, assailed on all hands by impatient abolitionists, until military necessity justified him in the breach of the constitution! Through all the confusions and whirlwind terrors of that time there was one center of power holding all steady,—a plain, quiet man, in a plain room at Washington. His wisdom saved our country and for that we admire him.

In these days of reconstruction there are timely lessons to be learned from the lips and life of Mr. Lincoln. He has shown the world that a person of lowly birth can rise and become great. Circumstantial evidence bears out this truth in him who was a man of the people and a typical citizen of the Republic. Not only the Word of God but the teaching of his favorite poet had sunk deep into his heart, giving him a quiet self assurance that enabled him to live up to the text: "The rank is but the guinea's stamp. A man's the gowd for a' that."—Burns.

He gave to the world a Christian life. As a man he was one who, in addition to an unblemished life in the eyes of the world, had learned to trust in Providence, to know the Bible, to respect the Sabbath, to pray, to worship God and to love Christ.

He died in our service and so we honor him. That was the secret of his life and the cause of his death—the service of his fellow men. Some asked, "Why was Mr. Lincoln's life so mournfully closed?" The answer, all doubtful then, is clear as daylight now—that it might with all other glories, receive the crown of usefulness.

It has been said that Abraham Lincoln lived as a man of many sorrows. The shame, the suffering, the hatred of the period fell upon him as upon none other. The tragedy of the war staged itself within his heart until his only relief was in prayer, as it was with Washington nearly a century before. Some great men win respect, others claim reverence, a few induce fear, but Abraham Lincoln captured the love of the nation and of the world. This is the highest of tributes. As history advances the generations will look back on the figure of Mr. Lincoln, towering above the level of ordinary men as the Statue of Liberty at the gateway of the American continent towers above the waters beating at its base.

A Tribute to a Christlike Man. By G. C. Carpenter.

On Christmas day he went home to God, "no longer to see through a glass darkly, but—face to face." A mansion over there was Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman's Christmas present. God called the great evangelist, author, and Presbyterian minister to cease his strenuous life here and to enter the glory life yonder. Only the omniscient God knows the extent of the blessed influence of the life of Dr. Chapman. Even the funeral of the great preacher was more an evangelistic service than a funeral service, which was in keeping with the spirit of the departed friend of all men. The singing and the preaching at that service were evangelistic. "He being dead, yet speaketh." Dr. H. A. Banks says that the framework of that last silent sermon might have been found in the chorus of "One Day," his own composition, and sung so tenderly in that hour.

"Living, He loved me; Dying, He saved me;
Buried, He carried my sins far away;
Rising, He justified freely forever:
One day He's coming—Oh, glorious day."

Charles M. Alexander, Dr. Chapman's magnetic singing mate, was there but could not trust his voice in song or tribute. He loved the great evangelist, and said to Mrs. Chapman that if he had the wording of her husband's epitaph he would write the above chorus on his tombstone.

Billy Sunday sent this message: "The Doctor was my truest friend. Next to the members of my own family, I loved him more than any one else. He started me in my life's work, and encouraged me when the battle was hard. His love was like a mother's love. I wish I could have seen the welcome the angels gave him when he burst through the gates into the City."

A rare talent for preaching, a passion for souls, enthusiasm for evangelism, a lovable nature that drew men to him, fidelity to the fundamentals of the faith, were among the things emphasized by those who spoke at that last service. Dr. Ottman expressed the conviction that the departed would win the crown of life for faithfulness unto death; the crown of glory for feeding the flock of God; the crown of rejoicing for winning souls; and the crown of righteousness for loving the Lord's appearing. That blessed hope was the inspiration of his ministry.

Dr. Chapman heard Moody preach and there got his inspiration for evangelism, and soon after he found himself in the midst of a great revival in his own church. Many thousands of people in almost all parts of the world answered the call to confess Christ in full surrender as the evangelist pressed home the gospel message. "There was a passion in his heart that vibrated as he pleaded." He went out of his way to minister to them who were down-and-out.

"There are hundreds of ministers preaching today over the world who would not be in the pulpit had not J. Wilbur Chapman found them." And we may add that there are many hundreds of ministers who are better servants of God because of the helpfulness of the life of this great evangelist. The writer cannot refrain from giving expression to the gratitude he feels for the influence of the life of Dr. Chapman upon his own life in the early years of his ministry. The evangelist was a very busy man, but never too busy to take a young minister into his study and talk with him and encourage him, as a father would his son whom he loved. He was indeed a friend and we loved him. He said to one young minister, "you need not be an ordinary minister of the gospel, you can in Christ be an extraordinary one." And in almost countless lives he was a great inspiration to that end. The passion of his heart vibrated in his voice as he talked. One woman converted under his preaching told Dr. Banks, "There was something even in the tone of his voice I could not resist." He like his Master had compassion on lost men.

Dr. Carson, a former Presbyterian Moderator confessed, "I was attending one of his evangelistic meetings and I saw Chapman had something that I had not. I told him so after the meeting and we sat up until four o'clock in the morning in order that I might learn from him more of that deep passion for souls which characterized his preaching. The last sermon he preached in my church was from the text, 'That I may know him'—as God, Savior, King. As usual he gave the invitation, and five men past fifty and two women accepted Christ."

Mr. Alexander said, "Dr. Chapman did not care a great deal for the arithmetic of evangelism, in the way of counting converts, but in fifteen months in Australia three thousand young men dedicated their lives to the ministry, if God would open the way for them to enter it."

His sermons were not easily forgotten. They were clothed in simple language and homely illustration. The Salvation Army circulated one million copies of his sermon on the text, "For the Lord Jesus Christ's sake and for the love of the Spirit." Many of us heard with great profit his sermons at Winona from year to year. Dr. Work says, "Dr. Chapman once preached at Winona on the text, 'Thy gentleness hath made me great.' I would like to lay this text on his bier."

Surely we were right in saying that only the omniscient God knows the extent of the blessed influence of the life of Dr. Chapman. Thank God for such a life! He lives on not only with his Lord over there but in countless souls he helped while he dwelt on earth.

Prayer as a Factor in Religion. By Francis J. Reagan

That steward of the mysteries of God, be he either pastor, evangelist, or teacher who fails of spending literal hours in earnest fervent prayer, courts defeat and will succumb to spiritual helplessness, and though he with fiery zeal continue to pose and speak as an ambassador in behalf of Christ, his weakness will be exposed by the Spirit and be apparent to himself and his auditors. That church that is a stranger to fasting and frequent seasons of effectual prayer will become the harbor of enmities, strife, jealousies, envyings and all forms of carnality; it will fail in its evangelical mission not only but will be the means of planting a degraded conception in the minds of the unchurched, thereby creating a false impression about the organism for which Christ died. No amount of Christian activity can take the place of prayer in the life of either clergy or laity. We could legitimately paraphrase Paul and say; though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels . . . have the gift of prophecy, know all mysteries, all knowledge, have all faith, bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and give my body to be burned, and have not prayer, it profiteth me nothing; and the zealous pastor could add, and though I hold special meetings, call in evangelistic specialists, advertise freely, sing like an oriole but have not attended diligently Christ's school of prayer, it profiteth me nothing. There are certain things we ought to do, one is to be active in the gospel. There are certain things we must, one is to be passive in the presence of Christ. The former is expedient, the latter is imperative; activity is valuable, prayer is indispensable.

My subject is ample and far reaching, and it might be well here to clarify our minds as to the meaning of this noble word evangelism. We must get rid of the idea that evangelism means hiring a preacher to persuade individuals whom we ought ourselves to be persuading, and believe that we should be as Andrew, who, when he found Jesus went and brought Peter to Jesus; then Philip found Jesus and he went after Nathaniel leading him thither. Bishop McDowell addressing the Federated Churches on Evangelism tells of how the Y. M. C. A. had its origin in George Williams coming into vital personal acquaintance with Jesus, and forthwith proceeding to introduce others to Jesus that he might become a Redeemer to them, and gives the following illuminating definition of evangelism—"Now in the heart of it, in the great depths of it, in the inaccessible heights of it, that is evangelism, that one person who knows Jesus Christ as his Redeemer, should introduce other people to Jesus Christ, that he may become their Redeemer." The New Testament picture of the church is the preacher as a leader among equals; equal in salvation, zeal, responsibility. Another view shows the disciples—although not giving as much time to prayer and the word as the preacher, so filled with zeal and the missionary motive that they are continuously witnessing to the resurrection. If we can see evangelism as a mutual responsibility and privilege for all believers with special work for the preacher, we can then pray intelligently and with expectancy. In reviewing the methods of Paul, who next to the Master was the greatest of all evangelists, we see that his doctrine of prayer as a factor in evangelism was two-fold: consisting of a request that all churches pray for him, coupled with assurance of his unceasing prayer for them. We will therefore confine our thought to the church in prayer for the preacher and the preacher in prayer for the church.

The Preacher Must Pray

The preacher's first duty to his Master is to give himself faithfully to the word and to the ministry of prayer. We will do well to prayerfully consider the opening verses of Acts six. We read among other things that, "these were the days when the number of disciples were multiplying"—they were days of revival, and that is what we are longing for; and further, "there arose a murmuring among the Grecians because their widows were being neglected in the daily ministrations." These two conditions might well demand the personal attention of the preachers, but were not deemed of sufficient importance as to cause them to leave the Word of God and prayer, "it is not fit that we should leave the Word of God and serve tables." They appointed others to do the minor tasks and said, "we will give ourselves steadfastly to the word of God and prayer." Note the fruit of such a resolution, "and the Word of God increased, and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem exceedingly; and a great company of priests were obedient to the faith,.....and Stephen full of grace and power, wrought great wonders and signs among the people . . . and they were not able to withstand the wisdom and the Spirit with which he spake." Here is such a demonstration of power through preaching that the priests are swept into the faith, and the combined forces of the synagogues are powerless to resist the men who dared to withdraw themselves even from important but minor service. When will it be said of us brother ministers, "they were not able to withstand the wisdom and Spirit with which they spake?" Certainly only when we follow in the way of our peers and imitate them in this grandest, hardest, holiest task, of giving ourselves steadfastly to "the Word of God and prayer." These are the days when ministers under the awful pressure of the crying need around us, are living (?) on snatches of prayer and God's Word. These are the days when we stand in our pulpits with a system of doctrine at once perfect and complete and yet as powerless as a shorn Samson. It is because we desert the word and prayer at every beck and call, and run to and fro like chariots serving tables (Many times serving them by placing our feet under them to eat, drink and be merry. Brother Watson's words are so sure and true that they will bear repetition here: "half done sermons, and running, racing, calling, tea-drinking parsons have gone far to lose the grip of the church on men and to bring the ministry into disrepute among them as little business of little men."

"This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting" said the Master to the poor, weak, powerless disciples as they stood baffled in the presence of Satan's power, and as we rack our brains for "Methods of Church Work" and look askance at the appalling darkness around, the same Master is seen as of old pointing to the prayer closet saying "go in, shut the door, and your father which seeth in secret will reward thee openly." No matter how far we have drifted from this apostolic ideal we must come back to the place that gives the golden hours of our lives to this sacred seclusion. The preacher that made Felix tremble and almost persuaded Agrippa to be a Christian was wont to instruct Timothy after this manner, "Meditate on these things, give thyself wholly to them that thy profiting may appear unto all," "Preacher do you crave power? Then let nothing under heaven interfere with those Hours of Steadfastness with the Word of God and prayer. S. D. Gordon speaking to students and professors said, "none of us have time to pray, we must take time." In these days one is considered a dreamer who advocates long hours of seclusion from a needy world. One example will suffice to prove that the men who do the greatest good for the world are the men who spend much time apart from the world in prayer and meditation. George Mueller in answer to prayer founded the famous Bristol Orphanage, Bethesda Chapel, the Scriptural Knowledge Institution, became the steward of seven million dollars, and at the eve of his eventful life when most men are thinking of retiring he began his world-wide evangelistic work in which he preached six thousand times to approximately three million people. Dr. A. T. Pierson says that preaching to thousands and meeting with ministers all over the world could not interfere and rob this giant of his hours alone with God. "Go hide thyself" was Jehovah's first word to Elijah, followed by "Go shew thyself," this is the order of Omnipotence. The preacher must pray.

The Preacher Must be Prayed For

"Peter therefore was kept in prison: but prayer was made earnestly of the church unto God for him" (Acts 12:5). Here is a sight indeed: the man of God in dire distress and need and the church in instant and earnest prayer for him. Happy combination of power. Good is it for that man who as he assumes the eternal responsibility of representing Christ, can feel the shackles fall and the prison doors swing open before him by reason of a church at prayer. Who knows this need more than the man who stands before God to proclaim the obense of the cross to this generation? Who can tell his heart? He needs not good wishes, compliments, salary, much less complaints or criticisms; he needs God's people praying heaven in humble incessant fervent prayer for him, and this satisfies his soul as he rises upon the strong prayerful sympathetic arms of his people to speak the words of eternal life. Paul, who more than any other man might have waged a lone fight, never closes an epistle without craving the prayers of God's children. "Praying always with all prayer . . . in the Spirit . . . with all perseverance and supplication for all saints, and for me, that utterance may be given me that I may open my mouth boldly to make known the mystery of the gospel. . . that I may speak boldly as I ought to speak (Eph. 6:18-20). The Word of God going forth from a praying preacher held up by a praying church is a trinity of power that defies resistance. When all is said and done, the only evangelism worthy of the name is when the Word of God goes forth, runs its course, (either unto life or death) and is glorified. Evangelism is not coaxing, dragging or searing a lot of folks into the church; it is not logic, ethics, ideals nor activity, yet possessing all these, it is the legitimate increase of the Word of God. Through the medium of the Word, the Spirit, and prayer, sinner is saved, saint is edified and God in Christ glorified.

There are two institutions of the church which require the services of a modern Elijah and which until they are restored, the church in spite of all she claims to be will sail under false colors. The first and most important is the family altar, and the second is like unto it, the prayer meeting. We as a denomination love to keep Jesus' commandments; but did he not say my house shall be called a house of prayer? When he said my house we think he meant the temple or any other house that claims to be a Christian home. To many to be a Christian means membership in an organization, a few dollars spent, attendance at services,

(Continued on Page 4)

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

Church Unity Throughout the World. By Clarence E. Kolb

(Sermon preached during Week of Prayer, at union service in the United Brethren church, Nappanee, Indiana.)

In Galatians 3:28 the Apostle Paul gives expression to these words, "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." The American version substitutes the words can be for the word is which makes the statement much stronger. Lest we might assume too much and for a clearer understanding of the verse under consideration it is necessary to refer to the 27th verse, as the writer of those who have been baptized into Christ as having put on Christ and he has just written in the 26th verse that "ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus."

The church is composed of all those who are true believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is made up of God's elect—of those men and women who have been converted from sin unto righteousness, from Satan unto Christ, those who have washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb and have heard the call of the Holy Spirit to newness of life in Christ Jesus. By these statements the church can never be confused with the organizations as they are constituted into churches. This distinction is necessary because so frequently the world does not remember this difference and so the church falls into disrepute. This is the age of the church during which the Holy Spirit through the love of God in Christ Jesus is calling out a people unto his name from among the world, and in which many special functions are committed unto the church which are not given to any other body, and which will not be accomplished if the church fails in its duty. In this connection we remember that the church is the salt of the earth and the light of the world. It is the "antiseptic" which God uses to overcome the festering sin sores of this world and as children of light (the Light) we are to walk in the world. While the church is a unit it is composed of individuals the unity of which compose the whole and each of which make the church more true or more false. In proportion to the degree in which we recognize the Master and his authority over our lives and the work he bids us do, is the church increased or decreased.

The church is a distinct body. We read "Come ye out from among them and be ye separate." Separation from the world and the things of the world is one of the cardinal qualities of the church's character. The church is of the Lord's own making. Jesus said, "Upon this rock will I build my church," referring to the confession of faith which Peter had made in Jesus as Christ. The reason of so much church trouble and difficulty is right here, that Christ is not permitted to be the Master builder. The church is the possession of Christ. Again look at the word just given, "Upon this rock will I build my church." We are fond of saying "This is my church" as contrasted with some person's church. It is my church building provided you have put your thirty cents into the building fund. It may be my Sunday school, but not my church in the sense of possession for the church is Christ's possession. "Ye are not your own for ye are bought with a price." Far better would it be to say "I am a member of the church"; to glory in that, and not preeminently in your denominational affiliation is far better. The church is one organization. "So we being many are one body in Christ and every one members one of another." God knows we are "many;" I had almost said "Legion"; many baptisms, many lords, many creeds, many garments, and many everything except converts to Christianity. That being the condition the only way to solve the problem is to follow the inference of these words and be every one members of the one body in Christ. I do not know how God is going to bring order out of chaos and concord out of discord, but I know he will do it. One thing, we are not going to get to heaven because we are Methodists or Presbyterians or even Brethren.

When Jesus was here on the earth he did not organize a congregation as congregations are now organized, but he did call out of the world those who were to be his followers and gave them authority to call others and so on, and we find his desire for all these when he said "They are not of the world (hence of the church) even as I am not of the world. Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word. That they all may be one; as thou Father art in me, and I in thee that they also may be one in us." The followers of Jesus are bidden to remember the love of God in these words, "In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world that we might live through him." Then as a climax to this truth come these words, "Beloved if God so loved us we ought to love one another." This is the touch-stone of the believers interrelation. Where love reigns, strivings, divisions, contentions cannot exist. Rather, this must be the attitude of the Christian toward his brother or sister unto the uttermost part of the earth: "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love. Be of the same mind one toward another. Recompense to no man evil for evil." When Paul was writing to the church at Corinth he said to them, "Unto the church of God which is at Corinth. . . with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ" and having thus addressed himself to all Christians everywhere he says, "Now I beseech you brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." Surely such a message is addressed to us as well as to all other Christians, that in unity of purpose and in Jesus Christ, having his name upon our hearts, we may work the works of him that sent us.

It is therefore evident that in the church which is of Christ's making, which is his possession, which he longed might be one even as he and the Father are, wherein the love of God is the great bond of unity and which has been so instructed as we have seen, "let brotherly love continue."

Nevertheless the facts, sad as they are, are before us. From the day that the first brothers contended together until the present brothers have been quarreling. All manner of fueds and jealousies, rivalries and hates have been known to exist among those united by the closest ties. It has always been the natural way of natural man. Esau and Jacob, Joseph and his brethren, Ephraim and Judah, converted Pharisees in the early church contending against Paul, the early and late councils of the church and the great divisions resulting in the multitude of sects today, all have been contending, in the face of the explicit words of Jesus and the Bible. His words remain. They shall remain long after the monuments to man's disputings have vanished. Most certainly many of the past divisions and those of the present have their rightful place. Very frequently they have resulted in a purer faith, and more faithful adherence to the gospel and it is not that today we plead for less love to the particular denomination but for more love to the church. Time was when differences between denominations caused harsh words, fussings, backbitings and a great category of evils. For the most part that day is past. Let it rest from all it's turmoil. If denominational feelings which militate against your fellowshiping with your neighbor of another denomination and offend the freedom of the spirit still exist, get over them. Pray God to wipe them out of your heart. As denominations, we differ as regards interpretation of scripture, church government, the ordinances and their administration. Let these be as they may, but remember to stress the points of concord. There are many things which we can agree upon: God, Christ, the Holy Spirit, hell, heaven, sin, death, judgment, resurrection, necessity of holiness, of Bible study, and prayer and many other subjects we agree upon at once. "Whence come wars and fightings among you?" If your life is permeated with the love of God, whatever you do will be done to the glory of God. It is when we behave ourselves unseemly toward each other or seek our own in an unchristian manner or when we are easily provoked, when we think evil of our neighbor of another denomination that discord arises. "A house divided against itself shall fall."

Today the church on the great battle-front of Christianity—the mission field—is facing the foe fearlessly, because it is fighting as a unit in action. The interest of one denomination is the interest of every other denomination. The foreign boards are planning their strategy here at home and the field councils are getting to the attack. No one denomination can stem the southward sweep of Moslem into Africa, but with all denominations upon the field in tune with God and each other, Central and South Africa will be saved for Christ. We hear with glowing rhetoric and great pleonasm and ambiguity of the merits and hopes of a League of Nations. Far be it from me to pour water on patriotic fires as long as God's will is being attempted, but of exceeding greater blessing to the world and the increase of the gospel both abroad and at home would be a League of Christians, set for the defense of the gospel."

The gospel is the good news of harmony, the harmony of one family; Of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named; of one Spirit Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit; One hope, Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ; one Brother, one calling, one commission. God is unity. His Word speaks of one message. His work is planned from the ages and will be consummated in eternity. His will is one, saying, I in them and thou in me, that they all may be made perfect in me" "For ye are all one in Christ."

OUR DEVOTIONAL

The Test Of A Christian's Faith

By Lois Frazier

Our Scripture

For we walk by faith, not by sight (2 Cor. 5:7).

By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of reward. By faith he forsook Egypt, fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured, as seeing him who is invisible (Heb. 11:24-27). Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith (Heb. 12:1-2).

Our Meditations

In the second of his letter written to the early Christians of that ancient center of Grecian culture, Corinth, not so far removed from its past of unprecedented glory, and of an unequaled burst of culture, St. Paul yet boldly declares the simplicity of the New Way: "For we walk by faith."

Until recently I had interpreted those words with a very different meaning than that which I now believe them to hold. My voice had unconsciously or not stressed the faith, and my thought had followed the intonation in its emphasis. Upon reading the words afresh, I chanced to find new value in the verb, and in consequence, a hidden richness in the thought of St. Paul.

May we be reading too far afield when we reflect with delight that in choosing his figure, the writer of the letter selects one typifying the normal manner of movement? He says not saunter nor leap nor run, but walk.

St. Paul, as I believe, was seeking to impress upon those legend-ridden people, the naturalness of the effect of faith in a life. He was striving to show them the religion which, basing its tenets upon the miracles of Gethsemane and Calvary, resulted in the development of the normal, natural mode of living.

A child even, very early observes that movement is one of the surest signs of life in the higher forms of creation, what after proof then, could St. Paul have chosen in teaching the perfect life, than to demonstrate the value of faith by naming a dynamic resultant of that great fundamental? We walk by faith.

It may be possible that to the rarely placid soul of a Burroughs there is enticement in the passiveness of his "Serene I fold my hands and wait—

Nor care for wind nor tide nor sea."

But to the most of us human beings there is an eagerness for experience and growth that can find little sympathy with in his nonchalant

No more can we feel justified in plunging on with Henry, madly essaying control of all forces of mind and nature in his nonchalant

"I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul!"

One fails to satisfy the reaches of man, the other fails to recognize his limitations.

WALKING steady, natural progress, is the inevitable sequence of faith.

There may be instances of occasional and unusual spurts claimed as the fruits of faith, and there may be resignation so heroically patient and firm that nothing but the majesty of faith could father it, but both of these lie outside the realm of the normal.

The religion of Christ was designed for the natural life. If the world would set a test upon the potency of this religion, it can seek no surer method than to examine the product of the great fundamental—faith, as found in the life of an adherent to that religion.

Who dares to examine his own gait and raise his head, guiltless and satisfied? Rather, with the strength of the little faith that has already functioned, we petition the great Source of all faith for fresh supply.

Our Prayer

"Our Father God, in the silence of our hearts we have looked up into thy face and have found that thou art loving; in the wonders of the hills, the waters and the sky, we have found that thou art infinite; in the peoples of the world we have seen thee working; in their cry of need we have heard thee calling.

As we go our ways to live among those who have not seen thee—in the chill of their indifference, in the fire of their mockings, in the shadowland of their unbelief, grant that we may hold fast. Keep our spirits broadly awake. Help us to remember.

Thou hast not said that life depends upon how we feel, and for that we thank thee. When feeling goes, help us to hold our wills steady, that we may live steadily before thee.

Give us each day to look up into thy face. In laying hold of thy strength, help us to forget our weakness. In the quiet assurance of thy power help us to go joyously about our business.

And whether thou leadest us into the loneliness of the country, the seething of mighty cities, or to thy children across the seas; whether we walk by quiet waters or are thrust into the heat of battle; whether the road winds up into the bright sunlight or down into deep darkness, help us to remember that thou, our Lord Christ, art there, even as thou art here,—and thou are light and life and love."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

A School With a Splendid Record

By J. F. Watson, President National Sunday School Association

Hurrah for Conemaugh! Last year Conemaugh led all the schools of the brotherhood by giving the largest "White Gift" offering. Like all victors they felt good over their achievement, and started out to make the new year a record breaker. Well, I guess they did in more ways than one. This school had some serious setbacks during the year but this did not dampen their ardor nor slacken their pace in the least. Their superintendent, Brother Hayes Parks, died during the year and this meant no little loss as he was a splendid man and a fine leader. It was necessary to select his successor and the yoke fell upon Brothr A. W. Ford, who has already made good in the work. During the year Conemaugh gave five hundred dollars towards the endowment of Ashland College. They meant to make our big schools step high if they wanted to stay in the Conemaugh class. This is right to do work for the Lord in the right spirit and way. NOW! What shall I next say, well here they come with a "White Gift" offering nearly doubling their last year's offering. I cannot say, just what my heart felt about this splendid offering and the loyalty of their support to the work of our National Sunday School Association. It is a record which ought to spur every Sunday school to a full sense of duty. THREE HUNDRED AND FOUR DOLLARS, an average of one dollar and thirty cents per capita of enrollment. Is there another school that can eclipse the record or equal it? If there is, come along and I'll give you a write up too. Now, this achievement was not the result of one man's work. The pastor, L. Garvin Smith, lined his people up for a great offering and with the co-operation of the superintendent they raised over one hundred dollars more than the goal they started out to reach. Now, Smith and Ford make a good team to put a "White Gift" offering over in real style. They worked together and they worked hard and this brought the desired results. I attribute Conemaugh's triumph to the fact that they set a goal for their offering. They said, "What would be a good record for us?" and when it was settled they started out to get it. And they did, and more. Now, I knew you would like to see the likeness of these leaders, so I have sent their pictures with the article. I shall have more to say later of other records that are worthy of special mention. Our schools should forward their offerings at once so that our obligations may be promptly met to Kentucky and the college. Yours for a year of achievement.

L. GARVIN SMITH
Pastor Conemaugh Brethren Church

A. W. FORD, Superintendent

Value of Positive Religion in Education

Positive religion results in the building of right character and consequent right living. Thus there is a close relation between positive religion and character, and this is opposed to the general belief that character is largely the result of correct morals even without religion.

The importance of this subject is indicated by the fact that a man who has made an intensive and extensive study of it is offering a prize of $20,000 for the best method of character education in public schools. True, education is broader than that given in the public schools, but in a large majority of cases this education is the largest factor of those making up the general education, excepting perhaps that secured in the activities of the various pursuits of life. True also that the prize is offered for the best method, but if the method is important the results desired are also important.

Education is for the purpose of preparing us for lives' duties and religion which is positive, results in this preparation, as nothing else does. This is self evident when we remember that the Christian religion (and this is the religion which is meant whenever the term is used in this article) embodies everything that makes for good—in action as well as in character, or perhaps it is better to say in action as a result of character. The principles of character and of action taught by the great Teacher, the basis of which was laid before his sojourn upon the earth, are absolutely necessary in the education that should be given to all by the agencies that contribute to it.

From observation it is feared that we are likely to think of positive religion as consisting only of that which is manifest or even of that which is visible, such as forms and ceremonies, attendance a religious meetings, and doing of good deeds. These are really the results of religion and may even be performed without religion or at the best with formal religion which is not positive in its results. Positive religion is that religion which results in the above activities. Positive religion as a result of one's education is something unseen but which results in that which may be seen. As electricity is shown only by its results so positive religion is known by its results. This invisibility and intangibility of religion except in its results is the reason that we can not correctly judge the character of many people, especially children, who have not reached, except in a very limited sense, the stage of expression in word, action, and deed, and due also to the fact that "youth has its mysterious silences." So in our training in positive religion, especially in the home and in the public school we must many times walk by faith, but always remembering that the supreme good in all education is this positive religion which whether seen or not results in fitting us for the duties and responsibilities of life.

A. E. WEAVER, Co. Supt. of Schools.

The Sunday School Challenge

January 29, 1919.

The Pittsburgh Brethren Sunday school has accepted the Challenge of the Waterloo school, and has already gained sufficient momentum as a result of entering to bid for our carrying off at least one of the stars. The Challenge is just what was needed to put the necessary impetus into the officers and teachers to recoup the loss sustained on account of the epidemic. Hope it may help all the schools of the brotherhood as it has already helped ours. Yours in his service,

H. M. HARLEY.

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

ASHLAND'S AFTERGLOW OF ENDEAVOR NIGHT

Ashland has always had a reputation for good Christian Endeavor meetings. The present year presents no exception. Under the leadership of Earl H. Detsch, president, and John P. Horlacher, vice president, and their loyal associates splendid meetings are being provided. On February 2nd, the topic was "Best Things in Christian Endeavor." One interesting feature was a debate in which Pauline Teeter spoke for the Lookout committee, John Horlacher the Prayer Meeting, Lulu Wood the Music, and Harry Griffith the Missionary. Each carried his or her point according to the decision of the judge who held that each of these committees was necessary and no one could be dispensed with without loss. Miss Banghart, the leader, has prepared the list of striking testimonies given below, which, with the other messages, reproduce in part Ashland's anniversary program. What Has Christian Endeavor Done for You?

J. A. GARBER.

What Has Christian Endeavor Done For You?

How many of us go to Christian Endeavor Sunday after Sunday without stopping to think what Christian Endeavor really is and has done for us. We are apt to forget that it has brought salvation within the reach of many, and that it induces us to make a public confession of Christ. The hope it puts before the eyes of the young people is Christ himself, his appearing and his approval. We must constantly remind ourselves and others of our duties and privileges. It is easy to say, to forget, to grow, to faint. What good works is Christian Endeavor doing? What is the best thing Christian Endeavor has done for you?

At a recent Christian Endeavor meeting those present were given cards and asked to write on the back what Christian Endeavor had done for them. The answers were many and varied, but what testimonies they were! The following are a few. They are well worth your attention.

"Taking part in Christian Endeavor was a beginning of an active part in church work."

"Encouragement in maintaining daily devotions, training in religious activities and inspiration to enter the ministry."

"It has trained me to speak more freely in public, and has placed me on a brotherly and friendly basis with the church people and many other things."

"Of the vital things in my Christian experience the Christian Endeavor stands out boldly as a superior spiritual uplift. The society has been (to say briefly and the least) a source of godlike recuperation when my spiritual cup needed refilling."

"The Christian Endeavor is a great factor in aiding me to live the best and most useful life for Christ and my fellowmen. Also it gives me an opportunity for personal development in taking an active part in the services."

"Christian Endeavor besides the experience in actual service, has revealed many truths to me."

"Christian Endeavor leads us to see more clearly the high ideals of life."

"The singing is good, scripture fine, attendance splendid, but—the best things are the young people touched and inspired by the life Jesus lived for them."

"Christian Endeavor helped me to speak in public and also to make public prayer. It taught me many things in the way of service for Christ."

"Christian Endeavor has helped me to overcome fear to appear before an audience. It has given me an opportunity to learn to offer prayer in public."

"Christian Endeavor is the missing link. It is that invaluable factor by which we may commune with God in a practical and helpful way."

"Christian Endeavor has given me spiritual food."

"The Christian Endeavor has taught me to speak in public and how to deal with young people in order to get them interested in the work for the Master. I might add also, it led me to see the great need of Christian fellowship."

"Christian Endeavor has been the chief means of my development. The Sunday Christian Endeavor hour was always the most precious and helpful of the day and all my early spiritual life owes its growth to this all powerful organization."

And here last but not least we have the testimony of a little Junior Christian Endeavorer:

"I like to go to Christian Endeavor because I can learn something about Jesus."

We as young people certainly cannot afford to miss these splendid opportunities for personal development and service. What Christian Endeavor has done for others it will do for you.—MARGARET E. BANGHART.

OUR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR COMPASS

By Charles L. Anspach

The four points of our Christian Endeavor Compass are, (1) Fellowship, (2) Private Devotions, (3) Church Loyalty and (4) Testimony. I believe that all Endeavorers will agree that these four points constitute a remarkable compass; one which would safely guide any person through life.

The first point is that of fellowship. A fellowship is first a partnership. In our everyday life we hear much of the formation of partnerships for business purposes, but we hear little of the organization of partnerships for spiritual work. When God created man he not only created him in his own image but admitted him into a partnership. According to the terms of this agreement, God was the senior partner and man the junior partner. But as time went on man endeavored to change this arrangement and make himself the senior and God the junior partner.

As a result many such partnerships have gone into bankruptcy. The recent "Me und Gott" partnership of the German ex-emperor is a good example of such an organization in bankruptcy. It goes without saying that God fulfilled his part of the contract but the other party failed miserably.

In the formation of a partnership, civil or spiritual, one thing must be remembered, the amount of interest returned is always in direct ratio to the amount invested and the investment.

In an eastern city a company for the manufacture of astronomical instruments has sprung into being. This corporation is the result of the labors of two men, who, as boys, coming from Vermont to Hartford, Connecticut, pooled their resources for manufacturing purposes. The company continued to grow until the time when Licks Observatory was built by our government. The contract for the manufacture of the largest telescope ever built up to that time, to be placed in the building was awarded this concern. They now produce the largest instruments manufactured. The reason for the success of Warren and Swazey, lies in the fact that they had learned to "pull together." That is the key principle in every successful organization. We must learn not only to pull with each other but to pull with God.

A successful partnership leads to a beautiful companionship. Many have heard the story of Damon and Pythias. They were friends. Damon was on friendly terms with the ruling king, while Pythias stood in disfavor. Pythias was condemned to death. Damon, being sorry for his friend, asked the king for a respite of four hours, that Pythias might visit his family before his death. As a bond Damon offers himself to be placed in prison and that in case Pythias fails to return his own life shall be forfeited. His offer is accepted and Pythias goes to his home. Because of their love for Pythias his slaves kill his horse that he might not return. He however, forces a traveler to give up his horse and hastens to court. Upon his arrival he bursts into the execution chamber and finds Damon kneeling with the executors ready to sever his head from his body. The return of Pythias opens the eyes of the king and he pardons him. Turning to Damon and Pythias he said, "Admit me into your companionship."

This truly is a beautiful story but have we not one more beautiful in the story of Christ? He not only knelt and offered his life but he actually gave it for our fellowship. Will we refuse such a fellowship? The true meaning of friendship and companionship, in the writer's estimation, is the melting of the Golden Rule into the one word, "Service."

We have formed a partnership and having done so we look about for some source of

(Continued on Page 16)

MISSIONS

Has the Old Time Martyr Spirit Died Out?

Dr. A. N. Andrus, a medical missionary of the American Board from Mardin in Mesopotamia, tells a thrilling tale of loyalty unto death on the part of the male population of a village near Mardin. Three hundred Christian men of the village, after being arrested by Turkish troops, were led out to be shot. They were taken to a desolate spot away from the village and drawn up in line with a firing squad of soldiers facing them a few rods away. The Turkish officer then addressed them as follows: "The men who lift their hands like this and thereby signify that they renounce Christianity and become Mohammedans will not be shot. Those who do not lift their hands will be shot immediately." Instantly all of the three hundred threw open their breasts and said as with one voice, "You may shoot." Straightway the firing began and the men were dropping in groups when a horseman was seen dashing over the plain, waving a document in his hand. The officer then ordered the firing to cease until the message could be received. The document was found to be a reprieve from the governor of the province, so that the balance of the lives of these Armenian Christians were saved, but not until they had rendered this grand testimony of loyalty to Christ, even unto death. Do the annals of the church contain a nobler record than this? Do you think this age is less noble than the past? Does not this age possess the martyr spirit as much as any? Have we lost faith in the allegiance of men today to the Christ of all ages? The martyr spirit is not confined to any age or to any race. Wherever men catch a clear vision of the beauty and holiness of Christ and are gripped and held by an unhindered sway of the Holy Spirit, they still cling to Christ without a thought of renunciation in the face of any foe. What though men slay the body, they cannot touch the soul. There is no danger to be feared like that of being cast, soul and body, into hell. And there is no power so strong as that of him who is able to save to the uttermost all of them that call upon him by faith. It is that power and it is he, the Christ, who draws men to himself and holds them today as he has ever done. The power of Christ is not waning, nor is faith weaker than it ever was. Our missionaries are going out to the heart of Africa with its fevers, superstition and barbarism, and to the chaos, infidelity and immorality of South America by faith. They are being led into the gloom of the "dark continent" by faith and they are conquering the distrust and subduing the scorn of the "neglected continent" by faith. The Student Volunteers among our young people are preparing for and looking forward by faith to the sacrifice of life in some great needy field for Christ's sake. To all these their service is not sacrifice but a glorious privilege. They are willing to do anything for Christ. They are loyal to the core and are willing to live or die for him. And the name of these soldiers of the Cross is "legion." The martyr spirit has not perished from the earth, and will not so long as the King is on his throne.

G. S. B.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

FILLMORE OVER THE TOP AGAIN

The Fillmore Brethren not only built a church on record time (it was four months from the time we began excavating until we moved into the new house), but they held a record business meeting on January first, at which time it was agreed to place The Brethren Evangelist in each and every home of our membership and ask for a place on the Honor Roll. Now, some of you indifferent churches back east had better sit up and take notice, for we of Southern California will not stop until every one of our group of churches has placed the "Evangelist" on the budget, or in some way has gotten onto the Honor Roll. Wishing that every church in the brotherhood will place the Evangelist on the Honor Roll (it will do you good) I am yours for a happy and prosperous year.

S. LOWMAN.

BURLINGTON, INDIANA

The First Brethren church of Burlington held the first services since our taking the pastorate on Sunday, December 22, 1918. That is to say, we were on the field at Burlington and out of services at the church here for three months save that one Sunday in which we had two services. On January the first we had an all day meeting and began a series of evangelistic services in the evening. We had our first quarterly business meeting in the afternoon on January the first and elected the officers for the church and also the Sunday school. The nice thing about the business meeting was that there was a good representation of the church present and that all stood in an agreement to co-operate in every way possible in our work, so that the entire Four Year Program might be accomplished here.

Our series of meetings were blessed greatly by OUR KIND HEAVENLY FATHER. On the first Sunday evening we had with us our beloved Brother Beachler, who had come to visit the Flora congregation on his very important mission of which he has reported. But as he was not able to conduct a meeting at Flora on that evening on account of a union service there, I took advantage of his presence in this community and invited him over to sing. He consented. And when he arrived I felt that he ought to do a little penance for the way he attacked me in the Evangelist about the "du." So I told him if he would preach I would call it square, and after a little persuasion he consented to this service also. God blessed his message by giving us three souls for his hire, consisting of a man and his wife and grown son. The meeting continued to grow in attendance and interest. Some who had been out of the work for some time renewed their fellowship and others came for the first time into the fold. There were ten added to the church, nine by baptism and one by letter.

During the meetings some of our brethren at Flora came over several times in numbers. Sister Mary Eaton and Sister Edith Brower assisted in the singing and rendered very helpful solos. Our dear Brother Brower visited us on the second Monday and was with us in the evening. May God bless his untiring efforts. Our Brother Henderson was over one night with the Flora folks. We enjoyed his presence and his services in testifying to the gospel way of salvation. God greatly blessed us with fine weather and regular attendance. For all these favors we are grateful. We feel that this series of meetings has been the means of acquainting us with our field in a short time. We solicit the prayers of all that God may help us to do our part in gaining for the Brethren the name of being "workers together with God."

W. T. LYTLE.

DARWIN, INDIANA

On this field we have been able to at least have one service A MONTH and as soon as things get back to normal, we will try to hold a series of meetings and get this work to going in the way that it should go. We will make further announcements through the columns of the Evangelist as to our plans when we can have them more definitely arranged. The influenza is starting again in various localities, so we will have to wait and pray that God may lead, and then be willing to follow. We held our regular business meeting at the Darwin Brethren church on the afternoon of the second of January and things point to the carrying out of their plans for work in a way commendable. They are desirous of doing their part of the work laid out in the Four Year Program.

May we remember one another in prayer as we approach our various tasks.

W. T. LYTLE.

GRATIS, OHIO

One year has come and gone since we came to this field of work. We left at Cerro Gordo, Illinois, a noble band; they were to us as good a people as can be found in the brotherhood, always standing by us in everything that was for the advancement of the Lord's kingdom. We left many warm friends outside the church as well. The old proverb is true: "Take a friend with you and you will have friends." We came to Gratis where we are now trying to serve the Brethren in our weak way. We found the field well cultivated by the former pastor, who did a splendid work for the Master, with the help of his esteemed wife. We were received with a hearty welcome. Many things go to take up a pastor's time and we have been slow to write of the work here. We have not been sleeping, we have held our regular services, excepting the six weeks we were closed down on account of the "flu," with good attendance, and all auxiliaries a work. The official board first adopted the budget system for the year's expense, and all expenses were met as they came due. But with all our blessings the Silent Reaper has been at work in our ranks, plucking the ripened grain as well as the young flower of youth. But the Lord has been graciously good to us for out of the number of our boys that volunteered we have not heard of any of them falling into the hands of the enemy or death. On November 24th, we began our revival meeting and continued three weeks closing Sunday evening, December 15th. Considering the "flu" and the reaction of the war upon the people, we had a fine meeting, God's Holy Spirit being felt among his people. The church showed a deepened devotion, besides 21 accessions, 18 of which have been baptized, the others awaiting baptism. Our communion services were observed Sunday evening, December 29th. We had a nice representation of the membership present. We have made 340 pastoral visits during the year.

The first all day home-coming service of the church was held January 11th, 1919, in the church basement, where the members of the church gathered around a regular picnic dinner with a large number present. The afternoon session began at 1:15 and was given over to business and reports from the various departments of the church. All reports show that the past year has been a good one. All mission money, home and foreign offerings have been raised and paid, as well as all special days of the Brethren observed. After the election of the officers for the coming year the financial secretary and treasurer made their reports and showed all bills for the year paid and a small balance of $240.00 left in the treasury. It was decided to make this church Home-Coming an annual affair. It was also given out that the closing year was the best all around year in the history of the church. With these results and the new inspiration we go forward looking to the new year with good prospects.

May the good Lord give these people wisdom and the guidance of his Holy Spirit that we may prove ourselves soldiers of the Cross, and not disappoint him in our efforts, that his kingdom may come and his will may be done on earth as it is in heaven.

C. E. BEEKLEY, Pastor.

CAMDEN, OHIO

These are the days when American people like to say "Over the Top" and that certainly fits what we want to say about the evangelistic campaign just closed at Camden. I am especially interested in Camden, as I printed their newspaper for more than two years back in 1900-1901. I went over to Camden Saturday, to witness the closing of Brother Bauman's series of untiring efforts to win souls into the kingdom. His efforts were abundantly blessed with twenty-two being added to the church. Fifteen souls had taken their stand before Saturday, and on Saturday night five more stepped out on the side of the Lord, one by relation. Then Sunday morning the entire congregation motored over to Gratis, where Brother Bauman preached his wonderful sermon on the Book of Jonah. Baptism was then administered by Brother Beekley to nineteen candidates from Camden. Two more came forward on Sunday evening. The same can be said of this meeting as can be said of most of Bauman's meetings—if he could have stayed another week a great deal more could have been done.

Now, members of the Mission Board take notice: Those Camden people went over the top financially too. The Mission Board agreed to support that revival on the basis of a shortage, but in spite of the fact that they have been without a regular pastor and are small in numbers, they paid all bills, including Bauman's salary, and had some money left. When the financial success was learned some one suggested they give Brother Bauman a free-will purse, but Bauman said "NO." I know they would have given him at least another $25.00, but out of unselfishness and a heart filled with the joy of what had already been done, he turned it down, and the cap sheaf of his pleasure was expressed when he reached over and placed an additional $10.00 in the basket.

I am telling no secret when I say Camden loves Bauman and his work there will long be remembered.

J. C. McBRIDE.

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 27, 1919.

SERGEANTSVILLE-CALVARY NEWS

Sergeantsville is still on the map and the Brethren church here is still standing for the "Faith once delivered unto the saints." In this age of all kinds of "isms," we are still trying to preach a "Whole Gospel" and ring true to the old Book. This is not popular but we prefer to be in the minority with God and the right than in the majority with the world, the flesh and the devil.

In spite of the "flu," the war and a few other hindrances we found time to plan and carry out a few things for the Master. On Sunday, August 4th, we had an all day meeting with Brother I. D. Bowman in charge. Brother Bowman preached in the morning to a good audience. At noon we gathered in the Sunday School Annex for lunch and general fellowship. From 2 to 3 we listened to two returned missionaries from India lecture in costume. Then we gathered again at 7 o'clock to hear W. E. Thomas one of our county Christian Endeavor workers and Brother Bowman at 8 o'clock. It was a day well spent and all felt greatly profited thereby. Brother Bowman preached on prophecy, Monday and Tuesday evenings as well as on Sunday.

The next event worthy of notice was our Evangelistic service. Brother M. A. Witter came to us on Sunday, November 17, and held forth for 3 weeks. Brother Marcus preached with characteristic earnestness to good crowds and much good was accomplished even though visible results were not what he and I had hoped for. One of the splendid features of the meeting was the informal prayer meeting held every night, in Sunday School annex, just before the regular services. The people were helped and the Evangelist and the pastor were able to do their part of the work better because of the spiritual atmosphere created in these prayer meetings. Two were added to the church as a direct result of this special effort. Many others ought to have been saved but like Jerusalem, in Christ's time, would not so we had to leave them alone. Brother Witter is a good yoke-fellow and he left a number of friends who are praying for his success.

The work at Calvary has always been handicapped. The distance between the two churches is 8½ miles, the roads are bad and the services are held in the afternoon. There was a time when afternoon services were well attended but that day is past. With nearly every farmer owning an auto the crowds go elsewhere. People go to church morning and evening but in the afternoon they go pleasure riding. It would be fine if some way could be provided for morning and evening services here. I am sure greater good could be done and quite a strong church built up. In spite of these handicaps there are some mighty fine people at Calvary and some good things were accomplished since our last report.

About a week after our all-day meeting at Sergeantsville we tried the same plan at Calvary. Brother Bowman preached in the morning, Rev. Eugene Willard and wife, who were returned missionaries from India, spoke in costume, in the afternoon and Brother Bowman again at night. At the noon hour a basket dinner was enjoyed by all and fellowship ties were made stronger by blessed associations together. Brother Bowman's lectures and the missionary talks were splendid and many expressions of appreciation were heard after the services.

Brother Beachler mentioned a Sorrel Mare in his report of the canvass of this circuit. Thereon hangs a tale. Last winter we were compelled to put our old horse away because of age and inability to work. This left us without means of transportation between our churches. Brother Sam Weber kindly loaned us a horse for the winter and part of the spring but he needed it so we had to return it again. Then we were as bad off as ever. Finally Brother H. K. Wright invited us to take supper with him on Friday night before prayer meeting. We accepted the invitation and had a splendid time as we always do at Brother Wright's home. After supper we had a little talk about the work and my need of a horse and then he handed me a check for $175.00 to buy a horse. To say I was surprised does not express my feelings. I hardly knew where I was and I did not sleep much that night. Such gifts don't come often in a preachers' life. Well, I thanked him the best I could and bought the Sorrel Mare.

Brother Wright, who just came into the church, is a fine man and a Christian gentleman and I am proud to be his pastor. He has passed through deep waters during the year; his son, Brother Carrol Wright, died in France, but his life is richer and fuller because he knows Jesus and has experienced his sustaining grace. May his kind increase in the Brethren church.

As we write this report the "flu" is raging all around us. About everybody who didn't have it before is down with it now. May the kind Father keep us and all his children everywhere and help us to honor his Son Jesus Christ.

MORTON L. SANDS.

GOSHEN, INDIANA

We had a great day Sunday. There were three confessions at the morning service and the house was full in the evening. We are looking for great things. We may need a peace conference but we have had some great revivals and don't know of any new trouble; at least the present pastor and the church are not in need of any peace conference. Not all men are good losers. We enjoy our victories but can't stand defeat. Defeat causes much of the trouble, and most of our disappointments in life, wounded pride and disappointed ambition cause many persons to become sour and to lose confidence in the goodness that can be found in the world. The world is full of goodness and mercy. We all were very much disappointed in the result of our revival meeting. I have never been able to analyze it satisfactorily. I have thought we needed a defeat to teach us some things and yet it was not a defeat. I believe Brother Bauman's sermons will live on in the hearts of us who heard them. I was glad to listen to some one who believes the Bible to be God's message to men. They certainly were sound. I get all the doubt I want in the world without listening to it when I go to church, (no higher critics need apply to the Goshen church, we won't let them preach in our church), then I want to be made to feel that God is and sometime I must meet him. I don't want the great or primary reason why I am a member of the Brethren church taken from me. Brother Bauman helped me in this. In all my acquaintance in the church I think the great majority stand for this faith. With hope I greet my old friends.

Fraternaly, A. S. MENAUGH.

LOREE CHURCH, INDIANA

We are now located at Bunker Hill, Indiana, serving the Loree church only three miles distant. We have been on the field three months and have found the Loree people a wide-awake and up-and-doing people, looking for new opportunities to serve their Master. And yet they, like all other churches, are not without their difficulties. We have some of the same problems to contend with that others have. One of the problems is to reach the large number of people that have a tendency to stay away from church and Sunday school. We believe, as Brother L. S. Bauman said, that the "flu" is good for something. It gives people an excuse to stay away from services. Yet it does not seem to be a reason for their staying away from public gatherings of a different nature.

The "flu" has put a crimp in our plans. We haven't had our revival meeting yet, but are planning for the future and expect to begin our meetings as soon as conditions will permit. We will have to re-arrange our entire program.

Things look bright for the future of the Loree church. We believe there is a great field for the Brethren church here. She is getting a sure footing, and is known far and wide. She is the leading church in this community, even over the churches in Bunker Hill, and a great many of the town people come to our services.

Since the "flu" scare the attendance is growing in the Sunday school and church. Last Sunday, January 26, the attendance at Sunday school was 138. At the evening services the attendance was exceptionally good.

The official board of the church has one ambition, and that is to reach all of the congregational goals of the Four Year Program and we find the church is in sympathy with them.

The S. S. C. E. is one of the most wide awake that I ever got into and they do allow their pastor to attend their meetings of which I haven't missed one, and am now beginning to feel quite safe. They are a banner society, and now have some comforts for Ashland College and Brother and Sister Cook at Krypton.

We have a lingering suspicion that the young men of our community won't need to get cold in the winters that are to come if they plan right, for the Sisterhood girls have made five nice comforts which are for sale. They are going to be a banner society.

We have a fine lot of young men which have organized an orchestra, and will some time in the future furnish the church and Sunday school with music. They have hired a man from Peru to instruct them.

We think that we have a fine congregation and a good outlook for greater services for the Master.

C. A. STEWART.

CORINTH CHURCH, INDIANA

We are still doing business at the same old stand. Yet we have made slow progress for Satan is sure playing his high cards here. Twice the "flu" has invaded the country and the ban was on for several weeks each time. But in the face of all that we have held our own. The attendance is now beginning to grow and we feel that we will soon be back to normal. We have adopted the budget system this year and it is working fine. We haven't as yet succeeded in getting the Evangelist in seventy-five percent of the homes, but are working on it. We think that every one ought to be a reader of the church paper, and we are mighty proud of our paper now. With all due respect to our former editor, for we know that two men can do two men's work better than one. It was impossible for Brother Teeter to make the paper what it ought to have been, and what he would like for it to be without some help. So we are trying to get our people interested in it. For it is much easier to reach the Four Year Program goals when a congregation is all reading the paper.

Brother Beachler was with us in the interest of the College endowment and we are mighty proud or some that were interested in the College and not so proud of others. But the Corinth church now feels that she has more of an interest at Ashland than ever before and we hope that her interest will still grow.

The Sunday school has adopted three French orphans, thus extending her services to the war stricken district of France.

We have also been deprived of our revival meetings at this place. But we have not given up yet; only waiting for conditions to permit going ahead. Brethren, pray that we may continue in the faith once for all delivered unto the saints and grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

C. A. STEWART.

KEEPING THE HOME FIRES BURNING NO. 2

This is the first time that we have good news to report. We have been hard at work but the work was hindered. Our first meeting was at Williamstown, Ohio. It was a pleasure to work here. In this rural community there is an array of talent and a splendid church. However, visible results were not many. Two made the good confession. This field needs a resident pastor. It has its problems and will not be able to do what they ought, until they have a resident leader to encourage them. We spent many happy weeks there.

North Georgetown, Ohio, was next. A splendid interest was being manifested. Pastor Baer was working hard. The people were becoming aroused, and results were in sight, when—you know what happened. The "flu" came on, and we had to close. We shall say no more. Enough has been said of the "flu" already.

Maple Grove, Indiana.—After five weeks enforced idleness, in South Bend, Indiana, we next opened fire at Maple Grove, with Brother Kimmel. After three weeks of hard, persistent work in the homes, in the schools, and in the church, we were forced again to close with no results. The "flu" broke out again and spoiled the ripening fruit which was in store for us. Another enforced rest of 30 days. We spent part of this time visiting and preaching. We were glad to have had the privilege to preach for the Somerset Street church of Johnstown, Pa. Brother Watson is pastor and is doing noble work. Again we preached at Allentown, Pennsylvania, for Brother DeLozier, and visited with our relatives.

Columbus, Ohio.—The first Sunday in January, found us in Columbus, Ohio, with Brother Christiansen. We found this field hard to work. The Columbus church has been going through trying days but it is my conviction that in time we shall win out. Mission work in such a city as Columbus, Ohio, is full of perplexing problems. Brother Christiansen and his good wife are gradually working their way into the hearts of the people and are doing good work. As to the meeting itself, thank God, this time we can say we won out. Twenty-six in all came forward, 13 on the last day. We were happy. It was the first great awakening we had seen this year. Columbus did nobly. May God bless them is my prayer.

Muncie, Indiana.—We are now back in Muncie, Indiana. This is a great opportunity. A big county simultaneous campaign is on. Every church, 60 in all, is co-operating. Brother Grisso is at Maple Grove and Brother Deeter, of Ashland will be at Oakville, and we will lead the Muncie forces. Good interest is shown on this first day. More later. Brethren pray that the Muncie church shall have a big harvest. These are days of testings and of big programs. Shall we be true and loyal subjects of the coming King? May God grant it.

A. E. THOMAS,
Muncie, Indiana.

MUNCIE, INDIANA

Sunday, February 2nd, the county of Delaware in which Muncie is located, will enter upon a simultaneous religious campaign to continue until February the 23rd.

Fifty churches are supposed to have revival meetings at the same time.

Evangelist Thomas will preach for the First Brethren church in Muncie. Rev. C. C. Grisso will preach for the Brethren at Maple Grove.

Prayer meetings are being held in every precinct in the city three times each week and throughout the county. The whole campaign is under one general manager, Charles A. Watkins, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Muncie.

Never has there been such a union effort on so large a scale, with which I have been connected. I believe we shall have a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit and many souls shall be born into the kingdom. We ask the prayers of the whole brotherhood for our work in this great campaign.

J. L. KIMMEL,
1320 Kirby Avenue.

CERRO GORDO, ILLINOIS

We arrived in Cerro Gordo on October 9, coming directly from the Indiana conference. We had a nice trip across the country from Florida.

We were here 5 weeks before we could have any services. No doubt the Evangelist readers are tired of reading "flu" news but that is about all we have to write. I preached my first sermons here on November 17th, and we had just started in the work when we were put under the ban again on December 26th. We expect to hold services next Sunday if everything goes right. We have planned and postponed our revival meeting twice and have decided now to wait until next summer. We will try and write again when we have something of more interest to report. We ask your prayers.

D. A. C. TEETER.

RETURNED WITH CHARACTER UN- SOLDED

Sister Mary A. Snyder writes that there is at least one Brethren boy in the state of West Virginia, who went through the thick of the Verdun Drive, with shot and shell falling around him, wounded, suffering in trenches, and enduring many other trying things connected with army life, and came out with character unscathed. His comrades often remarked about his clean life, and could not understand his refusal to smoke and why he did not swear when they thought it a necessity. But he realized that his safety depended upon God, and tried to be true to his word. In the hardest battles his mind was often thinking over a certain sermon, "What shall the end be?" and he was ready to meet his God.

Sister Snyder has a right to be proud of being the mother of such a boy, who made such good use of his early religious training that when his environment encouraged a breaking away from many of the "first principles" he held firm. She has a right to praise God and to feel that her teaching was not in vain.

Doubtless there is many another boy whose mother sent him forth fortified by careful Christian training and guarded by her prayers, who has returned to his mother with his character clean and his manhood uncompromised. But there are not as many of this kind as we could wish there might be. May God give mothers and fathers wisdom and prayerful concern in training their sons, and daughters too, in such a way that they will develop strength of character as they develop strength of body, so that when crises come they shall be able to meet them triumphantly. And may the sons and daughters take good heed to the instruction of their Christian parents that they may not forfeit their birthrights.

THREE SUNDAYS AT WATERLOO, IOWA

At the request of Brother Goughnour, pastor of the Waterloo church, I preached for the Brethren people there, on January 19th, 26th and February second. My last visit as a minister to the Waterloo people was when Brother Shock was pastor.

It has not been my pleasure even to see the new church, let alone preaching in it; so it was a privilege as well as a duty to try to preach to the good people of Waterloo. The people received Mrs. Livengood and myself very kindly. They have evidently lost none of the good old generosity so conspicuously prevalent among these people. If there is any change it is for the better. We were among these people a few days more than two weeks, and the entire time was replete with happy moments. The best of friends vied with each other to make our stay profitable and pleasant. So well did they succeed in their aims that I can not see how they could have done it more effectively. The fine and appreciative audiences received the preached word in an acceptable manner.

Our home was to have been with Brother and Sister Chamberlain, but the powers that be ordained it otherwise, and our headquarters were with our old friends and acquaintances, B. F. Puterbaugh and wife. Under the original contract we still lay claim to at least a small portion of the hospitality of our old home at the Chamberlains. Our stay was enjoyed very much, and we will long remember the time with much pleasure.

Z. T. LIVENGOOD,
Lanark, Illinois.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

SHAFFER-WALKER—Earl R. Shaffer, a young prosperous farmer, living near Bringhurst, and Edna Walker, daughter of Brother and Sister Charles Walker of the Flora Brethren church, autoed over to our home at Burlington and on the evening of January 9th, 1919, we pronounced them man and wife in the presence of two of their friends who accompanied them. May God richly bless this union to the good of the community to which they go, and may his counsel direct them in their new home.

W. T. LYTLE.

ROSE-MOWEN—On the evening of January 15, at the home of the bride, Delos Rose and Treva Mowen were united in marriage by the writer. A pretty home wedding with the immediate relatives present was conducted. Both the bride and groom are well known in the community and church.

CHARLES H. ASHMAN.

IN THE SHADOW

WALTER—Roscoe B. Walter departed this life at Altoona, Pennsylvania, October 22, 1918 at the age of 26 years, 2 months and 2 days. Death was due to pneumonia, following an attack of influenza. Brother Walter was from early boyhood a member of the Brethren church. It is not often that we find one who is more faithful to the work of the church than was he. He was the kind that the pastor knows he can depend upon. Brother Walter was a student of the Word and was valuable to the church as a Bible teacher and leader of prayer meetings. He is survived by his wife and one child, his parents, two sisters, one brother and many friends.

W. C. BENSHOFF.

LOWE—Jacob H. Lowe departed this life December 1, 1918 at the age of 78 years, 6 months and 24 days. Brother Lowe united with the Brethren church of Altoona, Pennsylvania, about five years ago. The last years of his life were the happiest because they were spent in the service of his Master. He found keen enjoyment in religious worship, was generous and kind hearted. Brother Lowe was a student of nature, he knew the great out-of-doors. To spend a day with him among the Alleghenies was a real pleasure. He is survived by his wife and two daughters. Many neighbors and friends join with them in mourning his departure.

In addition to the ones above mentioned, the writer has conducted six other funerals since the first of October. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

W. C. BENSHOFF.

OGDEN—William L. Ogden, son of David D. and Anna J. Ogden, was born near New Paris, Ohio, April 10, 1882 and departed this life November 30, 1918, aged thirty-six years, seven months and twenty days.

He was married to Armina Parrish, November 30, 1905. Four children were born to them, two sons, Ralph and Charles and two daughters, Evelyn and Olive.

His father and mother had preceded him in death. He leaves a wife, his four children and one sister. He was a member, in good standing, of the Brethren church, at Graits, Ohio.

C. E. BEEKLEY.

WELLS—Mrs. Agatha Wells was called from this life to her reward, December 17th, 1918, at the age of 36 years, 7 months and 10 days, after an illness from influenza which developed into pneumonia. She had been a member of the Cerro Gordo Brethren church since 1917. She was a devoted mother and an ideal wife. She will not only be missed from the home but the church also.

Funeral from her home in Cerro Gordo, Illinois.

D. A. C. TEETER.

BLACK—Mrs. John W. Black died at her home in Kansas City, Missouri, on December 31, 1918, at the age of 68 years, 11 months and 13 days. She was born near Dayton, Ohio, and had spent most of her life at Auburn, Illinois, moving to Kansas City three years ago. She was a faithful and loyal member of the Brethren church, and devoted to the study of God's Word. She leaves her husband, four sons, and three daughters, she being the first of the family to be called away. Funeral services at the Baptist church at Auburn, Illinois, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Thomas B. Marlin of the Baptist church and Rev. James Masterson of the Church of the Brethren.

D. A. C. TEETER.

WHITMER—David Alton Whitmer, son of Joseph and Emma Whitmer of North Liberty, Indiana, departed this life at Camp Taylor, Kentucky, January 17, 1919, at the age of 27 years. He was a member of the Christian church of North Liberty and a member of the Young Men's Bible class of the Brethren Sunday school. He was a model young man, having fine ideals and a clean Christian character. He entered Camp Taylor, July 23, where he was a member of Co. 12, 3rd Training Bn., 129th Depot Brigade. During his camp life he spent about four months in the hospital, where he was the victim of Spanish influenza and pneumonia. Thus the first gold star of the 26 out of the First Brethren Sunday school will be placed. Funeral services held from the First Brethren church, January 21 by the writer. The great audience, said by some to be the largest ever gathered in North Liberty on a similar occasion, was a testimony of the very high esteem in which he was held. He was my friend.

C. C. GRISSO.

WHITMER—Hazel Marie Whitmer, daughter of George W. and Lida Whitmer, of South Bond, Indiana, died of influenza, January 14, at the age of 15 years. She leaves parents and two brothers. Funeral services from the Brethren church in North Liberty by the writer.

C. C. GRISSO.

STYLES—Caroline Jane Styles died at the home of her son in Muskegon, Michigan, January 11, at the age of 84 years. The body was brought to the home of her daughter, Sister G. B. Irvin, in North Liberty, where the last rites were conducted by the writer. She was a life-long member of the Seventh Day Adventist church. She leaves three sons and two daughters. Peace to her ashes.

C. C. GRISSO.

HANRATTY—Francis Hanratty, daughter of Sister John Pommert of North Liberty, Indiana, died at the hospital in South Bond, Indiana, January 4th. The body was brought to North Liberty, where the funeral services were held at the Brethren church, January 6. Hers was indeed a beautiful life, blossoming on earth to bloom in glory. She left us at the age of 15 summers. Last rites in charge of the family pastor, the writer.

C. C. GRISSO.

Business Manager's Corner

A GENEROUS GIFT

Some years ago I heard a man in the west give a personal testimony in a prayer meeting in which he told of his heavenly Father's care by saying, "When I came west I had nothing and I have held my own pretty well ever since." I have thought a great many times how parallel has been the case of The Brethren Publishing Company. The Company was started with practically nothing about twenty-seven years ago, and it has held its own ever since. Yes, it has just a little more than held its own, but with the limitations of its natural field its gain has been modest indeed.

At times new and improved equipment has become imperative and the Company has not always been in a position to secure this equipment without aid from its friends in the Brethren church. While it has never been equipped as it really should be to render the best service to the church it has been improving slowly through the years. Since the present Business Manager has been in charge of the work of the Company considerable equipment has been added to the plant, but it has never been fully equipped to render the church the service it could render with proper equipment. But last fall a good brother from the west visited Ashland and expressed a desire to assist the Publishing House in some practical manner by adding to its equipment as the need and opportunity might arise. Recently we learned of an opportunity to add to our equipment by securing a Campbell, two revolution, cylinder press from a printing company that had gone out of business. We took an option on the press and immediately wrote to our western brother of the opportunity and just about ten days later we received a check for the full amount of the purchase price from Brother H. V. Wall of Long Beach, California. The addition of this press to our equipment will add greatly to our efficiency in getting out the literature of the church and especially that for the Sunday school. We wish to thank Brother Wall in this way for his generous gift and we trust others may be moved to emulate his example, as still other equipment is needed to enable us to do really satisfactory work and to get it done in time.

Only today we learned of a Brown folding machine that is for sale at a bargain because of the consolidation of two large printing companies. We have been invited to come and look it over and we hope to do so in a day or two, but in the meantime is there not some other brother, with a heart as big as the heart of Brother Wall, who will come forward with an offer to supply the price of this folder should it prove upon examination the kind of a folder we need? We do not think it will require one half as much money to buy the folder as it did to buy the press and we see no reason why some brother should not make this gift. Think it over Brethren, and then pray it over as well.

The Label on Your Paper

About two years ago we adopted a new system for marking the expiration of subscriptions to the Evangelist that is a great deal more practical and more accurate than the old system was, and we thought it would be as easily if not more easily understood, but there seems to be some misunderstanding on the part of a few of our subscribers and they say they can not tell from the label on their papers when their subscriptions expire. To us this seems the simplest matter possible and we think just a few words of explanation will enable any of our readers to understand the system perfectly.

First of all remember that each issue of the paper bears a number, beginning with number one with the first issue in January and closing with number fifty of the same year. Now, please get the last copy of the Evangelist and look at the upper right hand corner of the first page. There you will find the Volume and Number of the issue. While the volume changes only once a year the number changes each week during the year. If the label on your paper says 46-18 it means your subscription expired with No. 46 of last year, while if the number is 50-18 it means your subscription expired with the last number in last year, but if the number is 4-19 it means the expiration took place with No. 4 of this present year, and if the label says 25-19 it means your subscription will expire with number 25 of this year. So it matters not when the expiration takes place the first number on the label gives the number of the paper that closed your subscription while the second numbers indicate the year. Can any method be more simple than this? Now look carefully at your label and if it is any number before No. 8-19 remember your subscription has expired and should be renewed at once. Please give the matter your immediate attention.

R. R. TEETER,
Business Manager.

(Continued from Page 11)

strengthening it. Here is where our second point, private devotion, comes in. Due to the fact that the Christian Endeavor is a subsidiary of the church, we should first look to Christ as our model.

Mark, in his gospel, mentions that Christ often retired in solitude for private devotions. Prof. Garber has expressed this idea. Christ said little about preaching but he said much about "asking whatsoever thou wilt." If Christ felt the need of private devotions, how much more should we feel the need.

Because of the fact that Christ was a man without sin, his example may lose its effectiveness; we might therefore look at St. Paul. In the Acts we read, "Arise, and go to the street which is called Straight, and inquire in the house of Judas for one named Saul: for behold he prayeth." These words "he prayeth" are the keynote of Paul's life. After a wonderful conversion and twenty years of preaching he still felt the need of prayer. We find that throughout Ephesians, Corinthians and Philippians, Paul asks to be remembered by them in prayer while he also prays for them. People, our prayers too often lack power because we pray only for ourselves; if we would pray for others we would be sure to have our own lives enriched.

Church Loyalty is our third point, and loyalty is the main support of all partnerships. Loyalty is the motive which makes a mother's love beautiful. Loyalty to the child.

Mr. Frank Vanderlip, president of one of the largest banks in New York City and chairman of our recent Liberty Loan campaign, in writing on the qualifications of employees, places loyalty first. The old view was that ability held first place, but our understanding has deepened. Loyalty to the church is loyalty to Christ. Should we not therefore be loyal to the church?

If we have fulfilled the three previous points we cannot help but qualify in the fourth, for they will act as a testimony. Christ said by the fruit the tree shall be known. By our works we are known. There is a significant statement in Lincoln's Gettysburg address which is, "The world will little note or long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here." Why do we remember great men? Not because of what they said but because of what they did. Our lives will be judged in the same light. We are building our monuments which will be our "Testimony." What inscription will your monument bear?

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 8

FEBRUARY 19
1919

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETHREN -

THE HUTS, THE IGNORANCE AND THE IMMORALITY OF ARGENTINA

Are calling for the enlightening, uplifting and Christianizing influence of the Gospel.

Your sons and daughters, your money and your prayers will answer the appeal.

Pray over these things till Easter Sunday, the General Foreign Mission Day in the Brethren Church.

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Some Significant Signs of the Times—Editor,	2	Exaltation and Service—Miss Emily Beatrice Gnagey,	9
Editorial Review,	3	Missions in the Sunday School—Mrs. George Seibert,	10
Conserve and Organize—H. L. Goughnour,	4	Important Subjects in Christian Endeavor—Arthur Cashman,	11
Right Conquering Might—Prof. E. G. Mason,	5	Where Brethren Young People Are Doing Good—G. C. Carpenter, 11
Rooted and Grounded—W. M. Lyon,	7	Home Mission News—G. C. Carpenter and J. S. Cook,	12
He Shall Reign—Delbert Whitmer,	7	News from the Field,	12-15
God, the Visible King (Sermon)—Alva J. McClain,	8	In the Shadow,	16
		Business Manager's Corner,	16

EDITORIAL

Some Significant Signs of the Times

The signs on every hand point to the fact of a steadily enlarging realization of the kingdom of God on earth. "When ye pray," taught Jesus, "say: 'Thy kingdom come'" and the effectual fervent prayers of righteous men backed up by "works" have been making it possible for God to bring about the realization of the ideals he imparted to men. The victories that loom up so large in the public mind just now have few equals in history. What do they mean? Is it significant for the Christian Faith that so many organized forms of evil are being banished from the lands where Christ is most widely preached and his standards of conduct most generally accepted? Can it be said that the church is failing when she is vanquishing her most powerful enemies? In the fact of these facts will scornful men with no love for the church and little respect for Christianity continue to ask "What is the matter with the Church?" And can we who are a part of this great body of Christ step apart ever and anon as if to escape the return of our own boomerangs, and hurl at the church uncharitable destructive criticisms calculated to bring her into dispute with the world? Shall we not rather be given a new and stronger faith in the final conquering power of this great living organism as we observe the unmistakable signs of her power to regenerate the present social order as well as present perverse individuals? It is more clearly demonstrated today than ever before that Christ spoke truly when he said, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened." The process is not completed, it is true, but it has gotten to the point where the "working" is rapid. There are momentary retardings and local exceptions but these only prove more certainly the effectiveness of the church's leavening influence. The signs are decidedly encouraging. We call to the watchmen who stand guard in the various watch towers of the kingdom—the churches—and say, "Watchmen, what of the night?" And they shout back in reply, "Behold the morning cometh."

See the signs of its coming. The terrible war was brought to an end unexpectedly soon—God's hand was in that and in the righteous causes vindicated. A Peace Conference is at work endeavoring to frame a righteous peace and there is every reason to believe that the majority of the members, at least the leaders, are seriously endeavoring to reach a truly righteous settlement. When men begin to reason so seriously in terms of world peace, even though the ideal may not be fully realized immediately, it points to a brighter, better day. The greatest organized enemy of the church of Christ in the world is being dealt a death blow throughout the world and has already been counted out in America. This is a victory that will go down in history along with the liberation of the black man and the achievement of American independence. And the long flight of steps leading through the various stages of education, agitation and legislation landing finally in total abolition was built upon the Gospel by the hands of the church. All the various anti-liquor organizations have been born of the spirit of the church and fostered and inspired by it. And from all of her illustrious children she has gained glory. The crystalizing of sentiment against the "white slave" trade, the double-standard of morals, gambling, lewdness in picture, act and song, as well as against the menace of militarism, is due to the influence of the Gospel of Christ wielded by his church. All these things bear indisputable evidence to the steady conquering power of Christianity and of the dawning of a brighter day for this sad, sin stricken old world.

THAT YOU MAY UNDERSTAND, I want to explain that the Evangelist is planned four or five weeks ahead, and therefore I ask for material that long ahead of the time it is needed by the printer. I do this in order that I may give at least a month for the writers to prepare the requested articles and also in order that I may have a good supply of material from which to choose each week in the endeavor to make the paper as nearly properly balanced as possible. It is impossible to run everything in the order in which it reaches me, for that would often make it impossible to get variety in each issue and also to select material suitable to the particular seasons, so far as this is possible. This means that some articles and sermons may remain in my hand for several weeks before publication. But if you will be patient, all that comes in that is usable will be run in due time. Let us all keep in mind that our ideal is the very best paper for the best interest of all concerned, and if any particular article should not appear as soon as might be expected, let us take it for granted that each delay is in the interest of the best Evangelist possible and not feel personally slighted about it. I am the servant of all and am seeking to serve all in the very best manner possible. My only partiality is and will be in the interest of quality and the largest interest of the brotherhood and not in the interest of any particular person.

There are some articles that are perishable, that is they are written for a particular occasion and their value would be greatly decreased if delayed in publication; these will necessarily be given preference. If such are sent in not later than Wednesday of the week preceding the time of publication, they will be more certain to get out on time than if they come late. We aim to begin typesetting for the Evangelist on Thursday.

And in this connection, may I request that you do not write on both sides of the paper, only on one side.

Having an abiding confidence in the charitable co-operation of all, I feel sure that together we can make the paper an ever-increasing service to the brotherhood. I have received the most hearty co-operation, and for this I am grateful.

I should have said a word about the "News" Department. Thus far we have had material two weeks ahead, but be assured that your letters will appear as soon as possible and in order of their arrival at the office. Do not let this deter you from sending in your news, for this is an important way in which you can co-operate, and the sooner your news-letters are in the sooner they will appear.

I have made this extended explanation because some of my good friends have not understood why their contributions were held so long.

The Proclamation

Let us thank God for the Eighteenth Amendment. It is the greatest victory since the Civil War. This is worth preserving.

To All Whom These Presents Shall Come. Greeting:

Know ye that the Congress of the United States at the second session Sixty-fifth Congress, begun at Washington on the third day of December in the year one thousand nine hundred and seventeen, passed a resolution in the words and figures following, to wit:

"Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States:

"Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein). That the following amendment to the Constitution be, and hereby is, proposed to the States, to become valid as a part of the Constitution when ratified by the Legislatures of the several States as provided by the Constitution:

"Section 1. After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

Section 2. The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

"Section 3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the Legislatures of the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of submission hereof to the States by the Congress."

And, further, That it appears from official documents on file in this department that the amendment to the Constitution of the United States proposed as aforesaid has been ratified by the Legislatures of the States of Alabama, Arizona, California, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

And, further, That the States whose Legislatures have so ratified the said proposed amendment constitute three-fourths of the whole number of States in the United States.

Now therefore be it known that I, Frank L. Polk, Acting Secretary of State of the United States, by virtue of section 205 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, do hereby certify that the amendment aforesaid has become valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution of the United States.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the Department of State to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this 29th day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nineteen.

(Signed).

FRANK L. POLK,
Acting Secretary of State.

Out of justice to Waterloo Sunday school we wish to call attention of all readers to Brother Trent's correction on page 10.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Brother Cook writes that Krypton has found its needed school teacher in the person of Miss Haddix, a graduate of Riverside Institute at Lost Creek. Thus one mission helps another.

The Fremont church is taking on new life since the "flu" and war disturbances and they are now doubtless in a revival lead by their loved pastor. Pray for them.

Another letter reporting activity and reaping in the Goshen church comes to our Evangelist family this week; this time the writer is Brother M. E. Horner, the official correspondent of the church.

About the most far-sighted work that has been reported for a long time we learn this week of being done in Roanoke, Virginia. If the future church of that place does not have an efficiently trained leadership it will not be because Brother Wood has failed to put forth the proper efforts.

In the face of the seeming impossible Brethren Shively and Goughnour, backed by the loyal people of Masontown, Pa., came off conquerors. The score was not as large as it usually is at that place, but it was a greater victory than most of the others won on that field because fought under greater difficulties.

Though the Camden revival was reported last week, yet we are glad to give space to a second report from the pen of Brother Bauman because it gives the evangelist's viewpoint and contains much that the former report did not have. We are all glad for the splendid prospect of one of the youngest churches in Ohio.

Columbus has won a great victory at a time when evangelistic campaigning is confessedly difficult and the faithful pastor, Brother S. E. Christiansen, who has been putting his very best into the work, sees a brighter day for our mission in the Ohio capitol city. We imagine that he and Brother Thomas made a good team, one that could not easily be defeated.

If Brother J. W. Clarke's enthusiasm is a true sample of the whole Teegarden congregation we may expect things to turn up, or to be turned up there very rapidly. If they don't give some of the older and larger congregations a merry chase in the attainment of the Goals, including goal 9, we will miss our guess. We are all anxious to see the picture of this new church.

Kindly give attention to the important announcement made this week by Dr. J. Allen Miller, president of the Foreign Missionary Society. You will find it on page 16. And in this connection let me say that Brother Miller has co-operated with the editor in planning a special Foreign Missionary number of the Evangelist for the first issue in April. This is to give you the cue to get ready for the "largest yet" Easter offering.

An editorial item mentioning the report from the Muncie Mission was left out by mistake in assembling last week. Brother Kimmel's report though brief was full of interest and we shall look for a report of the results of this county-wide evangelistic campaign. It is pleasing to note the number of Brethren ministers engaged in it. Besides Brother Kimmel and Brother Thomas at Muncie, Brother Grisso is at Maple Grove and Brother Deeter at Oakville.

Brother Beachler comes to us this week with his final report for Indiana. We are sorry it is the last for we have enjoyed so much reading about the noble pioneer work Indiana has been doing in the line of college endowment. She went at the task with an enthusiasm that carried her far beyond everybody's expectations. And her high attainment was taken as a standard and a challenge by Pennsylvania who capped it with a big sheaf. And who can tell what surprises other districts will spring on us because of the courageous lead which Indiana made.

Brother Goughnour asks for reports on the Waterloo Challenge to be sent him when the contest is half over, just after the last Sunday in February. State the number of points gained in each item of the contest, viz., attendance, offerings, on time, studied lessons and teachers and officers present. His manuscript arrived after the Sunday school page had been set up, but will appear next week. In the meantime this announcement will make it possible for you to comply promptly with his request.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

CONSERVE AND ORGANIZE

Without question the present is a time when evangelism and church-extension are difficult. Much to the surprise of some of us, the appeal to non-church-members to definitely accept Christ as Savior and King is not as effective as ordinarily. The experience of the best evangelists demonstrates this. Much as it mystifies and distresses us, this winter does not seem to be a season of reaping.

Let Us Use Strategy

General Foch would have been unwise to sacrifice his armies in a drive when conditions were such that he could not possibly succeed. A church will be unwise this winter if it spends so much energy in evangelism that other equally important activities are neglected. The imperatives of these present months seem to be, "Conserve!" "Organize!" "Educate!" "Strengthen thy stakes!"

Push the Program

Goal 4, that requires a 7 percent increase in membership annually, may not be reached by many congregations this year. Would to God that it could be reached by every congregation. But, if it cannot, we should not be discouraged from attempting every other goal in the Program.

Every other Goal is a Conservation Measure! Think them over. Prayer meetings! Cottage prayer services! Communion services! The Sunday school! The S. S. C. E.! The Christian Endeavor! Four Year Program subjects! Recruits for the ministry and missionary service! The Brethren Evangelist! Ashland College Endowment! District, Home and Foreign missions! The Board of Benevolences!

What a bundle of possibilities is here. There never was a time when we needed to push the Program as we do now. We may not gain our 7 percent increase in membership this year, but, by Pushing the Program we can avert a 7 percent slump in all vital activities, or, perhaps, a slump of even more serious proportions.

Conditions Are Bad

Yes, moral and spiritual conditions are bad. But, conditions are never so bad that they will not become a whole lot worse if we give them half a chance! Relaxation from the war-strain is packed with damning possibilities. The effort to recoup depleted finances may cause a riot of materialistic struggle, as it did after the Civil War. A post-war period is charged with moral and spiritual dynamite. It is hard to tell which way the force of the explosion will go. We know that the unleashed energies most certainly will go in the wrong direction unless the church leads in directing them aright.

Stop the Leaks Avoid Wastage!

It is unnecessary to point out what appalling leakage from the Sunday school is constantly occurring. Losses from active church membership, and active participation in all the activities of the church, also are constant, unless earnest methods of prevention are applied.

Wouldn't it be an equally great spiritual triumph for the Brethren Church to prevent this waste, as to permit it and make only enough gains to replace it? It is distressing but the average church allows its resources to slip from its grasp with an indifference that would cause bankruptcy and failure in the business world. Many pastors do not ordinarily find time to gather up the loose ends of their organizations, and collect the fragments lying about everywhere into baskets. The opportunity now is here! The obligation now is crushingly imperative! The method at hand is the Four Year Program!

Hold! Organize! Conserve!

Christianize! Indoctrinate!

Train! Vitalize

By doing these things we can both keep the working working, the interested interested, the saved saved, and prepare to capture many for Jesus Christ and the life divine when the public mind becomes dissatisfied with mere peace from martial strife and the reaping time arrives—which, under God, it will.

Every voice in the environment of the Brethren church is calling, "Push the Program!"

H. L. GOUGHNOUR, Secretary.

P. S.—Here is a new suggestion by Brother Goughnour and he argues like a lawyer for his point of view. I do not have sense enough, or something else to agree with him, but it is worth the reading anyway.

Ever since coming here again last fall I have been planning for a campaign and had with me for two different Sundays, at two-week intervals, Evangelist Newlin of union campaign work fame and still the "flu" has so far prevented us from going on. Despite the fact that everything else goes right on, we had a notice served on myself and the evangelist by the marshal of the town that we did not dare enter our church for service, after a packed house the night before. We left it dark. Two weeks later we started again and again were prevented from going on when the conditions seemed to be all for us. But still I do not think for a moment that we shall not have a revival effort, even though the harvest may not be as big as heretofore.

With all else in this paper, I agree. The difference between the strategy of a church and that of Foch is that he might have lost an army had he struck at the wrong time. We strengthen our army even though we do not increase it during revival. "These you ought to have done and not to have left the others undone," said Jesus to the Pharisees. That is just our ticket. All the other goals we ought to do and not to leave Goal Four undone. "Try, try again" has been my motto, and the only need there is for a revival anytime and anywhere, is to meet the conditions. God's arm is not short nor his power slack. "It is not his will that any should perish." So, I say, HOLD! ORGANIZE! CONSERVE! CHRISTIANIZE! INDOCTRINATE! TRAIN! VITALIZE! EVANGELIZE!

GENERAL ARTICLES

Right Conquering Might. By Prof. E. Glenn Mason.

Long ago, in Biblical times the angel of the Lord appeared to the prophet Zechariah in a dream, wherein was pictured the golden candlestick and seven lamps thereon, as recorded in the fourth chapter of Zechariah. In this chapter the prophet gives his interpretation of this vision, it is found in the tenth verse. I only give the exact words of the angel, "Not by might, nor by power but by my spirit saith the Lord of Hosts." If this were a sermon no better text could be found for it, but since this is no sermon, it will not be a breach of etiquette if we call it our text anyhow.

This vision came in olden times, to the prophet Zechariah, long before the now civilized world was known. The then civilized world comprised only a small part of western Asia, southern Europe and northern Africa. The problems of existence were great at that time but not so complicated as they are at the present. As civilization has spread and advanced and enveloped larger expanses of territory and more nations, races and individuals, its problems, both social and moral have kept pace with this growth and become more complicated at each step. In the days of earlier history, each tribe, nation or race was independent of all others. For the rightful possession of their domains, they depended upon their strength and prowess. Hence, neighboring tribes were never on good terms but continually looking for a chance to displace another in position or strip it of its wealth. Strength and prowess or strategy were therefore safeguards to existence. Thus was "Might" considered the most essential weapon in early tribal or racial warfare. So, it was considered in Zechariah's time. But his dream and the angel's interpretation of it gave him a different version. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts." "Might" the combined strength of individuals, or team work, and "Power" the strength or brawn of the individuals would not suffice. A greater power than these was the spirit or will of the Lord of Hosts. In the final analysis, the spirit of the Lord is "Right" and nothing is right except that which is according to the Spirit or will of the Lord.

Without a doubt, the people of Zechariah's time depended upon their might for their existence. In this struggle they found themselves many times at war with their neighbors for the rightful ownership of their flocks and lands. They, no doubt, depended entirely upon their might to hold these possessions, but to Zechariah, at least, a new vision came and it was his privilege and duty to hand down this teaching to his people and from thence to succeeding generations. But a new theory always meets opposition. It must work out in practice before it is accepted, and so this has to stand the test of time.

There are some today, who liken life, whether of nation or individual, to a ladder. Relative positions and strengths are marked by the "rungs." Others compare it to a race, relative strengths and enduring powers are marked by the places they hold in its running. Still others prefer to liken life to a stage, upon which we are all actors with minor or major parts according to our abilities or might. Yet others represent it as a series of planes or levels, those who occupy the highest are the mightiest. And so we may go on indefinitely, but, finally life may be likened to a war. We are at constant warfare against disease, poverty, temptation and sin, in fact, the right to live, move and have our being is a constant warfare or struggle. Now, who wins? The mightiest or the righteous? Wait! Go slow! Do not jump at conclusions! Think it over carefully! Is the victor to be considered only from the standpoint of this world? If we should ask you which could win a race arranged for them, the fleet hare or the plodding tortoise, we know your answer. You remember the old fable? Yes. The hare was picked for the winner. In fact, in his own mind, he considered the race won, but he made the fatal mistake of going by "Spirits" or showing a burst of speed now and then napping awhile, but he overslept and the plodding tortoise passed by and on to the goal. No we must consider the ultimate winner. For my part, I can conceive of no case where "Might" has been the final conqueror of "right." You may say, how about the strong robust sinner, who withstands and recovers from an attack of a dread disease, while the gentle and loving and true Christian neighbor, who is not strong physically succumbs? Might conquered the disease, we admit, but who received the priceless heritage of eternal life and happiness? Isn't this, in the final analysis, the goal which if reached is the claim of the victor? We need not take more space to make our point clear. Submit all your seeming exceptions to this analysis and note your conclusions.

In history, many, many examples may be found. In the Bible, we find the familiar examples of David and Goliath, Joseph and his brethren, Samson, the fall of Jericho, Gideon and the three hundred, David and Saul, and Jesus and many, many others. You recall at once the instances and the application. In fact, the entire teaching of brotherly love in the Holy Writ embodies this principle. We can give you no better nor greater illustrations than those found in the Bible, but perhaps some illustrations drawn from more recent history are more convincing.

Since mankind has been separated first into families, then into tribes, then nations, there has been a desire in the minds of some units to control all the rest or to control the world. This desire has not been manifest at all times but has been carefully kept and nourished until at some opportune time it might burst into flame and be realized. That desire did not originate with Kaiser Wilhelm, late of Germany, it has been smoldering since the world began. If we review our Ancient and Medieval history, we remember that Babylon, Macedonia, Sparta, Greece and others each realized this aim.

But they were doomed to fall when they departed from the right. Greece reached the zenith of her culture and power but with it came corruption, just then she fell and her culture and power were transferred to her conqueror, the brawny Roman. Rome was more mighty than Greece but in her might she had not yet learned to depart from the right. However she not only absorbed the culture of the Greek but the corruption as well. She, in turn, fell a victim to the ruddy and guileless Goth or Teuton. The early Roman was a righteous and guileless man but with his power and prestige came temptation, with temptation sin, with sin downfall. The average Roman when Rome had just passed the zenith of her power, was only the shell of a man, so corrupt was he; the outer form of a man only, within, a beast. Nero, an emperor, set fire to the city to satisfy his own desire to see a great fire and witness the agony and torture of the people. Caesar, Crassus and Pompey were continually plotting to overthrow the other, yet they lived when Rome was in the ascendancy. All of sin and disgrace might have been found there at the very time when the Goth crossed the Alps and overwhelmed the World Empire. They not only conquered the Romans and their culture but absorbed it as well and with it the sin and corruption of the Roman private and national life. Furthermore, the Teuton was converted to the Christian faith and became a devout child to the Pope, the head of the Christian church. For many years, although the Teutonic emperor was the figurative ruler and dictator of the world, they never gave an order or command without the sanction of the Pope, hence the Pope was the real ruler for he was able to mould the thought and action of the emperor. This condition existed until the opinions of the Pope and the more corrupt-growing emperors conflicted. Then the church was subordinated to the state and its opinions rejected or complied with as they suited the state. The separation of the church and state then made has remained until this day. When the Pope lost his power as a virtual world ruler, he vowed never to leave the Vatican. To this day a pope never leaves the premises, after he has taken his oath, a reminder, at least, of this lost power. Corruption within the state followed this separation. When the emperor and his subjects became corrupt, the seat of power was juggled back and forth among the different kingdoms of Teutonic peoples and was finally transferred to England. When Henry VIII so corrupted English Law and religion that succeeding sovereigns could not readjust it, certain noble spirited Puritans, who had attempted to purify the church in England, and in despair gave it up, crossed the dreaded Atlantic and founded a new world and a new power in America. We have just recently come into the heritage of the cognomen, The Greatest World Power.

Roughly, we have led you through history to the present. Now, to the modern application of this principle, "Right conquering Might, in the light of the recent World's War."

Since the coming of the Turk into Europe, when Constantinople one of the great centers of Christianity fell into their hands, Europe has been the center of a multiplicity of wars. The Sultan of Turkey in Europe, the late despotic ruler, has rightly been called the "Sick man of Europe." His strength has never been great since he has been confined to his present boundaries, but his location is strategic. Constantinople guards the Dardanelles, the water connection between the Black Sea and the Atlantic Ocean via the Mediterranean Sea. For this reason and this alone, has his residence in Europe been tolerated. Since Prussia and the many kingdoms and duchies of Germany, France, Spain, Holland, Russia and Great Britain became powers to be reckoned with in European politics, each has been afraid to allow any other nation to conquer and confiscate the lands of the Turk. Russia who has ever been a great swaggering giant, never fully aware of his great strength, has always had his eye upon Turkey. He has always longed for a southern outlet to the Atlantic, the great World's Highway. His northern ports are frozen up for half of the year so the need has been great. But the Turk blocked the way. Each time that the Russian Bear extended his great paw toward the Turk and his possessions, the other powers of Europe interfered and prevented the blow, conversely, whenever another power reached out toward Turkey, Russia interfered in order that she might at some future time have the sole privilege of falling heir to the Turkish estate. England, also, very much wishes to control the Turkish Empire, and guards zealously the existence of this state until she may have the sole privilege of confiscating the land. And so we might review indefinitely, the jealousies among the great nations of Europe over the lands of the Turk. So he has been called the "Sick man" of Europe for all are waiting anxiously for his death so that each may fall heir to his estate. For this reason, only, has the Mohammedan been tolerated in Christian Europe, in which place he has no moral right or place.

Each great power fears that another, through warfare, may acquire enough territory to give it controlling power. This idea has caused many strange and alarming alliances. This shifting about of alliances keeps a balance of power. So you see, it has been the aim, to a certain extent, of each great power in Europe to aspire to the control of European affairs and from thence to the control of the affairs of the world. Holland, France and Spain have long since lost an equal chance with the others to acquire this proposition, so they have been looked upon in connection with the other lesser kingdoms of Europe as likely subjects for acquisition. Germany accomplished the league of Germanic nations in 1871 when Bismarck declared them united in an Empire with the King of Prussia as emperor, at Versailles, after the fall of Paris. At that time they took from France, Alsace and Lorraine, two provinces just across the German frontier, all they dared. This aim of the German Empire has been handed down, from Bismarck to succeeding chancellors, the aim to once more, as at the time prior to the separation of the church and state, to become the virtual ruler of the world. None, outside of Germany, fully knew the extent of the preparations made, until recently. Germany's plans were all laid and all preparations completed and they were anxiously waiting the opportunity of some excuse to make the first move toward their realization. The assassination of the Austrian Archduke and Duchess by the Serbian student was that opportunity. True, Germany was not immediately affected but she easily threw herself into the breach so formed. This is all so vividly recalled to our memories that we need not recount it further. The German aim has been to dictate the world's policies. Perhaps, if as the Kaiser claimed, he was in league with God and was God's agent here on earth, this might have been an ethical conception, but when the same mind that conceives the control of the world's affairs because he is God's chosen agent, utterly disregards the neutrality of Belgium; orders a reign of terror among conquered peoples; disgraces captive womanhood and sets free all the demons of torture and cruelty, we are forced to believe that such is not the Spirit of God but the spirit of the devil. The deed and the thought must coincide. Follow the German army through Belgium and France and no signs of the Spirit of God are seen except in evacuation and retreat. Are you aware of the fact, whenever a string of German defeats reached the German soldiery, there occurred a remarkable change in their treatment of prisoners? They treated them more kindly. But when a string of victories came, they treated them very badly. Thus the treatment that the prisoners received served as an index as to the trend of the war. Does this spirit coincide with the Spirit of the Lord of Hosts? We can not at any time find full justification for war. If ever a war was justifiable, this one was, because the liberties and rights of many peoples were at stake. The Central Powers wanted autocratic control. The Allies opposed autocratic control and demanded democratic control. God endowed each of us with minds and certain abilities and for the reason that he gave them to us, he expects us to make use of them. He has not planned to have some one do our thinking for us. True, some are leaders but all are thinkers, and leaders are only accorded their places by the consent of those being led. This choice of leadership recognizes superior abilities and accomplishments.

In conclusion may we gather the threads of our thought more compactly together:

First, the aim of the German Emperor, coincidentally, the aim of the German people, was thoroughly unchristian.

Second, his plans and preparations were carried on in secret, in order that his intended victims might not arm in self defense, and the realization of his aim be made easier.

This again is unchristian.

Third, his treatment of prisoners of war and captive civilians was atrocious. This certainly is contrary to Christian teaching. We place the blame here not only upon the German Emperor but on the people as well for all were filled with this idea and co-operated in its realization.

Fourth, the deception practiced by the hardened leaders of Germany to keep the people in a warlike state of mind is thoroughly unchristian and hence contrary to the will of God.

Fifth and last, the unthinkable audacity of the German Emperor in leaguizing himself with God, is in itself enough to provoke the righteous wrath of God, himself, against the German cause. Coincidentally, God has shown his disapproval of such an alliance by bringing about the defeat of the Kaiser, and civil strife among the German people for their unwitting acceptance of this allegiance.

For these reasons we believe that right has conquered might. In March, 1918 our hearts were filled with anxiety over the possible ending of the great German drive toward Paris, but at this dark hour, many noble Christians still believed that right would conquer and so it did, as it always has done and always will do.

ROOTED AND GROUNDED

By W. M. LYON

Please turn to Ephesians 3:17. What does it really mean to be "rooted and grounded"? Whatever else it may mean, one thought is quite certain and clear, and that is, that the true believer's life is founded upon a deep conviction. Many who profess to be Christians seem to lack this essential. The truth must grip us; it will take hold with strong force, if we are surrendered to the will of God. My brethren, as I see it, to be rooted and grounded, is to be in position to show forth the power of the living Christ. When this is true of our membership marvelous results will follow. Permit me to refer to Romans 6:5. Ah, those words, "planted together." They are deeply significant. If we would know anything worth while of the Master, we must be willing to go with him, even into the depths! In fact, we can not be content to remain on the surface.

Let me now refer you to the words of our Savior in Luke 9:44. Ah, he is still anxious that his sayings "sink down" into our very hearts and lives. Where there is no depth, there can be no growth. And where there is no growth, there can be no life. And without life we are without power.

Fellow minister, let us get the lesson. Too many are drawn away after numbers. "Not by might, nor by power, (not by numbers), but by my Spirit!" The Spirit not only searcheth the deep things, but he will cause the message to sink into the very depths of the heart.

But I must tell you the reason why I have been led to write these words. It gives sadness to my heart, but I must tell it, nevertheless. Several months ago I mentioned the fact that a number of members had come to the city on account of the demands for war work. At the time we felt encouraged. Why should it not add to the strength of the "Brethren" cause in Washington City? But the sad part is, only a few out of that number have given evidence of real interest. The great majority have surely not been "rooted and grounded." The "lure of the city," or something else, seems to prevent them from taking any real interest in the church. We have tried to do all within our power to win them.

But praise God for the "faithful few." For these we are very thankful. We can soon tell who are the "planted"; the "rooted and grounded" ones. My brother, if you have suggestions to make, let us have them. These things ought not so to be. Why is it? We know the remedy. God help us!

"HE SHALL REIGN"

By Delbert Whitmer

In Revelations the eleventh chapter and fifteenth verse we read: "The kingdom of the world is to become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever." In the Authorized version we have, "The kingdoms of this world," while the Revised gives it "The kingdom of the world." Christianity does not seek the destruction of the kingdoms of the world. Differences in political constitution will persist. Many forms of organization will remain. The kingdoms will be kingdoms still, even when Christianity is triumphant. But "the kingdom of the world," that subtle sovereignty whose decree runs through each and all the kingdoms, will be inherently transformed, becoming even "the kingdom of our Lord."

1. And what is "the kingdom of the world?" It is the devil dominion in every kingdom, the lust after the things of the world, the carnal dominion, the self dominion. This kingdom shall be suddenly changed into "the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ."

2. "He shall reign forever and ever." Our familiarity with the music of the Hallelujah Chorus has led us to place the emphasis on the pronoun, but the scripture places the emphasis on the verb. He shall reign.

3. And what are the characteristics of the kingdom of our Lord? There is a Pauline answer sufficiently definite and descriptive. "The kingdom of God . . . is righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." And what is righteousness? It is two-fold rightness, rightness with God and rightness with man. These two relationships are adjusted.

In the second place "the kingdom of God is . . . peace in the Holy Ghost." The peace is the fruit of rightness with God and man; it is movement without friction; the strife is ended and there is quiet liberty of movement in God.

In the third place "the kingdom of God . . . is joy in the Holy Ghost." Life that has become rectified in its fundamental relationships and is now moving without discord will certainly experience "the joy of the Lord."

The kingdom of the world with all its egotism, its lust, its pride, its selfishness, is to become "the kingdom of our Lord," with its fundamental righteousness, its pervading peace and its enduring joy. And this is the kingdom for which we pray when we say "Thy kingdom come."

Are there any signs of his coming? Where are the signs? They are not all wintry and depressing. I turn to my calendar which tells me nature's movements and it has these entries: "Skylark sings until November"; "Yew Tree begins to flower"; "Crocus appears," and all these emerge even amid the prevalent cold and desolation. And so it is in the moral world. If I look closely, there is tragedy and disaster. But there are signs of a quickening presence which clearly suggests that the kingdom of the spiritual spring is coming. Look at the glorious ferment of this time. It is surely due to some hidden yeast which has been implanted in the affairs of men by the Divine hand.

But even though there were no signs of the spiritual spring, nothing but grim, hard, black winter, nothing but the reign of devility and pride, it would still be ours to call to the people, to confess the glories of our sovereign Lord, to herald the beneficence of his sway, and humbly and unceasingly to pray "Thy kingdom come."

4. Now, "the kingdom of our Lord is founded upon the love and grace of our Lord. If, therefore, we would promote the kingdom we must proclaim the love.

In the Christian evangel there are at least three things: first, there is revelation, a drawing back of the curtain and the unveiling of the Father in Jesus Christ our Lord; second, there is aspiration, moral ideals and possibilities are presented to us; third, there is inspiration, we have the word of reconciliation in Jesus Christ and in him we have the gift of eternal life.

Now we have to tell this good news, to announce this evangel, even though the whole world is not responsive to our effort and does not believe our report. The church of Christ has no option. She has received her marching orders, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

But before the church can think imperially, she must live holily. If we are to be instrumental in transforming the kingdom of the world into the kingdom of the Lord, he must first of all be "our Lord." Is he that? It is useless for us to go further, unless we can address him by this sacred and personal name. Foreign missions are quite secure if only we have a home church sincere and sanctified.

Well, what think you of the church at home? Does she constitute a hopeful starting point of Christian imperialism? Think of her quarrelsomeness. We are far more interested on controversy than we are upon service. The churches put far more energy in canvassing at an election than they do canvassing for souls. How petty many Christian people are, and how touchy, and how easily they throw up their sacred commissions. A man or woman is subject to what they call offense, and they immediately send in their resignation. How can we say he is "our Lord" when these ugly things exist in our midst? Before we can be ardent apostles it is necessary that we be lowly disciples, flinging ourselves at the King's feet with the cry, "My Lord and my God!"

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

God the Visible King. By Alva J. McClain

TEXT: But will God indeed dwell on the earth?—1 KINGS 8:27.

And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us.—JOHN 1:14.

One of the most staggering questions that ever occurred to the mind of man was uttered by Israel's wisest king as he entered upon the dedication of that glorious temple which he had built for Jehovah. "Will God in every deed dwell with men on the earth? Behold, the heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain Thee." Will God in very deed dwell with men on the earth?

God's answer to this question of the great king came not in any academic fashion. It was not couched in nebulous terms of philosophy, nor in any hard and fast formula of science. God's answer was a concrete action, a mighty fact in history which the Apostle John described in this fashion, "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory—glory as of the Only-Begotten from the Father, full of grace and truth."

This shall be the text of my sermon—a question and its answer, "Will God in very deed dwell with men on the earth?" "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us."

Surely I need not attempt any detailed argument to prove the identity of the "Word." Every informed Christian understands that "the Word" is none other than our Lord Jesus Christ, and that "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." Nor should it be necessary to dwell at length upon the manner in which the Word became flesh. According to Matthew and Luke it was by birth of the Virgin Mary. To this even the law and the prophets bear witness. Says the book of Genesis he shall be "the Seed of the Woman." And the prophet Isaiah seals this testimony with the statement, "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and shall bring forth a child, and thou shalt call his name Immanuel," which being interpreted is "God with us."

The truth then, is that the Babe of Bethlehem and the wonderful Word are one and the same, even Jesus Christ who is the same yesterday, today and forever. Remembering this, let us return in thought to the little town of Bethlehem, kneel reverently with the wise men beside the manger to contemplate the one who is cradled there.

We beheld a helpless Babe, and yet—"All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that hath been made." This is the Maker of heaven and earth and all that therein is!

We beheld a Babe who sleeps perhaps, and yet—this is he of whom the Psalmist said, "He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep."

We beheld a Babe borne up in his mother's arms, and yet—this is he of whom the writer of Hebrews declares, "He upholdeth all things by the word of his power." Even that mighty star, detached perhaps for the moment from its proper constellation and caused to swing around and stand over Bethlehem to mark the place of his birth, moved majestically through the heavens to its appointed place by the power of him who lay in the virgin's arms.

Perhaps as we finger prayer may be offered for the holy Child by the distinguished company, and we shall hear the virgin mother pour out her heart to God in thanksgiving and praise for the great honor which he has bestowed upon her. If so, it will only serve to remind us that we stand in the presence of him who both hears and answers prayer.

Surely we stand here on holy ground. Let those in whose hearts there is no fear of God seek with vulgar hands to pry into the mysteries of the incarnation. As for us who name the Name, let us uncover our heads and take off the shoes of our feet, and worship, for this is none other than "the Gate of Heaven."

The birth of this Child at Bethlehem, insignificant as it may have seemed to many in those days, nevertheless was an event of tremendous consequence to the world. It meant the realization of the messianic hopes of all nations. It meant that at last God had ushered into the world his own Sacrifice for sin, the perfect Antitype of countless smoking altars and oceans of poured out blood, a Sacrifice which could actually take away sins as the blood of bulls and goats could never do. It meant that finally the world was to see a real man, perfect and holy as God intended he should be. The birth of this Child at Bethlehem meant that from henceforth the destiny of redeemed man should be forever linked with the destiny of God, if it is proper to speak of the destiny of God. But above all it meant that the invisible God had come forth out of the darkness which for untold ages had hidden him, and had become the visible God. It is of this particular significance of the incarnation I wish to speak in the time that remains.

Jesus Christ—the Visible God!

The testimony of all revelation agrees that God is an invisible Being. Said Jehovah to Moses, "No man can see my face and live." The Psalmist sang of God who "maketh the darkness his secret place." John said, "No man hath seen God at any time." And Paul speaks of him as "the King of kings and Lord of lords, who only hath immortality, dwelling in light unapproachable, whom no man hath seen, nor can see."

Yet the heart of man has never been satisfied with an invisible God. He has ever cried out for more reality. And this has been a universal cry, voiced by all mankind from the most degraded savage to the holiest saint of God. Every heathen that carves his god from wood or stone and falls down before it is at least giving expression to his desire for a god that he can see. Every child that is told of God and taught the things concerning him will try to visualize him. You may tell the child that he cannot be seen, nevertheless in that child's mind there will be some kind of an image. Sometimes it will be a very strange one too. I doubt if there is a person here before me that does not have hidden back in his mind a picture of God as he has conceived him to be. You may have never been sufficiently bold to describe that picture, as for instance Wells the novelist has been, but the picture is there. And its presence witnesses to the innate desire of man to see God.

Moses had this desire when he said to Jehovah, "Show me, I pray thee, thy glory." Job had the same desire when he cried, "Oh that I knew where I might find him! Behold I go forward but he is not there; and backward but I cannot perceive him: on the left hand when he doth work but I cannot behold him: he hideth himself on the right hand that I cannot see him." It must have been in Philip's heart when he said to our Lord Jesus, "Show us the Father and it sufficeth us."

Now God never put a yearning into the heart of man that he did not intend some day to satisfy. And Jesus Christ was God's answer to man's age-long cry for a visible God. Simeon must have understood this as he held in his arms the holy Child and said, "Now lettest thy servant depart. Lord, for mine eyes have seen—." John understood this as he wrote, "We beheld his glory, glory as of the Only-Begotten from the Father." Paul knew it for a fact when he spoke of Christ as the "Image of the invisible God." Jesus Christ himself was conscious of it when he gave answer to the blindness of his disciple, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

Yes, when Jesus Christ came into the world, God came into the world. Men saw his face. They beheld his glory, and bore true witness by inspiration that this glory which they had seen was "glory as from the Father."

It was a realization of this tremendous fact among other motives that sent out the disciples as transformed men into the midst of enemies and deadly perils, there to proclaim Jesus Christ as Lord of all, and finally die for him. It inspired their burning and dogmatic messages. Other men might infer the existence of God from beholding the created universe: the philosophers might reason out his existence by subtle argument and much metaphysical cliff-climbing; but these men knew there was a God because they had seen him. It was not hearsay or guesswork on their part. Said Peter years afterward, "We did not follow cunningly devised fables when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but we were eyewitnesses of his Majesty." And still later John had the same assurance as he began his first epistle with these words, "That which was from the beginning, that which we have heard, that which we have seen with our eyes, that which we beheld and our hands handled," this "declare we unto you."

To see God, to behold his face, to gaze upon his glory and likeness,—that was ever the sustaining hope and confidence of holy men of old. David had that hope. He saw around him a class of men that he describes as "men of the world whose portion is in this life." God had given them treasures. He had given them children. With these good things they pronounced themselves "satisfied." Not so with David. God had given him even more than other men, yet he was not satisfied. "As for me, he cries to his God, let me behold thy face. I shall be satisfied when I shall awake with beholding thy form." Job had this hope of seeing God. When all his great wealth was swept away, his sons and daughters dead, his own body sorely smitten with loathsome disease, his wife untrue and friends false—in such an hour the patriarch lifted up his eyes and cried, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and at last he will stand up upon the earth; and after my skin, even this body is destroyed; then in my flesh shall I see God; whom I, even I shall see, and mine eyes shall behold." And we today have the same hope for it has been promised us that "we shall see him as he is."

Although it was not given to the holy men of old, nor to us, to kneel beside the manger in Bethlehem, nor to walk with the Lord in Judea's hill, nor to lean upon his breast and look into his face, yet their hope and ours shall not go unrealized. To this the closing book of Revelation bears sure witness. Among the innumerable and most blessed wonders of the New Jerusalem, that city whose builder and maker is God, we are told that within it, "there shall be no more any curse." But "the throne of God and the Lamb shall be therein, and his servants shall serve him, and they shall see his face." Amen. "They shall see his face." The face of the Babe of Bethlehem, the face of Mary's Son, the face of the Carpenter of Nazareth, the face of the Man of Galilee, the face which was so marred more than any man the face of God! Oh that will be glory. When by his grace I shall look on his face, that will be glory for me!

The incarnation should mean much to us for it is supposed to mark the time when God pinned back the curtain of darkness which surrounded him and became manifest to the human sight in the person of our Lord Jesus Christ. And it is my firm conviction this morning that throughout all the coming ages which shall roll on ceaselessly and forever the Lord Jesus is all that any soul shall ever see of God. But he is sufficient, for in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

OUR DEVOTIONAL

Exaltation and Service

By Miss Emily Beatrice Gnagey

OUR SCRIPTURE

And after six days Jesus takes Peter, James and John, his brother and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light. And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with them. Then answered Peter and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee and one for Moses and one for Elias. And while he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them; and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him. . . . Lord have mercy on my son: for he is a lunatic and sore vexed: for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water. And I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him (Matt. 17:1-5, 15-16). Go to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give (Matt. 10: 6-8). Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant (Matt. 20:26, 27).

OUR MEDITATIONS

Centuries ago a King came to a little group of rude, expectant men, whose fathers had long awaited the King's coming and who, like the toiling and yearning in every age, lived their meager lives and waited. And the King came. His palace was a stable, his throne a cross, his scepter a nail-pierced hand, and his crown a wreath of thorns. While emperors marshaled their legions and went to their conquests, his court numbered twelve. They had little to give as the world reckons life's good things, but they left it all for the unthroned King. They relinquished their fortunes, surrendered their wills, yielded their lives; yet, sending them forth, he said, "Freely ye have received, freely give."

And what had they received? The companionship and precepts of a King—and a life. He had walked with them along the highways and tarried with them in their humble homes; he had preached to them by the sea; the hills and the meadows and the grain fields were their familiar environment; they knew the desert and the hillside and the mountain top; but they must have loved the hills most. It was on a hillside that the angels announced the King's coming; on a mountain he refused the sovereignty of the world, which he bade his subjects renounce; on a mountain he gave them the beatitudes and taught them to pray and delivered to them a new law of love; on a mountain he revealed to them his glory; on a mountain he finally went to his death; and from a mountain he ascended. For all this exaltation of spirit, he exacted a correspondingly high sacrifice or service. Implicit obedience for the Sermon on the Mount, the commonplace for the transfiguration; for the Mount of the Ascension, the evangelization of the world.

And what did they give? From the altitude of adoration they climbed the further heights of service. They gave that for which he lived and died, the life that is beyond life.

Usefulness begets larger usefulness; and obedience to a heavenly vision opens the eyes of faith to ever widening fields of opportunity. And so it comes that in the year of Grace, nineteen hundred and nineteen, we share in that life. see with clearer vision the King in his beauty, and climb to heights not reached before.

Shall we disprove the divine paradox that the higher we climb toward heaven the closer we get to the world of men? Or betray the trust of the ascending Christ?

OUR PRAYER

Grant, we beseech thee, Almighty God, that like as we do believe thine only-begotten Son our Lord Jesus Christ to have ascended into the heavens; so may we also in heart and mind thither ascend, and with him continually dwell, who liveth and reigneth with thee and the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Missions in the Sunday School. By Mrs. George Seibert

(The following paper was read at the Kanemorado conference last October and ordered sent to the Evangelist for publication. —C. W. Yoder.)

The work of the Sunday school is to teach the Word of God so that we may be workmen that need not be ashamed, that we may be approved, and thoroughly furnished unto all good work, that we may know the will of God concerning us and his plans of salvation, that we may grow in the knowledge and admonition of the Lord and into a Christ-likeness.

As we grow in grace and knowledge, we come more closely to follow in the steps of him who went about doing good and we learn that he came "not to be ministered unto but to minister" and to deliver a message, even as he himself said: "For this came I into the world."

Since there is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, as told in the Word of God, then this name must be declared "Unto all the world" that all may know that "Jesus is the Christ the Son of the living God" and able to save from sin.

Jesus taught missions on the Sabbath day. "As his custom was he went into the synagogue to teach "As his custom was" he taught, not occasionally, as we sometimes do, but every Sabbath day. And because he taught "AS HIS CUSTOM WAS," there were many to hear him. Some came to criticize and to find fault, as they do now; some came to see what he would say, out of idle curiosity, as they do now; and some—AS ALWAYS—to learn the golden truths of the message.

Jesus did not always teach the same audience, nor speak from the same pulpit. He went from place to place. He had no home of his own, no abiding place on earth. He was misunderstood and abused and refused but he did not cease his work because of this. If he had, there would be no need of anyone else teaching missions anywhere, but because he did not get discouraged and give up the work his Father intrusted to him, his followers can desire no greater privilege than to go forward in his name.

When Jesus had completed his mission of dwelling among us, he still promised to be with his workers if they obeyed his command and that last great command was to preach the gospel to every creature, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost" and this was followed by the promise, "Lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world."

The Bible throughout is a missionary book. From the call of Abraham to the coming of Christ the Old Testament story is a missionary story. And the New Testament tells of the greatest missionary the world will ever know. It tells of a Prince leaving his home in heaven, giving up all its riches and glory, leaving the Father and coming to earth to bring the message of salvation to man. "And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us and we beheld his glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father full of grace and truth." And "As many as received him to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe in his name."

And then consider the book of Acts. Did you ever hear of a greater missionary book? And would you know how these missionaries carried out the teaching of the Master? Would you know how the church was founded and the teachers sent out to teach the message of the kingdom? Read Acts. Study ACTS.

And the epistles—and the special letters—and finally Revelations—the climax of the missionary story of the Bible.

We cannot teach the Bible, therefore, without teaching missions. We cannot carry our text book to Sunday school without carrying a great message of missions with us. We cannot study the biographies of the Bible heroes and heroines without studying the lives of great missionaries and we cannot study the Bible and carry out the commands it contains for us unless we go on with the work of teaching and preaching—of discipling all nations, for if the Bible has any command for us at all, it is the one of spreading the good news into all the world.

We study the "How" of teaching the Bible and we neglect the "How" of DOING the work it commands. We are eager to hear the message of a Savior but we do not give it to others. We learn that we may know but not that we may tell others and yet we lose what we would keep, for the Bible teaches that "Whosoever would save his life must lose it" and that "we can keep only that which we give." This seems a paradox but it is the truth.

And we will say: "We have no time for special missionary teaching in Sunday school. We have only an hour and we cannot spend that time teaching about missionaries." We give time to things that are considered important but we do not consider missions important enough to spend our time teaching. We have about all we can do to keep up the regular lessons and it takes all the money we have to pay for our supplies. It is necessary that we pay our debts and study the text but it is also necessary that we help someone else to know about that text, and we cannot get the message to many without some of our funds are used to send it. Therefore we are doing just half our work, embracing just half the privileges and obeying just half the command of our Lord when we take in and give out nothing to those around us.

In order to be inspired to the work of "going or sending," we must have some information about what is being done in the world, about the needs of certain places, about the people who dwell there, and what we can do to reach the needy. We can never actually see all these places and peoples. We can never look upon the needs with our own eyes, for the world is too big and too needy for any one to find all the dark corners, but we can see through the eyes of other people the needs of many places.

There is ALWAYS time, for we have all the time there is and we cannot better spend it than in learning God's will concerning us and his will concerning our fellow men. Christianity, or Christlikeness is a triangle. It is your God, your brother and you, and you cannot get along with only two sides, not even with your God and you. It must include the brother.

To allow a Sunday school to go on, year after year, doing nothing to help anyone besides themselves is to teach, year after year, selfishness, and selfishness and Christ cannot dwell in the same place at the same time.

To teach missions effectively in the Sunday school there must be systematic teaching. They must be supremely important, for the supreme mission of the Sunday school is to teach missions. No Bible school can live within itself and live up to the teachings of the Master, the Head of the church. It must teach people to be doers of the Word as well as hearers, to be LIVING EPISTLES, known and read of all men.

To know what is being done in the world is to carry the message, and to be interested in that work. To know this we can use a few minutes of time every Sunday very profitably to learn. There are consecrated workers out in the world, trying to fulfill the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel," and we should know about them and be inspired to follow in their train.

Every Sunday school can give ten minutes to the study of some of these workers and every Sunday school can give a part of their offering to send workers into these fields.

Beaver City, Nebraska.

Special Notices

February 11th, 1919.

Brother Editor:

Will you permit through the columns of the Evangelist the correction of an error in our leaflet, "A Year's Stewardship," in the lists of schools given special mention, by the omission of the Waterloo school?

Under schools having largest enrollment, Waterloo stands 4th, with 415; under average attendance, 8th, with 189; under Home Departments 3rd, with 103; under Cradle Rolls, 6th, with 78.

With apologies to our good Waterloo people and confessing to poor "stewardship" I am,

Fraternally yours,
ALBERT TRENT.

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 18, 1919.

Dear Editor:

The First Brethren Sunday school of Spokane has accepted the Waterloo challenge and much interest is being manifested in trying to win the points.

Sincerely,
LILLIAN E. BOWERS, Sup't.

528 W. Knox Avenue.

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

Important Subjects in Christian Endeavor

By Arthur Cashman

Each organization has its beginning and from the beginning through years of progress it has its history. So has Christian Endeavor. From the time of its organization until now, a great history has accumulated which is being studied by a large band of Christian Endeavor workers. It has grown to be one of the most useful and beneficial auxiliaries of the church. Besides being interesting the study of this organization is instructive and helpful.

This society began thirty-eight years ago. February 2, 1881, when it was founded by Rev. Francis E. Clark, at Portland, Maine. Only nine months later, in October, 1881, the second society was formed by Rev. Charles Perry Mills in Newburyport, Massachusetts. With these two societies formed, rapid progress was made in various ways. Publications began in newspapers and magazines, and new books were written at an early date, the first of which was "Children and the Church," by Dr. Clark, in 1883.

Shortly after the founding of these societies, conventions were frequently held which discloses the fact that the Christian Endeavor movement had experienced great progress since its birth. With but six societies, the first of these conventions was held in June, 1882. Three years later (1885), the United Society of Christian Endeavor was formed in Maine. Many large and notable conventions have since been held in the larger cities of the United States. Christian Endeavor has spread into almost every country and several successful conventions of "The World's Christian Endeavor Union" have been held. In the year 1886, when Dr. Clark became president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, the first local union was formed at New Haven, Connecticut, in January, 1886. "The Golden Rule" was established also in that year.

The principles, as laid down by Dr. Wells, are definite standards of service and definite commitment to those standards: open confession of Christ and speaking for him according to ability and opportunity, the cultivation of the devotional life by regular prayer and Bible study, training in Christian service by a variety of committee work, loyal to the church services, generous giving to Christian work, Christian citizenship, interdenominational fellowship and the promotion of peace and good will among the nations of the world. All of these endeavors are to be made in accordance with the will of Christ and trusting in him for strength. These are the purposes and the steady aims in Christian Endeavor.

One may ask why Christian Endeavor has grown to be such a large and strong organization or why it has spread so rapidly throughout the nations. We find that prayer has played a large part in this growth and that the founders and chief officers of the societies were consecrated men who applied the pledge to their lives.

One of the greatest functions in Christian Endeavor is what is known as the "Quiet Hour." Naturally we ask what is meant by the "Quiet Hour;" and the answer comes back that it is a regular time spent daily in quiet communion with God, and his eternal Word. How lax we are along such lines as Bible study and fervent prayer! There are so many outside issues merging into our College career that this very important phase of life is sorrowfully neglected. But we ask, How is the "Quiet Hour" connected with the pledge we signed when we became members of the Christian Endeavor society? To this comes the answer in the simple words of the pledge itself. "I promise to make it the rule of my life to pray and read the Bible every day." "The Quiet Hour" simply makes this pledge a little more definite.

That word "Quiet" is a wonderful word. Quietness is a divine characteristic. God is quiet. The earth has grown noisy. Nature is still and quiet. Man has become noisy. God is quiet. Noise reveals weakness; something is out of gear. Sound is rhythm; noise is discord. And may the expression be deepened by repetition while we softly say again, God is quiet. Of the many virtues the scriptures teach us, quietness holds no little place. In Acts 19:36 we read, "Ye ought to be quiet." In 1 Thessalonians 4:11 we read, "Study to be quiet." And in Isaiah 30:15 we read, "In quietness shall be your strength."

If Nature has one lesson which, in this stimulating American air, we need more than any other, it is the lesson of calmness and quietness of the soul. We rush from one kind of knowledge to another; eager, breathless and excited, and forget that culture is not a fruit to be plucked by a swift hand, but a fertility that follows the falling of the rain into our souls, and the slow and silent enrichment of the invisible soul. John Greenleaf Whittier knew the value of a quiet spirit when he wrote:

Drop thy still dew of quietness,

Till all our strivings cease:

Take from our souls the strain and stress,

And let our ordered lives confess

The beauty of thy peace.

So, should we not renew our efforts as Christian Endeavorers to engage more ardently in the "Quiet Hour?" Should we not learn, in this way to keep the body quiet; the voice quiet, the eyes quiet, the thoughts, imagination and emotions quiet?

Quiet means the natural expression of mastery, neither overdone nor underdone. Mastery is holding true to nature. Mastery means quietness, the quietness of rhythm, of the sun's swing, of the dew's fall, of all of God's action in nature.

Let us daily and preferably early in the morning get our Bibles and go to the Master and, in quietness, learn to be masters...

Where Brethren Young People Are Doing Good

By G. C. Carpenter

"Flues" in the Mountains

Were you ever in a room where father, mother and six children have lain ill for days without attention? The very suggestion makes you shudder.

But you are thinking about one of those comfortable, cozy, bright alluring bed rooms you and your community enjoy. I am recalling the interior squalor of a mountain hut—the rough floor rocking with influenza sputum—whose only furniture is two chairs and three beds; beds so filthy that a king's ransom would not induce you to sleep in one for a single night.

You knock.

"Come in," is the feeble response.

You open the door and stand staring into the twilight. The room is windowless. A feverish stench sends you staggering backward. You master an inclination to run and step inside. Dust particles and disease germs—you wonder how many millions of them—dance in sun rays that enter through cracks and chinks in the wall.

The peevings of a sick baby, or the ravings of a delirious child, remind you that there are human beings in the room. You take another step and stumble over a chair. Your eyes are becoming adjusted to the dark. You locate beds with recumbent figures.

A woman's voice does most of the talking.

"The old man, he took the flues a week ago come Sunday. The baby, hit's so fretful I have to be up and down. Johnnie there, has come down.

"No, we aint' had no doctor. The old man he loved a lot of folks had died with the doctor.

"Yes'm, we've been doctorin' ourselves.

"Black draught and castor oil.

"The baby, 'pears like hits colic most all the time.

"Yes'm, I gin hit a whole bottle of oil." First Experience of Workers at Rousseau, Ky.

When we first saw the house, its walls covered with red builders' paper, we thought, "The grace of God alone" can keep one in such a place, and it did. We suffered hardship and sickness, and sometimes did not know where the next meal was coming from, but his grace was sufficient, and he always sent the provisions needed. I remember one time at morning prayers we asked him to send us something for dinner, as we did not have anything. I went out into the garden to see if I could find anything big enough to eat, but did not. When I returned I found a boy on the back porch with some potatoes which his mother had sent, saying they were small, but perhaps we would like them, as they were still scarce. There were enough for two dinners. So he always provides better than we ask.

MISSIONS

Home Mission Notes

By G. C. Carpenter

A Star for Long Beach

Brother Wall writes: "I notice in the Evangelist in Brother Bowman's report that he gives our church credit for $125 as our Thanksgiving offering. This is correct, but he does not place the star opposite our name, as it should be, as we are one of the churches that has more than reached the thirty cents per member."

Brother Bowman is a very careful and efficient secretary and the only way we can account for the absence of that deserved star is that it must have been a "Falling Star." But we are certain that Brother Bowman will place it there again, for he has learned that he can count on Long Beach, war or no war, influenza or no influenza, rain or sunshine. Other churches that have not reached the thirty cents per member goal for home missions should get busy and win a star.

Krypton

Brother Cook writes that he is planning to have a tuition school during the months of February and March or longer. This school is self-supporting.

"They Shall Not Pass" Unsaved

With the world at home and abroad a fallow seed-bed, we can never excuse ourselves if this, our greatest opportunity, is let pass. With every challenge and opportunity God gives the means and ability to meet it, and the fact that we have multiplied calls from scores of worthy causes in nowise lessens our responsibility as a missionary force.

The church in America has been blessed beyond the imagination of men. Now, that a crisis is reached, our Commander calls to his soldiers for support. Paul and those faithful men who lived close to Jesus heard the summons, "Go!" As a result Asia Minor and Europe felt the power of a new birth. Today the world is prepared for another seed sowing, and Christ again calls. Will the church make the proper answer?

In behalf of the people of the frontiers of the West, in behalf of the hundreds of thousands hid in the fastnesses of our own mountains, in behalf of the nameless multitudes who live in our cities, in behalf of the millions beyond the sea, and for the love of him who died for you and me, I plead.—The Soul-Winner.

A WOMAN OF MACEDONIA

A missionary in Egypt was telling a woman the story of the love of Jesus, and at the close she said, "It is a wonderful story; do the women in your country believe it?" "Yes!" said the missionary. The woman thought a moment, then she said, "I don't think they can all believe it or they would not be so long in coming to tell us. Why, nobody has ever loved me. When I was born they wept seven days because I was a girl. At nine years of age I was married, but was not loved, and only the other day my own boy spat in my face because I am a woman. Now you tell me that a man whom I never saw so loved me that he died for me! Why, I can hardly believe it."—Arthur Steel, in the Foreign Field.

Krypton Kentucky

School is going again. Lost Creek has furnished a teacher for Krypton. Miss Elizabeth Haddix began school work here the third of February and everybody seems happy, and the word is being passed around already, "We like our teacher." Thanks to both Miss Haddix and Lost Creek.

We have a fine interest in the religious work now, about the best we have ever had. The laity is doing a lot of personal work, and when the laity gets busy something is sure to happen. But let it happen we are ready for it.

Personal Gifts

There have been a number of personal gifts sent to us and to Paul James, for which we are truly grateful. We have acknowledged all these gifts by personal letters, but in two or three instances the letters have been returned, for that reason we are making this explanation.

Gifts for the Work

Several months ago the Louisville Christian Endeavor society sent us by way of the pastor two dollars and fifty cents and for some reason this has never been announced. Gleaners Sunday School Class, Lanark, Illinois, $5.00.

One box of clothing, by S. S. C. E. La. Verne, Calif.

Miss Gertrude Ham and her pupils, Huntington, Indiana, sent enough gifts "at the Christmas season for all the boys and girls in and around Krypton.

Nappanee, Indiana, a box of clothing.

J. S. COOK.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

THE CAMDEN, OHIO. REVIVAL

True to our prophecy and expectation, at Camden, Ohio, we exceeded the "limit." Twenty-two souls stepped to the front, all but two of whom (so far as memory now serves) came as sinners; and most of whom made the great confession for the first time. Moreover, practically all of them may be reckoned as adults. Seventeen of them were baptized by Brother Beekley, pastor of the Gratis church, in his church on Sunday morning, January 26th. One came by relation. Practically all will be received into the fellowship of the congregation at Camden. The little flock there rejoiceth greatly.

Most of us know that Camden is but a baby congregation, small in numbers, and weak in this world's goods. But, when we arrived, we found them "in the spirit," ready to pray, testify, do personal work, or anything else that lay in their power. They had no regular preacher since Brother Lowman left them more than a year before—no resident pastor. Brother Beekley, pastor at Gratis, by the kindness of the Gratis church, consented to preach for them for such part of his time every other Sunday as was not taken in his work at Gratis, and preached for them only one Sunday before our arrival. But his health at present does not permit him to do much pastoral work; so, we found the work without proper support from this point of view. The "fin" ban had just been lifted a week before our arrival. From the human point of view, it seemed a rather discouraging task again to which we had been called. But when we found out the spirit of the congregation, we felt a revival would come in spite of all obstacles, and it did. When a church makes any real attempt to meet the scriptural conditions for a revival, the blessing will surely come, in spite of hindrances.

The spirit of this little band is shown in the fact that when we began the meeting, we found that there was large dependence upon the Ohio Mission Board for the expenses of this meeting, which were not small for the band there. However, they got the vision of their possibilities, and they got the blessing from above, and with real joy, they went about $15.00 over the top for all expenses connected with this meeting. Let the members of the Ohio Mission Board say to them, "Thank you!" Really, we never saw a happier band than that little band when they thus went "over the top!" Ah! they had learned something of the secret of the Master's joy.

Now, just a word to the churches of Ohio, and especially to the Mission Board of that state. Say! If Camden was in Southern California, there is just one way we would do it: we would immediately place a pastor there for his full time, and say to him, "Take care of that flock. What they cannot furnish you in the way of necessary expenses of your living and the expenses of the work, we will." The sure result would be, we would soon have a self-supporting church that would become a real help to others likewise. The foundation has been laid there by the revivals they have had with Lowman and Bell before me, and the field there is ripe for a great harvest when once the people of that community know it to be an established work. I think they are coming to believe that the work is no longer an experiment. But, do not make the sad mistake there that was made, —start a work and then leave the lambs to the wolves without a shepherd. Had the work at Camden been properly cared for after the previous revivals, we believe we would have had a hundred confessions at this meeting. Those acquainted with the work know that I know what I am talking about. Now, that flock needs a shepherd, and it will be fatal to delay securing the same for it. Brother Beekley can do some preaching for them—once every other Sunday. But neither Brother Beekley's health nor the work he has at Gratis will permit him giving proper care to this flock. He will do the best he can just now, but a man should be secured at once to take care of that work if the Ohio Mission Board means business.

May God bless the dear little band of faithful souls at Camden, and add to them daily such as should be saved. We are now at Napanee, Indiana, where we will be until February 16th, at least, the Lord willing. Things look good here, and thus far we can see no reason why a revival should not again come to this church that God has so often thus blessed in the past. They are ready to pray, and they are ready to give the personal touch. We never saw such a long "prayer list" as Brother Kolb has on hand. And, he is backed by a people ready to carry the "list" daily before the Throne.

LOUIS S. BOWMAN.

January 30, 1919.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

This report represents the final from Indiana. It took a lot of time and the driving of many a mile to canvass the 35 churches of Indiana. But at last we are able to report the task completed. And with Indiana and Pennsylvania now covered we begin to feel that we are near the half way place in the campaign. And I am sure no one could wish more than I do that the remaining half of the field were also covered.

The last two churches visited were College Corner and New Highland. Brother Homer Anderson of Evangelist fame is the pastor at College Corner. He is carrying this work in connection with Dutchtown. And needless to say, he was right with me on the job until the last minute in my canvass at College Corner. Brother Anderson has an ambition to see his congregations make good in every enterprise of the church. He wanted to see College Corner make good for endowment. But it ought to be said that College Corner was situated very much as Flora in that within the last year this congregation also went through a building campaign, and consequently I did not find the people in a position to do for endowment quite what they would have done under different conditions. Our result was $510. This money not only came from individuals, but practically all of the auxiliaries of the church took a part, such as the Sunday school, several Sunday school classes, the S. S. C. E., and the Junior Christian Endeavor. It is always encouraging to see the boys and girls want a part in this good work. I might have said that College Corner is a rural congregation made up of fine people, and with its house of worship now beautified and modernized, I believe it will do a splendid and far-reaching work in that part of the Master's vineyard. I am especially indebted to Brother Ed White and his good wife for the kind, genuine hospitality they showed me in their home. And I am just as greatly indebted to Brother Jerry Flora for his kindness to me. I don't care a rap what may be said against the children of preachers, here is a man whose father is a preacher, Brother Ben Flora, and I will put Jerry up against any of the brethren when it comes to downright loyalty and devotion to the church. I know Jerry will blush desperately when he reads this because he is a modest man. But never mind, Jerry, it will soon be over. Anyhow, Jerry Flora is the man who hitched up his Ford and pulled me through the mud one whole day when many a man would have politely told me to get gum boots and walk or stay at home. Well, we had a good time with the College Corner people, and I covet for them and their faithful pastor the rich blessing of God. It will be a joy to get back to College Corner again some day.

Now then, we report for New Highland. This place has been without a pastor since shortly after National Conference. Brother D. A. C. Teeter had been the pastor up until that time. And although New Highland is one of the smallest if not the smallest congregation in Indiana, yet when I tell you that this little band leads all of Indiana, and, as far as I can now recall, all of Pennsylvania in its gift on the per capita basis, it will be seen that the best is kept again until the last. New Highland with only 17 members went $255. That means $15.00 per capita. For a long time Mexico held the pennant; but now Mexico shall have to deliver up the pennant to New Highland. Because Highland's $15.00 per leads Mexico's $13.00 per. Mexico did well, but Highland did better. I was only in this congregation a day and a night; and what these folks did they did quickly. When I was told what this little band raised last year for the support of their pastor for half time I was amazed. I shall not divulge the figures here, but I question if the record can be duplicated anywhere in the brotherhood. And this is not because these folks are rich; they are not. Some are renters, and others have obligated themselves heavily for homes; but surely these folks have learned the fine art of giving to the Lord. I hope this little congregation may soon get a pastor. Such people are too good to be neglected. In my canvass here Brother A. E. Dickerhoff got me around to see the people, and I lodged with him in his kind, hospitable home. To him and his wife I am very grateful.

In this final report for Indiana I want to say that the total result in this state is approximately $29,000. It lacks just a little of being even $29,000. What a pity it could not still be rounded out to $29,000—better still, to $30,000! Maybe it can be yet. If anybody has been missed in Indiana, or if anybody feels even yet that he did not hit this thing as hard and as squarely as he could have and should have done, may I say, the doors are still open. Write me and tell me you want to round this out at least to $29,000 and you will hear from me at once.

Since it is all over in Indiana I want to say at least one or two things. First, Indiana has a fine lineup of preachers. They are all good fellows and they all pulled right up with me in splendid fashion. And I want to say to each one of those preachers again, "Thank you, and God bless you." I could not have done what has been done in Indiana apart from the fine co-operation of the pastors. Then too, I must say Indiana has a splendid lot of congregations—nice people and good buildings. And surely the combined Brethren churches of Indiana represent great strength. True, Indiana like every other state and district has some congregations that are sickly and struggling, and maybe in some instances dying. But on the whole Brethrenism in Indiana is alive and going forward. And I believe if we were planning the campaign over I would again take Indiana first. Indiana had to leap in and try the water first. She had nothing to gauge herself by, and hence it has been a pioneer part she has played. To Indiana came the honor to blaze the trail. This she did, and then Pennsylvania followed nobly. Now then, I believe we shall see all the remaining states and districts do the same. I believe each and every state and district is highly resolved that in this great enterprise it will do its full part.

The next report will come from somewhere in the west.

WM. H. BEACHLER,
Campaign Secretary.

TEEGARDEN, INDIANA

Is Teegarden on the Brethren map? I think so. But you have not heard much about the place. The Brethren at this place have not been saying much but have been sawing wood. We will admit that we have been slowed up, but not defeated, and a little late in reporting progress. But you know the influenza outflow our palms. We are in the harness again and have some good news. We had hoped to have our new church ready for dedication last fall, but are just now ready to announce that event. The Lord willing, we will dedicate on Sunday, February 16th, with Brother G. W. Rench, D.D., in charge. We will send full report after the dedication. Also, look out for the "cut" of the little church on the corner.

We have sent out some personal invitations, but we wish to invite any who may find it possible to come and spend the day with us. There will be an all-day service. At the noon hour we will have a basket dinner. If you cannot come, please pray for us any way, that the Lord may touch our hearts with his giving grace. We must raise about $1600 that day.

Now, just a word on the Four Year Program. We know we are not very long on this, but we have made good progress. We expect to go over the top in goal 9 in about four weeks. Brother Homer Seibert, who has heard the Master's call and is now at Ashland College, preparing for the ministry (Brother Beachler take notice) takes us over the top in goal 6. Some goals we have lost up to the present, but we are hoping to report better progress on the goals later.

We have met with disappointments but we feel that God has a great purpose in it all. So we are yet willing to trust Jesus as our good Leader. Pray for us at Teegarden that we may be ever found at our post of duty.

J. W. CLARK,
1711 S. Michigan St. South Bend, Indiana.

ROANOKE, VIRGINIA

Our silence here does not mean that we are dead, neither asleep, nor gone on a journey. We have had an unusual amount of work to do, but there has not been much to say. We have suffered two closings, on the account of the influenza epidemic; I suppose we have suffered about as all others have. So far we have not lost a member by the epidemic. During the closings we tried to keep in touch with our people and help what we could both spiritually and physically, making good use of the Ford in the task.

Personally I have been able to go every day and for all this we thank the Lord and take courage. Brethren, I think we should receive this experience in calmness, and at least as a reminder of our obligations to the Kingdom of Christ.

It is no time to be a "slacker" in the work of the church. It is a time that is calling loudly for Christian devotion. We have gained a few of the goals of the Four Year Program, but most of them we have had to mark "Progress." If the Lord's will we will gain others by July 31st. All departments of our work are moving up toward normal in a way that is encouraging. S. M. Coffey, our Sunday school superintendent, has all the work of the church on his heart and is doing good work. Since our last report we have graduated four from the first Standard Teacher Training course. They are as follows: Mrs. F. L. Brumbaugh, Mrs. M. L. Aldridge, Miss Nora Cumble, Gerald Wood. The last named is only 14 years old (he is more apt than his father). We also have one who is a graduate of the Advanced course, Mrs. Wood. Best of all we have arranged to maintain a Teacher Training class as a permanent part of our Bible school. Mrs. F. L. Brumbaugh is the president of the S. S. C. E. She and her faithful helpers are launching out to greater things. Their last meeting was the best held for more than a year. H. H. Rowsey is the efficient president of our Y. P. S. C. E. and is doing good work. He is a graduate of the Christian Endeavor Expert course and, at the State convention held here last summer, was elected State Superintendent of the Life Work Department. We also now have a class ready to take the examination in the C. E. E. course. Brethren, I believe the only way to real, permanent, success in our church work is by trained leadership. This applies to the entire brotherhood. With just pride we look to Ashland for the splendid training which she gives. Every local congregation also has responsibility and should take an inventory of their resources and see what can be accomplished in this line. Training to some seems too slow, but when we consider that Moses was 80 years in training for 40 years' work, we conclude that it is worth while to take time. Training is not a hindrance to the work of the Holy Spirit, as some would have us believe, but it is the divinely given means of opening up new and larger channels for his operation. We are glad that our denomination is proving its faith in the supreme importance of trained leadership by a hearty response to Brother Beachler's appeals. This is the most hopeful omen for the future of the church. The Four Year Program is revealing ourselves to ourselves and resounding the twentieth century echo of the crucified and risen Savior, and a call to every member to practical Christian service. What are we going to do about it? "Now then do it." Remember Roanoke when you pray.

L. G. WOOD.

COLUMBUS, OHIO

Our three weeks' revival service closed on January 19th with 26 confessions. Five of these were reclaimed, four came by letter and eight have already been baptized. This campaign was conducted by Rev. A. E. Thomas and was very successful. Our own people and the visitors were very well pleased with the evangelist and his messages. As for myself, I must say that considering the war and "flu" scare the results were better than expected. The attendance during our meetings was good and steadily increasing. And the attendance might have been still better had not my wife's illness prevented the daily house to house canvass. Her illness also handicapped our music and singing to a large extent, for Mrs. Christiansen has been our mainstay in these lines. She is still bedfast and that makes my work more difficult. Furthermore during the first days of our revival, Brother Horne fell and dislocated his ankle. This added another trifle to our work of caring for the condition of the church.

One night the people were nearly smoked out or frozen out, but the next night I turned the tables and made them all, the evangelist included, sweat out the chills they had received the night before. From this roasting they took courage to try again. After one week of firing the members graduated me and our dear Brother Lahman filled the place the last week.

You may be wondering about the other eight confessions by this time and I will tell you that three of these are young and their parents want them to wait till they are older. The last five do not understand why a little water is not as good as an ocean. This obstacle the pastor hopes to clear up before long.

With confidence we can say that with the help of the members here and the brethren who are helping to finance this work the way is clearing up for Brethrenism in this place. The influence of the church is spreading out in this end of the city through the park, street and shop meetings. We believe that a different report is expected next year, and we believe that by the mercies of God this will be possible.

Brother Thomas helped us to open up two shop meetings a week. The men enjoyed hearing him speak. We are keeping up the meetings and they are still growing in interest and attendance.

Last Sunday six set themselves apart for larger service for the Lord. It does our heart good to see men and women who want to be out and out for the Lord.

We of Columbus covet your prayers for a more intensive and extensive work here. Let us co-operate more with God and with one another.

S. E. CHRISTIANSEN,
536 Third Avenue.

GOSHEN, INDIANA

Since the "flu" is letting loose its grip, at least to some extent, attendance at the church services is on the gain as is also the Sunday school attendance and interest. During December and part of January the attendance was somewhat broken. Perhaps no one was responsible, but when we face such conditions in times of sickness and distress we should lean more heavily upon the Arm that is able to sustain us and remember that whether we live or die, we are the Lord's, if so be that we have accepted him and are obeying his commands.

Brother James Coulter had been ill for a long time and it became necessary for the church to show her faith by her works, so our pastor announced that there would be a donation on last Wednesday evening at prayer meeting for Brother and Sister Coulter. You should have seen the amount of useful articles that were presented: flour, meal, meats, vegetables and canned fruits, and a handsome collection of about $20.00 in cash. We visited the Coulter home the next day. Brother Coulter was very sick, yet they were so very grateful for what had been done. This family just at this time of sorrow needs our sympathy as their little grandson of seven summers passed beyond. The funeral was conducted by our pastor on Monday of this week. When the sick grandfather was told of the death of his little grandson he realized that he soon would follow and remarked that he would not have to lie out in that cold cemetery alone. He too passed away, his funeral will take place at the Brethren church tomorrow. It certainly is sad. Sister Coulter should be remembered in our prayers.

In reading the Evangelist letters we are reminded of so many sad homes all over our brotherhood.

On last Wednesday night after prayer meeting five were baptized who had previously made the good confession and on last Sunday at the evening service they were received into the church. Two more accepted Christ. These have all been young married people save two, a boy and girl. They have bright prospects of a useful life if they keep in his footsteps. They are members of our Sunday school class. We hope we may be able to do them good and they us as well. Some have been wondering why we do not write more for the Evangelist since we were elected corresponding secretary. We did not think this would excuse the pastor or any one else from writing an occasional letter and would be only too glad to have them do so. The following is a clipping from the Goshen (daily) News-Times:

"Last evening fifty-seven kiddies and youths of the Junior and Intermediate Christian Endeavor societies gathered at the First Brethren church, Clinton and Second streets, and with their matron, Mrs. Hess, their director, Mr. Gill, the pastor and Mr. Culp, marched to Henry's restaurant where they were served a treat by the pastor."

We can very well understand why it is necessary to have an undertaker assist in a funeral procession, but we cannot quite understand why it was necessary to have an undertaker help march that jolly bunch to the restaurant.

Unless it is because Culp has proven himself a very liberal man.

M. E. HORNER.

Winchester, Ky., Feb. 10, 1919.

Editor of the Brethren Evangelist,
Ashland, Ohio.

Dear Brother:

I promised on leaving Conference that I would do my bit in sending in some articles for publication. I have traveled quite a lot since Conference and I find that the religion of this country is at a very low ebb. I have heard eight sermons since Conference, heard Brother Drushal preach four times at Riverside Institute, Brother Lyra preach three sermons at Mount Tabor church on Miller's Creek in Estie County, and Brother Wm. Strong, from Winchester, preach one sermon at Elbethel church in Clark county, Kentucky.

I have heard it said and repeated time and again that the war would bring the people closer to God, but instead it has brought the people closer to the dollar.

Before the war ended and while our boys were being sent over to fight for our freedom, we could see the mothers in churches and places of worship with sad faces, and could hear them in prayer asking God to spare and bring back their sons. Now since God has answered prayer and brought the most of our boys back and given us a world victory for democracy, we can see the mothers of some of these boys as well as sisters going to places of entertainment, such as the dance, the theater, the movies and other places where Jesus would not go. They have forgotten their promises.

I am wondering where we will see them going when the "flu" epidemic subsides.

I want to thank God for keeping me sweet through these fearful times.

I am yours in Christ,

WM. TIPTON.

FREMONT, OHIO

Some improvements are noticeable in our work at this place since the influenza epidemic has subsided. Our attendance at public services is increasing gradually and the interest seems better. We have suffered much during the past year from both war and pestilence. Our work was badly disorganized and we were compelled to discontinue some activities. However, the most of the faithful are still at their posts and manifest a determination to go forward with the work.

Our Sunday school has accepted the challenge of the Waterloo Sunday school. We seemed unable to sufficiently overcome the influences of the epidemic to get properly started in the beginning of the race, but we are running just the same and hope to finish with credit.

We are now planning for our revival meetings, which we hope to begin February 16. The meetings will be conducted by the pastor. We are praying for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit and a reviving of the strength and life of the church. We solicit the prayers of the brotherhood.

H. M. OBERHOLTZER.

MASONTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

In the last communication from this place, I reported that we were on the eve of beginning a revival campaign under the leadership of Brother H. L. Goughnour. He came as per schedule, the services were begun on January 12 and continued for a period of three weeks, during which the congregations were favored with sermons of an exceptionally high order. It was my first privilege to work with Brother Goughnour, though I have known and loved him for a good many years. This was the fifth such campaign which he has led in this congregation and all have been highly successful. He was thus not a stranger to the older members of the church, who with their pastor were delighted for the opportunity of having him here again. We faced the usual handicaps, which come to a meeting held at this time of year, and the unusual one of a new outbreak of the "flu" as we entered the second week of the campaign. Masontown has been among the favored places during the earlier outbreak, but this time, it spread rapidly, until within a week, there were over a hundred cases in the town and our own families were hit exceptionally hard. We hesitated about going on into the third week, but finally decided to do so, though we had a much diminished audience. In spite of all the difficulties, the meeting was a success, for there were ten confessions and two re-consecrations, and two more since the meeting closed. Brother Goughnour acquitted himself splendidly and left with the blessings of an appreciative people following him. The congregation was much helped, sinners were led to confess their Savior, God and his Word was honored and glorified.

MARTIN SHIVELY.

COLLEGE NOTES

The students of the Theological department are contemplating launching a missionary movement on a large scale, some time in the near future.

The first number of the Purple and Gold came out last week, in a new form and dress. There will be six issues published this school year.

Dr. Jacobs has invented a clock and placed it in working order, which does the bell ringing for the class periods. It is sure some clock.

The new semester has started off well, the routine of work is back to normal and the atmosphere seems more like the real Ashland College of the past.

Dr. Miller made an over-Sunday trip to Gettysburg, Ohio, in Brother Boardman's place recently.

The two Literary societies combined and gave a splendid play recently. Some splendid talent was exhibited.

The Freshmen-Junior and Sophomore-Senior girls played a game of basket ball in the "gym" recently. We are not going to tell which side was ahead.

W. R. Deeter is in Oakville, Indiana, engaged in a meeting. There is a simultaneous revival campaign on in the whole county at every church.

Mr. Beachler's smiling countenance was seen around the College several days recently. He spoke one morning at chapel and at our session of the Y. M. C. A.

He is now out in Kentucky morado rounding up college interests among the Brethren.

Brother Boardman was in Dayton, Ohio, Sunday, the 9th, on Christian Endeavor work.

W. R. DEETER.

EVANGELIST HONOR ROLL

The following churches having met the requirements laid down by the Brethren Publishing Company regarding the placing of the Evangelist in the homes of the congregations are entitled to a place on the Evangelist Honor Roll:

Church	Pastor
Akron, Ind., (New Highland), D. A. C. Teeter
Allentown, Pa., 2nd Yr., ... A. L. DeLozier
Ankenytown, Ohio, 2nd Yr., ... A. L. Lynn
Ashland, Ohio, 2nd Yr., ... J. A. Garber
Beaver City, Neb., ... Vacant
Berlin, Penna., ... I. B. Trout
Berne, Indiana, 2nd Yr., ... W. F. Johnson
Bryan, Ohio, ... G. L. Maus
Burlington, Indiana, ... W. T. Lytle
Carleton, Neb., 2nd Yr., ... J. D. Kemper
Clay City, Indiana, ... Geo. W. Kinzie
College Corner, Ind., 2nd Yr., Homer Anderson
Conemaugh, Pa., 2nd Yr., ... L. G. Smith
Dallas Center, Iowa, ... R. F. Portor
Denver, Indiana, ... L. A. Myers
Dutchtown, Indiana, ... Homer Anderson
Elkhart, Indiana, ... H. H. Wolford
Fairhaven, Ohio, 2nd Yr., ... B. F. Owen
Falls City, Nebraska, ... H. F. Stuckman
Fillmore, Calif., ... Sylvester Lowman
Flora, Indiana, ... W. T. Lytle
Ft. Scott, Kansas, ... Mrs. L. C. Webb
Fostoria, Ohio, ... M. S. White
Fremont, Ohio, ... H. M. Oberholtzer
Gettysburg, Ohio, 2nd Yr., ... Edwin Boardman
Hamlin, Kansas, 2nd Yr., ... Geo. E. Cone
Huntington, Indiana, ... J. W. Brower
Johnstown, Pa., 1st Ch., ... J. F. Watson
Johnstown, Pa., 3rd Ch., ... Geo. H. Jones
Lanark, Ill., 2nd Yr., ... B. T. Burnworth
La Verne, Calif., 2nd Yr., ... T. H. Bond
Leon, Iowa, ... Geo. T. Bond
Linwood, Maryland, 2nd Yr., ... E. M. Riddle
Long Beach, Cal., 2nd Yr., ... L. S. Bauman
Loree, Indiana, ... W. T. Lytle
Los Angeles, Cal., 1st, 2 Yr., N. W. Jennings
Louisville, Ohio, 2nd Yr., ... Geo. S. Baer
Meyersdale, Pa., 2nd Yr., ... E. D. Burnworth
Mexico, Indiana, 2nd Yr., ... L. W. Ditch
Milledgeville, Ill., 2nd Yr., ... M. J. Snyder
Morrill, Kansas, 2nd Yr., ... A. E. Whitted
Muncie, Indiana, 2nd Yr., ... J. L. Kimmel
Nappanee, Ind., 2nd Yr., ... C. E. Kolb
New Enterprise, Pa., ... Edward Byers
New Lebanon, Ohio, ... L. B. Wilkins
New Paris, Indiana, ... Ora I. Osley
North English, Iowa, ... W. H. Miller
North Liberty, Indiana, ... C. C. Grisso
Oakville, Indiana, ... A. R. Staley
Pittsburgh, Pa., ... H. M. Harley
Pertis, Kansas, ... Roy Brumbaugh
Roann, Indiana, ... W. E. Ronk
Salisbury, Penna., ... E. D. Burnworth
Sidney, Indiana, 2nd Yr., ... L. A. Myers
Summit Mills, Penna., ... E. D. Burnworth
Sunnyside, Wash., ... Chas. H. Ashman
Telford, Tennessee, ... (Vacant)
Tiosa, Indiana, ... Ora I. Osley
Washington C. H., O., 2nd Yr., B. S. Steffer
Waterloo, Iowa, 2nd Yr., ... H. L. Goughnour
Whittier, Calif., ... A. V. Kimmel
Yellow Creek, Pa., ... Edward Byers

SPECIAL NOTICE

By the merciful kindness of a dear heavenly Father another year has passed and another opportunity to serve by giving is approaching. Easter Sunday, April 20th, is the time for the annual offering for foreign missions. This call is issued thus early that all pastors, churches, auxiliary societies and members may prepare to make the offering of the Lord worthy of his gracious acceptance. Remember the time: Easter Sunday, April 20th. This day belongs to the Brethren Foreign Missionary Society and all else should give way to it. Work and pray for the greatest offering in our history.

For the Foreign Missionary Society, by,
J. ALLEN MILLER, President.
ALVA J. McCLAIN, Secretary.
L. S. BAUMAN, Treasurer.

IN THE SHADOW

SHANE—Myrtle Kuns, the only daughter of Brother and Sister Amos Kuns, of the First Brethren church at Flora, died of influenza-pneumonia, at her home just west of Bringham, at the early age of 22 years and one month, on January 20th. Just three years ago on the very day of her death, January 20th, 1916, the writer united in marriage Myrtle Kuns, and Ellis B. Shane, to which union was born a little son, Ernest, now two years old. Besides the husband, son and parents, Myrtle leaves to mourn her departure two brothers and a host of friends which are heartbroken. Sister Myrtle was a Christian from her youth as she united with the Brethren church at Cerro Gordo, Illinois, and when her parents some years ago moved to their present home she placed her letter with the First Brethren church at Flora, where she remained a true and devoted member, being of a very sweet and pleasant disposition, having a smile on her face and joy in her heart. When being informed she could not possibly live, she turned with that simple childlike faith and said to her father, (who informed her), saying, "Papa, stay with me to the end." The funeral was held at the home by the writer, assisted by Brother S. C. Henderson. May God bind in love these broken hearts to the full assurance that where Myrtle is, in that place prepared, they too can be.

W. T. LYTTLE.

ULRICH—Mrs. Pearl Bilheimer, wife of Charles E. Ulrich, departed this life at Ashland, Ohio, January, 22, 1919, in her forty-fifth year. She was a member of the local church, having given her all to the Savior when a girl. Her departure is mourned by the husband, a son, the father and other relatives. Funeral from the home by the undersigned, assisted by Rev. Bickel of the Evangelical church.

J. A. GARBER.

LEATHERMAN—Joseph B., departed January 24th at Roanoke, Virginia. He had been sick but a few days when he was called. Death was due to pneumonia. The circumstances were very sad for he was absent from his home when stricken and death came very suddenly. Brother Leatherman was a member of the Brethren Church of Philadelphia and a son-in-law of Brother H. C. Cassel. Those who shall feel most keenly the loss are his wife and little son. Let Christians pray for them. It is hard to understand why, but—

Since his the sway of circumstance

We shall not wince nor cry aloud,
Under that rule that men call chance

Our heads with joy, are humbly bowed.

Funeral services were held in this city on January 28th conducted by his pastor.

ALVA J. McCLAIN.

FLORA—Jonathan Flora was born September 14, 1837, and died at Eaton, Ohio, December 14, 1918, aged 81 years and three months. He was married May 27, 1866, to Eva S. Dillman, to which union was born one child, Laura May Copp. He united with the Brethren church at West Alexandria, at the time of its organization, in 1882, and remained faithful until death.

C. E. BEEKLEY.

Business Manager's Corner

A LAND SLIDE

That is what they called it when the state legislatures upon their assembling in January began to fall over one another in an effort to make their state the thirty-sixth state to ratify the federal prohibition amendment to the constitution, and it seems the honor fell to Nebraska. Nebraska was a little slow about getting into the dry column for itself after having had such a good dry neighbor as Kansas for so many years, but it came over with a rush when it did come.

During the last week there has been almost a landslide among our churches in their endeavors to win a place on the Evangelist Honor Roll, and we are glad to report that five churches won such honors during this one week. These churches are Leon, Iowa, with Geo. T. Ronk as pastor. This is one of the new organizations in the brotherhood and it has had its struggles, but a splendid list of subscribers was sent in by Brother Ronk, a list that should put some of our older and more firmly established churches to shame. In fact some seem to show the symptoms of the old Baptist deacon who always testified in prayer meeting that he "was established," and the next day after such a testimony he was hauling a load of wood from his timber lot when at a critical place in the lane one of his mules balked. The deacon began whipping the mule and using language that he had not used the previous evening at the prayer meeting, when his little boy spoke up and said, "I wouldn't lick him, dad, I think he's just established." "Nuff said." Pardon this digression, but "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

Next came two churches from Pennsylvania, New Enterprise and Yellow Creek, with Edward Byers as pastor, and splendid lists were sent in from these heretofore uncultivated fields. Brother Byers' mother is a first cousin of the Business Manager and we are glad to acknowledge the relationship. Then one of the happiest surprises of all was the splendid list that came from Telford Tennessee, a church, or more correctly a mission, without a pastor, but we will guarantee that there are brethren there, or perhaps to be more accurate, sisters whose hearts are in the right place, and pastor or no pastor, they do not propose to be one whit behind the older and better cared for churches. And finally came old Pittsburgh, Pa. Brother Harley had been working on this proposition for nearly two years, and much patience and persistence were required, but he won out as other pastors can win out.

Through some error that can now be located the Huntington, Indiana, church, though mentioned as winning a place on the Honor Roll some weeks ago, failed to receive its place on the Roll. We beg their pardon and assure the Huntington brethren and sisters that we appreciate what they have done and we are glad their pastor, J. W. Brower, called our attention to the omission. If any other church has been overlooked we ask to be reminded of it.

Then Homer Anderson, the walking pastor of Indiana, came along with the College Corner church seeking admission to the Roll for a second year with a greatly increased list of subscriptions; and Nappanee sent in a goodly check and said, "Continue our list as it is until we get the revised list sent in." Thanks, Brother Wisler, we have known you for many years and have broken bread with you many times, so we know with such backing as you and others of your kind, the Evangelist is safe for years to come at good old Nappanee. And then, to put the finishing touch to the week's good results, the secretary-treasurer of the first church in the brotherhood to take action through its official board to place the cost of the Evangelist in its annual budget nearly two years ago wrote and said, please let me know when our second year is up for the Evangelist Budget. This means the THIRD YEAR is coming to this church and that it has found the plan good. All honor to Washington C. H., Ohio.

How the List Grows

This week we printed four thousand seven hundred copies of the Evangelist, and I can name four Brethren churches that could bring the number up to FIVE THOUSAND in three weeks' time, if they only would catch the vision. But do not be alarmed; we will give you credit for trying and will not name you out in meeting. But our present motto is, "By July fast, five thousand or bust." Which shall it be? If you want to see me turn "Shouting Methodist" for a spell just help me to be able to report five thousand bona-fide subscribers to the Evangelist. When I make my next annual report. A member of the Publication Board wrote me this week: "I was skeptical of your plan when it was proposed, but I am ready to acknowledge that I was wrong. It does work and if I remain here this will be the last year my church will be on the outside." O, come on in Brethren; the going is good and you will want to be on the band wagon when the goal is won and the shouts of victory are heard in the land.

That Annual

Yes, it is off the press and is now being bound. We expect to send a number to all the pastors that have ordered Annuals in other years, and we expect you to help YOUR publishing House out of an unfortunate, but unavoidable, situation by disposing of these one hundred and twelve page Conference Report and Church Year Books at twenty-five cents each and to send us twenty cents for each one sold. If any pastor has been missed drop us a card and a supply will be sent at once.

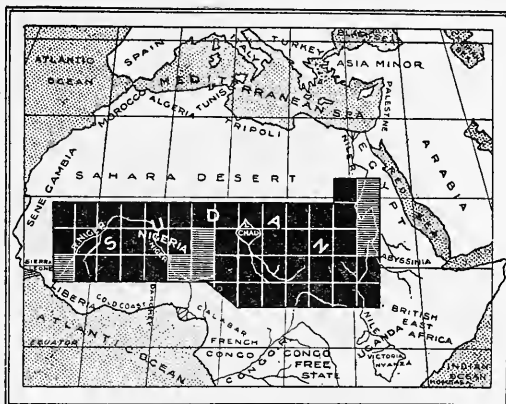

The IMPORTANT part of the booklet is the Conference Addresses and Proceedings, so if two months of the Almanac have passed by, that should count for little to true Brethren. Order now.

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 9

FEBRUARY 26
1919

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE IS YOUR MASTER AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN -

Can You Hear the Million's From the Darkened Heart of Africa
Calling for the Light?

JESUS SAID "GO YE THEREFORE."

Easter Will Have No Message for Those Who Are Deaf to the Master's Command.

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Will We Permit a Loosening Up of Morals?—Editor,	2	Let's Have a Report—H. L. Goughnour,	10
Editorial Review,	3	Enthusiastic Endeavor Experts—Prof. J. A. Garber,	11
Doctrinal Preaching and the Program—W. S. Bell, D.D.,	4	Nappanee's Big Day—C. E. Kolb,	11
Hear! Hear!—Chas. A. Bame, D.D.,	4	Home Mission Notes—G. C. Carpenter,	12
The Claims of the Weak Upon the Strong: Today—Prof. I. R. Senseman,	5	Letter from a Young American Missionary—Eleanor Yoder,	12
Are the Home Fires Burning—H. E. Eppley,	6	News from the Field,	12-15
Financing the Kingdom—E. L. Miller,	7	The Tie That Binds,	15
The Sin Against the Holy Spirit—A. T. Wirick,	8	In the Shadow,	15
		Business Manager's Corner,	16

EDITORIAL

Will We Permit a Loosening Up in Morals

Omens of ill in morals are all too frequently in evidence of late. The conscientious observer cannot but have been impressed with certain events, conditions and efforts that have been showing themselves during the last few months indicating a tendency toward loosening up in the moral situation. It may be only a brief reaction from the intense seriousness and strain of war times. It may be due to a temporary relaxation of vigilance on the part of agencies entrusted with the guarding of public morals. And it may be due to a planned offensive on the part of the forces of evil. Or perhaps, and more likely, the tendency toward unrestricted liberty of unworthy and vicious persons, movements and indulgences is due to all three of these factors.

But whatever the causes contributing to such a tendency and whether it is only a temporary display or the result of a deeply laid plan, any effort at a revival of evil deserves immediate repulse. Even a brief escapade of the forces of evil is too serious to be allowed to go unchallenged. Nor is it. For reports have already reached our ears that the watchmen of Israel are sounding the alarm. And clearly and strongly may they blow their trumpets. They be not true watchmen who fail to warn the people of approaching danger.

There is a tendency manifested in some quarters to give free rein to unwholesome and vicious pleasures. Certain playhouses and movies that have formerly maintained a fairly decent censorship have recently been offering to the eyes of the pleasure-loving public feasts of lustful and vicious scenes. There was displayed before a certain movie theater large poster pictures of an actress almost completely nude, and in large letters it was declared that the actress was the famous "She-Devil." That her character was true to her name no one will doubt, and it is needless to say that scores of men and even women, as well as, and worst of all, boys and girls paused to look and to drink in various suggestions. It was reported that the movie was well patronized. But the vicious influence of the pictures on the sidewalk was about equally great to that of the pictures thrown on the screen inside. Boys who doubtless had no nicker to spend stood gazing at the various pictures and making unclean remarks. And some frivolous girls seemed to display more gayety and carelessness of person after those pictures had been in the town a few days. But those entrusted with the welfare of their fellow-citizens seemed not to see and nothing was done to rid the town of the silent vice save a single protest of one of the more courageous ministers of the town. The attitude of some of the church people seemed to be one of tacit approval and secret enjoyment.

The dancing craze seems to have taken hold of an unusually large number just now, and among such are not a few church people. A dance hall was recently crowded and noisy with the dance until far into the morning, while members of a Sunday school orchestra furnished music for the heated, whirling, passionate crowd. It was only one of a series of dances to be staged to revive what was called by the instigators as a refining, recreational art. Not only so, but many "patriotic dances" in honor of returning soldiers have been and are being scheduled. It is becoming the popular thing among church people and non-Christians alike. And it is the same old dance with all its passions and seducing tendencies.

The card game is increasing in popularity in many sections. In one community a group of ladies have popularized card playing as it has not been for years by their frequent card parties and write-ups in the "Society Column" of the daily paper. The most expert player is always announced and the "prize" she carried away. It is needless to say that gambling is on the increase among the men in that community, and especially among the young men. It is the old, old story—sow a card table in the parlor, reap a gambler in the home. It was one who knew all the tricks of the trade who said "The parlor card-table is the kindergarten of the gambler's hell."

There is a growing depreciation in some quarters of purity of speech and modesty of dress. Especially are such tendencies noticed among young people. It is surprising to note the undue familiarity of conduct and speech indulged in on every hand. Language that is coarse and frequently ill-suggestive is more widespread than many of us have imagined among girls as well as boys. It is so popular for young men to show more or less coarseness that it is difficult to find one who is pure in word and deed. And equally popular is it for young ladies to follow the many immodest fashions so that it is hard to find one decently gowned. The more ridiculous and suggestive Dame Fashion can make the fairer sex the more slavishly do they follow her decrees. Ill-suggestive remarks on the part of young men and embarrassingly gowned young ladies go together; both prepare the way for an easy break down in morals when the temptation comes.

The most popular vicious habit among men today doubtless is the cigarette habit. It has been alarmingly on the increase of late. One of the saddest results of the world war from a moral standpoint is the damning influence which will be felt for generations from the widespread use of the poisonous cigarette. Science has not changed its verdict as to the character of this instrument of the devil. Only a great corporation such as the American Tobacco Trust could have launched such a mighty propaganda that our knowledge received from carefully calculated science and much regrettable experience could have been so completely relegated to the scrap-heap.

It was done in the name of patriotism, but it was a commercialized patriotism. Pity for the boys "over there" was claimed to be the thing that inspired the move to supply them with cigarettes, but instead the inspiration was the tobacco kings' greed for gold. God have mercy upon all good-intentioned people who with true patriotic spirit unwittingly permitted themselves to be made the tools in the hands of men who were traitors to our soldier boys' health.

These are only examples of popular evils that are experiencing, some a wide increase and some a local, but they are sufficient to warn us to be on our guard and never to slacken our vigilance. I have more faith in God and man to believe that the evil will finally get the upper hand. But even a temporary reverse is too disastrous to be sustained when it is possible to prevent it. As we love souls whose God-like possibilities are blighted by sin and as we sincerely work and pray for Christ's growing kingdom let us seek to banish every foe.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Easter Sunday is Foreign Mission Day

In spite of Brother L. D. Bowman's sad experiences during recent months he is able to stand strong in his faith in God. He reports one accession to his church.

It has been a long time since Brother Spaeth favored us with a letter and we are very glad to hear from him in this mail. He has been busy though silent.

Our dear Brother Forney writes for the Beaver City congregation informing us concerning the condition of the work there and stating that they are in need of a new pastor.

We have a letter this week from a new correspondent in Washington, reporting the good work being done there. Brother Lyon and his faithful workers are forging steadily ahead.

Brother Carpenter is an expert on making a "new find." This week he tells of discovering a church with an oil well. The oil well was a good find for that church. Would it have been for yours?

Don't forget that report that Brother Goughnour is calling for. Every Sunday school should report the progress made and do it promptly. It will cause you to work all the harder the next two months. Read his call on the Sunday school page.

Hamlin, Kansas, is heard from, by the pen of the pastor, Brother George Cone. He and his good people are loyal to all the interests of the church. We are glad for your good letter, Brother Cone; write oftener.

Let us get ready for the largest offering yet for the support and advancement of our foreign missions. Remember about the Foreign Missionary number of the Evangelist the first issue in April. Something good coming.

More Sunday schools and individuals are interested in a brighter Evangelist and we are glad to report three schools, Louisville, Ohio; Warsaw, Indiana; and Goshen, Indiana, and one individual Mrs. Laura Hedrick, whose offerings will make possible at least one beautiful picture each on first page.

Brother J. A. Garber keeps things doing at the Ashland church and keeps everybody doing around him. He and his loyal co-workers had a Fathers and Sons' banquet in connection with the observance of Fathers and Sons' week. The report reprinted from the Ashland daily will tell you about it.

Brother Harley and his co-workers are up and doing in Pittsburgh. We have received a "Door-Knob Knocker" and a circular letter, the former a neat cardboard which was hung by means of a string on every door-knob in the vicinity and the latter a letter mailed to every member of his church. These were to advertise and prepare for an evangelistic campaign which is now under way. These meetings are under the direction of Evangelists Compton and Cramer. We are hoping to hear of a season of great refreshing for the Pittsburgh church. And say, did you notice that these people have gained a place on the Evangelist Honor Roll? This is a great victory for Pittsburgh.

If any churches have for any reason failed to take an offering for the Superannuated Minister's Fund, it is time enough yet to do it. Every pastor received an urgent appeal from General Secretary O'Neill and it is not likely that any pastor will purposely pass by this call unheeded, and may there be no congregation which will refuse to co-operate to the extent of ten cents per member. Send money to Herman Roscoe, Goshen, Indiana.

Congregations as well as individuals sometimes outdo themselves. That is just what the Homerville church seems to be doing. They are getting set for the race for progress under the wise, enthusiastic leadership of Brother Fred Vanator, and are likely to have some surprises for us in a future report.

We are glad to give a wider reading to the letter by Miss Eleanor Yoder, one of our junior missionaries to South America. Some of you may have read it in the Brethren Missionary, but there are thousands of Evangelist readers who do not get the Missionary and it is for them that we publish it.

We get another touch of the Homer Anderson enthusiasm this week in our "News" department. If College Corner and Dutchtown don't get fired up with such a pastor they are hopeless. But it seems they are responding nobly to the leadership of their energetic pastor. God bless him for his tirelessness.

Printed annual church reports are coming to be quite popular. We have four at hand. All of them give the register of members and three give the amount each member pays into the church treasury for whatever purpose during the year. They are from Canton, Ohio; Gratis, Ohio; Long Beach, California; and Louisville, Ohio.

The "thermometer" was crowded out last week when Brother Beachler's final report from Indiana was run. We are running it this week in order that you may see how high she pushed the mercury. It is up to $29,000. Indiana did well—God bless her for her interest in Ashland College. We will now be looking for the next.

We have a fine bunch of Christian Endeavor Experts in this issue. You will find them on the Christian Endeavor page and Brother Garber tells us about them. Brother C. E. Kolb was their efficient teacher. You will be interested in reading his report of "Nappanee's Big Day" which was a fitting climax to the preparations for the evangelistic campaign conducted by Brother Bauman.

Brother Porte, pastor of Dallas Center, Iowa, has a church with a lay leadership. It's a good congregation that is always willing to follow the wise leadership of a pastor, but it is a better church that is able to lead out even though it has a good pastor. The "self-starter" they have causes them to start little surprise movements on their pastor occasionally.

Don't forget to read the Kentucky Mission report for January; perhaps your offering is reported. If it is not you may want to know why and if you do know why maybe Brother Carpenter doesn't. It's everybody's work and everybody should help. And moreover, it is the most successful of any mission work launched by the Brethren church. We like to put our money where it succeeds.

Brother Teeter always has some interesting news about the Evangelist campaign. And we both rejoice at the way the many churches over the brotherhood are co-operating with us in an effort to make the very best and most successful church paper possible. We are anxious to get the Evangelist in every home of your church and also to get a report frequently from every church. A report on conditions in your church will interest your people as well as all others. Thank you for your co-operation.

When a boy outgrows his clothes he must have new ones. So must a church have a new building when it gets too big for the old house. This was the case with the Lanark, Illinois church. They have built bigger and now they have a very commodious building, suited to every kind of church activity. We hope for the privilege of showing you its picture as it looks now. It was dedicated Sunday, February 23. The pastor, Brother B. T. Burnworth will enter immediately upon an evangelist campaign in his new church. At the close of that meeting he will be open to a call to hold a revival meeting for some other church. Write him immediately if you are in need of an evangelist. It is very kind of his church to be willing to loan his services to some sister congregation.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

Doctrinal Preaching and the Program

By Wm. S. Bell, D. D.

Goal 3 asks for "The zealous heralding of our distinctive plea, principles and practices."

This involves doctrinal preaching and makes it a necessity to reach this goal.

Is the Day of Doctrinal Preaching Past?

There are those who tell us that the day of doctrinal preaching is past—that the doctrines of the deity of Christ, the new birth, the atonement, the resurrection, justification by faith, the return of Christ, are worn out dogmas. They tell us that the present age demands a social gospel program and a broad humanitarian spirit in order to meet the need of today. With this we do not agree. Man's nature has not changed. The sins of today are identical with those of past ages. They differ only as they appear in new garbs from time to time. If the great doctrines of the gospel have no place in this age, they never had in any other.

The gospel deals with the sin question. This problem Christ settled for all time and he only has the solution. Sin effects all human conduct and relationship and this question settled rightly, settles all the problems of man's relationship and conduct and makes possible a right social relationship.

Why Preach Doctrine?

There never was an age that needed more the message of Christ—the presentation of his person, his claims and his teachings. The gospel has not failed this age, but man has failed in applying it. The so-called "Modernism" of today is largely responsible for the lack of a positive and constructive faith in our churches.

Paul's instruction to Timothy is good for us preachers—"Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrine, continue in them, for in doing this, thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee" (2 Tim. 4:16). Again, "I charge thee therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the Word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears" (2 Tim. 4:1-3).

The doctrines of the gospel are the foundation of the Christian faith. Bethlehem's manger, Calvary's cross, the empty tomb and the Mount of Ascension are places God met with man. They are the mountain peaks of the Christian's faith.

The only argument the Brethren church has to justify a separate and distinct existence rests on doctrine. The only way she can hope to propagate her faith and preserve her identity is through further doctrinal preaching.

What Doctrines Shall We Preach?

We claim to be a whole gospel and a whole Bible church. In order to live up to our standard we are duty bound to preach all the doctrines of the gospel. Especially should we emphasize the doctrines that are given so much prominence by the New Testament writers: The atonement, how "Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures" (1 Cor. 15:3); the resurrection, "now in Christ risen from the dead" (1 Cor. 15:20); justification, "being justified by faith, we have peace with God" (Rom. 5:1), and "there is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 8:1); the return of Christ, "Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ," (Titus 2:13); the new birth, "Ye must be born again" (John 3:7); Baptism, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost" (Matt. 28:19); the washing of the saints' feet, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them" (John 13:17); anointing the sick with oil for healing, "the prayer of faith shall save the sick" (John 5:15).

Space forbids naming other kindred doctrines. These named, so dear to the disciples, and treasured by the believers of Christ in all ages, and the inspiration of our hymns of worship, are the bulwark of Christian faith and hope, and they deserve a zealous heralding by every Brethren minister.

There are only four themes announced under "goal three" for this year, and we expect all of these will be used by the pastors; yet this alone is not sufficient to carry out the spirit of the goal, so we are sending this letter of suggestion on doctrinal preaching.

I wish every church would use the wonderful hymn entitled "One Day," written by that great man of God, J. Wilbur Chapman, who recently went to his reward. This hymn contains more gospel than any hymn I ever saw. Following are the words of the chorus:

"Living, He loved me; dying He saved me;
Buried, He carried my sins far away;
Rising, He justified freely forever:
One day He's coming—O glorious day!"

W. S. BELL.

Director of Goals, 1, 2, and 3.

HEAR! HEAR!

Here is a stirring message from the Moderator of the National Conference and Vice Chairman of the Four Year Program Committee which ought to command the attention of every preacher, teacher and official board of the fraternity. I mention you because you are the custodians of the treasures of God's Word. If you three classes are not concerned about this matter, God pity us. I hope the day of doctrinal preaching is not past. Yet, I know how easy it is to let this slip. The evangelist says, "I have no business with controversial topics. I am here to win souls and I must move along the line of least resistance, keep the people in good humor and address myself to salvation. The pastor must do the indoctrinating." The pastor thinks he will but with special days of all kinds coming and with popular Sunday nights, and what not, to keep him talking, the doctrinal will slip by without proper emphasis; it has slipped away from its important place in the pulpit because—well just because, I suppose. Now to me, there is a great lot of truth in the arguments of this paper. Nothing will so help and interest in Bible study as to have a people who know the fundamentals of the faith as well as the arguments that support them. Let there be a revival in every church and pulpit—a revival of doctrinal preaching and there will be a revival of every work of the church. Hear! Hear!

BAME.

GENERAL ARTICLES

The Claims of the Weak Upon the Strong: Today

Prof. I. R. Senseman

We are told that the Spartans exposed the physically weak upon the Taygetian hillsides. Here exposed to the elements, they either succumbed, or as some say proved their fitness for the struggles of life, and returned to their friends. Some of the American Indians probably practised similar methods of eliminating the weak. Being neither pagan nor savage, but Christian, the very thought of such conduct is to us reprehensible. In accepting the tenets of Christianity, we voluntarily and gladly accept the defense and support of the weak, not as a duty, but as a privilege and an opportunity for service. Thus, Christianized, modern medicine does its utmost to save the frailest body. Enlightened education attempts as best it can to find and fan every available ember of intelligence. The church, philanthropy and reform movements work incessantly for moral and spiritual betterment. Yet, when a calamity such as a World War breaks over us we are made aware how far short of success we have gotten in any of these fields of endeavor. The operation of the selective draft showed how sadly we had failed even to improve the physically weak.

Why had we failed? Chiefly, I suppose, putting it in very general terms first, because we are all weak, lamentably weak in comparison to the forces with which we must contend. If there is left on earth a single man who does not now thoroughly realize this fact he is probably no other than the weakling and egotist who precipitated the war. Even the Wilsons, Georges, Clemenceaux, with all their virility of manhood, character, and statesmanship, are wrestling with forces monstrously out of proportion to the strength of the individual man. The news reveals this fact every day. But being the least weak of the weak, we confidently trust in their strength, and must continue to do so until we have learned a kind of brotherhood and co-operation by which the united strength of the many can be applied to the prevention of such calamities, or to their remedy, if perchance they come. We are all now poignantly aware of human weakness, but no one can appreciate it so well as these men who are called upon to face such tremendous forces. Thus in the light of recent events, we may well forego the use of the word strong and speak of the claims of the weak upon the less weak. It seems that what we, weak and less weak, need first is not a merely confessional attitude of weakness, but an abiding consciousness of weakness, coupled with firm determination to unite our forces in making the best of things as they are. It is only by a sensible recognition of our real strength, or weakness, that we can ever hope to apply it rationally to the task before us.

As to the claims of the weak, we need listen neither long nor intently to hear them for they have become almost a universal clamor. It is not a call for alms, nor spiritual and intellectual help. It is most clearly a call for friendship, brotherhood and co-operation. It seems now that the weak had been surfeited by philanthropy, charity and reform of certain type, that type which does not enlist the active interest and co-operation of the weak for whom it was intended. Our well intentioned philanthropy too often failed, because it was permeated with the mistaken medieval conception that good could be conferred upon others, or attained for them. Too often we have been willing to do anything, but to co-operate with the weak in a way essential to the development of their powers. Thus in industries, wages have been raised, hours shortened, and working conditions improved, but the worker is still dissatisfied and will remain so until given the opportunity to attain his own happiness by mental and spiritual, as well as physical co-operation in the work of production. Likewise, in education, many a boy has graduated or left school without ever having completely volunteered his services for his own education. A stereotyped learning, which at best can only function moderately well was imposed upon him by well meaning teachers, but the real boy remained unborn. Many an earnest, hard working pastor has no doubt been thoroughly discouraged and exasperated by a congregation that would not be lifted up, or would not stay lifted up. The chances are, they had taken little part in the process, and so, naturally, did not stay put. Our failure with the weak, comes a great deal more from bad methods than bad intentions. A modern thinker and teacher puts it in another way. He says, "The inherent irony and tragedy of much that passes for a high kind of socialized activity is precisely that it seeks a common good by methods which forbid its being either common or a good." Now it seems that the weak realize this in the situation and are presenting their claims rather emphatically. They ask for more co-operation, friendship, brotherhood and less and less of philanthropy and alms. They ask for a companionship with the less weak and a chance to co-operate freely and equally in the attainment of a common end.

It does not follow that the answer to this claim will result in the disappearance of leadership, the guiding hand and the reassuring word, to be followed by an absolute equality of all, but it surely means a different kind of leadership and probably a gradual submergence of leaders as heroes and popular idols. Leadership we must and will have, but it will be less spectacular and more exacting in its demands. It was difficult enough to meet demands of the old type of service; namely, to live and think on high enough plane to be a worthy leader and exemplar, but that was easy when compared to the task of living in such a way for the good of others as to call out and make effective their own activities. It will be a leadership of service and sacrifice plus efficiency in the art of co-operation.

What is true of the claims of the weak individual is true of the small and weak nation. What Poland, Ireland and the Balkan nations want, is not necessarily a strength as great as that of America, England or France, but the right to develop what strength they have in their own way, while co-operating with the stronger in making the world a better place in which to live. They wish, not to be the servants of democracy, but democracies co-operating with democracies in a common task. They have every right in the world to press their claims, for equality and co-operation are the very essence and root of democracy, and it was these stronger nations that gave democracy to the world. Balance of power and spheres of influence must, in the world that they desire, give way to a League of Nations and self-determination. America has caught the vision of this higher type of leadership. Can she impress her views upon the less fortunate, but not less honest nations of Europe? If she can, she is then free and ready for the longer and more tedious task of developing a greater brotherhood and co-operation in her own industrial, social and political life, at home. The crucial days are yet before us. The reactionaries and Tories like the poor and weak are always with us. Unfortunately, however, they are neither poor nor weak, but entrenched and powerful in every nation. The forward-looking, sturdy manhood and womanhood that won the war must force them aside and grasp the new world that it had promised itself; that world in which brotherhood and co-operation will have an ever enlarging place.

Are the Home Fires Burning for the Home Coming Boys?

By H. E. Eppley

Our boys are coming home. Some are already home, while others are on the way. Others have not yet completed the work assigned by their superior officers and will remain a while longer. Then they too will come home. "Are the Home Fires Burning" for them? is the question. I am asked to contribute an article on.

Our "Home Fires" are of different kinds and no doubt burn with differing degrees of brightness. Our plain duty, as keepers of the "Home Fires," is to keep them burning with as much brightness as is conducive to the best welfare of the boys when they arrive. May we think of a few of these "Home Fires" as follows:

HOME—In regard to the home the question can be answered easily in the affirmative. Every parent, sister, brother, wife and child keeps the "Home Fire" burning brightly at all times. Not long ago on a trolley car I observed a returning soldier and his sister. When they alighted from the car in front of the home the door opened and almost instantly the porch was filled with people. All rushed down the steps and out into the street to meet the boy. The mother was first. Instantly both her arms were clenched about his neck holding him as in a vice while showers of mother-kisses flooded his lips and cheek. Is it necessary to say the "Home Fire" was burning there?

SWEETHEART—There are many of them,—more than we can guess. Many anxious moments have been experienced when letters were slow to arrive or failed to arrive at all. Now HE is coming back.

At the time the armistice was signed a young lady said to me,—“What do you think? I haven't heard from my friend in France for over a month.” Next day she said, “I haven't heard from him yet,” and so on every day for a week. She became worried and lines of unrest were visible in her face. Then one day she was all smiles and said, “I received a letter from my friend.” The “Home Fires of sweethearts burn brightly.

FRATERNAL ORGANIZATIONS—For the boys who are members of organizations special meetings are held; banquets are given and special honors conferred upon them. Every assistance possible is given by the organization. In their own way these “Home Fires” burn also.

Y. M. C. A.—How about the “Y”? It has already done much. Is it possible for the “Home Fires” to be burning when the boys return? They should burn brighter.

In one “Y” the “Fires” are kept burning four ways. First, a hearty personal welcome is given as soon as the boy arrives. Second, assistance is given in securing employment. Third, all returned soldiers are given a banquet once a month. Fourth, a free membership is given to every returned soldier who lives in the town. Does this signify a “Burning Home Fire?”

COMMUNITY—In many places communities are planning great demonstrations for the returning boys. No expense or effort is spared to make them a success. The community “Fire” burns.

BUSINESS—How about business? Is it paralyzed? Have the flames of the “Home Fires” been smothered out? Long before we thought of community and other demonstrations chambers of commerce; city clubs; etc., were meeting in called sessions discussing “Business After the War.” One phase considered was the employment of the returning soldier. Every effort is being made to place them as fast as they return. Many firms are returning them to their former positions while many others are giving them the preference in filling positions. I believe the business “Home Fire” is burning.

NATION—But what about the national “Home Fires”? Are they burning? While in the midst of the conflict the nation was preparing for the return of her fighting boys. Immense hospitals were built to care for the wounded and to nurse them back to health if possible. Large schools were established in which the crippled would be taught some trade or profession and thus be returned to civil life able to cope with other citizens in gaining a livelihood. It has been said “A big accident either makes or breaks a man.” That is, a man either becomes more industrious or less so. The establishment of these schools in an effort to make these returning boys who have been wounded more efficient and industrious is an indication that the “Home Fires” of the nation are burning for the “Home Coming Boys.”

CHURCH—This is the most vital of all. How often, since the opening of the war, has the question been asked, “Is Christianity a failure?” Now our boys are coming home and this brings us face to face with a real issue. How are we meeting it?

There is much that can be said on both sides. A man prominent in public affairs, alluding to a certain church in his town, said: “That church is losing the greatest opportunity of its life. It is planning nothing for the returned soldiers.” A condition like this should not exist. This and all other churches should be planning a Christian reception, for the returning boys, of such high character as to win and hold them within the ranks of Christianity.

A minister made this statement from the pulpit. “There are two thousand soldiers crying for New Testaments. An appeal has been made to the General Board of this denomination to help furnish them. Do we want to help?” Does this indicate a condition of which the church could be proud?

On the other hand F. B. Abbott in the Christian Herald writes, “Every year, in spite of the continued separation and the frequent accusation in the insinuating question ‘Is Christianity a failure?’ the world is learning to respect more and more the word ‘Christian,’ and to speculate upon the relation between Christianity and religion as the churches dispense it. What but this steady Christian growth, a heart-hunger for self-manifestation, has created and nurtured the appalling number of religious sects we see today? We must admit that not materialism but spiritual hunger has been the foundation.”

“Are the Home Fires ‘of the church’ Burning for the Home Coming Boys?” Let us stop and take a sober and earnest look. Yes! let the church fall upon its knees and implore the Most High to remove the scales from its eyes that it may see. When it sees may it be seized with an holy desire to proclaim the “good news” as never before. The words of W. A. Hopkins, in an article in the Christian Herald, should stir the church into a deeper devotional life and greater activity. He writes, “Now that the war is over, the church should seek fitly to humble herself at the throne of grace, and implore divine aid in going forth with the message of her Lord to the nations. The church should no longer confine her work to China, India, Burma, Africa; the greatest need for pure evangelical preaching is at home, in Europe and among the most highly educated nations. The Lord God Almighty has shown his church the dreadful and mournful need of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to be given to those nations, and she now has the opportunity to evangelize and bring to the Cross those Erebus countries. There must be a forward movement, and a “Go” in the church, not only to heathen lands but everywhere.”

Jesus came not merely to preach the gospel, but to be the gospel. He revealed God by word and life, so that there is a gospel to preach. His estimate of God is seen in his life as well as in his words. He could do this because he knew the Father.

Financing the Kingdom

By E. L. Miller

When the kingdoms of this world are in need of money for the carrying on of the work of government, they determine the sum needed, then they organize their corps of workers or solicitors, and in a trice they gather together three billions, four billions, or even seven billions of money. Now although this money is merely taken as a loan, it nevertheless is money given, for in a few years the same government takes out of our pockets by way of taxes and other levies the funds to repay that loaned. Of course money must be had for running the affairs of state, and we willingly do our share in helping along the good work. But it is as true that there is a need of money to run the work of the Kingdom of God as evidenced in his church, the visible division. And what shall be the means used to finance that work of all works?

Well, sad to say, church people themselves would not for a moment think of using good business methods of the Government, nor yet those of any progressing and prospering business institution. It is amazing how well the church has kept going with the slipshod ways that it has used to further its work. Were any business institution this side of Glory to use methods as does the church it would be bankrupt in a short time. Surely God must be in the church or long since its credit would have been ruined. What makes it all the worse is that on the inside of the church there are such crabs—shall I call them?—who deery any effort made to provide the funds for maintenance of that work. They say the Lord will provide and then wait to see the miracle performed. Yes, the Lord does provide them with the funds and for them not to return unto him his share is practical theft. Read Malachi 3:8-12. Within the month I heard from a person in our town, not a member of my church, thanks be, who stopped going to church because, as she said, "They expect you to pay to belong and I think religion ought to be free." She further said that it was always "money, money, money," nearly every time she met with them. But from her own words I take it she was like the fellow that came out of his home growling about his wife always asking for money. When a friend asked him what was the trouble, he said, "Every time I have left home for the ten years that we have been married my wife has asked me for money. I cannot see what she wants with all the money." The friend asked further how much money he was in the habit of giving her, and he got the reply, "I haven't given her any yet." The moral is self-evident. Indeed I am thoroughly convinced that the ones that give the most, according to their means, and the freest as well, are those that have no kick whatever about the church needing and asking for money.

Now all that I know about raising church funds is wrapped up in the above. That is, I do not believe in doing more than going about it in a business-like manner, and after presenting the needs of the kingdom to the friends thereof, I expect them to be as loyal to it as Uncle Sam ever dared to expect them to be to his interests. In other words, it is all a matter of education, head and heart education, largely the latter. I am persuaded that where the pastor takes the time to preach good sermons of the heart, and of obligation to the work at hand, there is little trouble in reaching the financial goals of the church, local or general. In my own work, if you will pardon a personal reference, I have never done more than present the needs of the Kingdom as best I could, along with a fearless preaching of the gospel of giving as well as receiving, and I feel that our church is doing her part nobly. To put it differently: get the people right with God and they will never hesitate about the work of financing his work. The work of raising the money needed to keep our credit good is more than adopting the budget system and the Duplex envelope system, excellent though those things may be. It is more than promising to lift the usual Sunday offerings and the regularly stated general offerings. It is getting right with God, to use the phrase that means so much and is understood so little. If when the patriotic fervor of the people was aroused they would rally to the call of the Government and freely give twenty billions of money, what should be the result if the religious fervor of the people were aroused to its proper degree? The total requests per member made by our general and district boards do not exceed one dollar and seventy-five cents per year in any district of the brotherhood, and how we agonize about it, while as a patriotic duty in one year we HILARIOUSLY gave the mild average of about one hundred and seventy-five DOLLARS per head. I do not decry the patriotism for we were up against it, to put it in the terms of the street, but I do wonder at the religion that will cause us to shirk the far smaller requirements for the more lasting results.

Friends, it may have been a mistake to assign me this topic, for I may have been expected to have given you some panacea for getting the money out of tight-wads without disturbing their religious ease in Zion. I do not think that the editor would expect me to give you any catch-penny methods for carrying on the work, for I know him too well for that. Yet even though I do fall down on the thing expected, I know that what I have given you is the ONLY way to finance the Kingdom and to do it as the Lord would have it done. Get the grace of God in your hearts, don't forget to let your conversion reach as far south as your pocket-book, get a business-like system, such as the budget and Duplex, to work, and then in the fear and favor of the Lord do not give grudgingly but with a hearty good will give hilariously as did those of old, and you will get the blessings that can come in no other way. You will be surprised how easily it can be done, and as I have heard testimony by many of my own people, it comes easy and so freely and in such amounts that they cannot understand where it all comes from. The latter is a sign that not any one or two are doing the giving, but that it is scattered through the whole church, each laying by as the Lord has prospered him. Why not do it God's way and be sure you are right? Of course the way some give you would think that the Lord never gave them anything, but do not take them as an example. Be as honest with your God as you wish your neighbor to be with you and all the troubles of financing the Kingdom will be answered. "Would a man rob God?" Well, don't you do it? Give and you will receive.

POLAND'S SPARTAN WOMEN

In an article on "Outragged Poland" in the Woman's Home Companion, Mme. Paderewska writes:

"Bismarek, the man of blood and iron, once said, 'As long as Polish women live Poland is not doomed.'

"Proud in spirit, courageous in teaching their children the love of country despite the cruel edicts of three masters—Germany, Russia and Austria—seeking to crush Poland into the soil, it was the women of this unfortunate land who made their country invincible, though conquered.

"It was they who encouraged their children to endure the flogging in the schools rather than give up their beautiful mother tongue; for their masters were determined to crush out even the language of these conquered people.

"Young men and women who persisted in teaching the Polish language secretly have been sent in great numbers to Siberia.

"Polish women are highly intellectual, given more to the higher arts than to domestic duties. Each woman deems herself a little queen in her own household, ready at all times to give her life for her country."

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The Sin Against the Holy Ghost. By A. T. Wirick

TEXT: Matthew 12: 31, 32

There is very much anxiety and very little knowledge on this important subject. After a hopeless essay at understanding it, many persons give it up in confusion and do not try to understand it, but it is neither mysterious nor obscure in its true and inward meaning. Some think that all ordinary sin or blasphemy was to be forgiven, even when applied to the Son of God; but that there was a peculiar reason of sacredness why, in regard to the Holy Spirit, blasphemy was unpardonable or that there was some prominent glory in the Holy Spirit which made blasphemy against it more culpable. Either of these ways of looking at it carries us further from the true ground of solution.

If you read the 12th chapter of Matthew, you will find it a history of our Master's conflict with his enemies, waged not in words but deeds. First he heals a withered hand. They saw no good in it but a violation of the Sabbath. Then he cast out a devil. They could not deny the good of this but said the prince of devils helped him. Then Jesus uttered the text.

The facts in these cases cannot be evaded. Here was God's work manifested, both by power and beneficence. The Scribes and Pharisees looked on without the slightest sympathy, either with its mercy or its divinity. They coolly said, "It is Beelzebub that helps him." To me it means that if the moral faculties by which man discerns good and evil are so perverted that when brought under the full power of the Holy Spirit, who gives forth that light and stimulus by which the moral sense acts, he is still unyielding to that power, condemns the Holy Spirit and deliberately relieves God's truth and goodness, it is evidence that he is fatally diseased. He has gone so far he can not be recovered. This truth runs through the whole of the scriptures, both Old and New Testaments. Isaiah says, "Woe to them that call evil good and good evil." Jesus said, "Men love darkness rather than light" and "If the light that is in you be darkness how great is that darkness." Paul said, "some did not want to retain an enlightening God in their thoughts so he gave them up to reprobate minds." These are but a few instances which show how the moral sense can be perverted until a man is at variance with the great facts of good and evil and with his own nature and blasphemes the Holy Spirit, who gives to the soul its light. So Jesus said, "A man may blaspheme the Son," that is, Jesus walking in humiliation as a man; may oppose him hastily and blindly and be forgiven. But no man can blaspheme the Holy Spirit that shines upon his moral conscience and be forgiven. And no man will, until he has gone so far that he is given over to a reprobate mind.

We may get a clearer view of this truth if we look at the Three Dispensations

First, there was the patriarchal dispensation, when God ruled and spoke to man directly. Then if man sinned God forgave him. In the garden Adam and Eve heard God say, "The day you eat of the forbidden fruit you shall surely die." The devil said, "you will not die, you will be wise like God." They parlied with him until they thought God's truth a lie and the devil's lie a truth. Like many do today, they ate and sin came. But God did not blot them out at once. He came walking in the garden at evening time, not running as soon as the act was done to smite the guilty pair. God was slow to punish but quick to forgive. An animal was slain to cover their sin and the atonement by blood began. But in spite of God's goodness and mercy, man became so sinful that every imagination was evil; so Noah, a righteous man, was called to build an ark and warn the people of the coming judgment. This he did but they mocked him. No doubt when he preached they said, "Let the old crazy fellow build his boat. We will take it for a dance hall." For a hundred and twenty years he endured their jeers. Then God spoke again saying, "Go into the ark," and one day the wicked saw the beasts of the field coming in two by two and the fowls of the air two by two, and they said, "Merciful God what does this thing mean? We never saw this before." So the wise men were called to explain it. The astronomers said, "There is no sign in the heaven of a storm." The geologist pounded the rocks and said, "Noah is mistaken. We can find no sign in the rocks." The biologists were busy pulling bugs and beetles to pieces. They said, "No signs in the bugs." They saw the clouds gather and all joined in the chorus, "We do not know what it means but we know Noah is mistaken." Then one day Noah stepped in the ark and God shut the door, and that moment mercy ceased and judgment began. Cloud met cloud and the rain descended until the streams swelled and the lowlands were covered. Still they said "Noah is mistaken," but the storm swept on till some ran to the ark door praying, pounding and calling, "Noah! Noah! we believe you now. For God's sake open the door." But Noah replied "For 120 years I warned you of this. Now God has shut the door, I can not open it." Higher and higher the water rose until I saw one lone man with a child in his arms, and his frightened wife by his side, reaching the last mountain top. A wave washes her down. He pats his babe's pale cheek and sighs "I would to God I were pure again," and falls beneath the angry waves and dies.

God starts a new world with Noah, but he sins. Altars are built, sacrifices are offered, and God forgives again and again. Prophets are sent to warn the people and to woo them back to God, but they kill the prophets and tear down the altars of God. What shall God do? He has driven them from the Garden, destroyed them with a flood, selected one nation to bless the rest, disciplined them in Egyptian bondage, overlooked their faults and sins but still they do not heed. At last he sends his Son. Maybe they will hear him. So we have Jesus coming under the Jewish dispensation. He too forgave sin; he said he came for that very purpose and died praying forgiveness for his murderers. They had hounded his tracks, lied about him, spit in his face, nailed him to a cross to die. They stabbed his pulseless heart, with a spear.

Has God done enough? Not yet. Listen to Jesus: "If I go away I will pray the Father and he will send the Comforter. He will lead you into all truth and convict the world of sin." So on the day of Pentecost, A. D. 33, he came in fullness and power to lead and enlighten men. This is the origin of the last and most perfect dispensation of religion God has given, or ever will give to the world. Up to the day of Pentecost, every dispensation was prophetic. This one is historical and final. Even the life and death and resurrection of Christ were but preparatory means for the great dispensation of the Spirit. Every preparation was completed. All the constituent elements of Christianity were now provided. The life of Christ had demonstrated the practicability and holiness of God's laws. His death has constituted an atonement for transgressors. His resurrection had attested it. His visible ascension had consummated his incarnate life on earth. The work of Christ was finished. Christianity was a completed system, stereotyped for all men to the end of the world. Under the first dispensation God reveals his power, wisdom, holiness and law. Under Jesus, he reveals himself as a teacher, a mediator, a sacrifice filled with love. Lastly comes the Spirit's reign. He is the source of life, the Enlightener, the Sanctifier, the Comforter.

Now if men sinned against the Father under the first dispensation, they could be forgiven. For Jesus was yet to come. If they sinned against Jesus, they could be forgiven even his murderers, for the Holy Spirit was yet to come. But if they sinned against the Holy Spirit, that is, his light within, there is no more to be done. The full power of God's redeeming light and love has been spent on them in vain. The next and last dispensation will be Christ's second advent to judge the incurably wicked.

In one of the lodges they have a degree in which the candidate climbs up a ladder and looking over a curtain sees a coffin, spade and an open grave, over which are printed these words, "The end. No more to follow." This is to teach that the lodge will go with you to the grave. But it is for this life only. You may climb the hill of Calvary and see the Son of God with outstretched arms taking the tears of human sorrow in one hand and the keys of eternal dominion in the other as he bows his head and says, "It is finished" in a voice that shakes the earth and darkens the heavens. It is finished, there is no more to follow. God did his best when he gave his only Son. He has no more to give. Jesus did his best when he gave his life. What more can he do? The Holy Spirit is doing his best for he is poured out, which means he is exhausted. The Trinity has given its highest exhibition of Divine love, while a sinful world stands back and asks for more. Oh sir! If you resist the prayers of the church, the pleading of the preacher, the love of God, the blood of Jesus and wooing light of the Holy Spirit you are a doomed man and can only hope to sink into the bosom of that perpetual storm that rains eternal misery in hell.

Let us now look at a few definite points. First, this is not a sin one can commit by accident, without knowing it. I say this is an alleviation to many persons who are in great distress. They are afraid they have committed the unpardonable sin, perhaps in some outburst of anger, when they blasphemed everything or committed some terrible sin, such as adultery or theft. No! this sin is not a single act but a comprehensive state of mind. There is a dissipation of soul which comes on, like dissipation of body. Not in a single day or week, but by repeated perversion of man's reason, perversion of his moral sympathies, perversion of his choices, perversion of his judgment in respect to things right and wrong. It may be consummated in some terrible act, but this is just the closing of a long series of wickednesses.

No man has committed the unpardonable sin who fears he has, for the very nature of that sin is insensibility. A man may lead a life of sin, but as long as he resists, and has any kick back in him, as long as there is power in the truth to touch his nerve of sensibility, so long he is not of reprobate mind.

We all need to ask God for pardon every day, but so long as our conscience is alive, we may be sure we have not sinned away our day of grace.

Is this perversion frequent? Are men peculiarly liable to it? Men are not likely to fall into it suddenly, but there are some who are especially in danger of it; namely, those who prefer lies to truth, vice to virtue, oppression to justice. They lose all accuracy of judgment. By their interest, by the influence of their companions and by the long drill of their own minds they are changed about. No man can look upon them without feeling, "If they are right, I am wrong. If I am wrong they are right. They call good evil and evil good." This perversion may be the result of physical dissipation, which not only corrupts the body but demoralizes the soul. Some men's dissipation only destroys their nervous or physical system, yet they know what is right and what is wrong and admit it, while others are made regular devils, so that kindness becomes cruelty, and purity becomes vulgarity. The higher elements of the soul are overwhelmed by lava-like passions, their affections are destroyed; you may sound along every nerve and chord, there is no response. When he is brought into the presence of the truth and under the direct inshining of the Holy Spirit there is nothing in him that responds, but something that acts against it. Such persons have committed the unpardonable sin.

There are other men we call moral men, who are in danger of this sin too. They are the men who sin and do not seem to know it. Some men sin and know it. They keep a sense of God's law intact. They have a conscience but ride over it. They sin with their eyes open but others seem to have their eyes put out. They reason about everything, and say what is wrong about this or that? They untwist and take to pieces, until lying is not wrong. It is inexpedient of course but just administer it with prudence. Friendship, he says, is good but it is better not to be holding to any one. Cultivate just as much friendship as is profitable. Step by step he questions matters of fidelity, of taste, of eating and drinking, all forms of illicit pleasure, until he says there is nothing to keep me from any of these things. There is no God, no future. I do not believe in good and bad. I believe the best needle is the one that takes the longest thread through the smallest hole. So it is with man. What can you do with him? He is not the most wicked who is fullest of blood, and most impetuous, who plunges head long from one sin to another, and because reflection is painful will not reflect. Men say "What a shameless fellow, how wicked he is." But he is not more wicked perhaps than those who howl and hoot after him. The elegant men who say "He could have had all he wanted if he had been more prudent. I enjoy all pleasures but I do not blow a trumpet. I take it clandestinely, I practice art and hypocrisy. I keep everything fair above board." Yes, exquisite enamel outside, but full of envious, jealousies, avarice, lust and rottenness, all carried snugly through life. There is nothing left in him to save. He is a reprobate.

But even when men are not carried into that state by their lower nature, there is another class of faculties that may do it. For example, when men subject the truths of religion to ridicule, to cynical observation, to sneering skepticism, until they have destroyed in themselves the very power of appreciating goodness. They have sinned against the Holy Ghost. I have the most profound sympathy for a man that is truly a doubter. The voice that cries out, "Oh my God, where are thou?" is the saddest voice in the world, and the man who has lost his faith, not wanting to be unbelieving, but longing for higher ground, is to be pitied. Jesus came to seek and save such and he will surely rescue them if they are in earnest and follow the heart rather than the head. If they seek, not philosophy, but life in the soul. But where skepticism is sneering and malignant, and is used to discredit everybody's goodness, and excuse their own lack of goodness; when it undermines the faith of others and destroys the young, then it is most cruel. When a man has gone through life taking away men's beliefs, destroying the ground they stand on, undermining moral restraint which is the support of the soul, it may be feared he has sinned away his day of grace, for such a case hardens and triple hardens a man and perverts his own moral sense.

Who then is the Holy Spirit? He is God in the heart of man. Who is the Son of God? He is God manifesting himself in Jesus of Nazareth. Who is the Heavenly Father? He is God manifesting himself in creation. These are the three manifestations of the Almighty. The name of God is a long one. Jesus taught men how to pronounce it. "Baptize the nations," he said, not into the names, but, "into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost." There are distinctive glories in the divine nature, a manifoldness in the infinite life that must be recognized and declared in the trine name—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. No wonder Paul said, "Great is the mystery of Godliness," God hides himself in nature. You can not lay your finger on a single form of life or matter and say, "This is God," yet God is everywhere. He is in us but we can not find him there. We can receive him. "I receive ye the Holy Ghost," says the Master. He is the guiding light of your soul.

But what about you whom God loved, for whom Jesus died, for whom mothers wept and the Holy Spirit has called, but all in vain? It has no more effect on you than the morning sun, shining on the corpse in the east window. Your moral sense is so dead, it is never again touched by the mercies of God. You are in a cold world with death staring you in the face. Soon you must go into the dark unknown with no one there to love you, no light to guide, no God, no Christ, no Holy Spirit with whom you have made friends. How dark and hopeless! You have put out your own eyes which even God can not restore. Sin like an acid hath eaten up your spirit. Like a poison it runs in the blood of your soul. There is nothing for you but to go down never to rise again. Hell opens to be thine eternal abode. Your case is hopeless; your sin is incurable. I pray that you may not reach that stage.

The Past And Future

Thou hast been good to me; the burdened past
Thou hast borne with me, and the future days
Are in Thy hands; I tremble not, but cast
My care upon Thee, and in prayer and praise
Prepare to make the coming year the best,
Because of nobler work and sweeter rest.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Let's Have a Report. BY H. L. GOUGHNOUR

It's just great the way the Sunday schools over the brotherhood have taken up the challenge of the Waterloo school for a Four-month contest. Everyone has been so busy that no one has been writing much about it, but the Waterloo school is "sawing wood," and the writer knows of several other schools that are doing the same. Some schools have not said a word other than that they have entered the contest; but the writer has had just enough of experience in contests to feel very much afraid of opponents who are silent while the contest is on. They usually speak out amazingly when results are declared.

Misunderstandings Cleared Up

Several persons have written for information about the rules. That is fine, for it shows a strong disposition to play the game absolutely on the square. The explanations are as follows:

Attendance: It required an attendance of 60 percent of the total enrollment of the school, exclusive of the Cradle Roll and Home Department, to make the attendance point the first Sunday. A two percent increase of the required attendance for the first Sunday was necessary to make the attendance point the second Sunday. Suppose a school had 90 percent the first Sunday and only 62 percent the second Sunday? That school would qualify on attendance the second Sunday; for, to gain the point it is necessary only to have a two percent gain over the number required on the preceding Sunday. Suppose a school had 50 percent present the first Sunday, would an attendance of 52 percent permit that school to score on attendance the second Sunday? No; a two percent increase over 60 percent would be required for the second Sunday.

The attendance requirements are: 60 percent of enrollment, exclusive of Cradle Roll and Home Department, on the first Sunday, and a two percent gain, based on this number each Sunday throughout the contest.

Some schools have such good attendance that they complained that a two percent weekly increase based upon 60 percent did not make the contest a stimulus to them. A few weeks ago the writer published a statement that for their own benefit they might require a two percent increase over their actual attendance (it being much higher than 60 percent); but so far as the contest is concerned a two percent increase each Sunday based on 60 percent of the first Sunday would permit them to qualify on attendance.

Some have thought we should have made the required attendance on the first Sunday the average attendance during the last quarter of 1919. But, some schools were so completely disorganized by the influenza during the last quarter of 1918, that it seemed best to make 60 percent the required attendance the first Sunday.

One school had a tremendously large attendance about the third Sunday in January, and wrote that it could never make a two percent gain on that attendance. It is not necessary. Again let it be stated, a two percent gain on the required attendance is all that is necessary to score.

To make the attendance rule absolutely clear: Find the number that is 60 percent of the total enrollment of your school, exclusive of Cradle Roll and Home Department. That number present on the first Sunday was required to score on attendance the first Sunday.

Two percent more than that number was required to score on the second Sunday.

Two percent more than the required attendance on the second Sunday was necessary to score the third Sunday, etc., etc.

Offerings. The required offering on the first Sunday was an amount equal to the average offering during the last quarter of 1918.

A two percent gain on this required amount was necessary to score the second Sunday.

Each succeeding Sunday the offering must be two percent larger than the required offering of the preceding Sunday.

Thus, an extra large offering on any one Sunday does not place a school at a disadvantage. The gain each Sunday is figured upon the basis, not of the actual offering of the preceding Sunday, but upon the basis of the amount required to score.

The writer is enough of a crook to see that a school might hold back some of its offering on a Sunday when its offering was exceptionally large and create a reserve fund to be drawn upon when the offering falls below the required amount. Dare a school do this? Since it cannot be done in attendance, let us say it dare not be done with the offerings. This will be more square and fair. At Waterloo, our good superintendent turns the whole offering into the treasury each Sunday, and says that if our school ever falls down on the offering she will pass the hat again and again until she gets the required amount. Her name is Pauline Lichty, and that is a guarantee that she will do this very thing if it ever becomes necessary. This is the best way. Let's all accept her interpretation.

One Big Thing to Remember

When any point is lost on any one Sunday it is lost forever. An excess in attendance or offering or anything else on any one Sunday cannot be applied to another Sunday's record. The contest is devised to make the schools stable and strong, and insure a regular and healthy growth. We don't want a contest that would permit a school to hold a tremendous rally on the last Sunday and carry off the prize. Points once lost cannot be made up. But, a school can continue winning points by basing its gains upon the required attendance or offering, even though it does fail on a few Sundays.

The Three Remaining Points

A school can make only 5 points per Sunday. The other 3, apart from attendance and offering, require no explanation. They are:

1. Seventy-five percent of attendants on time on any one Sunday yields one point.
2. When seventy-five percent of the adults present on any one Sunday have studied the lesson before hand, the school gains one point.
3. When every teacher and officer is present at a session of the school, or has provided a substitute beforehand, the school wins one point.

Not Yet Too Late to Come In

If there are schools that want to get into this contest, and have not yet done so, they may enter now. However, they must enter, not at the beginning of the series of requirements, but at the point where the competing schools are. The requirements during the last two months are going to be much harder than during the first two months, and it would not be fair for new schools to be working on the first half of the series of progressive requirements while the others are working on the last half.

Those who want to come in should look over their records, count such points lost as have been lost, and such gains as have been gained, get busy and move with the procession. They may have difficulty in winning the $100 prize, but they have a chance to gain all sorts of honor, especially in the report that shall be given of the last two months of the contest.

Let Us Have a Report

Since this Four-month Program is patterned after our Four-year Program, and since the Four-year Program Committee requires reports each half-year, let us decide upon a report when this contest is half over, so we may know how each other is prospering.

If it is so agreed, let each contesting school send to the writer, immediately after the last Sunday in February, a report framed as follows:

Name of school
Superintendent
Points Gained during Jan., Feb.
Attendance	7
Offering	7
On time	6
Lessons studied	7
Teachers and officers present	7

Please do not make it necessary for any one to call again for this report. It will be published in the Evangelist.
817 Wellington St. Waterloo, Iowa.

Nature's mercy lies in her unchanging severity. If fire did not always burn, water drown, and rocks crush, who would heed the laws which, after all, make for usefulness and protection? It is because of their unchangeableness that human life and progress build safely.

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

Enthusiastic Endeavor Experts. BY J. A. GARBER

Enthusiasm has come to be a prevailing characteristic of our Nappanee, Indiana, church and the Endeavorers thereof present no exception, unless it is in the direction of intensity. Enthusiasm is a most commendable trait. Open your dictionary and note the derivation.

Having learned its inestimable value through personal experience and sympathetic observation, Brether Kolb never fails to boost Christian Endeavor. On assuming the pastoral care of the Nappanee church he determined to have a class in Expert Endeavor. Supported by a group of most loyal Endeavorers that worthy determination was quickly realized. It does not take an energetic teacher long to transform diligent students into Experts. Consequently we were privileged to share the joy of graduating the following persons: Misses Cora Culp, Grayce Miller, Frieda Price; Mesdames Chester Richmond, Harold Weygand, Mervin Stuckman, T. C. Leslie and Harley Roose, Curtis Hummel, William Widmoyer. The last named is the efficient Sunday school superintendent, while the others are associate officers, teachers and workers.

Suggestive Observations

The fact suggested by the last sentence leads the writer to observe that there is no competition between the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor of this particular church. On the contrary the leaders of the two departments co-operate most heartily in promoting the mutual interests of both. In fact the day's experiences disclosed a studied effort on the part of pastor and departmental leaders to co-ordinate and correlate the work of the church. In the afternoon conference on evangelism each department was recognized and given an opportunity to pledge its support to the evangelistic campaign. The S. S. C. E. president guaranteed the undivided assistance of the women. Superintendent Widmoyer said we want every member of the school a Christian and every Christian a worker. Miss Culp, the Christian Endeavor president, told how the Prayer Meeting Committee had trained personal workers and would conduct a half-hour prayer meeting each Wednesday evening preceding the regular service. The Lookout committee had been inviting folks and would continue to do so throughout the meeting. The Social committee was charged with the responsibility of greeting strangers and welcoming new members. Incidentally the pastor whispered in my ear what must be self-evident to the reader: We have created no new machinery, just trying to use what we now have. That is the acme of efficiency.

It is needless for me to refer at length to the churches of Nappanee had been invited and several were present, others being kept away because of their work. The absence of all confusion in the matter of serving was one of the notable features of this dinner in the church.

The afternoon program was a conference on revival work. The "Big Day" was the opening of the church evangelistic campaign, although the Evangelist, Brether L. S. Bauman did not arrive until the following evening. This afternoon service signaled the first appearance of the Junior Choir, now the "Big Day." The pastor's report below tells the story. Suffice it to say that this was the second experience for me in less than a year, not to mention a regular Sunday in between. It is always a delight to worship and work with the attentive, responsive and appreciative people of Nappanee. They are accomplishing great things for the Lord because of their great enthusiasm for his work. Congratulating them upon their splendid attainments and rejoicing in their increasing success and treasuring the memories of these memorable days I shall ever count it a privilege to be their friend and servant.

NAPPANEE GRADUATES IN EXPERT ENDEAVOR

numbering about 75, which had been practicing both for the "Big Day" and the revival meeting. The combined choirs of the church led an inspiring song service using as the song book, "Eternal Praise," a new book for this congregation. Brother Garber opened the conference with an address on "The Individual's Preparation for Personal Evangelism." This was followed by addresses of good will and suggestions by the ministers of Nappanee. This proved to be one of the interesting features of the day, in which expressions came from other denominations trusting that our revival meeting would be not only a great blessing to us but to the community at large. All the organizations of the church then responded through their executive officers, pledging their loyalty to the church in the special effort before it. A consecration service by the pastor of the church closed the afternoon program.

The evening service was a fitting climax to the "Big Day." A great Christian Endeavor union service began at 6:30, which culminated in the graduation exercises of the Expert Endeavor class. The junior superintendent, Mrs. Harry Richmond, the intermediate superintendent, Mrs. C. E. Kolb, together with the chairman of the Prayer Meeting committee of the Y. P. S. C. E., Miss Frieda Price, composed the program committee with Miss Cora Culp as leader. During the evening the installation exercises

Nappanee's Big Day. BY C. E. KOLB

On Sunday, January 26th, the Brethren church of Nappanee, Indiana and especially the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor organizations enjoyed "The Big Day." That was what it was called in the advertising distributed before the day and that was what it proved to be. The weather of that day was a special order and midst smiles and sunshine 493 individuals gathered for the morning merged service. The program committee of Sunday school presented a carefully arranged program before the study of the Sunday school lesson and continued their program after the lesson study. Rev. J. A. Garber of Ashland, Ohio, had been brought to Nappanee by the Christian Endeavor Expert graduating class and it was very largely he who was responsible for the attendance of the morning. In addition to his sermon of the morning, Private Roy Slagle of the United States Marines gave an address, "Experiences," which was characteristically "Marine." Part of the effect of the morning was to have all the classes of the school record one hundred percent of enrollment present. All but five gained this distinction. The Alexander Mack Class, the men's class recorded 93 while other classes showed a corresponding large attendance.

All during the morning peculiar and unusual looking market baskets arrived. As a result one of the biggest and most tasty dinners was served by the ladies of the Sisters' Society at the noon hour. The ministers of

(Continued on page 16)

MISSIONS

Home Mission Notes

By G. C. Carpenter

OIL WELL IN A CHURCH YARD

What would your church have done under circumstances similar to those in which a church in Ranger, Texas, found itself? Now think seriously. An oil well was struck in the vicinity of the church and the congregation was persuaded to let the company drill a well in the church yard. A miracle of a gusher was struck and in the few months since that small congregation of twenty-nine members has received in cold cash $200,000 of royalty money.

Many church members are hardfisted and lack the outlook and vision that become the Christian and would favor declaring a dividend under these circumstances and settling down to enjoy life. How would my readers have voted? What did the Ranger church do? They voted that all the money belonged to the church of our Lord and they proceeded to give it all away for the work of the Kingdom. And they refused $1,000,000 for the graveyard they own. How would my readers have voted? What would your church have done?

The Wells of Salvation

In every church yard are riches untold. All that the members need to do is to meet the conditions of possession. God says do this, and thou shalt be blessed. God says invest and you shall have ten thousand percent on your investment as long as you live and everlasting life hereafter. That beats the Ranger gusher. The Texas well may go dry any day. But the wells of salvation never go dry.

Are We Worth Thirty Cents?

To spread the news concerning the wells of salvation the Home Mission Board is the church's agent. The church in conference voted to raise an average of thirty cents per member for the year and to help the agent to carry forward a home mission program. Some churches have responded and many have not. Our Secretary Bowman's latest report showed total offerings for the year to February seventh as $4,515. Our goal this year is $7,500. A hint to the faithful is sufficient. The churches that are actually being blessed from the wells of salvation will gladly pay the small apportionment of thirty cents per member for this work. Come on, Fellow-pastors, you are the men who hold the key to the situation. Reaching the goal depends largely upon you. The time before conference is short. Act now.

CROWN OF HONOR FOR GEORGE KINZIE

He writes: "Our Christian Endeavor of Clay City sends just double their offering of last year toward Kentucky mission work." We are sure he will share his honor with the faithful society he shepherds.

The Nurse at Work

Miss Beulah McMillan is the nurse at Riverside. The Lord sends forth workers into his fields. Miss Ethel Myers writes in behalf of the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha, which organization is supporting the nurse, that she was found at The Moody Bible Institute. She has been on the field nearly a month. Thanks to the Sisterhood officers for their persistence in seeking to meet this need. May the Lord make Miss McMillan a great blessing to the whole Riverside community.

International Convention

No National Christian Endeavor convention has been held for four years, but an International convention has been announced to be held at Buffalo early in August. Many Brethren societies ought to have representatives at this convention, and a good Brethren Rally ought to be possible.

A LETTER FROM A YOUNG AMERICAN MISSIONARY

Dear Boys and Girls in the Homeland:

Since I wrote you my last letter I have been going with my sister to the French school, as I lost my seat in the normal school while we were gone. There are not half as many seats as there are children who want to enter the school. The students of the National College gave a program one night to raise money to help poor children to buy books and go to private schools. The teachers in the French school are good, but the boys are very bad. They are lazy and loud and dirty mouthed. One of them almost got expelled for writing my sister nasty notes.

We had a temperance meeting in the church not long ago. The Sunday school is getting larger every Sunday.

I will write to you again when I have time.

ELEANOR YODER.

Rio Cuarto, Argentina, October 7, 1918.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

COLLEGE CORNER

We have one more promise to fulfil. We have just finished our church canvass and have learned a lesson that has paid us for every step we took. We wonder why we should be treated so much better than Jesus was. According to the story told by the four writers, after Jesus had finished his day's work, many times he would have to go to the mountains to rest. While when I have finished my days' work there is waiting me a good warm supper and the "spare bed." I have wondered how many spare beds Jesus had to take his night's rest in, while tramping the hills of Galilee for the interest of the kingdom. Jesus carried the gospel to the lost sheep of Israel. I have been wondering whether we poor mortal preachers are doing our duty. I feel that many of us have the wrong understanding of our mission in this ministry. It is easy money if we just have a place to go to preach. We get on the job for one hour in the morning and one at night and then get your salary and that is the last seen or heard of for two weeks. Never in but one home in two weeks. What does the church want a pastor for? I have found in walking over most of two rural churches, where many pastors have never been. They promised to go but never went, yet the pastor looks to the church for his pay, and he looks downhearted if he doesn't get it.

We will never reach our goals unless the preachers get to work. When I took this job I took it to work. I am determined to know every member of my pastorate. I have finished my first canvass in this field and have found something that I am proud of and that is this, that the College Corner church has obeyed this part of the teaching of the New Testament, Ephesians 6:4. We have twelve homes in this church with 46 members. Never was there a nicer trained set of children. College Corner has a future.

While we did not meet with the results we did in Dutchtown, we are doing about what we expected. If the everlasting "flu" would let loose. The devil is trying our patience here as in all the rest of our sister churches. I am giving him no rest. I am getting a bite while he is getting a meal. Some of our brother preachers will soon think I am a little on the firing line, and I am. Ashland College might have been a greater college had our preachers taken more interest in it. Our church paper could have been better than it is had pastors not looked for the Editor to come out over the world and do what was the pastor's duty to do. Let us get on the job and do with our might what our hands find to do.

HOMER ANDERSON.

February 12th, 1919.

Editor of the Evangelist:

I have been requested to write an article for the Evangelist regarding the work at this place. I have been in Washington practically a year, during which time I have attended the Brethren church and have found it very spiritual and beneficial.

The pastor, Brother Wm. Lyon, is certainly a spiritual and godly man, and the members have entire confidence in him. He is unceasing in working for others and during the past year has been untiring in his efforts to help locate government workers who have come to Washington from all of the states, and especially those who are members of the Brethren church, and who have made themselves known to him.

The Sunday school is an active organization of the church. Clay Dooley, the superintendent, is a very wide-awake and spiritual leader. A very striking feature of the work here is the "giving spirit" the congregation has, and it is to be commended. Whenever there is to be a special offering such as Easter, Rally Day or Thanksgiving, the fact is announced a few weeks before, both at Sunday school and church and envelopes passed out and the people are simply asked to give as they "feel led" and the results are amazing considering the size and financial condition of the people.

Another point to be emphasized is the feeling of spirituality at all of the meetings. People come expecting to hear the Bible preached in Brother Lyon's conscientious, straightforward manner; they hear it and come again. During this year there has been at least one, if not more, persons come forward at nearly every service.

I am glad to have had the opportunity of attending church here.

VODA BROWER.

1208 E. St., S. E.,
Washington, D. C.

FROM BEAVER CITY, NEBRASKA

We are now without a regular pastor. Brother C. M. Pierce closed his work with us Sunday night, and has gone to take charge of a Congregational church in Iowa, with the promise of seven hundred dollars larger salary than we paid him. From his preaching in the last year the careful observer could notice that he was not very conscientious on the faith of the Brethren church.

All departments of church work is moving along as usual, but not without hindrances from the "flu," as elsewhere experienced.

Our prayer meetings under the supervision of Brother George Seibert are doing very nicely. And so also is the Sunday school with Lilla Johnston as superintendent, moving along nicely. The Christian Endeavor is doing well. Our young people are giving us some splendid talks.

As we are now without a pastor, any one now at liberty or soon to be, or can advise us in regard to some one, sound in the faith may correspond with G. B. Seibert, Beaver City, Nebraska.

Now if our new editor closes his eyes and puts his fingers in his ears I will say "We are well pleased with our new Editor."

C. FORNEY.

(From Ashland Times-Gazette)

A notable event in the annals of the College Brethren church and Sunday school was the Father and Son observance Friday evening. Nearly 100 fathers and sons feasted in fraternal fellowship upon the tasty and ample luncheon and listened attentively to the varied and helpful addresses. After the completion of the chicken supper, prepared and handsomely served by the ladies of the church, Toastmaster Pastor, Rev. J. A. Garber, in a helpful and suggestive way, set forth the significance and purpose of the event, and made way for the addresses of the evening.

Rev. A. D. Gnagey responded to the first toast, "Men and Women." Wittily and effectively he both entertained and instructed his hearers, paying a splendid tribute to womanhood, passing out some occult hints to admiring theologues, and stressing the fact that the church has lost much by failing to develop the latent of its men and women, the laity. Rev. Geo. S. Baer, substituting for Supt. A. C. Hendrickson, not present, presented eloquent and convincing arguments showing why men should attend Sunday school, especially since this is one of the best ways to secure the attendance of the sons. Earl Detsch, as president of the Christian Endeavor, in happy, touching and flowery phrases, set forth the power and characteristics of a "Winning Christian Endeavor." In response to the toast, "Our Fathers," Theodore Gnagey touched the audience into deeper appreciation of what a good father may be to a boy by recounting some personal reminiscences, interspersed with relevant remarks and suggestive poetry. "Our Boys," as a topic, was discussed by Dr. L. L. Garber. He took as his keynote, Wordsworth's saying, "The boy is father of the man," and showed the deep significance of the paradox. Asserting that great men are never accidents, he urged fathers to so control and mould the environment of the boys that they may realize their full possibilities in greatness and usefulness, stressing especially the idea of the necessity of controlling the social atmosphere so that boys will by absorbing the right social attitude, naturally and inevitably grow into great and useful men after the likeness of great ideals. In an inspiring and earnest address on "Men and the Church," Dr. J. A. Miller set forth the supreme value of man as man, declared the unequal greatness of the church as an institution and besought men to rally themselves with it in this hour of crisis and opportunity.

A short, helpful address by the toastmaster and pastor, a song and the benediction by Dr. R. R. Teeter, closed an enjoyable and helpful evening for both "Fathers and Sons."

HAMLIN, KANSAS

We presume that some of our acquaintances and friends, both of the writer and of the church, are wondering why there has been no report from here. Here it is for you. Since the last report the church was again shut down a short time. The "flu" seems to have shut a good many of our churches down from a few weeks to nearly all winter. We are now back at the work again. We cannot, as many younger congregations do, report any accessions as yet but the work is moving along nicely, we believe. Any one who watches for the tally in the various offerings will find that Hamlin is on the record for all of them. White Gift, Armenian Relief and Superannuated Ministers Fund all came in for their share in quick succession, and each received its due recognition and proportionate offering. We are thankful that Hamlin is among the number of those who recognize that they are but stewards of that which is left in their charge.

The Sunday school, S. S. C. E., and the regular church services are taking their places in the development of our Christian life. Each one of these branches of the work is contributing its share to the work here. We crave the interest of all those who are concerned with the advance of the Kingdom. Also, we would be glad to hear from any of our friends. It is possible that by the exchange of a few letters we might be of help one to the other.

I feel sure that I may say, for myself and the people of this congregation, that we wish every person in the brotherhood the best possible success in the work for the Kingdom of God in the world.

GEO. E. CONE.

NORTH DAKOTA

It has been nearly five years since we have written for the Evangelist. We have been very busy with our school work, teaching, farming and preaching. Shortly after coming to the state we were asked to fill some pulpit dates for the Congregational church, accepted, and have been preaching for them ever since. Our work for them is of a missionary character and the remuneration is not large but adds materially to our earnings. Both myself and Mrs. Spacht have been teaching since coming here. So we have been very busy.

Our school and church work has been very pleasant. We preach in the evening in Sawyer, and in the morning in the country. Our country church last year had the largest rural Sunday school in the state of North Dakota among the two hundred and ninety-two Congregational churches and the largest number of accessions in a country church; all came at regular services.

We came to North Dakota to stay five years. Our time is up this year. We have worked in a single community either teaching or preaching most of this time. We may change our place of residence the coming year if a suitable place offers, otherwise we may remain here another year. We have missed our own church people very much and had it not been for the great kindness of both the Congregational people and the Church of the Brethren our stay would have been much more irksome. As it is we have not lacked for friends and certainly not for pulpit courtesies.

The Evangelist has been the only means of keeping in touch with our own denomination and has been a welcome visitor.

A. J. SPACHT.

HOMERVILLE, OHIO

Homerville, Ohio, is still on the map. The readers of the Evangelist may have thought differently because no report has been forthcoming for nearly a year. Nevertheless the "Homer" congregation is not dead enough it has had a very severe attack of the "flu." Seven months ago or to be more specific on July 21, 1918, the writer took charge of the church as pastor, taking the place left vacant by Brother Bryan Stoffer, who was called to the "Colors" about that time. For several weeks and up until September 29th, our efforts were blessed with comparative success. Then we were smitten with the same dose of bitters that the rest of the brethren have been reporting and from that time until January 19, 1919, we were able to hold only one service. Since that time, however, we have been holding the regular services each alternate Sunday.

On the evening of September 14th, was held the semi-annual communion service which was well attended and which was a truly blessed service. While we have not had the same enthusiastic attendance since the epidemic, still the spirit and the energy of those who have been able to attend have not been dampened. This is made manifest by the response that has been made to the appeals that have come to us for offerings. In response to the appeal for the Armenian relief the Sunday school came forward magnificently, with a gift of $25.00. On receiving the appeal of Brother Roseco in behalf of the Superannuated Ministers' Fund, the church decided to give half of the Sunday morning offering to this fund. With less than twenty present the half of the offering amounted to $3.30 approximately the requested ten cents per member. What might have happened if the entire average attendance which is usually near sixty had been present is a matter of conjecture. We were unable to report very much progress along the line of the Four Year Program. But nevertheless we reported and are glad to say that it was not all loss. Plans are under way now to organize a Christian Endeavor society. It is hoped that as soon as the weather permits the resuming of the evening service, this may be accomplished. A number of new families have moved into the neighborhood and we are hoping to reach these. This report would be incomplete if we said nothing concerning the Ladies' Aid. Through the efforts of Brother Stoffer the ladies organized early last spring and they are doing fine work. They meet monthly and are now planning to repaper the church and replace the windows with new ones. On the 14th of February they served the dinner at a public sale and came away with a credit of $22.50. What is a church anyway without the ladies? As the work progresses we hope to have other reports to make from time to time. Brethren, pray for the success of this congregation for there is a fertile field of endeavor here waiting our efforts.

FRED C. VANATOR.

DALLAS CENTER, IOWA

The work of the kingdom of God at this place still goes on in spite of the various hindrances of the past few months. The progress at this point is never spasmodic in character but rather of a steady growth. It is sometimes a test of the sowers' patience to wait for a harvest but when it comes it is permanent and worth while. One of the important lessons that we pastors must often learn is that of waiting for the seed to spring up and grow. This has been my experience and I frankly confess I have not learned to fully appreciate it as I hope to later on as we all like to see immediate results of our sowing.

The first great achievement that I wish to speak of is that of the burning of the final evidence of debt on our new church. Few people in the brotherhood know what the building of a new Brethren church in Dallas Center meant both in influence in the community and effort on the part of the congregation. The building of this new church demonstrated that the members of the church were planning for large things and not thinking of giving up their effort. We can now invite the people of the community into a comfortable, modern building. The final effort to raise money for the church debt was started and carried out unknown to the pastor which also demonstrates that some of my members are equipped with self-starters, a feature quite worth while. We celebrated the great event by a fellowship meeting in the church where we burned the note as the people sang, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

We are glad to say that we have succeeded in getting the Brethren Evangelist into nearly all the homes of the church. It took patience and some work to do this but we are glad it is done and hope that we shall reap a great blessing from a wider spread of information concerning the work of the church. I must say again that this achievement was accomplished through unsolicited help from two big hearted laymen. The best things that come to any congregation come because some good member or members catch the vision of a need and help carry out the plan to meet it. A blind people are not the kind to be led into new achievements.

We have felt the effects of the war and epidemic here but are holding our own. This church will make a better record in the Four Year Program this year than last. We have mailed our report to the District Director in time to make the report to Brother Bame by February 15. We are handicapped to quite an extent in this field by having our territory circumscribed by the fields of other churches. The Brethren here have made great progress in the missionary spirit which means that they will be a home base for the spread of the gospel in other needy fields. The attendance of our people at the mid-week prayer service is good and exceeds that of any other church in the community and we are not the largest congregation. I mention this with the purpose of showing that our people are interested in the fundamental means of grace.

The present pastor is nearly half through the third year of his ministry at this place and we have been conscious many times of the Spirit of God working among us for the glory of our Savior and the upbuilding of the kingdom of God. For all our successes and pleasant fellowships we want to give all the praise to him who alone is worthy of our praise and go forward in the work of extending the whole gospel to the whole world.

I believe in the doctrines of our church because they are direct from God. We as a people are not responsible for their origin. Personally I make no apology for our creed, and hope the day will come when denominational unity will be effected upon complete surrender to the great Shepherd and Bishop of our souls. May God bless the brethren everywhere and all who love and worship the Savior in sincerity.

R. F. PORTE.

WHOLE GOSPEL MISSION, PHILA.

We have neglected writing for our church paper, but the Lord willing, we will write more frequently from now on.

We have been going through deep waters and strange experiences, but we can see the Lord's hand in it all.

We have had one confession since our last report, a splendid young man. We have a Thursday night local preachers' meeting. This young man confessed Christ at one of these meetings under the preaching of Brother Bowers. I baptized him.

We have been working very hard, but it seems difficult to make much progress. Many of the churches of Philadelphia have fallen back during these war times. I fear they have lost their power by sacrificing the principles of peace and accepting a war policy. Democracy, League of Nations and a false patriotism is by many held above the simple gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

There is the faithful few increasing in spiritual power among us. The prayer meetings and church services are becoming more spiritual and making slight progress in numbers. Our Sunday school is about holding its own, though we hope soon to report progress as we are making a special effort to increase the attendance.

The "flu" seems to have had a paralyzing effect on the revival meetings of the brotherhood and hindered the numerical increase. Let us pray more and live higher spiritual lives.

ISAAC D. BOWMAN.

WHITE GIFTS OF VICTORY AND PEACE

The following "White Gifts" received since last report:

Mexico, Ind., (Additional),	$ 5.94
Morrill, Kan., (Additional),	10.09
Canton, Ohio,	46.88
Nappanee, Ind., (General),	100.00
Nappanee, Ind., (Alexander Mack Class),	100.00
Windber, Pa.,	30.00
Freemont, Ohio,	25.92
Ankenytown, Ohio,	12.31
Ritman, Ohio,	1.34
Johnstown, Pa., First,	175.00

Total,$597.48

Previously reported,$1814.93

Grand Total,$2322.41

ALBERT TRENT,

General Secretary-Treasurer.

(Continued from page 11)

of the newly elected Intermediate officers took place. The Intermediate is a new organization in this congregation and bids fair to outgrow some others. (There were 39 present February 9th, third meeting). Christian Endeavor has been doing things in Nappanee. Recently the Brethren society was awarded the Indiana Union recognition—"SUPERIOR SOCIETY." The thermometer on the Efficiency Chart is recording increasing heat. The finest spirit of co-operation that could possibly be imagined is evident between the members not only of the Christian Endeavor but also the entire church. The commencement address for the graduating class was delivered by Prof. Garber in his usual enthusiastic and able manner. It was a soul stirring message calling for all to observe the need today of workers in the church and to respond to the call of God as he invites to service. There were ten members of the graduating class and the class says there will be ten others before conference.

The revival meeting will be reported later. Suffice it to say, that the house is crowded practically every night, that 22 have come forward up to date, the 14th and that all prospects point to a great harvest. This will be the result of much prayer and faithful labor on the part of all the church. The meeting will continue until February 23 with Brother Bauman preaching. The prayers of the entire brotherhood are solicited.

C. E. KOLB.

JANUARY KENTUCKY MISSION RECEIPTS

Friends, Strathmore, Calif.,	10.00
A Friend, No. Liberty, Ind.,	15.00
Miss Mannie Leonard, Elkhart, Ind., ..	5.00
Mrs. Robert Boring, Thornville, O., ..	5.00
Sunday School, Waynesboro, Pa., ..	8.00
S. S. C. E., Berne, Ind.,	5.00
Betnel S. S., Berne, Ind.,	25.00
Olive, Freeda and Doyle Dunbar, Vulcan Alta, Canada,	10.00
Mrs. Pearl Lowry, Garwin, Iowa,	5.00
Mrs. E. E. Focht, Liberty, Ind.,	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. Monroe ones, Roann, Ind., ..	5.00
Mrs. Chas. G. Leslie, Roann, Ind.,	5.00
S. S. C. E., Linwood, Md.,	10.00
Mrs. John Baringer, Fremont, O.,	5.00
White Gifts by National S. S. Association,	500.00
Brethren Church, Masontown, Pa.,	5.00
Mrs. H. J. Frantz, Enid, Okla.,	5.00
Brethren Church, Lost Creek, Ky., on Pastors salary,	15.00
Sunday School, Long Beach, Calif., ..	19.50
Intermediate C. E. Society, Long Beach, Calif.,	1.00
First Brethren Church, Long Beach, Calif.,	10.00
Rev. L. G. Wood, Roanoke, Va.,	10.00
Dr. L. B. Gordon, Frankfort, Ind.,	5.00
First Brethren Church, Milledgeville, Ill.,	40.00
First Brethren Church, Bryan, O.,	40.00
Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Swinehart, West Salem, O.,	10.00
Ray D. Conrad, Butler, O.,	5.00
A Friend, Howe, Ind.,	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. S. Cook, Harrisburg, Ore., ..	5.00
Miss Lois Frazier, Polk, O.,	10.00
Mrs. W. N. Grubb, Ashland, Ore.,	5.00
Young Peoples Class, College Corners, Ind.,	5.00
Brethren Church, Martinsburg, Pa.,	14.50
Orvil Neff, Linford, Ind.,	5.00
N. H. Nielsen, Long Beach, Calif.,	25.00
G. C. CARPENTER.

Watch Indiana Raise the Star and Push Pennsylvania Out at the Top

The Bible is the most valuable and the cheapest book in the world. Its value we all acknowledge, but did you know that you could buy a Bible of 1,000 double pages for 30 cents in Germany, and 17 cents in England and the United States? And copies of the New Testament are sold in England for a penny apiece.

In the thirteenth century a fine English Bible cost 3) pounds.

At that time the wages of a laborer were nine pence a week. So to buy a Bible he must save his entire income for fifteen years.

Of course he didn't. He went to the churches, where the precious volume was chained to the desk to keep it safe, and there he read the exciting Old Testament stories or the beautiful Gospels, or more likely listened to a reader who was better educated than he.

In those days the Bible was valuable in every way. Today a workman may buy the New Testament by walking home one night instead of taking the car, or giving up the potato he had planned for his dinner.

You cannot force boys into seriousness and steadfastness of character. If you give an infant solid food, you will choke it. Every soul must have its proper diet. The strong delight in strong meat—in patience and tribulation, in not wishing for what is another's, in offering the other cheek, in praying for their enemies, in loving those that hate them. The weak and tender in God's service must be fed with milk—gentleness from other kindness, mercy, cheerful encouragement, charitable forbearance.

100	000
95	000
90	000
85	000
80	000
75	000
70	000
65	000
60	000
55	000
50	000
45	000
40	000
35	000
30	000
25	000
20	000
15	000
10	000
5	000

COLLEGE
ENDOWMENT

THE TIE THAT BINDS

CROTHERS-MARKS—Andrew J. Crothers and Margaret L. Marks were united in the holy bonds of matrimony on January 18th, 1919 by the undersigned. Miss Marks is a member of the Lapaz Brethren church. May the Lord richly bless this union.

J. L. CLARK.

IN THE SHADOW

STRAYER—Private Dwight Leslie Strayer, son of Paul and Elizabeth Strayer, was called into the life eternal from a hospital in Frances on November 24, 1918. His age 21 years, 5 months and 1 day.

Dwight enlisted in the U. S. Marine Corps in May, 1918. By August he was overseas. In September he went over the top for the first time, and from that time until the armistice was signed was engaged in constant service in the fighting zone. So far as his service to his nation is concerned, it need only be said, he was a real Marine. Death resulted from pneumonia following influenza.

He united with the Waterloo congregation at the age of 11 years. With his parents, his sister and all his brothers, he was a beloved member of the congregation ever since. On Sunday evening, December 15, a memorial service was held in his honor by a congregation that taxed the capacity of the auditorium.

He was a graduate of Waterloo West High, and for a time was a student at Ashland College.

The sympathy and gratitude of hosts of friends are affectionately extended to the bereaved family, and Dwight's memory is held in the highest honor.

H. L. GOUGHNOUR.

PECK—Roy D. Peck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry J. Peck, departed this life on January 3, 1919, the victim of a terrible attack of pneumonia. He was an exceptionally strong man, and made a brave and prayerful fight for his life. His age was 26 years, 3 months and 19 days.

For 8 years he has been a member of the Waterloo congregation. His parents, his brother, Cal, and his sister, Mrs. Glen Lichty, constitute the remainder of this family, one of the most faithful and loyal of the congregation. Besides these, he is survived by a noble wife and 2 sons, one aged 8 years, and the other 3 weeks at the time of his decease. Because his wife, sister and brother were all suffering from influenza at the time, no public funeral service was held. May God sustain the bereaved ones continually.

H. L. GOUGHNOUR.

MILLER—Mrs. Cornelia Miller, one of the heroic pioneers of Illinois, Iowa and South Dakota, as well as of the Brethren church, who passed away at Pochahontas, Iowa, on January 4, 1919, was laid to well-deserved rest from the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. J. Reber, after funeral services held in the Waterloo Brethren church. She was within a few days of 88 years of age.

Elizabeth Bitner was her maiden name. Born in Somerset County, Pa., married at the age of 22, she and her husband came west, residing or 3 years in Lee county, Illinois, then for 27 years in Orange township near Waterloo, then for 25 years in Kimball, South Dakota. Since that time she made her home with a daughter, Mrs. Milo Miller, Pochahontas, Iowa.

She and her husband were always among the most pious and hospitable people in each community in which they resided. Six children grew to maturity, and they, with 8 grandchildren, and 11 great grandchildren, all of splendid ability and character, constitute the finest memorial that is left to this honored mother in Israel. May God help us to be inspired by her memory.

H. L. GOUGHNOUR.

EWING—Marvin Harrison Ewing was born in Bourbon county, Kansas, September 8th, 1888, and departed this life at his home in Fort Scott, Kansas, February 5th, 1919. He spent most of his life in and around Fort Scott. His father and mother are members of the Brethren church and have our sympathy.

E. E. OTTO.

KLEPPER—Rev. J. E. Klepper died on January 22, 1919, aged 72 years, 6 months and 27 days. He was sick only a few hours; it was thought his disease was neuritis of the heart. He had been a minister of the gospel for a number of years, but the last few years he was not able to preach. He was formerly a member of the Church of the Brethren, but for the last 15 years had been a faithful member of the Brethren church. He was married to Miss Louiza

Bowman in 1866, to which union were born eight children; John D., A. B., Rebecca, Georgia, Della, Lulu, Mary and Boone Klepper. He was laid to rest in the Friendsville cemetery to await the resurrection. Funeral was conducted by Rev. C. H. Everett and Rev. G. W. Young.

MISS MARY KLEPPER.

HERSCHLER—Jacob, was born in Bavaria, Germany, and passed out of this life near Ashland, Ohio, at the ripe age of eighty-seven years. Early in life he was a member of the Menonite church but later transferred his membership to the Brethren church, in which faith he peacefully received the inevitable summons. He is survived by three children, his wife having preceded him in death. Funeral from the home of a son.

J. A. GARBER.

CLAYS—Brother Jacob Clays departed this life at his home near Sandusky, Ohio, January 28, 1919, at the age of 76 years, 5 months and 27 days. Brother Clays had joined the Church of the Brethren when twenty-two years old, but about a year ago he placed his membership with the First Brethren church of Fremont, Ohio, where his wife had held membership for several years. He was a soldier of the Civil war, having served during the entire war and was noted for his courage. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Elder S. M. Loose. The burial took place at the Sand Hill cemetery, near Sandusky. May the Lord comfort the widow and the bereaved family.

H. M. OBERHOLTZER.

SPECIAL NOTICE

By the merciful kindness of a dear heavenly Father another year has passed and another opportunity to serve by giving is approaching. Easter Sunday, April 20th, is the time for the annual offering for foreign missions. This call is issued thus early that all pastors, churches, auxiliary societies and members may prepare to make the offering of the Lord worthy of his gracious acceptance. Remember the time: Easter Sunday, April 20th. This day belongs to the Brethren Foreign Missionary Society and all else should give way to it. Work and pray for the greatest offering in our history.

For the Foreign Missionary Society, by,
J. ALLEN MILLER, President.
ALVA J. McCLAIN, Secretary.
L. S. BAUMAN, Treasurer.

Brethren Home of Ohio

An Incorporation with
over $10,000 in Assets

PURPOSE. To build a home for the aged and infirm of our church and an orphanage for our children.

Why not make it a National Home for the entire brotherhood?

The Board of Trustees will present this proposition at National Conference this year.

Gifts, subscriptions and bequests solicited.

Information cheerfully given.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Ira Fudge, Gratis, Ohio, Pres.
Orion E. Bowman, V. Pres. and Atty.
Elmer Wombold, Secy.
1718 W. Monument Ave., Dayton, Ohio
Jesse A. Garver, Treas.
J. Allen Miller.

Business Manager's Corner

That Conference Report

After unavoidable delays in the making of the Minutes of the last General Conference, containing practically the sermons and leading addresses of the conference, have been mailed to the pastors and the churches of the brotherhood. We aimed to mail a supply to all the pastors who placed orders for any of the reports last year, but possibly some have been overlooked. If any pastor has not received a supply by the time he reads this announcement we beg his pardon and ask him to notify us and a supply will be mailed to him immediately. We have several hundred yet on our hands and to make the publishing of these reports a financial success practically every copy should be sold. There is but one thing that stands in the way of making the annual publishing of this Report and the Brethren Annual and Church Year Book profitable, and that is the small edition that is required to supply the demand of the churches. If five hundred more copies could be sold each year it would be a matter of real profit to the Publishing House; but even as it is the present edition will not be sold out unless the PASTORS give the matter PERSONAL attention.

The report contains 113 pages, including a good almanac, the ministerial list, a list of the churches and their pastors, a full list of the names and addresses of the delegates who were in attendance at the last Winona Conference in addition to the report of the Conference, and it should not be difficult for any pastor to dispose of the full number sent him. Remember the price is only TWENTY-FIVE cents, and we ask the pastor to send us only twenty cents for each copy sold. Now who will be the first pastor to dispose of the number sent him and to remit for the same? We shall be glad to make honorable mention of him in this column, and we wonder if such mention can be made next week? Who will try it?

The Evangelist Campaign

Just a little lull has been noticeable in the campaign after the tremendous gains of last week, but yet commendable progress has been made. Two of the churches that were on the Honor Roll last year sent in the lists that enable them to hold their places for another year. Mexico, Indiana, was the first church of the week to get in its list with a goodly check accompanying it and we know Brother Ditch appreciates what this having the Evangelist in the home of every active family in the congregation means. We have known Brother Ditch and his work for a quarter of a century and his work has always been good. He is one of the really loyal kind of preachers that believes in his church and who stands by what it does.

The next list came from north central Kansas where Brother Roy Brumbaugh is in charge at Portis. Brother Whitted led this church to victory last year and when Brother Brumbaugh took up the work in this field he wrote us "there will be no backward step taken here," and not satisfied with last year's achievement for the Evangelist it was determined to advance and even a larger list was sent in, and now this congregation, in what some people are pleased to term the "short grass" country receives EIGHTY copies of the Evangelist each week. We know a number of congregations with a membership beyond the five hundred mark that do not get half that many copies of the Evangelist. But it must be getting lonesome on the outside, so come on in brethren. A warm welcome and a splendid fellowship await you on the Honor Roll. As it is scriptural to "covet earnestly the best gifts," we believe it is just as scriptural to seek a place on the Evangelist Honor Roll.

"THE KING OF SONG BOOKS"

Herald of Praise

Edited by Dr. H. W. Stough, Dr. W. E. Biederwolf,
Prof. E. O. Excell and Bob Jones

The Latest and Best Song Book Out. Try it in your Sunday School, your Prayer Meeting or your Revival Meeting

PRICES

Best Manila Binding, 15 cents per copy (postpaid)
One hundred, $13.00 (not prepaid)

Flexible Cloth Binding, 20 cents per copy (postpaid)
One hundred, $18.00 (not prepaid)

Cloth Board Binding, 30 cents per copy (postpaid)
One hundred, $25.00 (not prepaid)

The Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 10

MARCH 5
1919

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETHREN -

THE ROLLIER FAMILY

BY FAITH THEY LEFT ALL TO FOLLOW CHRIST TO THE HEART OF AFRICA

Will We Prove Worthy Sharers of Their Faith?
Our Easter Offering Will Be Our Test.

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

The Church the Creator of Ideals—Editor,	2	Announcing Dr. Tombaugh—Editor,	10
Where Shall We Find Our Ministers?—Editor,	3	Temperance for All the World,	10
Editorial Review,	3	Some Training Classes—J. A. Garber,	10
From the Director of Goal Seven—E. L. Miller,	4	White Gifts of Victory and Peace—Albert Trent,	10
The Church and Reconstruction—E. D. Burnworth,	5	Illiokota's Inning—J. A. Garber,	11
The Law of Sympathy—Miss Mary Pence,	6	Reminiscences and Reminders—Elizabeth Hildebrand,	11
Visiting the Sick—Mary A. Laughlin, M.D.,	7	The Test of True Discipleship—Dr. J. A. Miller,	12
Our Best for Heaven's Best—Roy Brumbaugh,	7	Home Mission Notes—G. C. Carpenter,	12
The God of Revelation (Sermon)—Wm. C. Teeter,	8	News from the Field,	13-16

EDITORIAL

The Church a Creator of Ideals

We have said the church is practical and in every way meets the needs of a practical age; now we want to say with equal emphasis that the church is and ever must continue to be idealistic, the creator and propagator of ideals. Both statements are true, though to the ears of some accustomed to using the terms in a technical sense they may seem contradictory.

The church cannot be else than idealistic and be true to its great Head. Jesus was the supreme idealist of the ages and one of the great values of his life and teachings is the importance placed upon ideals and the impulse given to idealism. Jesus, as a man, thought higher thoughts and dreamed holier dreams than any other person before or since. He was continually saying, "Ye have heard that it hath been said, but I say unto you," and then he would raise the old stereotyped ideals out of their dead past and place them purified and sanctified high over all, so that they shone with a new glory and drew with a new attractiveness. They were practicable, for Jesus himself lived them; yet they were not easily attained, else they would not have been worthy ideals. Never was the Lord satisfied with the common standards of attainment or the common ideals. He continually desired fuller joy and life more abundant for all of his disciples. Even at the last he said to them, "I have many things to say unto you but ye cannot bear them now." How can the church which is so definitely and intimately his own, that it is permitted to wear his name and is known as his bride and even his very body, be true to its Founder if it be anything less than a great idealistic institution, creating and fostering ever higher and holier ideals?

The Apostles of our Lord caught his spirit and became great idealists. They held before themselves and those to whom they preached the great ideal life and the idealistic teachings of their incomparable Master. He is our pattern, they declared, our great exemplar. Paul, with a vision and a forward-reach that exceeded the measure of mortality, said, "We shall be like him." With that ideal in mind he was steadily "pressing forward," and urging his fellow-Christians to "increase more and more." Peter was ever saying to his fellow-followers of the lowly Nazarene that they should "as newborn babes desire the sincere milk of the word that they might grow thereby," and admonishing them that they should "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ." With such teachers the church could not but have gotten the idealistic attitude and vision. With such ideals held before them as these teachers constantly set forth, most naturally would the church become dissatisfied with the ideals and standards of the world. They had been taught to think higher thoughts, to speak a more heavenly language, to live nobler lives and to use their time and talents more unselfishly than common ideals would require. They were to come apart and be a separate people. They were to be in the world, serving and saving the world, yet not partaking of the spirit and life of the world. Their's was an idealism that transcended the world as the Master towered above the disciples, and it was that idealism that gave to the church the power that it possessed in those early days.

Today there is a call for a return to the idealism of the early church. In our application of the gospel to the manifold needs of the sin-sick world, there is a tendency to pass up that which seems too forbidding and challenging. There are many other worthy agencies with which the church is called upon to work; these are never able to fully appreciate the church's high standards and aims. There is a temptation for the church to lower her standards in the interest of harmony and a wider acceptance. This is always fatal, both to her inherent power and to the high opinion the world has of the church, for though the world does not accept in full the standard of the church, yet it has a high conception of the church's mission and ability. Instead of lowering her ideals, the church must hold to them and seek to make them popular, or to adapt them to the various institutions and organizations with which she deals. She must seek to be the creator of higher ideals for every individual and worthy institution in the world.

Just this one illustration. The church has been co-operating with the state in the common task to win the world war. She yielded unwilling to the method of combating this great evil, but her failure in some quarters of the world to hold up the full greatness of the Christ ideals made the terrible octopus possible and the method used the only one available. But now that the war is won, we find some influential factors of the church satisfying themselves with the ideals and standards necessarily adopted by the state during the war. Our nation was saved, and Europe was freed from German domination by means of the great man-destroying machinery of land and sea. It is most natural for the state to continue to put dependence in the army and navy. But for the church through its pulpit or its influential laity to preach a big navy and universal military training, is to sacrifice some of the highest ideals of her heritage. We may not blame the state for its dependence upon physical power, but we not only expect the church to look to the power of moral and spiritual forces for her strength and stay but to seek to inspire the state to have confidence in the power of moral forces also, and to endeavor constantly to induce the state to accept the ideals she was commissioned to preach. If the church has not confidence enough in the ideal that "right makes might" to depend on it and to practice it, how can she hope ever to lead the nations to accept it? If the church has not faith in the power of the gospel to cure the world of its war spirit, how can she hope for the world to believe in its value? Only as the church believes strongly in her ideals and is willing to put them to the test does she have power. And only as she seeks to impart to every institution and organization with which she deals a love for and a confidence in her own high ideals, does she become put them to the test does she have power. And only as she seeks to the saving salt of the world. If she remains true to her divine message and insists on the practicability of her transcendent ideals, she will have power to recreate the ideals of the world after the likeness of her own.

Where Shall We Find Our Ministers?

For a number of years the lament has been going up from the churches "We cannot find enough young men for the ministry. They are not presenting themselves for the ministry; they are entering other professions." There is no church but has felt this lack and there is none but has been puzzled about how to meet the need. For some years the recruits to our own ministry have not kept pace with the demand caused by denominational growth and ministerial loss by death and disability. Now the need is growing greater and the recruits are fewer. The great war prevented many young men from entering the ministry, who doubtless would have if there had been no interruption in their school plans. Everywhere colleges and seminaries have suffered a loss in students. We have shared in this loss in proportion to our numerical strength. The condition at present is grave. We could not possibly man our churches efficiently even if we were able to realize our goal of calling for an increase of forty new churches. It will be impossible to turn out enough new ministers besides students already holding pastorates by 1920 to supply the reduced goal of ten new churches should we be able to build that many. The churches already established are suffering for lack of pastoral care, and unless we can find some new ministers we shall not be able to hold and keep alive the churches we have. More than that our mission fields are calling for workers constantly. Both home and foreign fields could use several new ordained missionaries at this very hour. But where shall we find the boys and young men, as well as young ladies, out of which missionaries and ministers can be made?

The answer must be carried to every home where there is a promising young man or woman. It must be understood by every parent in such homes and every youth and maiden. Our recruits must come from Brethren homes. There may come a few from homes not Christian nor Brethren, but they will be the exception; they are very unusual now. We must look to the fathers and mothers of our own church to supply the leadership of our church. But we will look in vain for recruits in sufficient numbers, until Christian parents begin to dedicate their children to the service of God from their birth. If we had more Hannahs, we would have more Samuels. If we had more Zechariahs we would have more Johns who would be such winners of souls as to merit the complimentary title "The Baptist." Let the children be dedicated to God and be taught the significance of that fact as they grow to manhood and womanhood and it will be just as natural for them to follow the leading of the Holy Spirit as it is for the growing plant to follow the sunlight.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Dr. R. R. Teeter preached in the College Chapel Sunday in the absence of the pastor, Brother Garber.

Prof. J. A. Garber preached at Louisville, Ohio, on Sunday on the occasion of the observance of Christian Endeavor week. Further report will be made later by the Louisville Christian Endeavor President, Brother J. F. Painter.

Inquiry has reached our office wanting to know where to send money for Superannuated Ministers' Fund. We thought the name of Brother Herman Roscoe, of Goshen, Indiana, had been widely advertised, but we are glad to tell it again. He is the man who receives the money. And, by the way, if there are any churches that have not as yet been able to get their offerings in, you cannot do better than attend to it at the earliest possible moment. It is a duty than which there are none more binding on any church. It can be said of the Brethren family of churches as of individuals that "He that careth not for his own is worse than an infidel." "Now then do it," and do it now.

Brother Goughnour writes an interesting account of his trip among the hills of Pennsylvania. We cannot begin to suggest the things he tells about, you will be interested in reading his letter. It was a trip of much pleasure in that he visited many old friends, but it was also a trip on business for the King.

Brother Cobb says he is conducting a seminary all by himself in the Dayton church. He is laying much emphasis on the teaching function of the ministry which is right. Too many of our church members are unable to give a reason for the faith that is in them. Brother Cobb has something doing every night.

Brother Grisso reports his meeting held at Maple Grove under the heading of North Liberty, Indiana. The reason is, he is from North Liberty and one can never forget home, you know. His meeting at Maple Grove was quite successful. While there he discovered an efficient evangelistic song leader whom he recommends to those needing such assistance.

An appealing letter comes from a little group of worshippers at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, but it is quite evident that the editor can do nothing more than publish their appeal. Perhaps the Iliokota mission Board could give the assistance needed. If this faithful little band wishes to present their case to their district mission board, we suggest that they write to Brother H. L. Goughnour, Waterloo, Iowa, President of the Board.

Brother A. J. Rainey of Manassas, Virginia, has requested the addresses of all "sickly and dying" congregations. We will leave it to such congregations to reply for themselves. Perhaps Brother Rainey has a treatment to offer. We entertain a fear that few such congregations will be willing to "fess up"; they usually prefer to "pass out quietly."

An unsigned report comes from Riverside Institute. Doubtless some one forgot to sign it, no one would be ashamed of such a good report. Brother and Sister Humbert, and Miss MacMillan, the nurse, furnish cause for rejoicing not only to the faithful workers of Riverside, but to the Brotherhood as well. The spirit is moving upon the hearts of young people there and causing conversions. Miss MacMillan is now one of our own number.

Brother N. J. Paul sends an article for publication in the Evangelist which will find a place in due time, and also reports that the Muncie, Indiana, revival has proven to be a great success. They have received to date 31 new members into the church. Brethren Kimmel and Thomas are being greatly rewarded by the Lord for their labors. The Delaware county campaign is resulting splendidly for the Brethren church.

Another Sunday school is anxious to help along the Evangelist first page cut fund. Brother Ed Miller says, "You can count on our Sunday school." Thank you, Brother Ed. We knew Uniontown would get in on the proposition, she gets back of every good work. There are still others we are expecting to hear from, for we know there are many interested in a brighter as well as a better paper. Write the editor about it, but make your cheeks in favor of the Brethren Publishing Company and they will be handled by the Business Manager.

Brother Beachler is happy as a lark out on the western prairies. It isn't prairie chicken; it's prairie generosity that makes him happy. We imagine we can see Liberty Bonds hanging out of his pockets as he leaves Falls City. Brother Stuckman and his people certainly hit the thermometer hard. Wonder if it wasn't planned to take the belt away from Conemaugh? Well, they did it anyway. It was no small thing to do either. That Conemaugh bunch had set a high mark. There was no one in two states able to equal them. They are still the champions of Indiana and Pennsylvania. They set the high mark which served as a challenge to Falls City to go still higher. And now that one champion has been outpointed, we are expecting to learn of some other aspirant rising to dispute the title with Falls City. Maybe Conemaugh can "come back." You never can tell.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

From the Director of Goal Seven. By E. L. Miller

At the very beginning of this article I will say that I am one who is still saying, "Go to it" with respect to the Four Year Program. To me there is nothing else to do. What should the distractions of the past year have to do with our loyalty to the church and her interests other than to cause us to put on full steam ahead and to go to it as we have not yet done. I would ask, are you not eating and drinking the same as before the cyclone hit? Are not the church and the world as much in need of the everlasting Gospel as before? Must not our missionaries be supported even better than before, if we would meet the approval of God? And with all the work of reconstruction that is upon us without our having a word to say whether we were ready to meet it or not, is it the action that Christian prudence and love would dictate to drop our oars and let the thing drift? I know not how others may feel about it, but as for me and my efforts they will be directed by God's help to carrying on the work at hand and not giving up without a good sound trial. Any church member that would say that owing to the "flu" having been in his community he is unable to work as before—well, I don't like to say it, but the "flu" missed a victim that isn't a bit grateful for the fact that he is still alive and that God was pleased to let him live.

What is the matter with God's people if they will not rally to the call of the church to move forward after he has spared them from all the terrors that fly at night and that stalk about at noon-day? Folks, we must not let down on this work. We dare not do less now than formerly. Some time has been lost as far as meetings and such like are concerned, but did we let loose our grip on God simply because the churches were closed for a few Sundays? Shame on us if we did. How do you think some of our loyal isolated Brethren get along with only an occasional service sometimes not oftener than two or three a year? And how about that "big" money that our folks, farmers and mechanics, were making during the time of war and epidemic? Shall we appropriate it all and tell God that we cannot remember him any more simply because the churches were closed a few weeks? We would remember a debt that some one owed us for a longer time than that, so we must play fair with God and his work and not rob him (Mal. 3:8).

As director of goal seven, my work runs along the line of finances; and so I am emphasizing what we ought to do along those lines. But it is incumbent upon us to keep the spiritual fires burning, which I think is the best way to raise finances. If we fall down this year it is not going to be a matter of simply neglecting to bring the offerings up to the standard set, but it is going to be that we have failed miserably in staying with God in our times of prosperity. It is a recognized fact that times of material prosperity are times of spiritual defection, but I pray God that such will not be said about a WHOLE Gospel people like we profess to be. For worldly minded church members such may be permissible and generally true, but God spare us from participation in such disgraceful apostasy.

I would not scold neither would I have you interpret this as being of the nature of a scolding, but I am jealous for the church of which I am a member, and even more so for the great cause that our church represents. So it is that I try to bring to your notice the danger that we are in, by trying to excuse ourselves from doing the work of the Lord when we have had the most prosperous year in our history, and when in many ways we are more able to do that work than we have ever been in all our lives. The motto of the Four Year Program committee does not mean to quit, but it does mean that we are to do the work of the Kingdom as it is placed upon us and as we have obligated ourselves to do by taking on Jesus Christ in baptism and claiming the saving power of his blood. Let us pray that that saving power may now save us from doing less than we ought to do and therefore should do for the one who did so much for us. Make all the goals you can this year, and remember that anything less than your best will be nothing short of spiritual criminality.

NOW THEN DO IT.

This is said by Brother Ed. Need I tell you that? I am glad that he helps us to see it from this angle. You are here living when a lot of folks are dead and what for? To sail on, on flowery beds of ease? Not according to Brother Ed. To redouble your efforts and prove that you appreciate God's goodness in sparing you. You had wonderful prices and crops last year and now to let the Lord's tenth lapse or the Lord's cause wane would be the height of ingratitude. How much men seem to shrivel up when they have the opportunity to be big! Courage and self-sacrifice are the big traits that the soldier boys manifested when they willingly crossed the sea and braved the slaughter-pens of Europe. They have it in their blood. They will not easily give it up nor readily mix with a bunch of folks who have a program and do not do their best to make all the goals. This is a Program that is worthy of big efforts and unless all leaders make the big effort, they will come out wrong with God and man. I sincerely believe that no pastor can make light of it and please God.

When some one told Abraham Lincoln that he hoped God would be on his side, Lincoln answered, "I am not so much concerned to have God on my side, as to TRY TO PUT MYSELF ON GOD'S SIDE."

Paul said, "Measuring themselves by themselves and comparing themselves among themselves, they are not wise." Shakespeare said, "People seldom improve when they have no model but themselves to copy." Surely they knew. Then on again to the Program. Let no man fear or fail.

BAME.

GENERAL ARTICLES

The Church and Reconstruction. BY E. D. Burnworth

It is evident upon every hand that the reconstruction period following the close of the war will be fraught with very many and very grave dangers. The political and industrial questions are not the only great problems that remain difficult of solution. Individuals and nations have been vitally changed by the great movements set in motion during this great crisis. The world will never again be what it was before that eventful day of August, 1914. Changes profound and far-reaching in their influence have been bearing us forward until we are awakening to the fact that we are coming upon a new world of thought and feeling. The greatest changes of this war have not been material, however completely devastated is northern France and Belgium. The greatest changes have been wrought in the thought and feeling aspects of life. Here we cannot go back and again be as though the war had never been. It is largely a question of time until France and Belgium shall recover their pre-war material form, but apart from generations of marked degeneracy we can never think and feel as we did before this crisis came upon us. Here we come face to face with the task before the church that we may conserve the moral and spiritual gains incident to this world experience.

I am convinced that the place of the church in the future has been made secure by this war. While magazine writers and some authors of books are telling us that the church with her present institutions is obsolete and that since the great experience of the war the world will have none of our worn out systems of religion, I am convinced that the war has just done the opposite. Certainly this war has demonstrated the need of just such things as the church stands for and the necessity of just such service as the church renders. Never did the church with her message of love, her power to change the lives of men, her holding fast to ideals when gross materialism dominated, need to come closer to the life of the world than today. The war has opened up anew this great need which the church alone is able to fully satisfy. So long as the need is so great will there be of necessity a provision for the church to supply that need.

We have been repeatedly told that when the soldiers return they are going to revolutionize our effete religious customs and give us vital religion instead. Some have even gone so far as to boldly announce that the war has rung the death knell of denominations as such, and with the return of the soldiers to civilian life such things will pass. These are all a kind of criticism born in a moment of excitement when highly strung men are swept off their feet in the presence of a catastrophe too colossal for them to comprehend and properly interpret. We all believe that our army was the cleanest morally that ever went to the front, but if they come home and become great religious leaders then war is not what Sherman truthfully said it was. War was not designed to develop and train religious leaders. You can't make a man who knows believe that it develops the highest and best in man to learn how to crowd a bayonet through the writhing form of his fellow-being. He may pray before the charge, but once into the fray the prayer turns to a curse and he kills and slays with all the passion of his lower nature.

I just returned from a base hospital where are to be seen and heard more than 2,000 maimed and crippled men who have seen service overseas and here you have the same old story which is typical—some of the choicest and sweetest spirits mingled with others in striking contrast. We have tried everything to prevent war but religion. We are now to try the League of Nations as a preventive, but the League of Nations will never prevent war so long as men have it in their natures to wage war. Until the time comes when the spirit of war is replaced by the spirit of the Christ there will be wars and rumors of war. None of the nations that precipitated the crisis ever tried New Testament Christianity as a preventive of war. The war has called attention to this fact, thereby giving place and recognition to the work of the church in the future. Among the things that will be tried in the future to prevent war will be religion and here the church will find her opportunity and point of contact with men as individuals and with institutions.

A government official at Washington sensed this truth as is evidenced by the following quotation: "I have discovered that there is a very definite limit beyond which it is not proper for the government to go in affirming moral ideals and mobilizing the mental and spiritual forces of the country for national service. The state and the church are officially disunited, and it is well indeed that this is so. But there is a point where the state leaves off and the church begins. And I, as an individual Christian, see a great work which the church as a whole might take up, at the very point where the state must of necessity lay it down."

"But, looking upon the net result of all this government propaganda I can see that it tends mightily to create throughout the country the sentiment that 'Victory will be on the side of the biggest army.' Therefore we must build the biggest army and fight in the biggest way possible. The state as such can not do otherwise. And we see even ministers of the gospel catching step with this idea which is implied by this government propaganda, and emphasizing the duties of citizenship just as the government does, which of course is all well and good, but they are doing it to the exclusion of their higher function of emphasizing the spiritual fact that finally and unquestionably, right makes right. The biggest army that could be imagined must be wisely directed or its efforts will not win a final victory for the right. The wisdom which is, therefore, the supreme necessity of the nation to give emphasis to this fact, which all spiritually minded men can see is a national bulwark of the first order, is not the function of the state but of the church."

"Now this government propaganda must go on and because it stops short of spiritual things and their relation to national success, it leaves the inference that God is on the side of the greatest armies. And yet, if the church as a whole stands for any one idea about which there could be no dispute, it is the idea that God rules the world and the universe and determines issues by the superior weight of moral and spiritual force rather than by the preponderance of material forces unsupported by him. The church must be caused to see and feel that the very foundations of spiritual thinking are threatened if the idea continues to grow by state emphasis that 'Dynamite determines the destiny of nations,' therefore have plenty of it."

The church now faces a great crisis in her history. The place of position and opportunity is given her and it remains to be seen whether or not she will be able to marshal her forces and win the victory. The church has fully proven that she can supply the unselfish moral purpose that sustains in a time of tension and great strain. Motives of pride and anger and hate may last for a time, but only an unselfish moral purpose will endure all things. This service rendered during the great crisis gives the church her opportunity in a time of peace and reconstruction when we are to build a new world. The church can render no greater service than holding true to her ideals and adapting herself to changed conditions so as to render the greatest and largest service possible.

During the darkest hour of the Civil War the great Lincoln said to a Christian delegation that waited upon him,

"Blessed be God who in an hour like this giveth us the churches." Thus many a man has said in this late crisis when all seemed to be lost. Atheistic France now rises to explain the victory of the battle field in one all comprehensive term, "God." The great danger that the church faces is that she will compromise her position in the presence of the great opportunity and leave the work of the Lord to serve tables. If she remains true to her commission we shall soon be upon the eve of a great religious awakening such as has not been seen in our generation.

The Law of Sympathy. By Miss Mary Pence

To see Christ in all his loveliness is to desire for one's self the many attributes of his holy character, outstanding among which is his great compassion for struggling humanity. The Psalmist expresses it thus: "The Lord is gracious and full of compassion." He is full of compassion for the hungry multitude; full of compassion for a sin-sick and afflicted multitude; full of compassion for the widow of Naim, for the leper, for the deaf, the dumb, the blind, for the birds of the air and the lilies of the field. The Bible and sacred history are records of the compassion of the Christ. Down through the ages it has come ever seeming to enlarge, growing more deep and tender with the years, until it is extended to us in a wonderfully rich fullness—to us for whom Christ died.

The measure of one's character is the capacity to identify one's life with others. One's life is no greater than one's propensities to share life with others and to enter into life with them. One's sympathies then are the measure of one's character.

There is a form of sympathy which is merely organic and is more or less unconscious. This is manifested when a person laughs or weeps with others not knowing what it is about. A higher form of sympathy is caused by similar experiences of life. The tears spring to the eyes of two mothers in greeting because each has lost a son in battle. Still another form is sympathy of ideas. Religious, social or political ideas bind people into a oneness of sympathy. And thus we find people being more generous toward persons of their own religious, social, or political ideas than toward persons representing organizations of other ideas. But the highest form of sympathy is that which goes out to others irrespective of creed, social standing, nationality, color, or wealth; a feeling for the common good; that feeling which makes all the world akin. The perfect pattern of this form of sympathy is found in Christ Jesus; was exemplified in the apostles, and has been one of the chief aims of attainment of every one who would be as his Master.

Sympathy is one of the most economical things of life because it is an expansive feeling which enlarges personality. When a life incorporates the foreigner, the heathen, the poor, and also the rich, the sick, and the sorrowing; when a life can identify itself with the flowers, the birds, the rocks, the brooks, music, and the joys of others, that soul becomes grandly enlarged because of the manifold things that enter into it. The more points of contact with the world the greater the life. If a day, a person, or even a circumstance is shut out of life that life is narrowed to just that degree.

Sympathy, like mercy, blesses the giver and the receiver. The people who enter into the sorrows of others can also enter their joys. In these acts of sympathies organic work is better carried on. Heart action is quicker, circulation freer, respiration better, and the blood purified. Muscular energy, nerve energy, intellect and memory are better under the influence of sympathetic feeling. How much quicker, better, and more joyfully done is a task when in sympathy with it. When a life is in accord with the person and teachings of Jesus how effective its labors for Christ and the church! The person of most sympathies has the greatest possibilities of life. In contrast with this such emotions as fear, anger, hatred, or disgust hamper and narrow the life. Because of lack of sympathy lower savages cannot live together in large groups or towns. The more sympathetic people are the more civilized and the more they seek each other's company. Sympathy always draws many friends unto itself.

We are attracted by mutual sympathies which lead us by a natural process to become like the people and things we love. We have a life like the illustration in Hawthorne's "Great Stone Face." Paul says, "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord."

The formation of the sympathies should be the prime aim of education. Christ magnified sympathy in his life and teaching. Let it be taught that sympathy is a virtue not to be canceled; that the inability to spell well is less a disgrace than to have an unkind bearing toward the poor or unfortunate. So much is made of emulations and competitions which do not call forth the co-operative spirit. Our worthiness is measured by our ability to get ahead. We should be valued according to the measure of our love for others. "He that saveth his life shall lose it."

The sympathetic side of life should be trained as a means of encouraging obedience. At home, in school, in the state, and in the church perfect obedience is possible only when it springs from the heart in sympathy with the thing to be done. People can be restrained by the police or army, but it is better to constrain them by enlisting their sympathy with the law. To observe Christ's law through fear does not save. We must love the law.

Parents should teach sympathy in the home. One mother continually reminds her children that they get their faces and clothes soiled, and act rude like "the little dirty Moore's." They are not allowed to play with or share their good things with "the little dirty Moores." A mother of the same town says to her children, "I wonder if the dear little Moore children will get anything for Christmas? Mrs. Moore works so hard, prices are so high and Mrs. Moore is so frail. You children help me fix up some good things for them. And Ethel, you ask Lena over to play with your dolls one day." Children should learn at home the art of sympathetic sharing and living.

A narrow sympathy often displays a narrow knowledge of people, places and things. Hatred, jealousy, or suspicion may come from pure ignorance as well as from an evil heart. We depend much on the exhortation to "love our neighbors" and not enough on "know your neighbors." How can we love those whom we do not know? Where minds are well trained in broad thinking and religious teaching there is less class distinction. The religion of Christ knows no castes. It is a poor religion that is narrowed to one's own set. It is a poor patriotism limited to one's own neighborhood or nation. Until we have broader sympathies among nations and individuals the danger of war will never be done away with in the world.

Compassion is a Bible command. "Rejoice with them that do rejoice and weep with them that ween." "Put on therefore, as God's elect, holy and beloved, a heart of compassion." "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." "He that hath pity on the poor lendeth to the Lord." "Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and them that suffer adversity as being yourself in the body." "But who hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him." "Finally be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous."

Those who feel the lack of this attribute of Christian character let them remember that every good gift is from above; that Christ is able to make every gift and grace abound; and that God still answers persevering, believing prayer.

Visiting the Sick. By Mary A. Laughlin, M.D.

Many persons visit the sick because it is enjoined by the scriptures, without any very clear idea as to the reason for the injunction. Some people have seemed to me to have the idea that the more critical the condition of the patient the more visiting should be done. Like all injunctions of scripture this one is given for the good of those to whom it applies. Every measure that ministers to the comfort of the sick person either in body or in mind is good for him and hastens his recovery; or if he cannot recover it cheers his declining days or hours and makes this time of trial a little less hard. In this way a cheerful or an entertaining visit is helpful.

When visiting the sick do not make long calls; he is weak and soon becomes tired. Let your conversation be cheerful and natural, avoiding all unpleasant subjects; do not talk to him about his own case, leave that to his physician. It is just as well to address most of your remarks to some other person in the room; it tries the patient less to listen than it does to answer you.

There should not be more than two or three persons in the room at one time, and there should not be many visitors in any one day. It is best for the sick to have their visitors early in the day, never after nightfall. The sick person needs to get ready for sleep early in the evening; an evening visit has destroyed a night's rest for many a patient.

A present of fruit or a small dish of some delicacy is often relished by the patient. Flowers are always appreciated; but be careful not to send those with marked odors; no matter how agreeable the odor may be to a well person, it may nauseate the sick. This is particularly noticeable in connection with tuberose and carnations. Good flowers to send are asters, chrysanthemums, roses, snap-dragons, daisies and nasturtiums.

If the patient is able to read, it is nice to send books and magazines with good print.

But there are different classes of sick people; some of them should be visited and some of them should not. When a patient is critically ill and requires perfect quiet, a visit from any one, even his best friend, is harmful. Do not visit a very ill person unless he asks for you; in that case go at once.

By the bedside of seemingly unconscious patients it is cruel to say anything you would not want them to hear; they can sometimes hear when they are not able to make any sign.

There is a very practical kind of visiting which can be done where there is severe illness. Those who are caring for the sick often become worn out by reason of long vigils and inadequate help; you can offer to spend a night with the patient, or to stay several hours during the day to relieve the regular nurse, or you can do some of the household work, or do outside errands, such as marketing.

The people who particularly need the social visits of their friends are the convalescents, especially if the convalescence is of long duration. The victims of slow chronic diseases, persons with failing sight and those whose powers are failing because of advanced years are especially in need of visits from their friends.

Go to see these people as often as you can; read to them, play games with them, entertain them in any way you can. Visit them often, particularly if they are your own relatives, or if they happen to be people who have not been able to make many friends. Do it with no thought of reward; do it not from a sense of duty, but because you want to help those who need help; all the time you will have the reward of a good conscience, and some day you will hear the blessed words, "Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, you have done it unto me."

Our Best for Heaven's Best. By Roy Brumbaugh

God gave the world his best, gave his "only begotten" and "well beloved" Son, the infinite one, to become the Savior of the world. The very God thus became the servant of mankind and suffered the penalty of a violated law though he himself had never disobeyed it. He was crucified between two thieves though he had done nothing amiss. He was numbered among the transgressors that he might save transgressors. The Father would trust no one else but his Son. He did not send the archangel or any other one of the angelic hosts, but sent his only Son that he might redeem a lost world. And Jesus did not come unwillingly, but gladly came and gave himself up to be the perpetual sacrifice for sin. How much we owe to him! Blessed Jesus, how we ought to honor and adore him!

Since Christ gave his best for the church, we ought to be alive and active and giving our very best to him. We are not justified by works, but we ought by our works show our love and gratitude to him who justified us by his own works. We are saved by faith in him and not by any merit of our own, yet we ought to show our faith by our works. We ought to give him our very best service. Let us be glad that the Christ we are to serve is no dead king whose honor we are called upon to defend, but a living King whose behests we are bidden to obey. Though Christ died to redeem the world, yet he planned to use the church, his body, to carry out his redemptive plans in the world. Is the church measuring up to her opportunities and responsibilities, to Christ's expectations of her? He expects it to be a living church: a dead church cannot carry a head, nor do the work of a living Christ. The church must be alive and active, if it is to be indeed the body of Christ, and its members must not be idle or serving the devil if they are to be counted a part of that body.

Fellow ministers and members of the body of Christ, are we giving our best to him who gave heaven's best for us? Are we giving our best to him who gave his life for us? We are called upon to give our bodies as living sacrifices. Are we dead to sin and alive unto him? Are we keeping our conduct above reproach? If so, let the world talk, it talked about our Lord and Master. We are called upon to "Let brotherly love continue? Are we unkindly critical, or jealous of each other's success? We are called to be ambassadors for the eternal King and carry his living message to men. Paul said to Timothy, "Preach the word," and again, "Do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry." Put the very best you have into your work for Christ and the church and preach the word as it is found in the old Book.

I have prayed God for a message that would arrest the ear of the old world, startle men in their sin and thrill them with conviction. I know if I ever receive it, it will be from him. I know that the nearer the minister comes to Christ the more he feels the burning of desire for the saving of the lost, and the more unworthy he feels to stand in his own strength and alone. To give the world and the church our best we must depend upon Christ. But this we must do, and it is my motto: "Give the world the best." And the world needs my best and your best as never before. Men of leisure, men of wealth, men of business, men of pleasure, men of talents, men of glorious and golden opportunities, what are you doing in God's world for God? You were placed here for a purpose, for God created none to be idle. He needs your best. The world needs your best. Give your best for heaven's best. The time is short. The trumpet of God may soon be sounded, "Jesus is coming. They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever." Let me beseech you today to vow with me and be determined to give YOUR BEST FOR HEAVEN'S BEST.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The God of Revelation. By Wm. C. Teeter

TEXT: "Prepare to meet thy God." Amos 4:12

The author of this text was Amos, a Judean, the unknown shepherd-prophet, the prophet of judgment upon Israel. He hurled his burning anathemas, especially against the kingdom of Israel but he also indicted Judah and the surrounding nations. He uttered the judgments of Jehovah against the kingdom of Israel during the reign of Jeroboam II, the king who brought this idolatrous kingdom to the zenith of its power. The judgments pronounced against Israel by the prophet who came so unexpectedly upon the scene, seemed very improbable of fulfillment judging from the outward appearance of prosperity during this reign, and yet within fifty years the kingdom was utterly destroyed. The ten tribes were driven into exile and never returned, and thus lost their identity as a kingdom. The profligate nation had met its Waterloo, a thing undreamed of when the judgments were issued by the mouth of that faithful prophet of God (Amos 7:14, 15).

The text, "Prepare to meet thy God," was the special call and warning to Israel to repent of their flagrant sin against Jehovah in the worship of heathen deities, and unless the people would forsake their sins utter destruction awaited them. This history of results is one of the most patent proofs of the existence of a supreme deity overruling the nations of the earth, and also of the fulfillment of his word, in the punishment of his own covenant people, who so wilfully forsook him for the husks of idolatry. Not all the prophecies of Amos have been fulfilled, for some of them still await completion in the coming Kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ (Amos 9:8-15). As in that day, even so in this, unless the professing church heeds the call of God and awakens from her lethargy and apostasy, she, too, will reap what she has sown; likewise each individual member of her body is personally responsible for his own act in the Christian life, and must receive his just deserts for his own deeds (Matt. 24:14, 42, 44, 50; 2 Pet. 3:3-18; 2 Tim. 3:1).

If then, there be a God, and he has revealed himself to man, it becomes most important that we should give heed to his behests and obey his commands cheerfully and willingly with the utmost sincerity as creatures of his wisdom and grace. This text, "Prepare to meet thy God" brings us face to face with the edict of the Supreme Being who has authority to issue such a command. Let us recall some of the evidences for such a deity.

I do not think it needful, Brethren, in the dawn of this twentieth century after Christ, to argue with you that you have souls and that your life is not as the life of the beasts that perish. Traces of this general conviction are found in the history of mankind through all the ages. From the beginning of time the human race has believed this, though from the dawn of history a few philosophers have disputed it. A poet expresses this conviction in the simple lines which follow:

"Life is real, life is earnest,
And the grave is not its goal;
Dust thou art to dust returnest,
Was not spoken of the Soul."

It is perfectly easy for a man to say, if he will, "I do not believe in a God. I do not care to offer up any worship, even of the silent sort, at the altar of the unknown or the unknowable. I do not care, even to pray that wild prayer, once uttered by a criminal upon the scaffold: 'O, God! if there be a God, save my soul, if I have a soul!'" A man may say all this, and yet, unless he has deliberately committed spiritual suicide, his higher nature will send the conviction to his soul that there is a something, an absolute, a beyond! But if he has committed spiritual suicide, it is impossible to offer him any proof that will convince him.

Take the professed atheist out under the canopy of night and show him the stars of heaven, ask him whether he really holds them to be nothing more than "shining illusions of the night, eternal images of deception in an imaginary heaven, golden lies in dark blue nothingness." But if he deny or reject such arguments as these, which have been enough in all the ages for the millions of humanity; if, in short, he will not see God because clouds and darkness are round about him, although righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his seat; then we can do no more. He must believe or not believe, as seems him best and bear the responsibility. "We cannot argue about color to the blind; we cannot prove the glory of music to the deaf. It would be vain to argue the beautiful harmonies of Mozart and Beethoven, of Jennie Lind or Paderewski to them. If a man shuts his eyes hard, we cannot make him see the sun."

Without further controversy, I assert that God has revealed himself to mankind in three books. 1ST. THE BOOK OF NATURE. We need only to direct your attention to the heavens above, the earth beneath and teeming nature around us, to convince the intelligent and unbiased mind of the fact, that in all these can be seen the wisdom and design of a Supreme Being, one higher and nobler than a creature of earth. Where is the philosopher, scientist or naturalist, who can produce a spear of grass as it is in nature? There is none. This proves that there is a higher power than mortal man at the helm guiding and controlling the universe.

It is certainly more reasonable to admit that a self-existent, almighty, omniscient and omnipresent Creator exists, than the endless variety of objects in nature are self-existent and self-controlled. Who ever saw things made without an author? Who has known laws without a lawgiver? Who can see without eyes or hear without ears? Science has failed to explain the cause or the method of the origin of force, either physical, chemical or vital. Darwinism has sought in vain in the kingdom of nature for evidence to prove that MAN is a creature of evolution, to prove that through successive stages of development from the lower order of animals, has been produced thinking, reasoning, animal man. Oh, what folly! Oh, what madness! Truly, "The Fool hath said in his heart there is no God" (Psalms 14:1).

Prof. Agassiz, that eminent Swiss naturalist, who made Bibliological Zoology his special study, while lecturing at Harvard to his students said, "Gentlemen, until we can prove that matter can reason, can will, can think, we must conclude that behind matter is a Supreme Intelligence, the Cause, the Background of all causation."

The Bible testifies to Nature: Genesis 1:1—"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," etc.

Hebrews 11:3—"By faith we understand and that the worlds have been framed by the word of God, so that what is seen hath not been made out of things which appear." Rom. 1:20—"The invisible things of him since the creation of the world are clearly seen, being perceived through the things that are made, even his eternal power and deity." J. M. Neale says, "That is wise counsel of the Rabbins, that the three best safeguards against falling into sin are to remember, first, that there is an ear which hears everything; second, an eye that sees everything; third a hand which writes everything in the Book of Knowledge which shall be opened at the Judgment!"

SECOND. BOOK OF MAN'S CONSCIENCE: Conscience is the power or faculty in man by which he distinguishes between right and wrong in conduct and character, and which commands and obligates him to do the right and abstain from doing the wrong. It is the sense of moral obligation. It has been called God's deputy in man. Conscience asserted itself in the minds of great men from Adam to Christ. It is well known that Anaxagoras, the distinguished Greek philosopher was exiled forever from his native land (though in the fifth century before Christ, he was so eloquently defended by his friend Pericles) simply because he dared to teach, "An intelligent cause for all things, and that nothing came by chance."

Aristotle, who was claimed to be an atheist said, "I entered the world in impurity. I have lived in anxiety, I shall die in perturbation, Cause of Causes pity me!"

Socrates, the strictest moralist of his age, taught an "Intelligent Cause" and the "Immortality of the soul." and was made to drink the "Hemlock" because he would not recant. When they said to him in derision, "We will bury you," he replied, "You may bury me if you can catch me." And then he drank the "Hemlock." He was said to be too honest, because he would not permit his wife and family in court during trial, lest they might arouse the sympathy of the court and judges and prejudice them in his favor.

Cicero, "the golden tongued," said, "Whatever that is which thinks, which understands, which wills, which acts, it is something celestial and divine; and upon that account, must necessarily be eternal." Conscience gropes after God, but if defiled leads to idolatry.

The Bible testifies to conscience. Titus 1:15—"To the pure all things are pure (that are pure): but to them that are defiled and unbelieving nothing is pure (that is pure); but both their mind and their conscience are defiled." Rom. 1:28—"Even as they refused to have God in their knowledge, God gave them up unto a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not fitting."

Again Paul says (Romans 2:14, 15, 16), "For when Gentiles that have not the law do by nature the things of the law, these, not having the law, are the law unto themselves; in that they show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience bearing witness therewith, and their thoughts one with another accusing or else excusing them; in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men, according to my gospel, by Jesus Christ."

THIRD. GOD HAS REVEALED HIMSELF IN THE BIBLE. By the name of El-Shadai (God Almighty), "the All-Sufficient One, he revealed himself to Abraham (Genesis 17:1), to Isaac and to Jacob (Exodus 6:3); then he revealed himself to Moses as the "I AM" (Exodus 3:14), and as the "I AM JEHOVAH." He is the covenant-keeping God to Jeremiah (10:10, 12), "Jehovah is the true God: he is the living God, and an everlasting King; he hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and by his understanding hath he stretched out the heavens."

As hereinbefore stated, men of renown have been conscious of God as the Supreme Deity. It is said of Daniel Webster, the forensic statesman, that at a banquet he was requested to state the greatest thought of his life, and replied after a moment's pause, "Gentlemen, the greatest thought of my life, is personal accountability to God."

In view of all that has been said concerning the God of revelation, what is our attitude toward him? Have we accepted his message to man, or spurned his grace and goodwill to all in the dawn of this twentieth century of the Christian era? What about it? How many have never given one hour to self-examination, or to a serious review of life. In our circumstances what recklessness, what madness is this! Do we sail a sea where there is neither storm, nor cross tides, nor sunken rock, nor shifting sand banks, that we go so merrily on with songs below and dances on the deck, neither keeping watch, nor taking observations, nor heaving the lead for soundings? There would be fewer souls as well as ships lost if men would use the means of safety. We shrink from examining ourselves, but if, when judging our own case with a strong bias in our own favor, we hesitate to examine ourselves, how shall we stand at the bar of judgment (2 Corinthians 5:10)? How endure the searching eye of God? None are beyond the reach of redemption who will to be saved.

Men are going to ruin, but not like the boat that was seen shooting the rapid and had reached a point above the cataract where no power could stem the raging current. To the horror of those who watched it shooting on to destruction, a man was seen on board asleep. The spectators ran along the banks. They cried. They shouted. The sleeper awoke at length to take in all his danger at one fearful glance. To spring to his feet, to throw himself on the bench, to seize the oars, to strain every nerve in superhuman efforts to turn the boat's head to the shore, was the work of an instant. But all was in vain. Like an arrow from the bow, the boat went to its doom. It hangs a moment on the edge of the gulf, and then, is gone forever. Suppose a man to be as near hell! If I could awaken him, I would. The dying thief was saved in the act of going over into perdition, Christ caught him and saved him there. And he, who is mighty to save, saving to the uttermost, can save though all our life were wasted to its last breath, if that last breath be spent in gasping out that intrepid Peter's cry. "Save me, Lord, I perish!"

But now in looking forward, what about the days to come, as we stand upon the threshold of this new year, are we at peace with man and at peace with God? We must meet God face to face at sometime, for as believers, "We must all appear at the bema judgment seat of Christ" (2 Corinthians 5:10) for our crowns or awards. If we are unbelievers, we will be summoned to the judgment of the Great White Throne (Revelations 20:11). We must meet him and he will pass on our case. For we go hence when we go hence, we are going somewhere.

There are three things from which no human being can escape: (1) He cannot escape from God, for in fleeing from him, he is going to him. "Whither shall I flee from thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence?" (Psalms 139)? (2) He cannot escape from himself. Annihilation cannot come to his rescue, for he is an eternal entity. "Man goeth to his long home;" "the spirit returneth unto God who gave it (Ecclesiastes 12). (3) He cannot escape from the record of his irreversible past. "For God will bring every work into judgment with every hidden thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil" (Ecclesiastes 12:14). Hence the only escape of man from the penalty of sin is by the gracious provision of shelter under the blood of Christ. The most that can be done, is that he may shelter himself beneath the atonement of Christ Jesus, and this can only screen his "record," not obliterate it; only cover it and hide it from view, but the record itself will remain one of the eternal verities. God cannot see my sins when covered with Jesus' blood, "He bore them in his own body on the TREE."

Christian education is not compulsory. It is man's awful prerogative to refuse to learn of God by studying his Word and by communing with his Spirit. But the wise of every age have sought to know of divine things. They have sat at Christ's feet, like Mary of Bethany and have heard the commendation of the Master, "Thou hast chosen the better part."

The prohibition amendment in the United States was not put into the Constitution by the South any more than by the West, nor was it put into the Constitution by the West any more than by the East. It was not a movement of the monied classes, or of the middle classes, of capital, of labor, of this church or that church, of the Anti-Saloon League, or the W. C. T. U., or the Democrats, or Republicans, but of the whole people—the people of every State—North, South, East, West, Democrats and Republicans; rich, poor; all united with one heart in the determination that Americanism shall not perish from the earth.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

ANNOUNCING DR. TOMBAUGH

To Write Sunday School Lessons.

Plans for the improvement of our Sunday School page are ready for announcement. Brother Gnagey, Editor of our Sunday School Publications has co-operated with the Editor of the Evangelist in making these plans.

It is our great pleasure to announce that Dr. J. M. Tombaugh has consented to write expositions on the Sunday school lessons for the second quarter. This will be welcome news to our readers, for all who know Brother Tombaugh know that whether he writes or speaks he gives forth something worth while.

The subjects for the second quarter are of unusual interest. It is doubtful if we have ever had a series of Sunday school lesson subjects more vital and practical. They are entitled, "Some Great Teachings of the Bible." The International Lesson Committee has planned this series of studies with a view to bringing prominently before the minds of all who are in any way connected with the great Sunday school movement the great fundamental truths of the Bible—the doctrines fundamental to faith and practice. The several topics have been carefully chosen and accompanied with a great variety of Bible passages all bearing directly on the subjects. "It is the aim to induce the pupil to range through the entire Bible, and become acquainted with all the leading passages relating to each theme introduced, thus growing familiar with all parts of the Bible and discovering the unity of the Book." The "Teacher's Guide" says concerning these topics: "They are all positive, constructive studies. Naturally, many of our lessons are negative, full of 'Thou shalt nots.' Here we have 'Thou Shalt.' They do not so much warn against evil as impel to good. They teach not so much that one is responsible for the evil that he does as that he is responsible for the good that he ought to achieve. Be ye lovers of the Word is their thought. The beauty of these lessons is that THEY CAN BE LIVED."

Here are the subjects:

Second Quarter

God Our Heavenly Father
Christ Our Savior
Immortality (Easter Lesson)
The Holy Spirit Our Helper
Man Made in the Image of God
Sin and Its Consequences
The Grace of God
Repentance Faith
Obedience
Prayer
Love

This quarter's lessons will doubtless prove not only interesting and enlightening, but have a wonderfully deepening influence in the spiritual life of our schools and churches. It offers an opportunity for evangelism such as few courses have. During this quarter every school ought to put on a campaign for reaching those who never go to Sunday school or church. People who are not interested in the church or Sunday school as such, will be interested in these subjects if you bring them to their attention, for they deal with problems that are vital to every life whether he claims to be religious or not. Everybody is interested in God, in Christ, in the future life and the many questions relating to great realities. Use these subjects as drawing cards to the Sunday school. Tell them to your friends, publish them in your local paper, print them on hand-bills and write them in letters of invitation to those who are not in any school.

We are expecting to have another announcement to make later concerning the third quarter that will be equally interesting. In that quarter we will study twelve of the practical aspects of the Christian life as set forth in topics dealing with various instruments and means of grace. Those subjects will be more distinctly denominational and we have an interesting plan on which we are working that will result in something of permanent value.—The Editor.

Temperance for all the World

In working for a dry world the Sunday school forces are already active. Special attention is given to temperance work by the various field secretaries of the World's Sunday School Association. These men are located in Cairo, Manila, Tokyo, Shanghai, Pyeongyang, Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires and Santiago, Chile. Posters, which have been so effective in presenting the facts, have been sent to all these men, as well as the best temperance literature from the leading organizations in this country. Some of the best temperance literature from the leading organizations in this country. Some of the leaflets have already been translated into the languages of the respective countries. Special co-operation is being rendered in Japan by Mr. K. Uchida of the House of Peers. Until recently he was Minister of the Communications of the Japanese Government. Through the good offices of the World's Sunday School Association Mr. Uchida has also been provided with a supply of literature which will be used in developing the Dry Japan sentiment. His plan is a Safety First Prohibition organization for Japan that shall promote prohibition from the standpoint of Japan's highest advancement.

Palestine being under martial law, no regular missionary work has been opened up but in a quiet way preparations are being made and Christian leaders are in close touch with the native pastors and Sunday school superintendents. The churches and Sunday schools were sadly broken up by Turkish interference and persecution, but every one now feels full of confidence and hope. It was very touching in Syria to see the overflowing joy of the people at the liberation brought by the troops of General Allenby and the French Naval contingent which co-operated along the coast.

Some Training Classes

A number of persons have ordered "The Educative Process in Religion" by Dr. L. L. Garber, saying that they hoped to organize a class ere long. Some have already organized their classes.

A. E. Whitted of Morrill, Kansas, purchased five books, but has a class of ten members.

H. M. Harley ordered five books for Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and expects to organize a promising class at the close of their meeting.

Some time ago we mentioned Portis, Kansas with its order of fifteen books. Brother Brumbaugh sent for two additional copies recently and they hope to have need of others.

The superintendent at Flora, Indiana, sent in two orders for ten copies each. Brother Whetstone is an energetic Sunday school man and with the help of Brother Henderson they should have a fine class.

The latest order for twenty copies comes from Lanark, Illinois, where they have just dedicated a new church. With modern equipment and efficient leaders like Miss Alieo Garber, the district superintendent and Brother Burnworth, a resourceful Sunday school pastor, gratifying reports may be expected.

J. A. GARBBER.

White Gifts of Victory and Peace.

The following "White Gifts" received since last report—

Johnstown, Pa., 3rd Church,	$ 25.00
Maurertown, Va.,	104.14
Portis, Kan.,	10.00
Portis, Kan., by J. E. Melheiser, .	10.00
Hudson, Iowa,	25.00
North Manchester, Ind.,	75.00
Milford, Ind.,	17.29
Telford, Tenn.,	27.00
Pleasant Hill, Ohio,	5.00
Total,	$ 388.43
Previously reported,	$2,322.41

Grand Total,$2,710.84
Maurertown last year led all other schools in the Maryland-Virginia district in the amount given and leads again this year, with an increase of 117 percent over last year's offering.

Telford, Tennessee sends a fine offering for the first contribution from that mission for our work.

ALBERT TRENT,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

Illikota's Inning

Finding it difficult to administer the work from long range, district organization in Christian Endeavor is encouraged as well as in other lines of our church work. It is easier for district leaders to keep in closer touch with the societies of their constituency. For several years now the Illikota Conference has supported a group of Christian Endeavor officers. Certain conditions made it necessary for the conference to elect an entire new cabinet at their last meeting. The officers selected, however, are neither untried nor inexperienced. This fact becomes apparent in the message of the district goal director, Miss Elizabeth Hildebrand of Waterloo, Iowa. The other officers are: President, Ray Emmert, Dallas Center, Iowa; Vice President, Miss Martha Johnson, Hudson, Iowa; Secretary, Miss Letha Bunch, Leon, Iowa. We hope that these persons, also, will join Miss Hildebrand in communicating with their societies and Endeavorers. This page is open to all our workers.

J. A. GARBER.

Reminiscences and Reminders BY Elizabeth Hildebrand

District Christian Endeavor Goal Director of Illikota

In a recent copy of the Evangelist an article appeared under the heading: "What has Christian Endeavor Done for You?" After reading it and thinking it over, I came to the conclusion that some of the young people appreciated what has been done for them through the work of the Endeavor society and especially in disclosing possibilities for their future.

Some of us had our first training in a country church where our meetings were held in the front seats of the church, there being no separate room for us, while the older members of the congregation sat in the back seats and looked on. Since then I have often wondered how we had the courage to do it. However, the training, even though it was rather severe, was very beneficial. Some of us have reason yet to thank our pastor, J. L. Gillin, who helped us so much at that time.

In recent years, we have heard this statement, "Christian Endeavor is losing its power;" but I am not quite ready to accept that statement. I wonder if we realize the possibilities there are in the Junior and Intermediate societies. Sunday school experts tell us that the work of the Sunday school centers about the Intermediate department because that is naturally the decision time. If that be true, then as Endeavorers we should feel our added responsibility with reference to the Junior and Intermediate societies.

I want at this time to urge all the Senior societies of the Illikota district to do their utmost in the next few months to make our work count for all that we can. If for any reason you have discontinued your work, take it up again with a determination to win. We want to raise the standard of this district to first instead of second place, on the Four Year Program report; but beyond that we want you to do it because it will help the cause of Christ, and make you a more useful member of the Kingdom of God.

I would like to say to the pastors of congregations where there are no Endeavor societies, that if you have found it impossible to maintain a Senior society, try organizing Junior and Intermediate societies, and through them you will get a Senior organization in time. Do not neglect the Intermediates because as they enter the church they ought to be given something to do, and in the Endeavor society is one of the best places to train them for future work in the church.

This is worth thinking about.

Do Black Sheep Eat Less Than White Sheep?

Dr. D. B. Towner, director of music at the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, was the singing partner of D. L. Moody during the later years of the great evangelist's career. On one occasion the two sat together in a train speeding through a northwestern state. Observing a flock of sheep Mr. Moody remarked: "What more beautiful sight in the world than a flock of sheep."

"I agree with you, that is, when they are clean," Dr. Towner responded, "but that flock looks rather dirty."

"Towner," said Moody, "did you know that black sheep eat less than white sheep?"

"What, is that a fact?"

"Oh, yes, that's a fact, a scientific fact."

"That seems strange, are you sure of it?"

"Certainly, that's an established scientific fact."

"How do you know?"

"That's easy," chuckled Mr. Moody,

"there's not so many of them."

Glorious Possibilities

By Dr. F. E. Clark

Dear Fellow Endeavorers:

Dwell with me for a few minutes on the glorious possibilities of 1919. After the most tremendous war this warring world has ever known, peace has suddenly come. It is possible that this year may see such international relations established as will make war forever impossible. That alone would signalize this year as the greatest since Bethlehem and Calvary made the world's redemption possible. Pray that the League of Nations may be wisely and firmly established, and this great step toward universal brotherhood taken. Enter into the "New World Campaign," as outlined in these columns two weeks ago.

Again, consider the possibilities of the Alumni groups in 1919. Early in the spring Dr.

Poling will make a tour of sixty centers, telling of the needs of Christian Endeavor in war-stricken Europe, as he will see it before that time, and of the Alumni associations as a means of financing our growing work throughout the world, as well as of contributing to the efficiency of the state and local unions. His success in such Alumni meetings already held shows what can be done by this new agency for world wide Endeavor, and its splendid possibilities for the enlargement of our work at home. Plan for this campaign in advance: pray for it that its magnificent potentialities may be fully realized.

O for a larger vision of our tasks, a keener delight in the possibilities before us, a more compelling faith in him who said "With God all things are possible."

A Good Thing

It's a good thing; let me in on it."

Those sentences are often heard in the business world. The spirit back of them is the cause of all advance in values. When men see that certain mines are immensely profitable, stock in those mines sells at a high premium. When railroads are prosperous, men rush to invest in railroad stocks and bonds. When one make of shoes is able to get higher prices, other makes of shoes are raised in price. When one class of workmen succeed in a strike for higher wages, other workmen begin to grumble about their own poor pay. Whatever men perceive to be "a good thing" they are eager to be "let in on."

And this is just the way religion is propagated: by the sunny faces, cheery voices, and evident enjoyment of Christians. Make it clear to men that your religion is a grand, good thing, and it is not in human nature to be willing to be left out of it.

"How To Tithe And Why" Still Free

The time during which the pamphlet, 'How to Tithe and Why' will be sent free, post-paid, to pastors in sufficient numbers to supply one copy to every family represented in their congregations, has been extended until July 1, 1919.

We further invite Sunday school teachers and superintendents, and also active members of the Christian Endeavor society, Epworth League, and Baptist Young People's Union who are interested in tithing, to write us for a very special offer which we are sure will interest the young people and children of the Sunday school.

Please mention The Brethren Evangelist and your denomination.

THE LAYMAN COMPANY,
143 N. Wabash Avenue,
Chicago

Old Wet Pennsylvania recently ratified the Federal Prohibition amendment. It is hard even for the wettest states to stay off the water-wagon now, though the liquorites fought hard to keep "Old Pennsy" in the unpopular group. It would seem that the three tiny remaining states, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland, would be very lonely.

MISSIONS

The Test of True Discipleship. BY J. Allen Miller

For more than four years the church has been put to the test as never before. Both friend and foe have hurled at her the condemnations now so familiar to us all. The church, no less than nations, has been under judgment of public opinion, and the strain has been severe and crucial. Some of the accusations have been well-founded and just. Before the outbreak of the Great War our church life was self-centered, self-satisfied and indifferent to the most stressing needs of the masses. Where truth may enlighten and warn against the repetition of sin the truth should be told. I am deeply sympathetic with the interests of the church. I believe the church to be a divine institution founded by Christ himself. And yet candor compels me to admit that the church has not always been a "glorious church, without spot or wrinkle or any such thing." Perhaps to point out some of the characteristics wherein the church does not exemplify her divine Lord may be of help to us. This method too may disillusion us, for some of the most distinctive marks of the present day church may be found to be quite out of harmony with the Lord's ideal of his church. What are a few of the most outstanding characteristics of failure that mark the church of our day?

First.—The church has been too commercial. This is but another way of saying that the church has been materialistic. Our age has been distinctively materialistic. We have intellectually renounced materialism and then turned around and in practical life have been most intensely materialistic. The church allowed herself to be caught in this maelstrom of faith-destroying practical unbelief. The masses have seen this and held aloof. Monied interests have dominated too much even in the church. Too often men in high places in the councils of the church have been the heartless oppressors of the business and manufacturing world.

Second.—The church has been too professional. I mean that she has lost the Christ-like simplicity of service and worship. Now I enjoy a beautiful service and am inspired by it. But what I mean here is that we have made the work of the minister for example too much like that of a mere worldly professional man. We have come to speak of the learned professions and we include the minister. This I think is wrong. We have a great piece of machinery, our modern church has, such as costly buildings, fine and luxurious furniture, great organs and such like; and besides these we have the numerous organizations to help on in the work as we so finely say. Yet I do not hesitate to say that all too frequently we have lost the church through our machinery. WE SPEND DOLLARS TO MAINTAIN OURSELVES AT EASE IN OUR HOME CHURCHES. WE GIVE ONLY PENNIES AND DIMES TO CARRY OUT THE LAST GREAT COMMAND OF JESUS TO PREACH THE GOSPEL TO ALL THE WORLD.

Third.—The church has been too eager to be served rather than to serve. I have in mind here especially the carrying out of the command of Jesus in the Great Commission. Let us take any ordinary congregation of Brethren, say. This congregation has two hundred members. A modest equipment for carrying forward the work locally and a resident pastor is the boast of this church. Now to carry forward this work requires perhaps $2,000. This money is spent "to save" (or perhaps I ought to say—"to keep saved") those who ought to be saving others. Such a church is usually located in a community where every man, woman and child can know the Gospel and find Jesus Christ. What does such a church do for the UNEVANGELIZED MILLIONS OF EARTH THAT HAVE NEVER HAD A CHANCE? This truth could be illustrated in many ways.

But I must go no further in this characterization. What I have said is just this: 1st, the church has been too rich; 2nd, she has been too proud and vain-glorious in boasted spiritual achievement; and 3rd, she has been relying too much upon her vast expenditures of money and effort without asking whether spent at the right places or for the right things. What is true of the church as an organization is true of the individuals. In spite of these strictures the church is yet the finest and best institution on earth and the Christian men and women remain the finest types of manhood and womanhood we know.

What I have now set forth gives me the opportunity to make the plea I wish to make. It is a plea made to the whole brotherhood to come to the support of every endeavor for the extension of the work of the church of Jesus Christ on earth. I am of course here especially interested in the work of foreign missions.

First.—May every reader put the spiritual above the material interests of life. Food and clothing and home,—what priceless treasures these are. And yet, far greater in value is the possession of the Spirit of Christ. To us Christians to whom Jesus Christ is real and a constant companion all else fades into insignificance in comparison with him. The spiritual rule is: Seek first the Kingdom of God and all else will be added unto you. We seek too often all else and then hope to find the kingdom. No wonder we are disappointed. IF JESUS HAS BEEN PROVEN PRECIOUS TO YOU, MAKE HIM KNOWN TO OTHERS. This must be the church's first and last ambition. It is also the individual disciple's chief concern. It may seem harsh but it is true, that OUR INTEREST IN THE WORLD'S UNSAVED MILLIONS IS A TEST OF OUR DISCIPLESHIP.

Second.—Let us as churches and individuals make our religion a life. Jesus came to give the world life. He calls it ETERNAL LIFE. He means life in the world that now is and in that which is to come. He means life abundant, useful, good. He means a life that gives itself to others. A life that gives thus is never impoverished but ever richer and stronger and happier. It is all this and far more because it is Christ-like, born of the Holy Spirit and akin to God the Father. It is all this because the Word of God is alive in such an one. Where the Word of God lives and abides there must be the evangelizing interest. In every soul thus quickened the CALL OF THE UNEVANGELIZED MILLIONS WILL RECEIVE A READY AND QUICK RESPONSE EVEN TO THE GIVING OF ALL AND SELF. A few Christians and a few missionaries rise to this rapturous height. The most of us never do. God help us.

Third.—Let us become a serving church. O that we might make an offering at the coming Easter time for the work of the Lord commensurate with our blessings and our opportunities. The large and powerful denominations are planning vast undertakings and they are calling upon their peoples for millions of dollars to execute them. Are we as Brethren any less willing to serve our day than these? God forbid! The M. E. church is asking its members for 80 millions of dollars in the next five years. Are we less loyal to Christ? Is our cause less worthy to plead? Shall we do less than others in proportion to our ability and opportunity? May God make us faithful. May the Brethren church with her plea for the whole Gospel BECOME IN REALITY A SERVING CHURCH.

HOME MISSION NOTES

The Muncie Revival

Watch for a good report of the Muncie revival. At last report, Brother Kimmel, the efficient pastor, stated that they had twenty-eight accessions. Brother Thomas is the evangelist, "rightly dividing the Word of Truth." The whole Brotherhood should rejoice in this victory.

"Fine For Telford"

That was what Brother Trent said when he received a White Gift offering of $27.00 from the Brethren church of Telford, Tennessee. The Telford church wants an evangelist for a revival and wants also a pastor.

The Krypton Well

"Working fine" is what Brother Cook writes about the new well of splendid water, made possible by the generous assistance of the Brethren church at Long Beach, California, and also by the kindly interest of Brother Wall who visited the Kentucky field after last conference. It should be stated also that the money given a year or more ago by various donors was used toward the expense of the well. Brother and Sister Cook have been patient a long time with the inconveniences they had in securing water. Thanks to all the donors.

The Krypton School

Miss Haddix is well liked and is doing good work as teacher of the subscription school at Krypton. The whole church is proud of Miss Elizabeth Haddix, a product of Riverside and Ashland. We hope that she may be fully restored to health and be able to serve the church she loves through the coming years.

A Testimony

One who is interested in all the work of the Brethren church writes, "The Evangelist is certainly splendid these days, more than worth what it costs."

G. C. CARPENTER.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

TURLOCK, CALIFORNIA

The writer with his family after spending the past several years in a dual effort to endure the "blissful penniless rigors of student life and at the same time hold down a pastorate, arrived in the prosperous little city of Turlock to assume the duties of this charge October first, and can now testify to the satisfaction of being able to say with the apostle "this one thing I do."

Upon arriving here we were met at the depot by Doctor and Mrs. Wilson and for several weeks while we were waiting for our furniture to come we enjoyed the good hospitality of that fine home. We have been treated royally in many of the homes of the Brethren but it remained for Dr. Wilson to produce the best brand yet, even including laundry bills, medical attention, etc. Sister Wilson belongs to a family of preachers, so she understands the whims of the prophets. Guess I will say no more or some of the preachers will be after my job. This kindly reception did much to relieve the monotony of being a stranger in a strange land as the churches were closed just after we arrived.

Things have opened up now and we are well under way, and have learned among other things that the Brethren here can "come back" in a hurry. We have been deeply impressed with the spirit of this people who have shown a willingness to serve the Master in a very definite way. This church although not conspicuous in the annals of Brethrenism consists of as substantial a body of believers as it has been our privilege to serve. Brother Roger Darling has been the much loved pastor of this church for nearly fifteen years, and surely few pastors have been more highly esteemed. As a tribute to him we can say that among other achievements which must be of personal satisfaction to him he left a congregation noted for two cardinal virtues, namely unity and loyalty to the Master and his servant. We were a bit timid as we undertook to carry on his ministry but have found that although he endeared himself to the people he left them with hearts big enough to love others, and by this we perceive that they have passed from death unto life because they love the brethren.

At our first business meeting the following recommendation which was a part of the pastor's report was adopted, "I therefore recommend that this church, including every member, without further delay vigorously endeavor to carry out in detail the Four Year Program and to reach the goals set by National Conference for all Brethren churches. As the result of this resolution on the part of the people, we have a mid-week service with an average attendance of over forty; the Sunday school under the leadership of Brother Charles Johnson has re-organized to meet the requirements of the front line school; the campaign to place the Brethren Evangelist in every home is about successfully completed; the offerings for Home Missions and benevolences which on account of the "flu" came at the same time have been raised and we are within reach of all goals attainable this year.

We were delightfully surprised by a visit from Brother Henry V. Wall, National Supervisor of Home Missions, Western Division, who drove up from the south to look over his territory, bringing Moderator Bell and Brother Kimmel. Brother Bell preached for us at a special mid-week meeting. This timely call from Brother Wall proved an inspiration to the plans of the Mission Board and ministers of this district. We are looking forward with pleasure to our work here and expect from time to time to have good things to report from both congregation and district.

FRANCIS J. REAGAN.

A TRIP TO PENNSYLVANIA

After an absence of two and one-half years from the Keystone State—where I was born and spent most of the years of my ministry—I left Waterloo, Iowa, after church service on Sunday evening, January 12, for a visit to scenes of happy memories. When I got aboard a "B. & O." train at Chicago I greeted it as a long-lost brother. All of Monday and most of Monday night I sat very still and lived over the past. The memories of happy pastorates at Warsaw, Milford and Oakville, Indiana, and at Fair Haven, and Williamstown, Ohio, traveled before me as the train moved eastward. Most of the time, however, I just visited with that B. & O. coach. I knew that before it completed its eastward journey it would pass through Meyersdale and Philadelphia—the remaining places at which I have held pastorates—and send passengers over a branch to Johnstown, where I was brought up. It had, oh so many reminiscences to offer. I wasn't homesick, I was just anxious to get home.

Masontown

Six o'clock Tuesday morning found me in Masontown, in the midst of coke ovens, foreigners, booze, and also—thank God—in the midst of a small group of as fine Brethren people as can be found anywhere. For three weeks I preached each evening in the Masontown church, and visited each day in the homes of these people. Since this was the fifth meeting I have held at Masontown, my visit seemed very much like a visit to former parishioners.

It is not my purpose to report the meeting. Brother Shively may do that if he cares to. I cannot withhold, however, a few words about this congregation and its pastor. The Masontown congregating is making genuine progress. It is doing noble work in a difficult field. Beside the workers who have been faithful throughout many years, new, energetic workers have taken their stand. The church has a real grip upon a large part of the population, and is supplying spiritual service to this part of the population in a beautiful manner. In both the adult and children's departments, the Sunday school is vigorous and strong. God certainly must be pleased with the brotherly and sisterly spirit the untiring efforts and the liberal generosity of this group of Christians. May God's richest grace rest upon them continually.

I have no doubt that the blessed Spirit of almighty God led Brother Shively to Masontown. He has done and is doing a wonderful work there. Without disparaging any man in our ministry, I doubt that any other minister in our church could have done such a work at Masontown as Shively has done. Beloved by his congregation, he is also loved and trusted by the entire community. In community work he is, to use one of his favorite words, a "whale." He is one of the big men in the religious and social service activities of the entire county in which Masontown is located.

The Meyersdale Circuit

Five hours after the meeting at Masontown closed, I was in Meyersdale. For more than six years I had served the Meyersdale, Salisbury and Summit Mills congregations, and had had only one small scrap in one of the congregations. This was so extraordinarily good, for me, that I was wildly anxious to get back to see if I couldn't start something.

Only God and other pastors know how a pastor loves a congregation he has served through many years. College graduates rave over their love for their Alma Mater. Why should not pastors rave over their congregations they have served? The warm personal relations between pastor and people, are, without exception, the greatest compensation of a pastors' life. Doctors and lawyers receive large fees. By middle life they usually have amassed considerable wealth. I am now middle-aged and my college debt is not yet all paid, but I consider the groups of friends scattered throughout the Brethren church a greater value than a fine house, a Pierce Arrow, (if that is the way it is spelled) and a comfortable bank account could possibly be. I wonder if pastors would be loved by their congregations as they now are if ministers were paid as well as the members of other professions. I do not think they would. Suppose we should charge $3 for a call, $25 for a funeral and $50 for a wedding. Compared to the fees required by some other professions, such charges would not be exorbitant. But, ministers could not collect such fees and retain the gratitude and love that are now their greatest reward. For myself, I never want to see the element of sacrifice taken out of a minister's life, for the rewards of sentiment which it creates are very much more precious than money.

Quite unabashed, therefore, I rejoice openly in the chief compensation the years of my ministry have brought to me, viz., the groups of friends scattered throughout the brotherhood, of whom the three congregations of the Meyersdale charge are most appreciated because I served them longer than any others. The future is fascinating to me because it holds the possibility of like service and like rewards.

On Monday evening I preached at Summit Mills to that warm-hearted group of genuine Pennsylvania Dutch farmers and miners, and their families. I visited as many of the royal congregation at Salisbury as I could in two hours. On Tuesday evening I attended the banquet of the Men's Federation of the Meyersdale Sunday school, and made an address that proved to be very much of a fizzle. But, one of the glories of having friends is that they love you even when you fizzle. I'll leave it to any friend in all the world to decide whether this is or is not a great truth.

This banquet deserves some publicity. There were 97 men present, and a large number of interested women on the side-lines. The editor of Somerset county's leading newspaper, Brother W. S. Livengood, who has become—thank God—one of the most active workers in the Meyersdale congregation, was the toastmaster. Three ministers of the Church of the Brethren—all highly educated—were present and gave short addresses. Among the men present were bankers, merchants, a doctor, farmers of wide reputation, executives in various companies, highly skilled tradesmen, and high school boys. It was a bunch of real men. Showing himself entirely capable of leadership in such a crowd, the pastor, E. D. Burnworth, presided over the entire affair. No one can fail to see what such a Federation prophesies as to the future of the Brethren church in Meyersdale. More significant still—and, let every reader mark the significance of it—every speaker of the evening manifested a calm zeal for the federation of the Brethren church and the Church of the Brethren. It is time for the leaders of both the Church of the Brethren and the Brethren church to question whether they are going to be able to hold the respect of the real men in both denominations unless they swallow their selfish pride and get the denominations together.

Brother Burnworth is showing himself to be an able leader of those congregations. That he has led them forth to accomplishments that were beyond the ability of his predecessor, I am glad to admit, and still more glad to note. By his war work and patriotic addresses he has gained a remarkable recognition throughout Somerset county. His congregations admire and love him. One of the finest, biggest, noblest traits of the congregations of the Meyersdale charge is their ability to give whole-souled co-operation to the pastor who happens to be on the job at any one time, while they retain the most cordial relations with the pastors who have served them previously. To this day, Brother Gnagey, who served the charge 30 years ago, is loved by the members who knew him quite as much as he was then. Brother Knepper was always held, and his memory is held today, in affection that is beautiful to behold. Brother Beachler, who followed Brother Knepper, will bear witness that the congregations gave to him the warmest and most unreserved co-operation possible. I can say the same and now Brother Burnworth is experiencing the same.

This is a truly great achievement for any group of Christians. To have hearts big enough to love at the same time several different ministers who have given themselves in earnest service of that group is an indication of real bigness and real goodness. In some congregations each pastor ought to be killed off as he finishes his work so that the little-souled members could find it possible to co-operate with the successors as they come. Or, better still, and certainly more humane, pastors ought to have an understanding among themselves that when a minister is about to leave a narrow-souled congregation he will pilfer $500 from its treasury and get the members good and sore at him before his successor comes on the field. Judged by its motive such a custom could scarcely be called unethical—and often, just before moving, it would help out amazingly!

Johnstown

To Johnstown, where I visited my father, brothers and sisters, slept in the house every room of which recalled memories of mother, and worshipped twice in the church where I confessed Christ, was baptized, ordained and married, was the next stage of my journey. Here Brethren Watson and Witter were holding forth in a vigorous evangelistic campaign, and the church was supporting them in a manner that shot several new ideas in to my head. But, I dare not pause here for comment, for I am sure the Editor will not publish this article if I make it much longer. As a son, however, I cannot refrain from rejoicing that I found my father, an elder in the church, so vigorous at the age of 74 that he can work 6 days each week and take an active part in all the activities of the church as well. Physically and spiritually I can only hope that I may be such as he.

Waterloo, Iowa

The "B. & O." train going seemed slow; but the Pennsylvania flyer going west seemed slower. East or west, home is best (I am not certain whether I have quoted or coined this). Memories are fine, but work is better. Waterloo is now the kingdom of my heart's desire. The Waterloo congregation is great. The members are of the same regal kind who apply themselves to whatever task, and co-operate with whatever servant, they may have on their hands. That is best; for only thus can the kingdom of our Lord and Christ be advanced. Brother Z. T. Livengood renewed old friendships here while I was away, and so delighted the congregation with his sermons that some of the members have expressed the hope that I will soon take another trip!

H. L. GOUGHOUR.

NORTH LIBERTY, INDIANA

It was the writer's privilege to spend three weeks with the Brethren at Maple Grove, near Eaton, Indiana, in a county-wide campaign. Four churches within a distance of two miles of us, somewhat limited our territory, but regardless of this we had splendid audiences each evening, and the brethren are much encouraged over the effort. The immediate and visible results were seven confessions and two by relation from the Church of the Brethren.

Maple Grove has had its reverses in years past, but as far as we were able to learn there isn't a ripple upon the waters at present. One very pleasant feature was to know that they all love and respect their leader and pastor, that well-known man of God, Brother J. L. Kimmel. It was indeed the joy of an evangelist's heart to go from house to house and hear the people say good things about their pastor. This is as it should be.

This church has a fine lot of young folks and it surely is an inspiration to this aged (?) preacher to note their loyalty and devotion to the church. In them the future of Maple Grove is assured for some time to come.

It was indeed a pleasure to have as our right hand man during the campaign our good Brother James E. Collins, treasurer of the Indiana Mission Board, who led the singing each evening to the delight of all. Mrs. Collins also did her part well at the piano. They make a good team. I might just add that it is my opinion that Brother Collins could be secured by pastors or evangelists to conduct their singing during revival meetings. He has my endorsement. I believe he will make good. He ought to be kept busy. The Brethren church needs just such leaders.

While in Delaware county it was my good fortune to visit Elder Kimmel and family and incidentally to look over the Muncie mission project. As a member of the National Missionary Board of the Brethren church, it was peculiarly interesting to me, and I want here to place my testimony on record concerning it. It is my opinion that we have made no mistake at Muncie. Unless all signs fail, in less than two years from now we will have a church and people in Muncie upon which we can all look with delight. The pastor, the personnel of the people, the location and all things in general point to this end. Their present quarters are inviting, but will soon be outgrown. Every dollar spent at Muncie will yield large returns. State mission work does pay. Our present pastorate is a product of state mission work, and we have a work that will compare favorably with the best.

We were to have continued our evangelistic efforts elsewhere, but our work at home forbids our leaving. We regret much to cancel our arrangements, because we believe that this is the work to which God has called us and equipped us, but for the present we shall be content to minister to his people, which after all is no small task. However, I am praying that there shall be many of our brethren who shall take up the work of evangelism. The call is so urgent, the response so weak.

Let me add in closing that Brother John Clark of South Bend, preached for my people during my absence. John is liked here and is always welcome.

With Christian greetings to all, I am,

Yours under the Precious Blood,
C. C. GRISSO.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

Sometimes the results of a canvass in a congregation are so good it is hard to report it, and then sometimes the difficulty lies in the other direction. From Indiana I have come to Kanemorado, and the Falls City church is the first in this district to have been canvassed. And the results of our canvass in this first church of the west to be visited were so good that it is really going to be hard to tell the whole story and do it justice. In the west is where they have the "twisters" and I am willing to leave it to the brotherhood that the report from Falls City is a real "twister." Even Conemaugh will have to admit that my claim is correct.

Now in the first place I want to say that, notwithstanding many think otherwise, Falls City congregation is not one of the larger congregations, numerically, of our brotherhood. I have reason to believe many have thought so. Again, Brother H. F. Stuckman is the pastor of this flock; he knows his sheep, and his sheep love him and believe in his leadership. Brother Stuckman is doing fine work at Falls City, and he has not asked me to say so either. I never say nice things about our pastors because they ask me to do so. If they asked me I would not say them at all. But when I see where good work has been done and our men are deserving of a word of encouragement, I am going to speak that word. Again, Falls City church is the peace where Brother John Lichty works and worships and he is a faithful, interested member of the Board of College Trustees.

I began the work here on Sunday morning, February 16th, and remained until February 20th, preaching each night I was there to fine audiences. Stuckman and his people had been looking forward a long time to the canvass; they had everything ready and were eagerly waiting for the signal to get into the race. Well, what you want to know is the result. Here it is: Falls City carries off the pennant with a result of at least $5,500—it may go over that, Hurrah for Stuckman and his congregation! When Falls City went to the bat she had no intention of hitting a bunt, oh no. When she struck it was with a determination to put the ball away out in the field, and that is just what she did.

In addition to the remarkable general result there are some other features worthy of mention. For instance, of this $5,500 more than $4,400 is in cash and Liberty Loans. I have had no former record to compare at all with that. The Falls City brethren could see that it was only good business to kill two birds with one stone, so they bought those Liberty Loans and gave them to the College. I have met some folks who acted as if it would be a sin against the Holy Ghost to let one of those bonds ever get out of the family. Not so at Falls City.

Here is another thing to make folks sit up and take notice. In this congregation three men went into the $1,000 class. And in fairness I want to say that two of those three men have in time past given $500 each to the permanent endowment of Ashland College, and that means that those two men have now invested to the amount of $1,500 each. Those two men are not necessarily better to do than other men in our church—I am sure they are not, but believe more firmly in the importance of Ashland College than a lot of wealthier men of our denomination do, and they are going to lay up for themselves treasures in heaven right here and now. I sincerely hope that what these two men have done will spur others of our men who have already gotten into the $500 class to brace up and get higher, even up to $1,000. We also had one $500 gift here and several for $250 and $200. But great as is this result, I must say that if the few folks here who did nothing at this time, had lifted their corner and, if others had lifted according to their ability who did not, the Falls City result would have been still more remarkable. Nevertheless I am proud of the Falls City people and my heart thrills at the thought of their splendid loyalty.

Now Watch the Kanemorado District Raise the Mercury

COLLEGE
ENDOWMENT

For this result Stuckman and some of his laymen deserve the credit. I take none of the credit myself. I have no doubt this money could have all been raised if I had not gone there at all. But I am glad I was there when it was done because we had a great time and lots of fun while it was going on. My home was with John Lichty. All I can say for my treatment in this home and all of the Falls City homes is that it could have been no better and the board was constantly too good. The campaign closed here with a picnic supper in the basement of the church on Thursday night followed by a jubilee service in which splendid speeches were made by Stuckman, John Lichty, Sam Kimmel, Dr. Mathers and others. My love lingers with the Falls City people. God bless them!

Reports will come from Morrill and Hamlin next. WM. H. BEACHLER, Campaign Secretary.

FIRST CHURCH, LOS ANGELES

The attendance at our mid-week prayer meetings has increased about 20 to 25 percent during the last few weeks, partly owing no doubt to the abatement of the influenza epidemic and partly due to the interest awakened by Brother Jennings' popularity and his interesting manner of conducting his meetings.

Another new member was added to our congregation a few days ago by letter.

The Sunday school has been increased in numbers also by about 25 percent in the last month and the outlook is fine.

A series of meetings is being planned for some time this spring. In the meantime every sermon of the pastor is along evangelistic lines and opportunities are given at every service for those who attend to take a stand for the Savior. Yours in Christ,

A. P. REED.

RIVERSIDE INSTITUTE

Everything is moving on at the usual speed during the winter term. In fact we have been too busy to say anything about it. However, we have many good things to report.

We have never had the co-operation among the different members of the force of workers and the young people of the community and dormitories that we have this year. It is the custom of Satan to try to undo the work by stirring up strife among those who serve God. However he has failed this year. We find the Mrs. and Mr. Humbert, the matron and her husband, whom we and you prayed for, were truly called by God. And when God chooses there is nothing more to be wished. They have the spirit and the ability to work.

Miss MacMillan, of Moody Bible Institute, is the nurse and has a big Bible class. She was a member of the Moody church but she sees that she can be of better service to be a Brethren. Hence she and a few of our new converts are to be baptized March 1st.

The character of the new converts is another thing that gives cause for rejoicing. About a dozen of our brightest young men and women have accepted Christ at the mid-week prayer service. On the whole, they have the stamina to stay with what they undertake. The conversion of two of these boys is a story to be remembered. The young women have been having prayer meetings with Miss MacMillan in the Dormitory every evening. The younger girls went to Mrs. Humbert the other day to find out whether they had permission to meet as the "big ones" did. They now have a prayer meeting.

At the same time the other work is going on nicely. A play for the Normal department and a cantata for the primary department are being got ready for March 21st, the end of school.

SPECIAL NOTICE

By the merciful kindness of a dear heavenly Father another year has passed and another opportunity to serve by giving is approaching. Easter Sunday, April 20th, is the time for the annual offering for foreign missions. This call is issued thus early that all pastors, churches, auxiliary societies and members may prepare to make the offering of the Lord worthy of his gracious acceptance. Remember the time: Easter Sunday, April 20th. This day belongs to the Brethren Foreign Missionary Society and all else should give way to it. Work and pray for the greatest offering in our history.

For the Foreign Missionary Society, by,
J. ALLEN MILLER, President.
ALVA J. McCLAIN, Secretary.
L. S. BAUMAN, Treasurer.

RECEIPTS FOR JANUARY THE MISSIONARY BOARD OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

*First Brethren, Whittier, Cal.,	$ 93.81
Deuver, Ind., Sunday School,	2.74
Clay City, Ind.,	21.00
Ridgley, Md.,	34.65
Mrs. Chas. G. Leslie, Roann, Ind., ..	5.00
Buckeye City, Ohio,	10.00
McKee, Pa.,	21.00
New Enterprise, Pa.,	11.20
South Bend, Ind.,	$30.00
Bethel, Cassopolis, Mich.,	5.00
*Dallas Center, Iowa,	50.00
Mexico, Ind.,	14.07
Third Brethren, Philadelphia, Pa., ..	32.00
Franklin Ch., Md.,	7.00
*Gretna, Ohio,	37.60
1st Brethren, Los Angeles, Cal.,	29.15
National S. S. C. E.,	25.00
Middlebranch, Ohio,	11.42
New Paris, Ind.,	16.90
Baker Church, Iowa,	2.90
Union Chapel, Iowa,	2.50
Crown Chapel, Iowa,	6.10
Leon, Iowa,	23.00
G. T. Ronk, Leon, Iowa,	10.00
Loree, Ind., Sunday School,	18.20

Total for January,$ 520.57
Previously Reported,$3,994.71

Total offerings for the year,$4,515.23

Our Goal this year is $7500.00 for the work of this Board. Our Thanksgiving offering was seriously interfered with by the "flu." Many churches have not yet been heard from. Will not each pastor see that an offering aggregating 30 cents per member be taken some time in the near future and remit to the undersigned for the work of The Missionary Board this year?

Dayton, Ohio, February 7th, 1919.

ORION E. BOWMAN,

Secretary-Treasurer.

Correction in last report, Terra Alta, W. Va., should have been reported as a "Star Church."

NEWS FROM WISCONSIN

February 22, 1919.

Dear Editor:

We four young people of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, three of whom united with the Brethren church on July 4, 1914 and one on September 29, 1918, have no church and feel it our duty to do our share in the work that should be done here. Now that we are in needy circumstances we appeal to you for help.

We have the Brethren Evangelist in our homes, and when we read of the progress of other places, we feel that a work should be done here also. We attend church and Sunday school at a Baptist church, but would be much more interested in a church of which we were members.

Do not think that we are being idle, for we hold Bible and prayer meetings at the homes of the members, every Wednesday evening. We have been praying for a church house and letting the older people do the work, but we see now that we must also take a part in it.

If you will help us as you have other places, we will appreciate it very much and will also do our part. We feel that we could be of more service to the Lord if we had a place in which to worship.

Trusting that you will consider this matter very soon, we are, Faithfully yours,

MAUDE BAKER, 613 Church St.,

MABEL GOSS, 818 Summit St.,

LAURA BAKER, BERTHA GOSS.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Brethren of California, Washington and Oregon please take notice. THE NORTH-EARN CALIFORNIA BRETHREN CONVENTION AND BIBLE INSTITUTE will be held at MANTECA, California, March 22-30. The program will be one of the best ever offered to the brethren of this state. The following speakers will be present: National Moderator W. S. Bell; Rev. A. V. Kimmel; R. E. Darling; J. Wesley Platt; N. V. Leatherman; C. E. Johnson; G. B. Nowag; Jacob Shank; F. J. Reagan. The Entertainment Committee will provide for all visiting brethren. Pamphlet program will be sent. Tell others and come.

Brethren Home of Ohio

An Incorporation with
over $10,000 in Assets

PURPOSE. To build a home for the aged and infirm of our church and an orphanage for our children.

Why not make it a National Home for the entire brotherhood? The Board of Trustees will present this proposition at National Conference this year.

Gifts, subscriptions and bequests solicited.

Information cheerfully given.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Ira Fudge, Gratis, Ohio, Pres.

Orion E. Bowman, V. Pres. and Atty.

Elmer Wombold, Secy.

1718 W. Monument Ave., Dayton, Ohio

Jesse A. Garver, Treas.

J. Allen Miller.

"THE KING OF SONG BOOKS"

Herald of Praise

Edited by Dr. H. W. Stough, Dr. W. E. Biederwolf,
Prof. E. O. Excell and Bob Jones

The Latest and Best Song Book Out. Try it in your Sunday School, your Prayer Meeting or your Revival Meeting

PRICES

Best Manila Binding, 15 cents per copy (postpaid)
One hundred, $13.00 (not prepaid)

Flexible Cloth Binding, 20 cents per copy (postpaid)
One hundred, $18.00 (not prepaid)

Cloth Board Binding, 30 cents per copy (postpaid)
One hundred, $25.00 (not prepaid)

The Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 11

MARCH 12
1919

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE IS YOUR MASTER AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN -

MR. AND MRS. JOHN BARRIO

In charge of the work in Pueblo Alberdi, a suburb of Rio Cuarto, Argentina

OUR MARCHING ORDERS AND THEIRS

"GO YE INTO ALL
THE WORLD AND PREACH THE GOSPEL TO THE WHOLE CREATION"

THEY OBEYED WILL YOU?

YOU MAY GO IN YOUR OFFERING ON EASTER SUNDAY

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

A Greater Brethren Church—Editor,	2	Killing by Slander—Editor,	9
Editorial Review,	3	The Duties of an Elementary Superintendent—Mrs. H. E. Stroud, 10
Extension Program—Present Status—G. T. Ronk,	4	Hitting the Mark—Dr. C. A. Bame,	10
The Strenuous Life of the Ministry—Martin Shively,	5	Message—Extraordinary—A. L. DeLozier,	11
The Present Need of Denominational Loyalty—Dr. E. E. Jacobs, 5		Relay Classes—Prof. J. A. Garber,	11
The Church a Savior of the Community—S. C. Henderson,	6	Thirty-Eight Years of Christian Endeavor—Dr. Francis E. Clark, 11
"Going Forward" (Sermon)—N. W. Jennings,	8	Things To Remember When Supporting Missions—G. C. Carpenter, 12
Strength for Every Trial—Alice Livengood,	9	News from the Field,	12-16
		Business Manager's Corner—Dr. R. R. Teeter,	16

EDITORIAL

A Greater Brethren Church

"We Can Have It, If We Want It; If We Want It Hard Enough"

This is a worthy slogan for the whole church and for the various individual congregations. It is the slogan which the editor, as pastor of the Louisville, Ohio, congregation of Brethren, put before his people at the beginning of his pastorate. However, he claims no copyright on the formula, and is certainly not alone in putting such an ideal before his people. Others have suggested similar ideals in varied wordings as slogans to inspire congregational aggressiveness. This formula has been the outgrowth of various suggestions and has proven an easily handled, attractive and inspiring slogan. But the ideal it suggests is the thing that interests us.

Nothing is more important to the future of Brethrenism than that we shall catch a vision of our possible future. It was the consciousness of such a need that inspired the Four Year Program. And with the hope of realizing that ideal, the Four Year Program organization has been conducting a vigorous campaign. He whose soul has not been stirred by these aggressive measures is either culpably ignorant or is so spiritually dead that he needs a mighty resurrection to bring his dead soul to life again. If, in these four years, we do nothing more than saturate the brotherhood with the spirit of discontent with present attainments and stir the people from coast to coast with the desire for progress we shall feel that our efforts have been well spent. If we once get to dreaming of bigger things; if to every church there comes a vision of greatness in service, power and extension such as has not been heretofore thought possible, our future is assured.

Our principal weakness in the past was that we had no vision. We were content to be small. We thought our duty completed when we had made provision for the spiritual needs of our own number. Our hopes for the future took account of none but the children of our own church. We did not see the outsiders when securing our equipment and arranging our worship. We made no plans for their convenience and offered no inducement to them to consecrate and unite their vision and strength to our narrowness and weakness. We were harmfully narrow, not so much in the theological dogmas we held (we had religion but little theology) as in the spirit of self-centeredness we possessed. We were narrow not so much in the type of our thinking as in our failure to think at all—of others. If we gave spiritual nourishment to those who came within our walls, we thought we were fulfilling our mission. We never inquired about those who were out of touch with the church and Sunday school, except on Rally Day or some other special occasion when we wanted a large crowd for the honor there was in it. We did not have our eye on the stranger in our community. We did not go out into the "byways and hedges" and compel them to come in. It was not that we were consciously unwilling to receive any others who might come, or that we purposely ignored any. We simply thought it was no use. We knew the field was thoroughly gleaned; that the other churches were more popular and that we would stand no chance with them in getting the newcomers; that those who were in the community and unreached were beyond all hope—they had been tried too often already. In short, we were very conscious of our limitations and knew there was little that we could hope for in the way of expansion. We had no vision. And where there is no vision, there people perish.

One of the saddest things in all religious activity is to see a church that feels that it has reached its limits; that the future holds in store nothing of progress and that it can only hope in some way to keep its head above water. It will take the life out of any individual or congregation to be made to feel that there is nothing brighter ahead. And, far too often, our churches have felt that way about their communities. They have thought some people were so aristocratic that they were unapproachable, and others were so hardened that they were unreachable. And moreover, their doctrines were admittedly unpopular and so they could not expect anything big from the future. Such a church consciousness makes progress absolutely impossible.

In going into a new pastorate, one of the first things that usually dampens the pastor's ardor is the feeling so often found that there is nothing much to be expected in the way of growth. And usually half the pastor's problems are solved when he is able to disabuse the people's minds of such a fatal idea.

Most naturally, that congregational consciousness of having our heads against the roof is carried over into the denominational consciousness. We have been too much persuaded that we are fore-ordained to be forever a small church and that we might as well submit to the inevitable without complaint. Often because we were small, we have resigned to what we supposed was our eternal fate, and have found consolation in the assumption that we were the "remnant," the "elect people," the chosen "few." And that has satisfied us.

We may be an "elect people," I hope we are, but it does not follow that we must forever remain "few." Nor, judging from the present stir, do I believe we shall. We may not outstrip the great denominations; that is not the sort of an ideal we should have. Our communicants may never be comparable in number to those of the Methodists or Baptists; that is not the thing supremely desirable.

What we do need above all things else, is to lose the feeling that we must remain small in the various communities where we are located and in the fields where we shall inaugurate a work and get the idea strongly in our minds that THERE IS A GREATER FUTURE for us—for each individual congregation, a future just as large as we are willing to make possible. We need supremely to catch a vision of a "GREATER BRETHREN CHURCH," and feel very firmly that our vision can be realized. If our church does not dream of greatness under the hand of God, it has no future worthy of the struggle; if it has no vision of larger attainment, it will fight a losing battle until it becomes non-existent. But let our church look forward to an ever-enlarging and increasingly glorious future and it will indeed grow into its ideal. A church can become about what it wants to be. We can make our future or we can mar it by what we set before ourselves or do not set before ourselves to attain. We can have as big a church as we want, if we want it hard enough. Let this ideal take hold of us—"A GREATER BRETHREN CHURCH"—and let us hold to it constantly and thoroughly believe it, and we shall find the greatest step has been taken towards its realization. We can have it, if we want it; if we want it hard enough.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

You can do more than pray after you have prayed, but you cannot do more than pray until you have prayed.

Another report comes from Oak Hill, West Virginia, and we learn that they are looking for a pastor.

Our correspondent from Beaver City, Nebraska, Miss Lilla Johnson, writes an interesting letter concerning the leave-taking of Brother C. M. Pierce. Beaver City is in need of a pastor.

At the bank of heaven no checks on God's mercy when signed by God's loyal followers have ever been turned down. If you come with honest heart God will honor your appeal even if your hands are red with blood.—Sunday.

"Organization means a place for every one and every one in his place." No more wholesome idea was ever uttered. A church organized in this way would make marvelous gains, and in a little while would be asking for another and bigger Four Year Program.

Brother Bowman gives us another report on the Thanksgiving offering for General Home Missions. Maurertown, Virginia looks good, so does Telford, Tennessee, and some others. Has your report appeared in print yet? If so, were you proud of it?

Brother I. D. Bowman comes to us with another report of his work. He says a nice word for the Publishing Company's editors and business manager for which we thank him, and offers some suggestions the importance of which we fully appreciate.

A very successful revival meeting is reported by Brother Kera of Oakville, Indiana. Brother W. R. Deeter was the evangelist. The number of conversions and the character of them will add much strength to the Oakville church. Don't fail to read this interesting report.

Brother W. C. Teeter proves a very faithful corresponding secretary for the Dayton church. He has a report for you this week. The Dayton church is being deeply impressed with the splendid teaching ability of their pastor, Brother Cobb. A little eight page folder received, telling of the various courses offered in his parish "Bible Institute," shows quite an elaborate schedule.

Two of our most faithful correspondents are Brethren Garber and Carpenter. Brother Garber always supplies us with some interesting material bearing on the work or plans of Christian Endeavor. The Christian Endeavor page is full of interest this week. Brother Carpenter has a genius for catching our attention with his current missionary items. And occasionally he has a message for the Christian Endeavor page. We are sure you appreciate the services of the Brethren. I should have said three where I said "two" above, for we are not unmindful of the faithful services of Brother Bame, who with his loyal co-workers, keeps the Four Year Program Page aflame. And not infrequently our readers write their appreciation of his splendid work.

Brother Stuckman tells us how they feel at Falls City to be in the lead in the Endowment campaign, and also how they prayerfully prepared for Brother Beachler's coming as the coming of a great opportunity to help in a great cause. Falls City has a right to rejoice, and we rejoice with them.

That Beachler man is certainly in good clover out in the Kanemorado district. He comes to us this week with a report saying that Morrill, Kansas, put up the sum of—no I won't tell you, you must read it for yourself. Its to be found among the "News." Hurrah for Whitted and Morrill! Its tight, you can count on the West to do their best.

J. R. Miller said: "We are willing to love our neighbors—if we can choose our neighbors; but that is just where God tests us. He gives us neighbors whom we naturally would not choose in order to teach us to act on the real neighbor rule of helping the man next to us, whoever he may be. Until we do this our neighborliness is but a sham, not the Christian kind.

What school will be the next to contribute to the Evangelist First Page Cut Fund? You see the proposition is gaining such favor that we are giving it a name. It is a long one, but the child is strong enough to bear it. And some of you are going to contribute some more strength to it, we feel sure. After our Easter Mission campaign is over we will show you some of the pictures accompanied by the names of the donors. We have nice ones in store, some with real messages.

An item in the "Weekly Calendar" of the Goshen church dated February 23, says, "The Wednesday evening meeting went to 155 and still the end is not in sight. We can say nothing as to the future except that we expect something great, for the past proves that the "unexpected" may happen. We rather feel that the 200 mark may be down the line next week." Most churches would not know what to do with that big a crowd at prayer meeting. "How do you do it," Goshen?

You cannot dissociate Easter and foreign missions in the Brethren church; they go together; full enjoyment of the former means the success of the latter. That is the one time in the year when you are invited to give for the spread of the gospel in foreign lands. And if you are enjoying the blessed assurance of immortal life which Jesus vouchsafed, you will be glad for this opportunity to show your gratitude by helping to send the good news to the darkened lands. Make your Easter offering a matter of prayer.

Brother Bowman reports the February receipts of the Home Mission offering in this issue. There are some very good showings. If you think your's is there turn to it and see; if you think it isn't there I would take the proper steps to put it there. Brother Bowman says we are just $2,500 short of our goal; that is, $2,500 worth of us have failed to remit so far. It is our work; we undertook to do it and we ought to do it. If our plans don't carry, we will be to blame, so let us not seek to excuse ourselves. The "flu" interfered with our public services, but it didn't interfere much with our income. Let everybody do his bit.

Ohio was unable to hold its Bible Conference and Rally at Ashland last fall on account of the influenza epidemic, and finds it impossible to have a conference this spring. Therefore sectional conferences will be held in the various parts of the state during the latter part of March as indicated by the following dates and places: At Louisville on March 23, with Canton, Middlebranch and North Georgetown participating with the local congregation; at Mansfield on March 23, with Ankenytown and Ashland participating; at Rittman on March 30, with Zion Hill participating with the local congregation; at Dayton on March 30, with all Miami Valley participating. All churches not included in above schedule will be arranged for later. At these conferences the various departments of the state work will receive attention. It is planned that all pulpits be filled by visiting ministers on the above dates and all churches gather for conference sessions in the afternoon at time and place stated.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

Extension Program—Present Status.

By G. T. Ronk, Director of Church Extension

There is only one cloud we can see on the horizon of the program but that is much larger than a man's hand. There is one present obstacle to a continual expansion in concentric circles year by year and that is so great that it should be called to the attention of the church for special prayer. We refer to the need for able and aggressive men who will dedicate their services to placing some of these fine prospective mission stations in the church class.

It is hard to understand why a fine city prospect like Ft. Scott, Kansas, a city of 13,000 should not be able to get a pastor, situated as this beautiful city is in a great field for Brethren enterprise in outlying towns and places. Where could an aggressive man go to make his life count for more? If the writer of this article were free to tackle another field at this time—which he is not—the first place he would investigate would be Ft. Scott, Kansas; some rather enticing pastoral propositions notwithstanding.

Problems? Of course it has. So has every bank, agency, industry, branch house, store and farm. But the solution of these problems is not in sight, you say? Neither are the problems of any line of business above mentioned. That is what red-blooded cashiers, managers, salesmen, collectors, auditors, and efficiency engineers are for: to meet problems—new ones, hard ones, hopeless ones, and to continually do the thing that cannot be done. Tens of thousands of such are doing it every day as a part of the day's work. Our preachers need a little sand. They are too pampered, fussy, timid, tired and self-important. A week's work out at the heels of a real traveling salesman, insurance adjuster, or captain of industry would reveal that not one preacher in ten is working at capacity or knows what his real caliber is. Sighing over his sacrifice as a minister of the gospel, trudgng doggedly along up to his eyebrows in a rut, complacent over his success in filling the shoes of some predecessor who was ten times his caliber,—his people too indolent or polite to point it out—this man is failing of development because he fails of the necessity of going up against something hard every hour of every day and lacks the continual habit of getting by with it. He knows he lacks system, program, but what he really lacks is the spirit of achievement; some of that iron purpose you can see in the eye of every successful business man you meet. Christ had an eye and a spirit like that; I know he had. Paul had it—read the last end of II Corinthians II and imagine your flabby spirit going up against that. Too hard on the preachers, you say? Not a bit of it. Your average preacher is perishing to hear the gospel preached to "him."

Every preacher should plan on spending at least five years in building up a mission station, that is, every preacher who has learned pastoral work in a good steady church. He owes it to his own self respect, to his own development, to the church that gave him his chance and to the program of the Christ, to whom expansion was primary and nursing the church secondary; for there are few pioneers and many nurses.

When one thinks of the thousands of Mormon elders who go up the by-ways and lanes of the entire country: each meeting rebuffs, insults, opposition, bearing his entire expense himself for a period of two years that he might have the precious privilege of going through the endowment house mysteries and thus assume his full place as an elder, it fills one with shame that in a church of twenty-thousand a dozen from its trained and successful ministry cannot be secured with "sand," vision, energy, faith and sacrifice to do the little extension-work we plan on doing. Is it any wonder that the Mormons in a half century control wholly or in part eleven states, have millions in banks and industrial institutions through title money and are a power that is felt in Wall street, thus being able to finance anything they see fit, while we make this snail's pace? It is not enough to sigh piously over the handicap of sainthood—this condition is not sainthood or Christ-likeness, far from it. What we need is a good transformation of our ideals and vision, and a good epidemic of missionary energy.

The Preacher's Side of the Story

There is such a side and the writer of this article has discovered it. There are at least four points to it, which taken as a whole account in part for the present condition:

1. Real humility on the pastor's part. Many pastors are so overwhelmed by the experiences they have in organized churches that it seems futile to try anything harder. The pastor feels himself too weak to master the peculiar hocus-pocus required in a mission church. He modestly steps aside for the strong (?) man, the energetic fellow or the specially equipped man; he has no special call that he hears and so steps aside to the sheltered fold with high walls, good provision stock and some firm and well trained watch dogs to second his feeble efforts. The dogs are good tonguers and he feels quite safe; in fact their friendly fawning and cheerful gambols and defiant bay makes him feel quite a man, quite a shepherd, indeed! He even becomes too strong a man, too useful, fills too large a place to think of building a mission and wasting his sweetness on the desert air. In other cases he maintains his humility and continues absent at the Spirit's roll call.

In reply to all such I wish to say that the average mission offers no bigger problems, requires no special gift nor in any other way differs from any embryo church. In fact it generally lacks the bad local history, the cliques that makes many a pastor a fawning dunkey—or monkey—is more easily led, more humble, more spiritual, more idealistic. It does not require a special kind of man but just your ordinary, tactful, sensible, spiritual pastor who has grace and gift enough to fit in most anywhere. It is for such men the mission cause in the Brethren church is dying.

2. Poor Mission Pay. There seems a well founded tradition that a pastor who is barely making a living among friends in an established church should go off among strangers in a mission and live for less. Too often Mission Boards have held this opinion and, under the delusion they were being wise stewards of the Lord's money, have driven a hard bargain with some pastor who knew nothing about where he was going or living conditions and, without friends or credit, with pay check in many cases weeks or months behind (in some cases it hasn't arrived yet) the man failed and both time and money were squandered. Is it any wonder the Lord can't bless that kind of work? I venture the opinion that nine-tenths of all the church extension failures of pastors since we began business are due to impossible living conditions imposed upon the workers.

The writer of this article has taken the solemn vow to stand for decent living conditions for every mission worker,—salary as much or more than he can get elsewhere—and believes this alone is true economy of the Lord's money; moreover he believes that the church sees it the same way and will provide the money for such service.

3. Assignment of questionable status to mission workers. This is a preacher's error. It has been too long the point of view of some pastors that the assumption of a mission project removes a man to a questionable conference standing as compared with the pastors of "big" churches.

Continued on page 10

GENERAL ARTICLES

The Strenuous Life of The Ministry. By Martin Shively

During the sessions of the Ministerial Association, as a part of the general conference of 1917, Dr. J. Allen Miller delivered an address on "Ministerial Leadership," which was heard with such unanimous expressions of approval on the part of the pastors who were in attendance there, that I could not but feel that the sentiment of the address was the sentiment of all. Among the many other good things he said was this, that the preacher in addition to the work incident to preaching the gospel to his congregation as often as might be demanded of him, he must lead his community in matters pertaining to recreation, amusements, public health, public schools, good roads, farming, life work for young people, and safeguarding the sacredness of the home. He expressed my own views exactly, and in a far more telling manner than would be possible with me. If I should stop just here, I am sure it would be apparent to all that the task which falls to the minister is not one which would appeal to the mollycoddle man.

The average pastor must preach at least a hundred times per year, and few of us in the Brethren ministry, or in the pastorate, but are required to preach many more times than that. In a pastorate covering almost thirty-three years, the writer has preached well nigh 6,000 times and during the last twenty-five years, his average has been above two hundred sermons per year. The mere physical effort incident to such an amount of public speaking is a tremendous drain on vitality, to say nothing about the time required for the preparation of the messages. And when the pastor remains in a single pulpit for years, as it is to be hoped that all may, the time spent in gathering sermon material for at least two new messages per week is not readily measured in minutes, but runs rapidly into hours, and not a few of them. Happy therefore is the man whose training has been such as will enable him to gather swiftly and wisely from the printed page, or nature's open book, or the happenings about him; for he shall have use for every power, with every power trained and alert.

But the average man cannot spend all his time in his study and pulpit, if he is to measure up to the ministerial ideals set forth in the first paragraph of this paper. The social demands on the time and strength of the pastor are many and may not all be ignored. Indeed, he must be all things to all men, that he may save them. Though his citizenship is generally supposed to be in heaven, so long as he has a corporeal existence on the earth he is not only subject to the laws which govern society, but is duty bound to do what he may to influence such legislation as will contribute to highest degree of well being for the humanity of which he is a part, and to whose interests he is committed, body and soul. This need not necessarily mean, that he is to plunge into the political struggle, but if he loves God and the people whom God has made, he dare not fail, either in precept or example, to do or say what may be needed to honor God and serve his constituency. And if it should fall to his lot to live at a time, such as our country has been passing through,—a time of peril from which we are not delivered even yet, how he can feel that he has no message to deliver, or no duty to perform is more than I can understand. The organizations which exist for the maintenance of morale of the people, and those whose purpose it is to relieve distress and to save life, claim his attention and his strength, so far as lies in him to give it. And this, with an active participation with others in the community, in behalf of improvement in schools, public health and a general uplift, will present a heavy demand upon his time and ingenuity. Then there are pastoral calls, visiting the sick, presiding at the various board meetings of the church and Sunday school, conducting the weekly teachers' meetings, teaching a class in the school and a multitude of things which cannot be enumerated nor foreseen that must be crowded in some way. And many of these calls demand immediate attention, and not until he has responded to them can he retire to the quiet of his study to pray and prepare for the public functions of his office.

One meets people occasionally who seem to believe that the minister has little to occupy his hands or mind. And the minister may fall into the same delusion, doing as little as possible to hold his position. But if he fails to measure up to the demand of his high office, he gets little satisfaction out of it and the people, still less. In a ministry such as ours, where only the fittest survive, he soon finds himself without a field, a pastor without a flock, a would-be leader without a following. Only the physically strong can endure the strain. Only the tactful and keen of mind can satisfy the demand. And only that soul which deeply and actively loves God and his creatures will succeed in this high office. The field of human need is almost limitless, both in breadth and depth and every part of it is more or less intimately associated with the spiritual, which is the minister's special realm. Thus he must "become all things to all men, that he may save some."

The Present Need of Denominational Loyalty. By E. E. Jacobs, Ph. D.

There is a crying need today in the Brethren church for denominational loyalty. I say this in the face of the fact that much is being said about the desirability of breaking down denominational lines, especially now since the war has brought certain phases of religion to the front. I think that every one will admit that the Y. M. C. A. and other agencies, have accomplished a very worthy task in uniting the Christian people of America in their war work, but that this bespeaks a breaking down of denominationalism, or that it ought to do so, is quite another matter. Moreover, there were many thousands of men who had a very large part in this work who were not members of any church and who did not care a rap for either religion or the church, and who did not care at all what became of denominationalism. They simply took advantages of these opportunities to assist in winning the war.

Much nonsense has been written about the after effect of the war upon denominationalism. It has been urged that the returning soldiers will make bizarre demands upon the church, which failing to be met, the end of denominations, especially the smaller ones, will not be far distant. It is pointed out that the Y. M. C. A. and other like agencies, having been the nourishing spiritual mother during the war, will continue to be so now that peace has come. To the writer this seems unlikely. For without the churches these other organizations would be non-existent and could not recruit their numbers. Furthermore, the number of the returning soldiers is all too small to make any real differences to the churches. Many of them cared nothing for religion before they went to war and they will care little for it when the war psychology shall have passed.

I have heard some of the leading members of our own church express feelings such as these. They say it will go hard with Brethrenism after the war. To the mind of the writer, it will go no harder after the war than it did before the war for our progress is conditioned by our loyalty and zeal. We must not be infected with this war scare talk. If we had cared nothing for the progress of our church before the war, it would have gone hard with us then, and if we have that sort of a spirit now, progress will be difficult and slow. Let us remember that no church is proof against the disloyalty of its own elect. This very intense spirit of loyalty to the denomination has been especially effective in certain denominations, viz., the Roman Catholic, the Dunkard, and the Disciples. We need to learn their lesson.

There are at least two pressing reasons why we need denominational loyalty just now, and the first is that we need to be loyal to the mind and spirit of Jesus. There certainly never was an age in human history, when this needed exemplification more than now. When there are "isms" galore, and when one may have a new "ism" for the asking, when we are so engrossed with riches and science, we need as a church to stand firm by what we regard as the mind of Jesus Christ. Loyalty to the church of our choice, is second only to loyalty to the naked and living truth of primitive and virile Christianity.

But from the pragmatic standpoint, we need loyalty in order to assure our church enterprises a successful culmination. We certainly must all hang together if we want them to succeed. Our missions now suffer for want of full and loyal support. In just a recent number of this paper, it was pointed out that the Publishing House coveted the united support of the churches. And the College and Seminary will face critical conditions if the church does not support them. Difficulties are hanging heavier and heavier over the small denominational colleges and if conditions are not yet critical, they may soon become so. If the members of our communion want to see all these interests not only live, but flourish, they must exhibit a very large degree of denominational loyalty. The fact, moreover, that so many of our ordained ministers are not actively engaged in preaching for us, gives point to this contention. We need every man of this type, active, aggressive, and earnest for Brethrenism.

Those of us who are in close touch with the Publishing interests, the seminary, and the college are in a position to feel in a peculiar way the effects of a spirit of disloyalty to the church. To the writer, it seems perfectly plain, that unless we redouble our efforts right now, as of course many are doing, when the spirit is abroad urging to a loosening of denominational lines and endeavors, which is not at all to the advantage of the smaller church communions, the conditions which will confront us will become acute if not actually critical.

I think that in this brief paper, I have set forth two very essential truths, trite perhaps, but truths for which we have but scant regard. Nevertheless I speak my convictions when I say (1) that if any degree of failure besets us and our interests as a church, it will not be due directly to the war or to outside forces but rather to a forgetfulness of the unique mission which we claim for our church and to disloyalty, discouragement, and carelessness from within. (2) Such failure is bound to overtake us if we are not sincerely and profoundly loyal to our interests.

The Church a Savior of the Community. By S. C. Henderson

Upon a certain occasion, Jesus said to his disciples, "Ye are the salt of the earth." He was thinking of salt as a preserver and purifier, and so his followers were to be the saviors and preservers of society. The Gospel was not an ascetic mysticism like many of the oriental cults. It dealt with vital personal relations between God and man and between man and his fellow-men. This fact made Christianity an ethical religion. The church is a social institution of co-operating souls in the promoting of the kingdom of God in the world. It has ever been spreading the leaven of the kingdom in society. Wherever its influence has gone, it has brought enrichment and enlightenment to the lives of men and their communities. No student of history can make a candid comparative study of the first century and his own generation without seeing the mighty influence that the church of Jesus Christ has exerted upon the life of mankind. It makes no difference whether we call our present day civilization Christian or not, all will have to confess that the leavening force of the Gospel has been at work in the hearts of men. We notice the rise in the position of womanhood, the dispensation of public charity and education, the rise of democracy, the abolition of slavery, the eve of the prohibition of the liquor traffic, the triumph of the desire for peace rather than for war which is now leading the nations into a league of international brotherhood. All these point to the rising tide of the influence cast by the church of Jesus Christ.

No community can rise higher than its ideals. Ideals are born of inspiration. A community like an individual cannot lift itself without some outside force. Religion and education are the two mighty forces that lift mankind upwards. But education cannot do it alone. It takes a spiritual force to inspire men to the ways of right conduct and living. Education may culture the mind, but man is in need of more. He must have a regenerated heart. What is true in the life of the individual soul is true of a community which is an aggregation of individuals. For this reason the church becomes a savior to the community's life.

The Church a Community Asset

The presence and influence of the church is oftentimes too little appreciated or considered. A few years ago, we made the following statement in a "Rural Day" sermon: "A good live church is an asset to any community. No other institution yields the community greater dividends on the amount invested than a rural church. There is not a farm in our neighborhood but what has had a social valuation added to it on the account of this institution being near at hand. The business men of your trading towns recognize the fact and are interested in its welfare and prosperity. It adds to your social enjoyment; it offers moral instruction to your children and neighbors; it seeks to save the worst sinner you have in the community; it robs you of nothing and gives you much; it stands for all that is highest and best; it secures your home and makes your property safe by lifting men to Christ's ideals of conduct. It conserves the peace better than an officer of the law, because it inculcates the spirit of love and brotherhood. It aims to reform the evil and wicked, to strengthen the erring and weak of will and to give courage to the discouraged and hope to the hopeless. It furnishes you with a social center and offers you both mental and spiritual instruction. Its ministers are always found in any uplifting movement for the community's betterment or prosperity. They offer their services freely in time of perplexity and sorrow. The membership contains some of your best fellow-citizens—men and women of integrity, intellect and means. They are the people you revere, trust and honor. You recognize them as your close friends and neighbors. Is there another institution that gives you in return so much as the church?"

The church is conducive to the economic prosperity of the community. John Wesley said, "I can't keep my Methodists poor." He had observed that the wretched conditions of the English colliers and mill-workers were not only spiritually uplifted by his revival, but they were materially uplifted also. Lecky states that the tremendous economic reforms of the early nineteenth century in England can be traced to the influence of the Wesleyan revival. Said a traveling man to me recently, "You Dunkards appear to be a prosperous people wherever I meet you." This fact might be said of other people as well as of our own. Righteousness generally makes for prosperity as well as it does for health and long life. Sin is expensive. The rise of the soul means a corresponding rise in ideals and wants, which are the underlying factors of thrift and industry. The church of today depends upon the community for its support and life. Whatever helps, uplifts and advances the community, generally helps the church. Good roads, good schools, good crops and markets are as vital to the community church as they are to the folks that attend its services. For this reason the church must always stand ready to embrace any program for the community's betterment.

The church is a savior of the moral life of a community.

Much of our morality is customary morality. It comes from customs and habits of the people. It may be either high or low depending upon the ideals of the people. In order to lift the community above the low plane of customary morality, there must be some great inspiration that lifts it to higher things. There is no transforming power like the spirit and teachings of Jesus, when they are woven into the moral fabric of a people. Nearly one hundred years ago, a noted French journalist came over to America to seek out the secret of the young republic's greatness. On returning to his homeland he wrote that after going the length of the land; traveling over its plains and mountains, going down into its mines and visiting emporiums of trade, going into its halls of legislation and courts of justice, he had not found the secret of America's greatness. It was only after he had gone with the masses of the people on the Sabbath day into their houses of worship and had listened to the precepts of the gospel that were taught there that he found why America was great. This distinguished visitor's observation was not without foundation. Only a few years ago, a great New York daily made a survey of the social condition of a certain New England state. It had been said that the state was politically rotten; votes were bought and sold openly in every election. The survey gave a detailed description of every town visited and this startling fact was brought out: the towns where bribery was the most persistent, illegal liquor selling the most rampant and immorality the most flagrant were the communities where no minister resided, and where no religious services were held. In one place called "Darkest Exeter," there had been six churches twenty years ago, but the people had long since quit attending them. Four were in ruins; two were only used on rare occasions and the result was a decadent and demoralized community, which was composed of the descendants of a sturdy people, the sons of the Pilgrims. They had simply stopped going to church and the moral light of the gospel had been extinguished. It is reported that at the entry of America into the world war, a committee from one of the large denominations visited President Wilson at the White House and inquired what service they could best render to their country in the hour of its need. The President, with an eye of a true statesman, said to them: "Gentlemen, the best service you can render your country is to stay in your pulpits and teach morality and patriotism." One reason why Germany went to the depths of national depravity was that the churches of Germany lost their grip on the people because of a worldly and materialistic ministry, who were officials of the state rather than vicars of God. The morale as well as the morals of a people depend upon the spiritual light of a people.

The social and recreational life of the community needs the nurture and guidance of Christian influence. Far too few of our rural churches have caught the vision of safeguarding the social and play life of their young people. The social and play instincts are nature-born and cannot be neglected. If the church fails to make provisions for them, they will be sought elsewhere. Too often they are commercialized by vested interests, that care more for profit than they do for the community's morals. They are apt to pander to the lowest tastes because it pays best. Often the public school or some social club is made a social center rather than the church. Very often they fall into the hands of non-Christian and anti-Christian leaders. Many are the pious parents that have found that their boys or girls have learned to dance, play cards and even take their first drink at a school or club function. Where the church acts as a social center it can act as a supervisor and a guide of the social life and the unchurched people of the community are attracted and won by good influence.

The organized Sunday school class and the Christian Endeavor can do a great work to Christianize the amusements of the community. Class socials, picnics, joint class entertainments and class hikes afford much pleasure and profit for the young people in the community. In not a few places the old-fashioned singing school could be revived with a source of much help and inspiration to the music of the church. Then the church can do much by arranging special days and programs in which the community as a whole are invited to participate. There are Harvest Home, Memorial day, Old Home day, Forefather's day when the old settlers and the aged people are remembered. An annual picnic, an annual New Year's day community dinner, Rural Sunday with an imported speaker, Rally Day in the Sunday school, "Go to Church Sunday"—all these will help to get folks together and acquainted with the church.

These things may seem new and strange in some communities but, if we are to win the modern world we must win it by modern means. I know an energetic young pastor in a community church in the open country, who introduced what they called in that community, "Recreational Evening." Once a week during the summer months the whole community came to the church for a social evening. The church yard was fitted up into croquet and tennis courts and a play ground for the younger children. The pastor says that the idea has grown. It has kept the young people on the farm and away from the neighboring towns. But it has done more, it has helped his Sunday attendance and several of the young people from non-Christian homes have united with the church.

The church should be a factor in the educational and cultural life of the community. Ian MacLaren's church was known as the nursery of great men. In old New England days there were two educated professions—the ministry and law. Out of these old New England communities came the great leaders of the nation. The minister occupies a unique place in stimulating education among his young people. The minister should use illustrations and allusions from history, literature and science often. He should not only stir the emotions but he should stimulate folks to think. He blesses his people twice who teaches them to think. It may be well to place the cookies on the lower shelf but the children often need other things in their diet besides cookies.

Then, the church can use and cultivate the talents of the young people. Special music, an orchestra, special programs and cantatas are very useful in discovering the hidden talents.

And finally, after all has been said, the church is a savior of the community by helping folks to Jesus Christ. All these other things are important but the most important of all is the evangelization of the community. Special efforts with good sane gospel evangelists and pastoral evangelistic work is necessary. Every pastor should make a survey of his community and know who are Christians and who are not. He will do well to study the community leaders and win them to his church. The co-operation of modern Sunday school work can often be made a great factor in a pre-evangelistic effort in a church and in the actual effort to take the community for Christ. If the community is to be really saved by the church it must be not only won but held to Christ.

Sin's Beginning and Ending

In the city of Atlanta there came to an evangelist a man who was a physical, mental and moral wreck. He said to the evangelist. "I started out with the brightest prospects imaginable. There was no young man of my acquaintance for whom the future seemed to hold so much of happiness and blessing. But I began a year ago to use an insidious drug. In a little while I was unfit for business. Then I became unfaithful to my family. Now I am worn out nervously, and exhausted physically, and use the drug to get temporary relief, but it continues to undermine my character. I walk these streets literally an outcast, and all this in a year of time."

The ending of sin is always hideous, but sin's beginnings are always so small and its influence is so deceptive that almost before we know it we have yielded to it in some small way, and unless hindered by divine grace and power ruin and destruction stare us in the face.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

"GOING FORWARD"

Initial sermon delivered by N. W. Jennings, pastor First Berthren church, Los Angeles, California, January 5, 1919.

TEXT: Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before. Philippians 3:13.

The sun of the new year has already come up over the horizon and made its polite bow to all the world, smiling upon the human family and bringing in untold millions of golden opportunities to do good, to worship God and to serve humanity. We launch out upon the sea of activities of the new year with a glorious Captain as our guide who will lead his army on from one victory to another. Two thousand years ago the world was without this Captain and mighty Savior. Can we imagine the gloom and darkness of despair of a world without a Savior? He could be seen walking the highway of the scriptures in the Old Testament through the eye of faith, but there were few that lifted the telescope.

Later on the world looked on a Savior, but he was a little babe in the manger. Still a little later on the world eyed him a dying Savior on the rugged cross of Calvary. His head falls over on his heaving chest. He preaches his last great sermon while dying on the bloody cross, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do." Oh, immeasurable love manifested in life and in death! But the world takes another look; that look was upon his grave—his body in it, cold in death. But now we look upon a living Savior who conquered death, hell and the grave. We look upon an ascended Christ yonder at the white throne of God, pleading with the Father for us. We look upon a Savior who promised to come back to this world again, in the clouds, with power and great glory, for his church.

Our Savior's life was an upward march. His life was one long battle from the manger to the grave and even to the high throne above. Everything seemed to be against him; even his own received him not; and yet the whitest heart that ever throbbed in a human body was the heart of Jesus. That heart was love; nothing but love. His soul was a flame of love, his spirit was an eternity of love. He breathed his first breath in love. His last breath was breathed in love. All the golden streams that flowed through the avenues of his life were golden streams of love created and kept pure through his prayerful life. On the cross he emptied all the love of his heart on a sinful world. "He tasted death for every man." He trusted his Father in life and he trusted him in death. "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." "It is finished."

From the great conquering Christ St. Paul caught this spirit that moved him to declare to all the world that he had left the world behind and was pressing toward the goal of the eternal world. Paul had a hard fight, but he won out in the name of the Christ. St. Paul went forward in the time of health, and unflinchingly he moved on in the time of afflictions. No man ever suffered more for the gospel's sake than did St. Paul. In almost every imaginable and conceivable way he suffered for Jesus and for preaching the gospel. Listen! "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice I was beaten with rods. Thrice I suffered shipwreck. A night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often; in perils by the heathen; in perils in the city; in perils in the wilderness; in perils in the sea; in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness; in watchings often; in hunger and thirst; in fastings often; in cold and nakedness." "Besides those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches.

St. Paul was faithful in prayer and in the Word of God, and faithful to the work of the church, therefore no power could stop his upward march. And if we as a church and as a people in the year Nineteen-Nineteen give time to prayer and to the reading of the Holy Bible and to the work of the church in any way that God may call upon us to do, we shall have a year of victory to the glory of God the Father, God the Son and to God the Holy Ghost.

The year 1918 has been a year of trials, but it has been a year of victory. Look on the calendar of 1918 and read that the world's greatest calamity was ended. The year 1918 not only brought to us as a nation material prosperity and intellectual achievements and moral progress, but it brought us swift and heroic sacrifice and a greater patriotism, but grandest of all it brought us from the eternal hills out of the wonderful treasure SWEET PEACE, and with it the most sweeping victory perhaps the world has ever known.

But did we not read before the old year closed it's chapter of over ten million killed in the bloody war and over six million swept into eternity by the almost noiseless gun of the dreadful Spanish influenza? Shall we sit down and weep our eyes red and weep the time away because of these things? No. God grant us the spirit of wisdom that possessed St. Paul, "forgetting the past" we shall press on. Churches must be revived everywhere, and nations must be rebuilt. Shall we quit the work of the Lord to weep? The walls must be rebuilt. Let every one of us get busy and keep busy. Our returning boys will help. They fought well over there; they will do no less at home.

The year Nineteen-Eighteen has been a straining year upon womankind as well as mankind; the "flu" has been raging for three months in the household, making the night as sleepless as the day to thousands of mothers. Many women who were strong with iron nerves are suffering now with nerves all shattered by bereavement that has left desolation in almost every room in the house.

The women of our country and of other countries have met the trials of severe economy. They have prayed and worked hard in every way with the noble men of the world. The dear Savior has been with them as he was with Mary and Martha. Mothers, hear him say to you, "He shall live again." "She shall live again." So step away from the grave. Set your face toward the dawn of the new day and press on. The crown may be just ahead. May we all obtain!

King David said, "My sin is ever before me." But under grace St. Paul could see the past sinking under the fountain of love, the blood so deep that even like God he could not forget.

You will be tested this year, but God is on the side of those who obey him. John Wesley stood behind his pulpit and said, "I have been charged with every crime in the catalog save one—drunkenness," and a woman rose in the audience and said, "You were drunk last night." But John Wesley pressed on and left behind a mighty monument of his life's work on which the world can look. God grant us power to forget and power to go forward this year, in time and in all eternity, for Jesus sake!

OUR DEVOTIONAL

Strength for Every Trial. By Alice Livengood

OUR SCRIPTURE

I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: everywhere and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need. I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. Philippians 4:12, 13.

OUR MEDITATIONS

Some one has said, "Great trials are a necessary preparation for great duties." Be that as it may we know none are exempt from trials. The great and small alike have them. They come in trivial form and sometimes as mountains. Sometimes they seem so staggering that it seems impossible to bear up under them, but we always find Christ our yoke-fellow sharing our burdens so that we are able to bear up under them. Sometimes our trials last so long that we think we shall have to yield, but we find our ever-present helper, Jesus Christ, upholding us in our weakness.

We need to be ever on our guard lest we be taken unawares. Our trials come sometimes from very unexpected sources. We are tried by our losses, by pain, by false friends, by the luring of worldly pleasures. But the old song we used to sing, "Keep close to Jesus," furnishes the secret of our security. We would do well to make it our life motto. That is found to be the secret of every soul who has had strength for every trial.

It was true of the great apostle and missionary, Paul, who preached Christ to nearly all of the then known world. Nothing else could have held him steady and strong as he encountered the severest trials; trials of lying tongues, of hunger, desertion by friends, scourgings, imprisonments, and a host of others. We are surprised to hear him say that he had learned in whatsoever state he found himself "therewith to be content." But it is all made clear when he tells us the source of his strength. I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" is his testimony.

He had an affliction which he wished removed and asked the Lord three times that this might be done, but the answer was, "My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness." Did Paul stop his work then, because his request was not granted? Most assuredly not. With the promise of grace for endurance he pressed on with all his strength to carry the gospel to the lost and said, "most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me."

Neither should we grow hard and rebellious when trials come up into our lives. Very often they are blessings in disguise. They cause us to be more dependent upon Christ and to exercise our faith in him. Our faculties are often weak from lack of use. Just as our muscles grow stronger by exercise, so faith increases with use. By faith we, like Paul, can realize God's presence with us and that will make us strong. As that great apostle testified in his second letter to Timothy, "The Lord stood with me and strengthened me," so we may realize his upholding presence today.

We go to our friends, unburden our hearts, find consolation in their sympathy and leave them with renewed courage, determined not to give up the struggle. Just so should we go to Jesus who is ever ready to help us in every trial, if we will but make him our confidant. "He is interested in all the affairs of life" and will advise us wisely if we go to him in prayer and will strengthen us with his word, "the bread of life." We must have this "bread;" we cannot live without it. And Jesus knows our need. "For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need" (Hebrews 4:15, 16).

Before his ascension Jesus said, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth," so then why not really believe in his power and go to him for "Strength for Every Trial?"

Our Prayer

Holy Father, in heaven, we do thank thee that thou art the giver of every good and perfect gift. We do thank thee that we have such a true source of strength to go to, when trials come. We are glad that thou dost give a listening ear when we come to thee aright, and we pray that we may ever avail ourselves of this strength. When our requests are not granted, give us grace to keep on trusting thee and fully believing "that all things work together for good to them that love God." May thy children be willing to be guided by thee. Give this strength and guidance day by day as needed and we pray that we shall not forget to praise thy holy name for victories won. Amen.

Killing by Slander

There is scarcely any one but has felt the sting of slander. It is one of the most common sins in the world and yet one of the most despicable. The slanderer is the man who strikes you in the back. He is the man who fires upon you while you sleep. He is the man who destroys your home while you are away. He changes your virtue to vileness, makes of your good work treachery, represents your pure speech as foulness and fraud and causes your good name to become a byword and a hissing.

"He that uttereth a slander is a fool"; the wise man does not mince words. He is a fool because of the despicableness of his sin. Nothing is more difficult to counteract than slander and no one is harder to run down than the one who slanders. This is because people are so used to hearing slander that they seldom detect it. The slanderer is a fool because he is sowing seed which he cannot possibly gather up. Even a fool can babble away at some false report, but the wisest man cannot entirely destroy its effects. A lunatic can set fire to a building, but it takes the whole city force of fire-fighters to put it out, and even they cannot take away the fact of the loss. Just so, a simpleton can utter a slander that will destroy a man's good name, but who can make it as though it had never been said?

There is nothing so nerve-racking, so completely distracting, so absolutely unendurable and so killing to many people as slander. It clouds the brightest life, embitters the sweetest disposition and breaks the keenest mind. Many a man in public life has gone down under the murderous fire of slanderous tongues.

Horace Greeley died of a broken heart caused by malicious slander. Said Senator Depew, "I made a speech with Mr. Greeley in his presidential campaign, just before its close. We spoke from the same platform, and both of us knew he was to be beaten. We went back to his home and he was jeered on the train and at the depot when we arrived. We went into his study which was littered with those famous caricatures of Nast, representing him as the embodiment of all that was evil and vile in expression and practice in life. Mr. Greeley glanced them over for a moment and then said, 'My life is a failure. I have never sought to accumulate a fortune. I have never cared for fame, but I did want to leave a monument of what I had done for my fellow-men, in lifting them up and doing away with the curse of slavery and the curse of rum; but here I am, at the close of this campaign, so represented to my fellow-countrymen that the slave will always look upon me as having been one of his owners, and reform will look upon me as a fraud.' There, his head following upon his desk, he broke into uncontrollable sobs. I sent for his family. The brain that had done such splendid work snapped. Next morning he was taken to an asylum, where he died, his heart literally broken."—G. S. B.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Duties of An Elementary Division Superintendent. By Mrs. H. E. Stroud

The duties of an elementary division superintendent are, of course, in a few words, to superintend the elementary division of the Sunday school, consisting of three departments, namely, Beginners, Primary and Junior.

She stands in the same relation to the elementary division as the general superintendent to the entire school.

But to be specific, her duties may be enumerated as follows:

I. To see that the elementary division is up-to-date in every way, according to required standards. There are standards of excellence to which the Sunday schools of one's own denomination strive to attain, and there are also those set forth by the State and National Associations. These standards deal with the proper grading of the school, work to be covered during the year, etc. The elementary division should consist of three distinct departments, and each department should have its own departmental superintendent.

II. The elementary division superintendent should confer with the departmental superintendents concerning the work in the different departments.

There are always plans to be made for special lessons, special days, work to be covered during the year, and different devices for making the work interesting for both the pupils and teachers.

III. There should be occasional teachers' meetings when all the officers and teachers of the elementary division meet together to discuss problems and how to meet them, and to plan work, and it is the duty of the superintendent of that division to conduct these helpful meetings.

IV. In almost every Sunday school there is, or at least should be, a monthly meeting for all workers of the entire school and this is a splendid opportunity for the workers of the adult division to come into touch with the elementary division. There should be reports given by the elementary superintendent concerning the work of her division, and this affords a chance for all workers of the Sunday school to co-operate with one another.

V. It is the duty of the elementary superintendent to see that the children of that division are promoted to their proper places at the proper time; also that when new pupils enter the school that they are placed in the right department and class.

VI. Perhaps the most difficult task which confronts the elementary division superintendent, is that of her work with the parents of the children attending the division which she superintends. These parents, and particularly the mothers, need to be interested in the lessons and work of the Sunday school. They need to co-operate with the officers and teachers if success is to be met with. Problems of absentees, tardiness, etc., which are so perplexing, are not so difficult to settle if the mothers will lend their co-operation to overcome them.

The Sunday school is making an effort to place in the hands of the children the right kind of stories, and to teach the right conception of God, and the parents should be made familiar with the methods by which this is being done.

VII. Finally, she should read books, magazines, and all the material available to acquaint herself with what her work really must consist of, and above all she should be conscientious in all her efforts, for there is no greater work, and none so far-reaching and lasting for all time as work with children, if we believe in the truth of these words, "What we put into first life, we put into all life."

Continued from page 4

He goes on probation as it were. He loses caste and requires watching. He has a humble place and needs reminding of it. The dignity of conference necessitates discrimination against him. He is quarantined against certain offices. He is presumed to be in dire need and has become untrustworthy with cash. The presumption is that he will fail in the job. If so his career will be presumed to be ended. That this mediaeval and suicidal atmosphere still persists in starting. It does, however. The young man who might give his life to this kind of work senses the condition and is warned. Fresh from college he bumps into some of the laws of the jungle not written in the books. He is gently admonished against breaking his neck—if a relative or friend—sometimes by the members of the very board seeking a man for the job. The job is vacant. Shame on such a system of bigotry, worldly wisdom and conceit in the name of Christ. Is it any wonder the extension program of the church is at a standstill? (I am not romancing).

4. Assignment of extraordinary responsibility to mission workers. By this I mean the assumption that once on a mission field a man has no right to leave as well as a pastor anywhere else. This is a general point of view injurious in the extreme and utterly unjustifiable. It is based on the too prevalent error that a certain mission belongs to a certain man just because he happened to be the first to respond to the opportunity. Emphatically, no! Would that I had stentorian voice to hurl this reply into every nook of the brotherhood and into the sleepy intelligence of every dreamer in the church. This church belongs to God and its responsibility rests on every man in the church, if it is a mission. When that first or second pastor's work is done, it is not only right but imperative for him to go and it is folly to hold him responsible for what follows after. Men who go into a mission field to work a time for God have a right to leave when that time is up. Let us straighten out our thinking if we expect men to do this work for us. The sooner we recognize the fact that a mission pastor is as any other pastor, with equal rights, privileges, responsibilities and no greater than any other man; that his assumption of a definite task for a definite time does not put on him a weight of responsibility that shall be life long and above other men for that place; the sooner we recognize this, the earlier will we find men coming forward to do their share.

Whether you agree with the above diagnosis or not, the fact remains, we need the men and do not get them. The call is God's; hear him.

HITTING THE MARK

That's what this epistle of Brother Ronk reminds us of. You can not read it without saying, "Well, what's the use of talking without saying something." There is no use of mining words about the things that are hampering and handicapping the progress of the Master's Kingdom. No false modesty ought to hinder any leader from saying what he has in his heart. Read this message and if you are hit, let it hurt until you make the amends you should.

Some of the marks he sets for his target may not be easily seen by all but no doubt if the right ones see the pages, the vision will be made plain to them. With a lot of folks and too many of them, preachers are showing "yellow" where there should be the warm glow of "white heat," we need some plain talk. We need more than that. It will be supplied, too. Some imagine they can "bluff" their way to fame and progress but marks of progress so completely in line with the advancement of the Kingdom as the 16 goals of the Program are good enough for any of us. Make them, but as much more as is possible. Make them, for they will not hinder any worthier goal you or the Holy Spirit may set for you. They are right even though they may be too short. They are right even though they may not be reached.

BAME.

Put your best into every least thing you do. Remember whose you are and who has commissioned you. If you are called upon to do some menial thing with no thanks, what of that? It is not the act so much as Christ you should consider.

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

Message—Extraordinary

Do you know that in spite of the Armistice a GREAT DRIVE is NOW on?

This DRIVE is being made in America. It is a Missiou Study DRIVE!

CALL TO THE COLORS

Your society with other societies, with EVERY other society is urged to enlist.

THE AMMUNITION

"The Lure of Africa" by Patton.

"Ancient Peoples at New Tasks" by Price.

"Men and Things" by Atkinson.

You may not desire to use all the above ammunition (books), but you may make your choice and write for the same to Missionary Education Movement,

601 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

Now all ready, and "OVER THE TOP!" Organize your Mission Study Class, select book and go to work.

TIME SCHEDULE FOR DRIVE: February and March. Do it NOW. Do it NOW!

Let me know of your success. I am interested in the DRIVE.

Fraternally,
A. L. DELOZIER,

Headquarters for Christian Endeavor Theatre of Action (Mission Study Sector).

Relay Classes

If all Endeavorers were as enthusiastic about mission study as Superintendent DeLozier, there would be a class in every society. Some say the spirit is willing and eager but the body is too weak to supply the energy requisite to fruitful participation in another meeting. Others claim that theirs is not a problem of interest but time.

The relay class affords needed relief by reducing the number of meetings and conserving certain hours. Instead of meeting once a week for six weeks it meets only once or twice. Where the one-meeting plan is observed six speakers will present the leading facts of the entire text, each reporting a given chapter. If two meetings are preferred three persons review so many chapters at each session, which allows larger opportunity for general discussion. Either plan presupposes the individual reading of the entire book by all who care to share in the course of study.

This plan has been employed with gratifying results. It is not speaking wide the truth to say that there is scarcely a society among our churches that cannot find ample time without overworking any one to promote mission study in this manner. The report and discussion hour may take the place of the regular missionary meeting. Where the church does not have a preaching service each Sunday, the hour following Sunday school on the alternate Sunday may be used. If the pastor is willing, the major part of a mid-week service or two might profitably be devoted to such study.

The work is of sufficient importance to engage the thought and support of the entire church. If our people are to give a good account of themselves in the work of reconstruction, whether at home or abroad, they must be acquainted with the urgent needs. These are carefully considered in the mission study books by writers of large vision and rare insight. Knowledge acquired through a study of their fascinating treatment of the subject will stimulate interest, general sentiment, encourage prayer and inspire the giving of substance and self. Thus may the way be prepared for the greatest Easter offering.

J. A. GARBER.

Thirty Eight Years of Christian Endeavor

By Dr. Francis E. Clark

Thirty-eight years ago this morning, February 2, 1881, the first Christian Endeavor constitution was written. Thirty-eight years ago this evening the constitution was signed by fifty-seven charter members, and our movement was launched, a tiny boat on a wide sea. It is worth noting that in every essential particular that first society was the model of practically all other societies of the same name and of many with purely denominational names,—the pledge, the prayer meeting, the committee system (including the Lookout, Prayer meeting and Social Committees and the consecration meeting).

Of course the details have marvelously expanded. New committees have been formed, work undreamed of then has been taken on,—good citizenship, missionary endeavors, a world-wide fellowship, the Quiet Hour, the Tenth Legion, have all been added—but they have been natural inevitable outgrowths, and in no case radical changes from the original plan.

Does not this fact make it plain that God approves these plans? Is it conceivable that he would have so blessed them, sent them around the world, caused them to be translated into a hundred languages, brought tens of millions within their influence, if he did not approve of them? May we not say reverently and humbly that he has adopted Christian Endeavor as one of his plans for Christian nurture? In all this we find reason only for gratitude and renewed endeavor.

Two things follow.—If Christian Endeavor has been God's plan for training millions of young people, then its underlying principles were his and we should hold to them. I do not plead for uniformity. No two societies ought to be exactly alike. But all should have a pledge of allegiance to "Christ and the Church," a meeting for the expression of that allegiance, and a plan of systematic service. To these principles, while they admit of infinite variety in detail and endless expansion, we should remain steadfast, because our history shows them approved of God.

Again, if Christian Endeavor is one of God's plans for training young Christians, we are "laborers together with him" when we form new societies, enlarge old societies, develop our unions, organize our state and county work more effectively, and throw our counts more vigorously into every detail of Christian Endeavor. Here is our exceeding great reward and a wonderful inspiration for our thirty-eighth birthday and for the years to come. This is God's work as well as our own. He is not a silent partner, a far-off managing director. He is laboring together with us and we with him.

Special Cause for Gratitude this Month

Besides, for thirty-eight years of ever-increasing Christian Endeavor, we thank God today for the advent of Constitutional Prohibition, for the assembling of the great Peace Conference, and the practical assurance of a League of Free Nations and a World Court. Let us "Praise God from whom all blessings flow!"

REPORTS

Endeavorers! This is the time for you to send in your reports of Ashland College Night. About twenty societies have reported so far and the reports they send in are most gratifying. We cannot make a complete report until YOU respond so send in your report immediately.

Send all reports and checks in my name to Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio.

EDWIN BORADMAN, JR.

CAUSE OF A STAMPEDE

I asked a Texas cowboy what stampeded the cattle and made them rush and run over everything and one another. He said that sometimes when twenty thousand cattle were lying down on a still night that he could sail his hat over them and stampede them, or fetch a keen whoop, or that a loud clap of thunder would stampede them. "Then again," he said, "nothing would stampede them." Then he looked knowingly into my face and said, "The stampede must be in the cattle before you can stampede them with anything."

PATIENT WORK

Crossing the Bar was written on a day in October in Tennyson's eighty-first year. The poet's son, to whom it was shown, said: "It is the crown of your life's work." Tennyson answered, "It came in a moment." But beyond that moment lay more than three score years of fastidious care in thinking and writing.

"The heights of great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night."

MISSIONS

Things To Remember When Supporting Missions.

Missionaries and Converts

A native gentleman in India says: "If the missionaries could not show a single convert they would still be justified ten thousand fold by the moral influence they exert on the country." Dr. Morrison was correspondent of the London Times and later special adviser to the Chinese president, and he said, "Whenever I hear anyone abusing the missionaries and saying their work is valueless, I set him down as a fool; missions are the greatest force for the uplift of the country." This wider conception of the missionary enterprise is applicable to home missions as well as foreign.

Tyler Dennett in his book, "The Democratic Movement in Asia," says that the work of the missionaries as makers of democracy is not to be measured by numbered converts. Those numbers are considerable and must not be disregarded, but the influence of the missions reaches far beyond those who become Christians.

Missionaries as Peacemakers

Nolan R. Best, Editor of "The Continent," says: "The eyes that are turned on Paris are seeing only one part of the forces that are making for world democracy. The other part is working in harder conditions but in even more fundamental ways, for the truest makers of world democracy are the Christian missionaries in Asia and elsewhere."

Tyler Dennett believes that the real task is "the underwriting of a world democracy with a world Christianity," and that the missionaries are a big factor in doing it.

Your Home Church

The home church must stand faithfully by the missionaries and the cause of missions generally if the maximum of service is to be rendered this needy world in this most critical hour. The mission parish of the missionary church is never less than the whole world. The pastor and church that lack that vision are handicapped and will fail in the front line trenches where every church is drafted of the Lord to fight the good fight.

Laying the Foundations

"The missionary movement starts where democracy starts, with the home and the social institutions. Whether as an evangelist, or as a schoolmaster, or as a doctor, or as a teacher of social ethics, the missionary is at work at the foundations. He is a purveyor of ideas making democracy possible by making the ideas of Christ the common thought of the masses of the people. After watching Paris for a while think around the world to the rest of the force that is making democracy in the world." The missionaries of the Brethren church are helping to lay the foundations for a Christian world democracy. Brother Yoder as evangelist and preacher and pastor and teacher and social worker is with his faithful comrades in service doing for Argentina more than words can tell. The same can be said of Brother Gribble and his party in Africa, and also of Brethren Drushal and Cook and their co-laborers in the southern mountains of our own land. Truly they are

By G. C. Carpenter

"Makers of World Democracy," peacemakers in the highest sense, and surely the King himself will in the day of rewards delight to do them honor.

RECEIPTS OF THE MISSIONARY BOARD OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

For February

Bethel, Ind.,	$ 10.00
*Zion Hill, Ohio,	31.65
Interest,	4.05
New Paris, Ind., S. S. C. E.,	5.00
National S. S. C. E.,	50.00
*Uniontown, Pa.,	37.00
Yellow Creek, Pa.,	12.00
Flora, Ind.,	60.00
Prof. J. L. Gillin, Chicago, Ill.,	10.00
Elkhart, Ind.,	57.00
Nettie J. O'Neil, Conemaugh, Pa.,	5.00
First Brethren, Johnstown, Pa., ...	150.00
First Brethren, Waterloo, Iowa (Quarterly P),	31.00
Burlington, Ind.,	20.00
Mrs. S. J. Lichty, Waterloo, Iowa, ..	5.00
*Turlock, Cal.,	60.00
Williamstown, Ohio,	10.00
Mrs. Henry Murr, Dayton, O., R. R.
No. 4,	4.00
Previously reported,	$4,515.28

Total offerings to March 1st, 1919, $5,082.18

Respectfully submitted,

ORION E. BOWMAN,

Secretary-Treasurer,

2701 West Third St.,
Dayton, Ohio.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

NAPPANEE, INDIANA

The revival service under the able leadership of Brother L. S. Bauman came to a close on Sunday night, February 23, at the end of four strenuous weeks of effort. As already reported in these columns the meeting began with great enthusiasm and interest. So it continued all through the four weeks and many said that if it had been continued another week, the extra effort would have been worth while. As it was 63 came forward to crown Christ the King of their lives. Of this number about fifteen represent those who have reconsecrated their lives to the Master. Four came by relation. All new members will be received into the church at the mid-week prayer service of February 27th, at which time Brother Wolford will be with us.

Brother Bauman came dangerously near exceeding "his limit" in this meeting and I miss my guess if he does not exceed it at other places before he goes back to California. The work was hard and it is to him that a great part of the credit for success must go. During the first two weeks' services were held in the afternoon at which time lectures on prophecy were given. These were largely attended for afternoon meetings. They were also in great measure responsible for the wide-spread interest manifest in his evening sermons. The evening attendance was up to expectations and some beyond. If there is one thing that Nappanee does do, as is testified to by all the evangelists, it is to present filled houses to the speaker. There was not the personal work done in this meeting that should have been and as a consequence it is a clear witness to the power of the preaching of the pure, unadulterated gospel.

The Nappanee people deserve great credit for this great success. All the finances for the meeting were provided before the evangelist came. About thirty-two homes were opened to entertain Brother and Sister Bauman and some places more than once. Incidentally the pastor and his family helped to consume the surplus food supply of Elkhart county along with the evangelist. The choir was very faithful through all the meeting. All through the meeting the "flu" and scarlet fever was rampant. It was worse than at any time since Conference. Perhaps the psychology is wrong which lays the blame on exterior things and talks about difficulties all the time. Prayer was a feature of the meeting. Before the evangelist arrived the church was much in prayer. Before the service each night a band of faithful members met to pray for the unconverted and for the preacher. During the day many a person had the question put squarely to him by one of his friends as to his relation to Christ. During the meeting the ministers of the churches of Nappanee were frequently in attendance. A well arranged program for the month of March and for April is now in operation. It is planned with the idea of retaining the forces gathered during the meeting and keeping alive the revival spirit.

C. E. KOLB.

DOINGS AT DAYTON

In our communication to the readers of the Evangelist, December 5th, we indicated that some matters of special interest were being planned for the new year. The congregation of the First Brethren church could hardly anticipate the extent of good things in prospect for their enjoyment and spiritual advancement. The new pastor, Elder E. M. Cobb, having been so handicapped by "flu" bans, up to the first of the year determined to put on a program that would win when people could be able to get out to services.

The first Sunday evening in January, the pastor began his Stereopticon Travelogue lectures which have proved a great attraction and blessings. I quote briefly from his Institute Booklet: "Four hundred splendid views will be shown by Pastor Cobb and his wife during the Sunday evening services this winter. These magnificent pictures are carefully arranged according to the itinerary followed by the pastor in his oriental tours, so as to make them intensely interesting, and he has them embellished with numerous and varied scripture texts illustrating the rapid fulfillment of prophecy regarding the Land of the Book. The first half hour after the 'young people's chorus' and opening service, each Sunday evening will be devoted to these lectures, which will be immediately followed by a short, scriptural evangelistic sermon." The large auditorium and galleries are usually packed by 7:30 and on many occasions people have been turned away. The morning services are also well attended, when the pastor speaks on doctrinal subjects, specially stressing the incarnation of our Lord in its various aspects.

Simultaneous with this program the pastor has promoted a regular Bible institute course of lecture studies during three evenings of each week, and a special junior lecture on Saturday afternoons for those of 9 to 16. All these studies are well supported and only one of them given outside the church, at the City Rescue Mission, and is compensated by having the service of Mr. Quartel, who has charge of the Mission, to sing at our morning worship. He is a gifted Gospel singer and has proved a great attraction to the morning audience. These lectures during the week on the fundamentals of faith and Bible study as well as dispensational and synthetic study, are being unusually well attended. I quote from Sunday calendar of January 26: "How do the classes of the Bible Institute look to you this week? Class in Fundamentals at the Mission, 79; Tuesday evening Adult History class, 68; Dispensation Truth, 69; Wednesday, Analytical study in Corinthians, 62; Junior class, 68; Intermediate History class, 58; making a total of 404 students in our private theological seminary. Besides this we had 63 at our mid-week prayer meeting, 381 at the morning service Sunday and 676 in the evening." Since our last report we have received into the church some 20 persons, 9 of whom were baptized and received into fellowship last Sunday evening, February 23rd.

Pastor Cobb has certainly endeared himself and his good wife to this people, and is showing himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed of his service. May I quote again from our recent Sunday calendar: "Well, this is certainly a church which delights to 'go over the top.' The most sanguine expectations of the pastor have again been reached and passed by the attendance at all sessions. I'll declare it is a revelation. This is rather encouraging to the pastor, especially so since it was prophesied that the first meetings would be the largest, and since, in some quarters, there is so much pity bestowed upon the Dayton church that they are so far behind the times, as to believe the Bible as it reads. All right, brethren and sisters, come on; let's stay by the old Book." "Let Virgil sing the praises of Augustus Caesar, genius celebrate merit, and flattery extol the talents of the great; but the old story of the rugged Cross with its attendance propitiations and blessings, shall engross my head, hand and heart." All the philosophy and rhetoric in town evaporates into insignificance when compared with the message of the Cross, even though it be in "a rude form of speech."

This week Elder Cobb, his wife and the ladies' quartette of First Brethren church, are with Elder Louis S. Banman in a Bible Institute at Berne, Indiana. We are planning and working to have an average of 500 in Sunday school for every Sunday in March, for which the pastor promises a special Stereopticon lecture on California to the school at a set time. Pray for us that the Lord may continue his blessings upon us, as we beseech him to bless you all.

Dayton, Ohio. W. C. TEETER.
February 25th. Corresponding Secretary.

OAKVILLE, INDIANA

It has been some time since we have given a report from this place, partly because there has not been a great deal to report and partly because we were without a pastor from the first of October until the first of January. During the last eighteen months we have been striving hard to maintain a full time place for our pastor. This was accomplished during the last summer under the pastorate of Rev. A. R. Staley, and we thought we had all arrangements made for the conference year beginning October 1, 1918. We had the promise of Rev. W. T. Lytle then of Flora, Indiana, who was leaving there at that time. However, we were much disappointed when Brother Lytle wrote us that he would have to ask for a reconsideration, as he was called to Burlington and Darwin field by a strong call from both churches. We could not criticize Brother Lytle for accepting this field as it was near his former home where he was acquainted with the field and the congregations here were acquainted with their pastor.

From October first until January first we had very few services, not so much on account of the "flu" but because we were unable to find a man who was ready to accept our call. About January first we were very fortunate in securing Rev. W. R. Deeter, who is at present attending Ashland College. Brother Deeter now preaches for us each alternate Sunday and all the auxiliaries of the church are taking on new life.

On February 2, the churches of the entire county in which we live (Delaware), put on a simultaneous evangelistic campaign under the leadership of Rev. Chas E. Watkins, Y. M. C. A. Secretary of Muncie, Indiana. Mr. Watkins is a powerful orator and one who never does things by halves. As I stated before Rev. Deeter is in College and, in view of the fact that he could give us but two weeks of his time, the county headquarters furnished us Rev. N. S. Sichterman, a Presbyterian minister of Elmwood, Indiana, for the first week. He preached us some splendid spiritual sermons which had a wide hearing. On February 9, Brother Deeter came and entered at once on a vigorous campaign of saving souls that were lost.

On Wednesday evening, February 12th, we had the first convert of the meeting, a man who was past 50 years old. From that time there were accessions at almost every service. On Thursday evening we celebrated Father and Son day by a banquet at the K. of P. Hall. The S. S. C. E. furnished the eatables for 48 fathers and sons, who were addressed at the close of the banquet by Prosecutor Horace G. Murphy, who made a good talk suitable for the occasion. On Wednesday evening, February 20th, we celebrated Mother and Daughter day. The men furnished the meal and served it. They had the ladies guessing what they were going to have to eat. The men convinced the mothers and daughters that they could cook and do it in regular ladies' style. About 120 mothers and daughters were banqueted, after which Miss Hammond, secretary of the Muncie Y. W. C. A. gave a short talk to mothers and daughters especially, but which the men had the privilege of listening to, and of enjoying. The best part of the evening, however, was yet to follow. The good fellowship among the men in uniting to make the event a success and the powerful sermon of Brother Deeter which influenced five men and one woman to make the good confession and start on their Christian career, furnished the climax to the evening program. This was a night that will long be remembered by the people of Oakville and community. Men for whom we had been praying for years finally surrendered their lives to King Emmanuel. What joy came into the lives of the Christians when they could realize that after days, months and years of praying, at last their prayers were answered. It might be interesting to say that one of the men was about 23 years old, one about 36, two about 45 and one about 54 years old. During the meetings which closed February 23, we had 33 accessions, 29 of which came to our local church, 3 choosing to go to the Methodist church and one to the Christian church. Baptismal services were held Monday afternoon, February 24. All 29 candidates appeared for baptism and all were present at the Monday evening services for confirmation.

It is remarkable what an influence for good was felt throughout our community. Profanity was not heard from the mouths of those who had been in the habit of uttering oaths with almost every breath; petty quarrels were made right and a deeper spiritual atmosphere than we have ever seen was in our midst. Many more souls are near the kingdom and we believe if we continue to pray fervently, that God will answer our prayers ere long for them.

Ordinarily our Sunday school runs along with an attendance of about 50. On Sunday February 9, we had an attendance of 62, on Sunday, February 16, we had 114, with an offering of $10.34, and on February 23, we had 162 with an offering of $18.26. This day marks the greatest Sunday school we have ever had. Our goal was 125 which was easily reached.

In our recent revival we secured many who will be valuable to us in the years to come, some who possess much talent which we hope to use for Christ and the church. In ages they range from 8 years old to 74. In occupation, there were: a veterinary surgeon and wife, garage owner and his wife; two owners of a feed store, a trained nurse, farmers and retired farmers, high school students, and common school students. About half were adults.

The county-wide campaign was a complete success. Rev. Watkins advises that he thinks the number of additions to the churches will reach 2,000. The effect is remarkable. Wherever you might go, the evangelistic campaign and its results were the topic of conversation. It is now being planned to repeat the campaign in February of 1920 and each year thereafter if the Lord wills.

Enough cannot be said for the splendid work of Brother Deeter. From the moment he landed in Oakville till time for his departure, he labored constantly for the salvation of souls. He visited almost every home in town, had prayer with many of them and received some confessions in the home. This was the case with our first convert, and also with a lady who was 74 years old. He not only won the hearts of the people of the congregation, but the love and respect of the outside world as well. None speak of him but to praise him, and all were sorry to see the meetings close. May the Lord richly bless him and his family, may he be permitted to finish his college course which is his desire, that he may be prepared to serve the spiritual needs of our people or some other. We are very anxious that he move here and preach for us each Lord's day, but will not be able to enjoy this privilege until he is through college which will be in '20.

If he will but promise us to give us his time when out of school we will be satisfied with his coming each alternate Sunday till that time.

Hoping it will not be so long again till you hear from us, praying that other churches may enjoy experiences similar to ours, and soliciting your prayers in our behalf and especially in behalf of those who have just been born into the Kingdom, I am.

Yours in his name,
CHARLIE S. KERN, Secretary.

WHOLE GOSPEL MISSION

Dear Evangelist: I want to express my appreciation of the improvement of the Evangelist. I think I have always succeeded in getting along pretty well with all of its editors.

But since we have three good men at the head of things I believe there will be a constant improvement.

I am sure Brother Gnagey is hard to surpass in the Sunday school literature, and Brother Teeter seems to be an expert as a business manager, and we are praying that Brother Baer may become the best editor that we have ever had.

I am very anxious to see the Brethren Evangelist become a strong moulder of sentiment. I mean that it should become a strongly spiritual, Holy Ghost paper, emphasizing all the fundamental doctrines of the Bible which are the doctrines of our Brethren church.

To illustrate what I mean, I have been taking a daily paper for over twenty years. Every day it has a two column editorial, and by reading that I can always tell what the paper stands for. I do not always agree with its policy, but I always know what it is. Their editorials are the greatest of any daily paper, perhaps in the United States. It was the first great daily that advocated prohibition, the first that cut out all liquor advertisements and has done more in reforming our city than all others combined. It is uncompromising and sometimes wrong but it does things and you can always know where it stands.

I am praying that Brother Baer may be given time enough for much prayer, and may have the united prayers of all the Brethren who have real access to the throne. Also, that he may be given much time for the impartial, honest study of the Bible, and then fearlessly to write editorials strong in doctrine, inbreathed by the Holy Ghost.

Well, I did not start out to write this kind of an article, but I have written it.

Our work is taking on new life. Our cottage and church prayer meetings are much more spiritual and increasing in numbers.

Church attendance has almost doubled within the last two months. On Sunday nights I am giving a series of prophetic lectures. Strangers are coming to hear them and every Sunday night the congregation is larger.

My being away so much was the great cause of our work running down. I have stepped out on faith, and have decided to stay home at all costs for a while.

I took my fifteen year old boy out of school and put him to work to help out financially so I can remain at home. If at all possible I will put him in high school next year. We are reaching our expenses except $3 a week. And since I am home I think we can reach that soon. I want to thank my brethren for helping me out financially when all was wrecked by the "flu" and I was sick in bed. They did above my asking and thinking. The Lord put me on my feet physically and financially. I am now in better condition financially and physically than I have been for years, and I am working harder and praying more than ever.

I ask the prayers of all God's people in our behalf. We have a very difficult work but thank God, it is on the upward move. Pray for an increase in fellowship and service.

We received into the Mission two by letter—my daughter, Bessie, and her daughter, Alice. Though Bessie has lost her husband, yet she is holding up well and is doing good work in the church.

ISAAC D. BOWMAN,
1942 S. 17th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

BEAVER CITY, NEBRASKA

When Brother Pierce left here, he said he delegated me to write an article for the Evangelist. Just why I do not know, for he said, "It is something I never do." I told him he ought to write it. I am glad all our brethren are not so inclined, or it would be hard work for our editor to publish the paper.

If I may, I want to go a long way back and tell you first about Brother C. Forney's birthday. You know we all look upon him in a way as being the father of the Beaver City church. He organized the church and stood faithfully by in her early years when it was hard pulling, and like many of our early ministers, he served without pay, or so little that he had to farm to help make a living.

Regardless of this he proved to be one of the best shepherds this flock ever had. Last October, he was eighty years old and we celebrated his birthday at the church. The brother pastors of the town were invited and a short program was rendered, at the close of which a small purse was given Brother Forney. Then refreshments were served and all present seemed to enjoy the occasion greatly.

Soon after this the "flu" struck us and but little was accomplished the remainder of the year, except that in both missionary offerings, Thanksgiving and Christmas, we went "over the top," though we do not have a star for either.

The last Sunday Brother Pierce was with us the members came with well-filled baskets and we ate our dinner together in the basement of the church, ninety some were present; almost the entire membership was out. It was a complete surprise to Brother and Sister Pierce, but they fell right in with the plan and seemed delighted to stay with us. The day was ideal in every way and we enjoyed every minute of it.

In the evening the other churches gave us a very pleasant surprise by dismissing their services and coming over to hear Brother Pierce's last sermon.

To make myself clear about going "over the top," maybe I better explain a little. Last year we reported one hundred and twenty active members; during the year we lost four by death, thirteen have moved away and twelve or fifteen of the remainder have been spiritually dead for three or four years. We believe, when a member lives in town or within five or seven miles of town, has an automobile and never attends, nor supports the church in any way, you could and should count him as spiritually dead, and if the Lord had not said, "let the wheat and the tares grow together," we might feel like taking their names off the church book. All told we do not have one hundred active members, this is counting our resident and our active isolated members, by active isolated, I mean those who do not live here but pay regularly each year.

The church cannot thus decrease without affecting other organizations. Our Sunday school has fallen off considerably, but we still have more people in our main school than we have resident members, and I believe we are doing good work. However, we are not satisfied with what we are accomplishing, but are planning and hoping to make this the best year in our Sunday school work.

We are still without a pastor but we are confident there is somebody somewhere just fitted for here, and we are praying God to lead us to the right one.

LILLA JOHNSON.

FALLS CITY

Ever since the campaign for permanent endowment of Ashland College has been inaugurated, we have prayed and planned for its consummation in our own parish. This praying and planning was not done by the pastor alone. For weeks I urged upon our people to pray through the whole proposition as it concerned themselves. I urged them to ask the Lord what to do in the matter.

Never was I in any anguish at the prospect of the coming of Brother Beachler to our church. I know of some communities that look upon his coming as an unjust encroachment upon their "Personal Liberties." The fine thing about Beachler's coming is that he goes out from such communities with the feeling entirely changed. His conservative, sane methods, linked with his unselfish preaching of the word, leaves the church better for his having come. I believe it will do the average church as much good under present conditions as the average revival in the church. I am speaking now from actual experience. Our Brethren should look forward to his coming with great pleasure, as well as a privilege to substantially further the interests of education in our church. Falls City has always taken the keenest interest in Ashland College. And many have been the substantial gifts for permanent endowment and the College interests in general that she has given. The report of the solicitor in no wise records the full extent of our gifts to even permanent endowment. With just pride we look back over it all. It is a fine feeling that a pastor of a church has who leads a people like Falls City, especially when the privilege is one's almost five years, as it has been mine. We are ready to relinquish the Endowment pennant to any church large or small who passes it. We are hoping right soon to be able to pass it on to some of our Brethren in the West. Our interest in the College is such that we can do it with the best of feeling. It's fun to be in the lead in this procession Brethren. Why don't some of you try it?

H. F. STUCKMAN.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

Upon our return from the Lanark dedication to Kanemorado, we took up the work at Morrill. Bad roads and bad weather were considerably against us in our canvass at this place. However, we preached to good sized and appreciative audiences each night we were there. One night we were encouraged by the presence of Brother Stuckman and Brother Ed. Kimmel, who came over from Falls City to see how the battle was progressing. We were very glad for their presence.

We found Brother Whitted ready for the campaign. Brother Whitted took charge of this field in the fall. But sickness in his own family and in his congregation has held back his work just as the work of many a pastor has been paralyzed during the last six months or more. I can say that I found Brother Whitted a splendid helper and very anxious that his congregation should give a hearty response to the call for College endowment. And I am glad to be able to say that his people did not disappoint him.

Morrill went $2,500. One brother at this place joined the $500 class. To me it is a great joy to see the $500 class growing. There were two men to get in at $200. And the rest of the result came in sums of $150 and down. Practically everybody in the Morrill church enlisted for something. All of the auxiliaries including the S. S. C.E., the Y. P. S. C. E., the Sunday school and the Sisterhood took a share in this good work. It is worthy of note that of this result over

Now Watch the Kanemorado District Raise the Mercury

COLLEGE
ENDOWMENT

$1,700 was in cash and Liberty Loans. Our western brethren are right in line with the idea of giving their Liberty Loans to the College.

During our stay with the Morrill brethren, we stopped with Brother Sam Flickinger. For their kindness to me I shall always be grateful. But I was shown extreme kindness and hospitality in all of the Morrill homes into which my work took me. And I shall remember with pleasure the Millers, and Saylor, and Lichtys, and Wagners, and Beachys, and Yoders, and Butterfields, and Kimmels and Whitteds and all of the other good people I met there. Eight years ago I dedicated the Morrill church and held a short meeting there. And it was like going back among old friends to return.

I had the pleasure of a visit with our veteran Brother W. J. H. Bauman while at Morrill. Brother Bauman is spending the winter with his daughter Sister Showalter. Although Brother Bauman has not been blessed with the best of health during the winter, yet I found him ready to visit. Needless to say, we had an enjoyable little season together as we always do. And I covet for him the necessary strength to return to California. Brother Bauman does not make the least attempt to cancel the fact that his heart is back in California. I hope he may be spared yet to see many happy years.

This makes two reports from Kanemorado and they are both very good. If the rest of Kanemorado keeps up to the present pace it will be a great showing. Such a showing indeed as ought to stimulate Iliokota to do her very best. But I have no fears for Iliokota and I had no fears about Kanemorado either. The west will not stand back on this movement which is so vital to the future of the Brethren church.

WM. H. BEACHLER,
Campaign Secretary.

OAK HILL, WEST VIRGINIA

The Oak Hill church met for business meeting at Salem school house on Saturday night, March 1. Some general business was attended to and then they discussed the pastor question. Not being present myself I don't know much about it. But they decided to hire a pastor if one could be found to take the work. A committee was appointed to correspond with some who have been recommended and probably we will soon have a pastor here.

The grim monster, death, made another call in our neighborhood on Sunday morning, March 2, and claimed another one of our members. Sister Belle Jones had been a member of the Brethren church for several years. She leaves a husband and seven children, besides a host of friends and relatives. The family, except three small children, belong to the Brethren church. Three of them were baptized last fall when Brother Jennings was here.

We are made to wonder who will be the next. The question most important is will we be ready when the summons comes?

The funeral was conducted at the home by Brother J. M. Crouse of the Church of the Brethren, and Brother A. B. Duncan.

ESSIE BOOTHE.

COMMUNION NOTICE

The Brethren Church at Fremont, Ohio, will hold communion services Sunday evening, March 16. All members of the church are urged to attend. All of like precious faith are invited.

H. M. OBERHOLTZER, Pastor.

SPECIAL NOTICE

By the merciful kindness of a dear heavenly Father another year has passed and another opportunity to serve by giving is approaching, Easter Sunday, April 20th, is the time for the annual offering for foreign missions. This call is issued thus early that all pastors, churches, auxiliary societies and members may prepare to make the offering of the Lord worthy of his gracious acceptance. Remember the time: Easter Sunday, April 20th. This day belongs to the Brethren Foreign Missionary Society and all else should give way to it. Work and pray for the greatest offering in our history.

For the Foreign Missionary Society, by,
J. ALLEN MILLER, President.
ALVA J. McCLAIN, Secretary.
L. S. BAUMAN, Treasurer.

Business Manager's Corner

WHO WINS?

A few weeks ago we announced that we would make honorable mention of the pastor who would be first to sell the full number of Conference Minutes and Church Annuals sent out to the pastors a few days before. This was a sudden thought to us as we wrote and we had not taken into consideration the difference in the distance between the various congregations and Ashland and the time required for the packages to reach their destination and the reports come into our office.

The response was splendid and we feel it would not be just to make mention of only one pastor who disposed of the Conference Minutes in double quick time and sent in his remittance for them, consequently we will make honorable mention of a group of the Brethren who were exceptionally prompt to render this service to the Publishing House. The first remittance was received from W. C. Benshoff, Altoona, Pennsylvania, and we wondered how he did it so quickly and then every mail brought in other reports from the east and from the west and we saw at once it would be difficult to place the honor with exact justice so we gladly add the following names as being worthy of honorable mention: C. A. Stewart, Bunker Hill, Indiana; H. F. Stueckman, Falls City, Nebraska; L. G. Wood, Roanoke, Virginia; A. T. Ronk, Warsaw, Indiana; S. C. Henderson, Flora, Indiana; L. G. Smith, Conemaugh, Pennsylvania; R. F. Porte, Dallas Center, Iowa; C. C. Grisso, North Liberty, Indiana; Homer Anderson, Warsaw, Indiana; E. L. Miller, Uniontown, Pennsylvania; J. F. Watson, Johnstown, Pennsylvania and N. C. Nielsen, Long Beach, California. These all sent in their reports within a few days' time, and to add to the joy of it a goodly number of them ordered a second supply of the Reports, so we are encouraged to believe that the edition will be practically sold out after all, and we want to thank all the Brethren who make this possible whether they belong to this first group or not. It is the home stretch that counts after all and we hope to see every pastor come under the wire in good style and with colors flying. We certainly appreciate their co-operation, and we also appreciate the spirit of a number of the pastors who have remitted the full selling price of the Reports without retaining the portion we told them they might retain for their trouble, and we think most of them feel like the irreplaceable Homer Anderson, who wrote, "I am sending in the FULL amount for it is for the benefit of OUR Publishing House." When all the pastors and all the churches once feel that it is OUR Publishing House it will be an easier matter to make the work of the House more successful from a business standpoint. Again we say thank you.

The Evangelist Campaign

Last week we said nothing about the campaign for five thousand subscriptions to the Evangelist; but it was not because the campaign had stopped, except just long enough to take another breath. Since our last report the Zion Hill, Ohio church with Brother A. L. Lynn as pastor has been added to the Honor Roll with an increase of Evangelist subscriptions of nearly two hundred percent, and a number of other churches are working for a place on the Honor Roll. We hope they all may be successful in their endeavors. We are glad to announce that the following churches have won their place for the second year and are deserving of special mention: Summit Mills, Pennsylvania, E. D. Burnworth, Pastor; Falls City, Nebraska, H. F. Stueckman, Pastor; Burlington, Indiana, W. T. Lytle, Pastor, and Flora, Indiana, S. C. Henderson, Pastor. We are greatly tempted to rejoice more over the churches that win these honors the second time than we are over those that win their place for the first time as it proves that we were not impractical when we suggested this plan two years ago, and it proves that the plan gives satisfaction to the churches that adopt it. So far there has been but one church that we can remember that lost its place on the Honor Roll after once having won it. We consider this a splendid record. But considering the past will not secure the next three hundred subscriptions needed to bring our list up to the five thousand mark. The task has been clearly set before us, so let us adopt the slogan of the Four-Year Program page, "Now then, do it."

R. R. TEETER,
Business Manager.

EVANGELIST HONOR ROLL

The following churches having met the requirements laid down by the Brethren Publishing Company regarding the placing of the Evangelist in the homes of the congregations are entitled to a place on the Evangelist Honor Roll:

Church	Pastor
Akron, Ind., (New Highland), D. A. C. Teeter
Allentown, Pa., 2nd Yr., ... A. L. DeLozier
Ankenytown, Ohio, 2nd Yr., ... A. L. Lynn
Ashland, Ohio, 2nd Yr., ... J. A. Garber
Beaver City, Neb., ... Vacant
Berlin, Penna., ... I. B. Trout
Berne, Indiana, 2nd Yr., ... W. F. Johnson

Bryan, Ohio, ...	G. L. Maus
Burlington, Ind., 2nd Yr., ...	W. T. Lytle
Carleton, Nebr., 2nd Yr., ...	J. D. Kemper
Clay City, Indiana, ...	Geo. W. Kinzie
College Corner, Ind., 2nd Yr., ...	Homer Anderson
Conemaugh, Pa., 2nd Yr., ...	L. G. Smith
Dallas Center, Iowa, ...	R. F. Porte
Denver, Indiana, ...	L. A. Myers
Duetshtown, Indiana, ...	Homer Anderson
Elkhart, Indiana, ...	H. H. Wolford
Fairhaven, Ohio, 2nd Yr., ...	E. F. Owen
Falls City, Neb., 2nd Yr., ...	H. F. Stueckman
Fillmore, Calif., ...	Sylvester Lowman
Flora, Ind., 2nd Yr., ...	S. C. Henderson
Ft. Scott, Kansas, ...	Mrs. L. C. Webb
Fostoria, Ohio, ...	M. S. White
Fremont, Ohio, ...	H. M. Oberholtzer
Gretna, Ohio, 2nd Yr., ...	Edwin Boardman
Hamlin, Kansas, 2nd Yr., ...	Geo. E. Cone
Huntington, Indiana, ...	J. W. Brower
Johnstown, Pa., 1st Ch., ...	J. F. Watson
Johnstown, Pa., 3rd Ch., ...	Geo. H. Jones
Lansark, Ill., 2nd Yr., ...	B. T. Burnworth
La Verne, Calif., 2nd Yr., ...	T. H. Broad
Leon, Iowa, ...	Geo. T. Ronk
Linwood, Maryland, 2nd Yr., ...	E. M. Riddle
Long Beach, Cal., 2nd Yr., ...	E. S. Bauman
Loree, Indiana, ...	W. T. Lytle
Los Angeles, Cal., 1st, 2 Yr., ...	N. W. Jennings
Louisville, Ohio, 2nd Yr., ...	Geo. S. Baer
Meyersdale, Pa., 2nd Yr., ...	E. D. Burnworth
Mexico, Indiana, 2nd Yr., ...	L. W. Ditch
Milledgeville, Ill., 2nd Yr., ...	M. J. Snyder
Morrill, Kansas, 2nd Yr., ...	A. E. Whitted
Muncie, Indiana, 2nd Yr., ...	J. L. Kimmel
Nappanee, Ind., 2nd Yr., ...	C. E. Kolb
New Enterprise, Pa., ...	Edward Byers
New Lebanon, Ohio, ...	L. B. Wilkins
New Paris, Indiana, ...	Ora I. Oxley
North English, Iowa, ...	W. H. Miller
North Liberty, Indiana, ...	C. C. Grisso
Oakville, Indiana, ...	A. R. Staley
Pittsburgh, Pa., ...	H. M. Harley
Portis, Kansas, ...	Roy Brumbaugh
Roann, Indiana, ...	W. E. Ronk
Salisbury, Penna., ...	E. D. Burnworth
Sidney, Indiana, 2nd Yr., ...	L. A. Myers
Summit Mills, Pa., 2nd Yr., ...	F. D. Burnworth
Sunnyside, Wash., ...	Chas. H. Ashman
Telford, Tennessee, ...	(Vacant)
Tiosa, Indiana, ...	Ora I. Oxley
Washington C. H., O., 2nd Yr., ...	B. S. Stoffer
Waterloo, Iowa, 2nd Yr., ...	H. L. Goughnour
Whittier, Calif., ...	A. V. Kimmel
Yellow Creek, Pa., ...	Edward Byers
Zion Hill, Ohio, ...	A. L. Lynn

Brethren Home of Ohio

An Incorporation with
over $10,000 in Assets

PURPOSE. To build a home for the aged and infirm of our church and an orphanage for our children.

Why not make it a National Home for the entire brotherhood?

The Board of Trustees will present this proposition at National Conference this year.

Gifts, subscriptions and bequests solicited.

Information cheerfully given.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Ira Fudge, Gratis, Ohio, Pres.
Orion E. Bowman, V. Pres. and Atty.
Elmer Wombold, Secy.
1718 W. Monument Ave., Dayton, Ohio
Jesse A. Garver, Treas.
J. Allen Miller.

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETHREN -

A SOUTH AMERICAN GOSPEL COACH

Other Missionaries Are Provided with Coaches with which to distribute the Bible and preach the Gospel

We have only TALKED BIBLE COACH
While our missionaries have walked

IF WE THOUGHT LESS OF AUTO RIDING AND MORE OF UGHT-TO-GIVING,

The Gospel would be spread more rapidly in Argentina and Africa.

What will you do at Easter time?

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Can We Depend on the Parents Entirely?—Editor,	2	The Pupil: The Supreme Concern—Mrs. C. E. Weidner,	10
Editorial Review,	3	April—Personal Work Month—Prof. J. A. Garber,	11
Reverence for the House of God—A Lost Art—E. M. Cobb, ...	4	Personal Evangelism—E. M. Riddle,	11
Revelations from a Soldier's Heart—L. S. Bauman,	5	A Letter from South America—Wm. H. Bock,	11
Making the Church Socially Attractive—Mrs. E. E. Frantz,	6	A Kentucky Call—G. C. Carpenter,	12
The Need of Trained Leadership—R. A. Emmert,	7	News from the Field,	12-15
Progressive Activity—W. I. Duker,	7	The Tie That Binds,	15
Christian Service (Sermon)—A. E. Whitted,	8	In the Shadow,	15
Unselfish Sympathy—Editor,	9	Business Manager's Corner—Dr. R. R. Teeter,	16

EDITORIAL

Can We Depend On The Parents Entirely?

In a personal communication a good friend writes that he appreciates the view taken editorially in The Evangelist recently on the subject, "Where Shall We Find Our Ministers?" He says he thinks the emphasis was rightly placed, but asks, "Can we depend upon the parents entirely to furnish the inspiration needed to lead our fine young men into the ministry?" Being brief, it is obvious that the editorial was not intended to be exhaustive. We only pointed out briefly the need of more ministers and made one suggestion toward the solution of the problem of meeting the need. But we are not unwilling to be led through our friend's question into a more extended discussion of the subject.

There is perhaps no more vital problem with which the Brethren church must deal, if she is to realize her ambitions of becoming "A Greater Brethren Church." It is too big a problem to be solved by a few editorials; yet its bigness makes it worthy not only of extended discussion, but of thorough study and wise, persistent effort on the part of all interested in the greater future of the church.

We cannot resist the feeling that the only point stressed in our previous brief editorial is the most fundamental consideration in the matter. I would almost say that the home is the master-key that can open the door to a more adequate ministry. And the problem of recruiting our ministry in sufficient numbers is in the final analysis a problem of bringing the bigness, urgency and glory of the ministry forcibly to the minds of parents, so that they will crave with holy ambition the honor of supplying offspring worthy of this holy calling, and ever hold before the children divinely entrusted to their care the high office and glorious work of the ministry. Every other method is weak in comparison because of the fact that the child is largely influenced and prejudiced for life when any other agency than the home gets hold of it. One of the chief weaknesses of all public educational endeavors is that children are largely educated or given their life impulses when they come under the care of our educational agencies. In the majority of cases the most that can be done then is to develop and give polish and training to what has already been set going in the child's mind. The most fundamental and far-reaching effective method of overcoming the present tendency of boycotting the ministry is to recast the parental attitude toward it. This will necessarily be the task not of a year but of a generation. Even then the work will be but well begun. In the meantime, we must give ourselves zealously to plans less fundamental but more quickly productive of the desired results.

There are a number of things more or less familiar which enter into the solution of this perplexing problem. The most important figure next to the parent is the minister himself. He should be constantly on the lookout for worthy promising young lads who might be directed into his own noble calling. He who does not believe strongly enough in his task and is not enthusiastic enough about it to have a desire to lead his choicest young friends into it, is not a very big asset to the ministry, and yet ministers have been known actually to discourage promising boys from entering the ministry and have sought to turn them aside into other vocations. No one like the man who is engaged in the work has such opportunity both by public speech and by personal interviews to magnify the calling of the ministry, create a general high regard for it and bring about a wide-spread ambition on the part of young men to enter it. Such an exaltation of the ministry by the worthy men of God who are spending or have spent years of faithful service in it will go a long way toward enlisting valuable recruits.

There is no small number of young men worthy in life and talented by nature who have felt a desire to enter the ministry but have been hindered by the lack of finances to see them through school. No strong helping hand was extended to them and they were afraid to make the venture. Some have more of the spirit of venture than others, and some are more successful in meeting financial difficulties than others, or, as we more frequently hear it put, some are more lucky than others. But among those willing and worthy to enter the ministry and are unable to finance their preparation, the number who are willing to make the venture not knowing how they will get through, compared with those who do venture is small. Imagination sees the faces of a number of boyhood friends in the pulpit—and they were promising—but for this hindrance, This should be removed by the church providing a more adequate fund for the assistance of worthy young men in their preparation for the Christian ministry. It is not enough to give a "lift" to those who have almost enough "means" to see their way through school, provision ought to be made for financing the preparation of approved young men entirely without financial possessions in such a way that would not pauperize them. In this connection the question of Holy Writ comes with great force "How shall they preach except they be sent?" The church should "send" them through school and into every needy field to preach the Gospel.

Another way churches can help in the encouragement of strong, talented young men to enter the ministry is by paying a salary that will do a little more than meet expenses. Many churches scarcely pay expenses and, judged by the grudging way in which they pay that, they do not deserve a pastor at all, much less one who has spent several thousand dollars in time and money equipping himself for the ministry. The minister has the same right or duty as any one else of providing himself with a home and family and caring for them in a respectable manner. No man can work for less than a living wage, even for the church, and maintain his self respect. When once the church realizes this and makes amends, and she is doing it rapidly, she will have a more adequate ministry.

There are organizations and agencies that can be utilized to educate and agitate with a view to enlisting recruits for the ministry and missionary service of the church. The Life Work Department of Christian Endeavor is proving a valuable scouting agency. Numerous young people have been influenced through its efforts to dedicate themselves to some definite Christian work, and usually this means the ministry or missionary work. Sunday school teachers enjoy a wonderful opportunity of influencing boys to look with longing to the ministry and of encouraging them to so live and equip themselves that if the call of God comes to them they may be ready to answer it. But all opportunities are not being improved and it seems that there ought to be launched some special campaign for systematically, persistently and wisely presenting the heroic side of the ministry to our youths as they begin to dream their dreams of the future. History is replete with examples of heroism among the servants of Christ more thrilling than the stories in the cheap novel. Fill the boys' minds with these and let them dream, as boys will, of doing the same things, of playing the parts of the heroes and there will be many more nerved to accept the challenge of the ministry. No worthier task could our organizations charged with the religious education and training of youth undertake than filling the minds of our young dreamers with such ideals of greatness concerning the ministry that they would prefer to be a preacher than anything else they might aspire to.

(Continued on page 4)

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Brother A. J. Rainey writes a letter this week from Manassas, Virginia.

Our College correspondent, Brother W. R. Deeter, is back on the job, after an absence of a few weeks in evangelistic work.

Dutchtown, Indiana, congregation is now engaged in a revival effort with their pastor, Brother Anderson as the evangelist. We shall look for some good news from there later.

Brethren Garber and Riddle are calling attention to and making suggestions for Personal Work month during April. Every rural society ought to try out the splendid suggestion of Brother Riddle for them.

A bright piece of news comes from Brother Neher of Los Angeles stating that they expect to go over the top in the Evangelistic proposition and that souls are being saved at the regular sessions of their church.

Brother Weidner, when sending the splendid article found on the Sunday school page written by Sister Weidner, asked for a second supply of Brethren Annals. He and his people are inclined to desire to keep informed.

Again we have the privilege of reading a letter from the pen of Brother C. A. Stewart. He reports a very successful meeting held by himself at the Loree church, near Bunker Hill, Indiana. His people stand by him loyally, and that makes success possible.

If a prairie fire were on, things would not be more lively than they have been recently in the Kanemorado district. They have been bringing money and "Bonds" for College Endowment so rapidly that it keeps Brother Beachler busy counting it. We were shocked when Falls City went $5,500, surprised when Morrill made it $2,500 and now Hamlin comes across with—well, I'll not spoil your pleasure of reading the report by telling you, but it's good. We are ready to expect most any thing from our Brethren of the prairies. They certainly appreciate Ashland College. Brethren Cone, Whitted and Stuckman are proving good samples of its output.

Brother Bauman reports the team work of himself and Brother Cobb at Berne, also the one week revival held by himself. It was a great meeting for so short a time, and doubtless the results would have been still greater if Brother Bauman could have spent more time there.

Brother Emmert, one of the talented and trained young men of the Dallas Center, Iowa, congregation, in a letter accompanying his article speaks a good word for his pastor, Brother Porte. Brother Porte is not only doing a good work for the church, but is fitting himself for still more efficient service by attending Drake University.

Brother Kinzie's report from Clay City shows that he has been on the job all the time and it seems that God has blessed his people with a mind to work. His report shows that the church is in a splendid condition, and under the guidance of God and through the instrumentality of Brother Bauman and the pastor we shall expect and pray for a great harvest of souls.

Brother W. S. Baker of Johnstown tells of his busy life in that city. He is allowing himself to be used in several ways in the interest of the Kingdom. He was quite successful in a recent revival meeting, and is very successfully teaching an interesting and appreciative Sunday school class. He also testifies to the splendid leadership of Brother Jones in the Third Brethren church.

An interesting report from the pen of Brother E. L. Miller of Uniontown is to be found in this issue. He shows his characteristic energy in his report as well as in his work. The whole church seems to have caught his spirit of enthusiasm and to be pushing forward in the face of every difficulty. A revival held by the pastor bore splendid fruit. We will not tell you the results, you must read his report to find out. He used the stereopticon to good effect in his meetings.

Another note comes from Wisconsin, this time from Brother J. A. Baker, the father, as we suppose, of some of our correspondents from that place last week. The suggestion that members of the Brethren church who may be seeking a promising location write Brother Baker for information is a good one. This is an opportunity to locate where you can be in a prosperous city and at the same time help to build up a Brethren church. Brother Ronk writes to the point about ministers doing missionary work. Let's put it up to the laity too.

We have an interesting letter from the pen of Brother Bock of la Carlota, Argentina. You will not want to miss it. Brother Bock says in a personal letter: "Since our coming here we have been exceedingly busy. Besides the mission work, I am teaching English to some young men; many are interested in learning this more than the Gospel. But here we have to begin with these people wherever we can touch them. I expect to pay for our sulky with what I can make in this way." You will not find a more sacrificial and harder working group of people anywhere than are to be found in our missionaries. Let us do what we can at Easter to help them in their work.

Brother Carpenter sends forth another Kentucky call. This time it is for some one to take the place of Brother Cook who desires a leave of absence. All will regret to learn of the condition of Sister Cook's health which makes this step necessary. Possibly some church will grasp this opportunity of securing a good pastor, as we understand Brother Cook will be open to a call. But who will come forward to take up Brother Cook's mantle? It is a noble one and worthy of the best talent. No greater opportunity exists in the Brethren church for foundation work than that which Krypton offers. Perhaps the foundation is well laid right in Krypton, but many more need to be laid round about, and the Krypton foundation needs much building upon.

Then might we not create within the church such a church patriotism and gospel-patriotism that young men will volunteer and parents will offer their sons as willingly as they ever did when the country was in need of warriors. If the ministry were presented very generally as the leadership of the greatest war on earth, demanding the greatest courage and skill and in the interest of the noblest cause, it is difficult for reason to understand why Christian young people would not be entering our seminaries for training with the eagerness that young patriots of the country entered the officers' training camps.

Exalt the ministry to its rightful place as the noblest of all callings and it will appeal to the strongest and worthiest young men of the church. The ministry is the biggest and most essential work in the world. This discredits no calling however noble or essential.

High over all stands the ministry. When we realize that in this calling we are co-operating with God in the fashioning or re-fashioning of human souls we understand how it is possible with perfect propriety to make such high claims for the ministry. It is most natural that ambitious young people want to be engaged in a work that is considered very worthy and essential. If we can make the church to understand this fact, her young men will be offering themselves without reluctance to the Christian ministry.

And last of all, let us pray that the Lord of the harvest may thrust forth laborers into his harvest. It should not have been said "last of all," but first of all. We can do nothing more important than earnestly pray until we have prayed. After we have summoned the courage to pray in real earnestness—for it is a costly thing to do—we shall then find ourselves able to do more than pray.

GENERAL ARTICLES

Reverence for the House of God—A Lost Art. By E. M. Cobb

This disease is not only prevalent, but malignant and fatal. In fact, it is so fatal, that when allowed to run its course, it entirely destroys all traces of spirituality. Paradoxical as it may seem, its prevalence has become so great, that it no longer causes alarm except, perhaps, to those most keenly alert to present day conditions. It seems as if the general public has just submitted to the inevitable and, by the absence of proper discipline, has licensed the spread of the malady and renounced all laws of quarantine. This wide-spread epidemic must be one of the unquestionable evidences that the world is growing better (?). As I consider this subject on the broader plane, I think of five classes of people affected by this most virulent microbe.

1. CHILDREN.

The most conspicuous symptoms of the malady, perhaps, are to be found at our seasons of public worship, when the children of various sizes, ages and temperaments, of both sexes, are allowed to play, scamper and frolic up and down the aisles, over the rostrum, squirt water from the drinking fountain all over the floor, shout, laugh and wrestle, until the services begin, and then whisper, run from one parent to another, mark up the song books, and keep a continuous filing out to the drinking fountain like a flock of ducks. Think the picture is overdrawn, do you? All right, just get out of your own congregation and visit some other one where you are not so well acquainted with the people. At home you are so used to certain individuals being allowed the liberties above referred to, that it has become a thing rather to be expected, and very rarely receives the criticism and discipline it deserves.

2. TEACHERS.

It is a well known fact, that children embrace all the liberties allowed them by parents and teachers, and in these days when teachers have adopted, more or less, the liberal method of discipline, or, as they choose to term it, self-government, I feel free for one to say that the children are not so much to blame for their conduct as those who are responsible for it. In my opinion it is just as reasonable to expect a child to feed and clothe himself properly without assistance, as it is for him to govern himself properly; and I think that casual observance will bear me out in this criticism. So often we hear, in the administration department of the Sunday school, remarks by teachers and officers that we cannot expect to have discipline comparable to day schools. This sort of surrender to the inevitable makes me want to dismiss a teacher who will allow herself to be overcome by sheer force of circumstances without remonstrance. Whenever a teacher becomes unable to cope with conditions she is no longer eligible to properly instruct the incorrigible. Just such doctrine as this is what has led us to present-day conditions. I speak from experience when I say that in more than one place where I have taught and preached, I have been thanked many times for improvement in discipline; and I assure the reader that it is from a full sense of reverence for God's house that I am unable to allow disturbance in any public worship, whether it be Sunday school or preaching service. I would rather forfeit non-attendance than impious irreverence, and I believe that the fault of disorder in our Sunday school very largely lies at the door of the teacher.

3. PARENTS.

Before the teacher receives the pupil into the class, however, the parent has had opportunity to administer discipline, so that the teacher ought to have but very little trouble. But in these days when offsprings are allowed to call father the "old man," "governor" and "boss," and when they are allowed to retaliate at mother's instructions by kicking and screaming until they have conquered the parent by some spasmodic demonstration of temper, it follows that the teacher will have trouble. How often have you seen parents allow their children, in church, to grind up half a pound of crackers and scatter them over the floor, tear leaves out of song books, stamp on the benches, fly into a fit of passion and cause the parent to retire from the service, all because the parent does not realize parenthood and its responsibilities, saving as an apology to the minister in charge, that they haven't been well, or they are too young to know better, and a lot of other foolishness which is unpardonable in the eyes of good government. The very illustrations cited above make one to feel that the parents themselves do not have the reverence for God's house that they should have. If fathers and mothers would come into the house with uncovered head, on tiptoe, and talk in a whisper, if at all, and retire reverently from the building, the child in consequence naturally would imitate the parent; but so long as parents are rushing through corridors and halls, talking in a loud tone about the secular affairs, etc., nothing more can be expected from the children than what we now endure.

4. OFFICIALS.

This corps of members of the church set aside in their various offices for the conduct of the church, sometimes demonstrate their irreverence for God's house by tolerating social functions that are exceedingly questionable in character. I have in mind now cases that may be referred to where members of the church failed to observe the tithing system, which naturally throws the church in arrears financially, and in order to replenish the treasury, the officials allow said members to have card parties and oyster suppers and other fetes of the soup kitchen heresy, to offset the delinquency in the treasury; and in some extreme instances install billiard tables and dance halls, and other desecrations of equal character. Thank God I have never known it to be that bad in any Brethren church. Right here in the city of Dayton is to be found in the Saturday evening paper a standing notice of one church where Holy Communion is nounced for 8:00 o'clock in the morning, a lecture in the afternoon and a dance at night. Such conditions can only be brought about by failure to reverence the house of God.

5. PREACHERS.

However the foregoing paragraphs illustrate, in my opinion, the lighter forms of irreverence. To my mind the most virulent form of irreverence is manifested by the preacher himself. For a minister of God to stand behind the sacred desk and allow the children to do the things mentioned in their paragraph, to allow parents of his congregation to tolerate such indifference among their children, and to allow the officials to desecrate the tabernacle of irreverence that is so common among us today. No of the Most High by these common forms of gabbling, are all but light criticisms by the side of the most heinous form of irreverence that is so common among us today. No longer is it uncommon for a minister behind the sacred desk, before an open Bible, to challenge the veracity of God's Word, deny the inspiration of the Book, question the miracles of the Lord Jesus Christ, doubt the substitutionary atonement, express chagrin that one would believe in the bodily resurrection from the dead, and absolutely repudiate the second coming of our Lord.

If such irreverence is tolerated and practiced by the ministry, what may we not expect of the laity? And is it surprising that the people of the neighborhood lose faith in the mission and functions of the church and that they repudiate the calls made upon them to support it? What can be done to meet the exigency? The membership may offer the criticisms needful, but it certainly falls to the executive department of the church, the ministry, to effect the cure; and therefore the church must demand of the ministry that we have a more rigid discipline, a greater loyalty, and a more humble perseverance. The ministry belongs to the church and not the church to the ministry; therefore, it is for the church to ask her chief servants to render acceptable service.

Revelations from a Soldier's Heart. By Louis S. Bauman

While in evangelistic work at Nappanee, Indiana, recently, it was our privilege to read a letter that came fresh from the heart of one of our soldier boys in Germany; and it certainly furnished some food for thought. We have been hearing much about what our boys over there are thinking. Here is what at least one does think. We give several extracts from the letter which was written by Private Arthur Ray Kring, of Battery D, 150th Field Artillery, from the army of the occupation in Germany:

Neuenahr, Germany, January 16, 1919.

Dear Father:

Tonight my head is bowed down and my heart is heavy for, as the prophet of old said, "the desolation of Israel."

When the war was still going on, we oftentimes thought it hard, but I find another war in progress, one that is going on within myself, which is not to be compared with that which is past. But not myself only, it has taken place in millions of other lives, and will take place in millions to come. * * *

And now, after I have seen as much of the world as I have, namely, France, Luxemburg, Belgium, and Germany, and observed the spiritual condition that seems to prevail, as I said in the beginning, my head is bowed down and my heart is heavy.

Over here in Europe, all along the countryside and in the villages and towns, you will find shrines established, many of them beautiful pieces of work, and many times when tired from the weary drudgery of things, I have looked upon that image of Christ, and my heart was thrilled, for it gave me courage, and I could almost hear him say,

"Fear not, I am with thee,
Oh, be thou not dismayed,
For I am thy God,
I will still give thee aid."

But then we pass on and soon forget the goodness of God, and our lives become corrupt, until something else comes up in our lives to remind us of duty to God and fellow men. And why do we so often shrink from talking salvation with our neighbor who does not know Christ? Some people say they can't talk, and other various excuses, but experience is beginning to show me that their deeds of the past, good and bad, are still casting out their influence, the fire of which can never be quenched.

A city builded on a hill cannot be hid; so, then, I come to the conclusion that if our lives are compared as such, let us then build such experiences as men will desire to look upon, and will not have to turn away in disgust and doubt. And so what has prompted me to write like this? Simply because I see doubt, disbelief, vice, immorality, and a whole host of hell's tribe running rampant upon the earth. And what can we do about it? Ah, I wish I could stand upon the ocean's strand and shout back across the ocean wave to the people of America to take the more earnest heed to God's Word, live more consecrated lives, send more workers into the mission field, give more to the cause of Christ, and less to the Devil. Why? Because the world is dying for a bit of Christian love.

And when the boys get home from over here, they are going to want a man's religion. This afternoon tea religion is about a thing of the past. They have all had a man's job, and have walked hand in hand with death, and so will desire that, which when it comes to the valley of shadows, will shine out as the morning star and enable them to say, "Lead kindly Light."

Father, I thank you for my childhood training in Jesus, not forgetting my dear mother, but I still earnestly desire your prayers, and hope that when we meet again, we can both say, we have learned to know him better. Glory be to him who was, and is, and ever shall be.

I am in perfect health, hope you are enjoying a healthy and prosperous New Year. As ever, your son, RAY.

In this remarkable letter from a soldier boy, there are seven outstanding truths. And, whether he realized it or not, he did stand upon the other side of the water, and "shout back across the ocean wave to (at least some) of the people of America" in a voice that has been heard. The seven voices within this letter tell us, that,

1. Back of this horrible war that cost the world more than two hundred billions of dollars, and ten millions of men slain on the battle-field, to say nothing of the millions who have died as direct and indirect results of the war, the countless cripples, and the huge wreck of the world's civilization,—that back of all this were not merely temporal causes, but spiritual causes. Back of it all was a civilization that had turned its face from God, and would run the world without God. "Hell's tribe ran rampant upon the earth."

2. Shrines and altars of wondrous beauty may lift up the image of Christ and thrill the emotional natures of men, but they cannot save; for, men pass them by, are thrilled, and return to their corruption. Not only Europe, but all Latin America testifies to the truth this soldier sets forth. It is not the image of a Christ upon a shrine, but the living Spirit of the living Christ within the heart, that keeps men from passing on into corruption.

3. The "pink tea religion" of Protestantism has even less power in itself than the dead images upon Catholic shrines,—it does not even thrill! When these boys who have faced the Eternal on the battlefield return home, they want none of the "sissy business" so common in our churches over here. They will call for a "man's religion," and that will mean a religion carried on in a big manly, businesslike way. It means they will want to do more praying in the upper room, and less paying in the supper room; that they will want more of the old Book and less of the cook; that they will be more interested in emptying themselves for their dying fellowmen over the sea, than in filling themselves for the sake of their pastor's salary with pink tea.

4. The time is here when if the church is to succeed with men, she must live so that she can talk,—“build such experience as men will desire to look upon, and not turn away in disgust and doubt.” The church today is carrying an ever increasing burden in lives that are penurious, unfair, discourteous, dishonest, bigoted, indifferent, cowardly, and selfish,—men who give as they steal, who increase their riches and decrease their taxes, who sing and pray and steal the livery of heaven to serve the Devil in. Verily, the time is here for “the people of America to take more earnest heed to God's Word, and live more consecrated lives.”

5. Likewise, the time is here “for the people of America to send more workers into the mission field, and give more to the cause of Christ, and less to the Devil.” If Jesus Christ is the only hope of this poor sin-smitten, distracted world, and he is, then if the world is to be saved, the time is here for church members, at least, to cease spending literally billions for tobacco, wine, jewelry, worldly pleasures, etc., while they give a few paltry millions to sending the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the hundreds of millions of human beings that through modern invention, sit uncomfortably close to their doors, without the fear of God, but with heathen hate in their hearts and vices in their practice. Would to God that we all could have the vision of the world's need as this soldier boy has seen it. Not only Africa, China, Japan, India, and the Fiji Islanders, but Germany, Russia, Poland, Austria, and France, must come to know more of the real Christ and his true Gospel, or it will take more than a League of Nations to “make the world safe for democracy!”

6. The greatest battle ever fought by men was not fought on the blood-soaked fields of France, tremendous and terrible as those battles were. Who knows it so well as these soldier boys, who having passed through those bloody battles, yet, frankly state that those battles are “not to be compared” with the “one that is going on within myself?” They know, those lads! The greatest struggle a man can know is the struggle for his own soul. And he who loses that fight, loses all. “Greater is he that conquereth his own spirit than he that takes a city.”

7. The sure foundations of the soul that wins the greatest of all battles,—the battle within,—the battle for one's own soul,—are rarely laid elsewhere than in “childhood training,” in the prayers and tears of godly fathers and mothers. Little did the father and mother of Ray Kring realize what tremendous struggles of both body and soul lay ahead of their precious boy when his feet should carry him into a far-off foreign and godless clime, amidst the most terrible scenes that human eyes ever witnessed! But now they understand, and thank God! “The anchor holds!” Fathers and mothers of men, let not this message of Ray Kring be forgotten!

Making the Church Socially Attractive. By Mrs. E. E. Frantz

The Need

The church of today is face to face with the formative influences which are making tomorrow, and she must face the vital decision as to what part she will have in producing the new world. Christianity is no dying faith. It is splendidly vital, and if we can help people to see this, instead of their thinking religion a cold formality, we have done something worth while. The church is not as completely in touch with its age as it should be, but it can be brought in closer union with the forces that are making the new social order. The man who underrates the significance of the church in society is belittling his own power of observation.

There seems to be great discontent among the masses, especially among the workingmen and those commonly known as socialists. They for reasons of their own distrust the church and similar institutions, and yet anyone who is a member of a Christian church knows that the church would be and is only too glad to welcome them one and all.

This is one phase of our church life that should not be overlooked. We have not been able to reach them yet. Are we going to quit trying? This is where the Y. M. C. A. and Salvation Army people have won the lead of the church. It has been shown that the very poorest people can appreciate the best music and pictures and that they have unsuspected powers of entertainment in themselves. The average church is always a spiritual force in any community and it also should be the center of the mental, physical and social life of its community. Piety does not remove the demand for recreation.

The lines of the poet Lowell give us an idea of the church reaching out in its social life.

“God is in all that liberates and lifts,
In all that humbles, sweetens, and consoles.”

The Means

The open church is more than an attraction, it is a mission and the Protestant churches of today are coming to realize this fact more and more. We must not only make our church attractive on the Sabbath but on all the other six days of the week as well.

There ought always at all services to be that “friendly grip” and reception committee to greet the stranger, and happy is that church which has it said of it that a stranger who enters its doors is a stranger but once. How good it makes you feel when you visit a neighboring church and some one gives you a warm hand shake and greets you by name, or if you are a stranger inquires of your name and where you live! It makes you feel as though you wanted to go back again, and you are sure they would want you to become one of their own number.

We must be sociable to save. In these days of moving pictures, theaters, and all sorts of attractions, the church should have counter attractions which will appeal to the young without too much of the “keep off the grass spirit.” There ought to be a room where they can chat with friends, play games, have music and so forth. Such a room for gatherings of teachers, parents and classes, will repay any expenditure required for procuring and beautifying. The social affairs of the church can many times be of a cultural nature, such as addresses, debates, musicals or missionary drills.

We may discover among the people of our parish or community whose condition needs social betterment and then set to work with definite plan, genuine sympathy and earnest activity. It is a fascinating game to get new members into the Sunday school and is always commendable, but we should not lose sight of the fact that it is doubly important to keep those whom we already have, and to seek to develop their social natures in a wholesome way and to train them for service. A church whose services are socially attractive and which seeks to provide uplifting social activities and interests for its members will have a power not otherwise possible. Beautiful and fitting are the words of Helen Keller: “Remember, no effort that we make to attain something beautiful is ever lost. Sometime, somewhere, somehow, we shall find that which we seek. We shall speak, yes, and sing, too, as God intended we should speak and sing.”

The Need of Trained Leadership in the Church. By Ray A. Emmert

Trained leadership is a commanding need now, because this is a time when people are forced from their routine habits of life and, much confused, face a new set of problems. Social conditions today remind one of the human roulette wheel. When people try to stand on this revolving platform, they are apt to be thrown into all sorts of ludicrous postures. No trained leader has taught them how to stand on a revolving platform. Like the human roulette wheel, the long established social platforms, upon which people confidently stand as on firm ground, have suddenly started whirling impelled by impact with a world war. Whole nations of people have been figuratively thrown off their feet and have been unable to regain their equilibrium. Look at Russia, the Balkan states and Germany. The United States needs trained Christian leaders to teach the people how to stand upright amid the whirl of radical socialism, Bolshevism, Oriental religions, skepticism and unemployment.

If the solution of the problems confronting the people is to be permanent, it must be worked out on the principles of Christ, the only Leader whose leadership has been unselfish, international and permanent.

In a time of such urgent needs for capable Christian leadership, inefficient leadership within the church can no longer be tolerated. Not so long ago when leaders were needed for church work, they were elected. Yes! Just elected by acclamation of Brother Somebody, who explained that, although he didn't know there was going to be any election of officers that day and hadn't given the matter any thought, he moved that all of the old officers be re-elected. Re-elected regardless of whether they had proved themselves capable or inefficient! Times have changed; so must methods of church work. In business, the leader, although he may have good intentions, if he lacks ability, goes bankrupt. In the church, the leader, although he may have good intentions, if he lacks ability, must be replaced. Good intentions without ability are as bad as ability without good intentions.

Progressive Activity. By W. I. Duker

Man conquered the earth, on which he is like an atom, because he was not content to stand still like the Alps. You can imagine how, in the far past, our savage ancestors would watch birds sailing through the air over the deep waters, and long with all their souls to have that power of flight. After a long and continuous effort in "Progressive Activity" they now too soar as do the birds. Any attainment of value today is the result of what we are pleased to call "progressive activity" of the past.

There are two distinct kinds of activity with which we wish to deal. One is our title, and the other we call "circular activity." Progressive activity is of the constructive type; that form of activity in which each act is a step leading on and up to the next; a series of steps forming a ladder placed against an otherwise unsurmountable obstacle over which we now pass with safety.

Circular activity, all too common, is a type of activity best shown by the canine family and all too frequently copied by the human family. Or might there be some question as to "priority claim?" This activity is seen when Rover decides to lie down. It is also seen when our activities are controlled by no sequence plan.

To definitely contrast the two general types of activity let us notice that while one carries us over obstacles the other precedes lying down.

One indicates that we are following some definite, well-established trail; the other indicates clearly that we are lost. In one we see a star, in the other we have no guide.

How many churches are controlled by our type of circular activity? How may we determine the presence of the type in control? Contrast the points of attainment of your church with that of, say, ten years ago. Give no thought to

The time has come when the church must train its leaders before it elects them. People require the same qualities of leadership in a leader in the church as they require in a leader anywhere else,—and they expect much more. One of the indispensable qualities of leadership is capability. A wounded soldier, just returned from France, told me that his officer gave the command to remove gas masks while there was gas present. The soldiers did as they were ordered and most of them died. Their leader lacked the capability to tell when gas was present. Although his intentions were good and he was doing his best, his followers died. If the leaders of the church, however faithfully they work and however good their intentions, lack ability and training, the church is going to get "gassed."

Moses received the best education possible for one to receive in his time. Paul received the best education possible for one to receive in his time. The twelve apostles, being taught by Christ personally and directly, received the best education it was possible for one to receive in their time. Our leaders in church work today must receive the best training that is possible in our time.

The church must train so many capable leaders that it can retire all of those who are found insufficient even though they be faithful and true. Until there are that many capable leaders trained, it is the duty of every leader, whether capable or inefficient, to continue working until a leader of moral ability can be secured to replace him. Furthermore, it is the duty of every leader to pick out capable young people and see that they are trained, not only for ministers, but for Sunday school classes, Christian Endeavor and all other auxiliaries of the church. The church needs some of the dash of youth to help solve the problems that are confronting it.

The need for capable Christian leadership is great and clear. Let each one ask himself, what can he do to help supply the need?

the degree of activity, for the nearer Rover is to lying down the more noticeable is his activity. Call for definite aims in the activity under survey. Look for the circles of activity that form chains. Also look for those circles that are concentric. Those circles that form chains we will accept as progressive activity, while those that are concentric will surely belong to Rover's class.

One of the latest movements in the public schools of today is that of "supervised study." In the past, and in innumerable instances today, we were satisfied if our pupils were busy. A busy school room was taken as a sign of success on the part of the teacher. Then our leading colleges and universities began a series of surveys. Schools supposed to be our leaders because of the activity of teachers and pupils fell below par. Teachers began to question their efforts relative to progress and were chagrined to see but little. They then realized that some activity led on to success while other activity, just as sincere, was of the circular type and preceded lying down. Then came the remedy suggested in supervised study. May not we in our activities in the church be equally in error? May not a course in "supervised study" be equally in demand?

The desire to be "good" should be supplanted by the desire to be "good for something." Our pastor in a recent editorial suggested that "people reluctantly handle the dead." Is there not a greater antipathy in handling the dying? People approach without fear a dead body, while they could not be induced to witness the dying.

We may be arguing with someone else who is interested in proving the opposite. Just as the points which favor us press up into our minds, so the points which favor his case press up into his. But really we do not listen to his argu-

(Continued on page 8)

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

Christian Service. By A. E. Whitted

TEXT: But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant, Matt. 23:11.

This subject is one of most vital importance. Giving in the full sense of the word is the greatest essential of Christian living. We are taught this beautiful lesson many times over in the Book of all books. "Give and it shall be given unto you, pressed down, shaken together, and running over." How wonderfully true these words to one who has learned the principle laid down in the verse chosen for our guidance in this brief message. We are to give. What? Of our money? Yes, and a great deal more. If that were all many of us would have but little to offer; the majority would be able to say with Peter, "Silver and gold have I none," but to be able to finish the statement, as Peter finished it; to be able to say, and willingly, "but such as I have give I thee" is the Christian's great privilege. We are called to give of our time and talent. This is a busy age and we are very apt to forget our duty along this line, in our great striving to keep even in the industrial or commercial race. Of our love and very life are we to give, with all that those terms imply. Did not Jesus say, "By this shall men know ye are my disciples, if you have love one to another." John 13:35. And such love will make us give ourselves in service wherever there is need.

But how can I serve? What must I do? In the first place, if you are a Christian, be an inspiration to the multitude about you. Keep your heart aglow with the fire of heaven. Let your face be the mirror of this heart-fire and your spirit light and buoyant that others may come to know with you that the greatest joys, the highest experiences are from above. This world is full of sorrow; it will always be. Many a man is limping aimlessly along, despondent, thinking that life holds nothing but drudgery. Seek to cheer such an one and cause him to look away from his troubles to the one who will bear every burden. Encourage him to take hold of faith and expect great things from God. He will never fail you nor him.

In the second place, the Christian should seek to bring encouragement to others in their work. We all get discouraged at times in our work. Things go against us and we feel blue. We forget to trust in him in whose strength we can do all things. Even those of us who have learned to expect much of God, forget his proffered help when we come to hard places and hard tasks. Then it is that the radiant sunlight of God's love cannot penetrate the clouds that overhang our heads. And then it is that we need some one whose eyes are clear and whose face is unclouded to remind us that the sun is still shining and that God's love is still watching over us. Then it is that we need some one to encourage us to take up our tasks again and go ahead with the work God has given us to do. How much good a little interest shown or a passing word of sympathy will do! How it will give hope and cheer and strength and enable us to stay by our tasks! Then let us encourage others as they travel their way which is often rugged and do their work which is often hard. Let us live the prophecy of Isaiah when he urged men to "strengthen the weak hands and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart; be strong, fear not."

Then, the real live Christian should be a scatterer of sunshine. The day of the long faced Christians is past, if there ever was such a day. If any have a right to be radiant and joyful, it is the one who is leading the Christlike life, the one who is ministering unto the least by his helpful and willing service. They say a smile is a contagious thing. Yet not a thing to be feared. Then Christian, smile and be sunny, that those over whom a shadow hangs may catch the contagion and pass the smile of righteousness on.

Be a sower of sunshine. Make the world about you joyful because of your happy song.

"Are you, fellow-trav'ler, a child of the King?
And do you his praises to wayfarers sing?
Oh, are you rejoicing in Jesus each day?
Keep singing for Jesus, 'twill brighten the way."

"When life's sun is sinking, when labor is o'er,
And loud in his praises your song swells no more,
'Twill strengthen the weary and brighten the way.
Keep shining for Jesus till close of the day."

We have in the last paragraph been speaking of light-heartedness and sunshine. Though the Christian life be one of smiles and sunshine, these traits ought to flow from a heart that is real and genuine in its interest and sympathy for the good of others. The life should be so deep and serene, like the mighty river, that it can not be troubled with every gust of the wind of adversity. Such ought to be the depth of its flow that the weaker ones might take refuge therein, and prove for them "a refuge in the time of storm." We ought to live steady and strong so that those that are perplexed and doubtful might come to us and find safe counsel. Dr. J. R. Miller put the thought beautifully when he said, "We can be truest and best blessings only when we live victoriously ourselves. We owe it, therefore to the needy, sorrowing, tempted world about us to keep our inner life calm, quiet, strong, restful and full of love. The one secret is to abide in Christ." Then live the real, true, unselfish life that can only be lived in Christ, if you would serve as a Christian. "Live a life so big and true, so unselfish and safe that people who run into your garden of love, sympathy and interest may be refreshed and strengthened and go forth to valiant endeavor."

Then there is the element of prayer in Christian service. This above all others must not be overlooked because through prayer the greatest service is rendered. Prayer is the Christian's eye-opener. Prayer shows the Christian what to do and tells him how to do it. When the earth turns herself toward the great warm sun, spring dawns and all nature bursts forth to new life and song. So also when the soul of man turns to God, who is all to the soul that the sun is to the earth and more, there comes an awakening, quickening power calling forth new life which expresses itself in helpful service. Remember to "pray without ceasing." Prayer calms the heart, clears the mind and puts nerve and energy into the whole being such as to enable the Christian to win in the great battle of service to humankind. We must pray on, if we would continue to serve.

"Take time to be holy, speak oft with thy Lord;
Abide in him always, and feed on his word.
Make friends of God's children; help those who are weak;
Forgetting in nothing his blessing to seek."

In closing, we wish to press the thought of service home to every Christian heart by relating Phillips Brook's story of the Artist's chisel. The artist cannot carve without it. Yet imagine the chisel conscious that it was made to carve and that it is its function, trying to carve alone. It lays itself against the hard marble, but it has neither strength nor skill. Then we can imagine the chisel full of disappointment. "Why cannot I carve?" it cries. Then the artist comes and seizes it. The chisel lays itself into his hand and is obedient to him. That obedience is faith. It opens the channels between the sculptor's brain and the hard steel. Thought, feeling, imagination, skill, flow down from the deep chambers of the artist's soul to the chisel's edge. The sculptor and the chisel are not two, but one; it is the unit which they make that carves the stone.

We are but the chisel to carve God statues in this world. Unquestionably we must do the work. But the human worker is only the chisel of the great Artist. The artist needs his chisel; but the chisel can do nothing, produce no beauty, of itself. The artist must seize it, and the chisel lay itself into his hand and be obedient to him. We must yield ourselves altogether to Christ and let him use us. Then his power, his wisdom, his skill, his thought, his love, shall flow through our soul, our brain, our heart, our fingers. That is working by faith. That is serving in Christ-like service. Are we serving?

OUR DEVOTIONAL

Unselfish Sympathy

BY THE EDITOR

OUR SCRIPTURE

Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing. Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth (1 Corinthians 13:1-8a).

OUR MEDITATIONS

Unselfish sympathy is the greatest thing in all the world. It is the quality that most fully reveals God. It was that which caused the Father to send the Son and it was that which sent the Son to the cross. It was that which inspired Christ's commission to the disciples to evangelize the world. It was that which caused Paul to endure the many sufferings, hardships and persecutions of his energetic missionary career. It was that which sent the pioneer missionaries to the four corners of the earth and caused them often to endure obloquy and even death for Christ's sake and the Gospel's. That sort of sympathy, unselfish, not seeking remuneration or requiting, is the kind that has been the inspiration of all truly noble efforts at relieving, consoling and renewing this sin-sick old world. And it is that which our hearts would fain possess at this hour.

There is so little of genuine unselfishness in the world. It is even rare in the church. We are all so inclined to be much concerned about ourselves. All our favors and offers of kindness are generally made with the consciousness that we ourselves are not inconvenienced any by them. Sometimes we actually discover that our hearts are only honey-combed with sympathy. We pretend to be bearing the burdens of others, but the moment they become heavy we decline to bear them. We pray for the suffering and the needy and offer them sparingly of our substance, but when their need requires of us sacrifice we stop short. Our hearts mellow in the presence of sorrow and grief of others and we say words of sympathy, but when there is a call day after day for our sharing with others their heartaches, we grow weary and find excuse for our absence. We love to follow the Master when he walks the shining pathways, where flowers are blooming, birds are singing and the very air is pregnant with joy, but when he climbs the hill of Gethsemane with heavy cross and bleeding feet we hesitate to follow. When we face ourselves squarely and scrutinize without any thought of self-justification the spirit of our acts, the purpose that prompted them and the character of our sympathy, we are forced to acknowledge that we are far from being unselfish; that we have been pretending in much of our loudly proclaimed sympathy.

I don't think we are as a rule consciously pretending, if we were we could not endure it so placidly. The trouble is that we are selfish and don't know it. And so we go on satisfied with our generosity and feeling that we deserve much credit for sympathies extended to others. Would to God we could be awakened to our true heart-condition and cry with genuine repentance, "Woe is me, for I am undone."

I wonder that the Father is so graciously kind and tenderly forgiving when we are so selfish and unsympathetic. But that is his nature, and that is why we love him and worship him. He is the only One in all the world who is thoroughly unselfish and genuinely sympathetic. He is the only One who embodies the ideals that our souls long to incarnate. And so we look away from ourselves to him. For in him we find not only that which rebukes, but that which makes us forget our failures and inspires us and helps us to rise into that which our souls in their deeper recesses truly long to be. He does not smile at our emptiness, though the world may laugh in scorn. He does not mock us in our feeble struggles, though the world often thrusts us through with its taunts. He is grieved at our failures, but he sympathizes with our weaknesses and with genuine unselfishness gives us of his strength and goodness.

OUR PRAYER

O, Father, all-merciful and almighty, creator and sustainer of life, and giver of all good, we come to thee in our weakness, in our selfishness and coldness and ask thy forgiveness for our failure to do the very things we seek and need of thee most. When we would do good evil is present with us, so that we do not the things we would. When we would give to others self comes into view. When we would enter into the fellowship of others' sufferings, we grow weary so soon. Depart not from us, O Savior and Lord, but give us of thine own unselfishness and loving sympathy. Help us to crucify self. Do thou burn out of our lives everything that is displeasing to thee. Help us wholly to lose sight of self that would put desire above duty. Make us daily more like unto thyself. In the name of him in whose strength we can do all things, and who is able to do for us exceedingly abundantly above that which we can ask or think, we pray. Amen.

GIVING SELF

In April, 1848, there was gathered a great crowd in the Square of Bologna. Garibaldi's friend, Ugo Bassi, had been calling upon the people for their gifts to aid the patriot-leader in his venturesome campaign. Soon there was a mighty heap in the square, of money and tapestries, and Venetian crystal, and precious stuffs from Eastern looms, and the jewels from princely houses. But then a poor girl, dressed in coarse blue serge, bare-footed, took from her neighbor's belt the hanging shears and cut off her tresses of golden hair, and sprang forward laying them in Ugo Bassi's arms and saying, "Sell that for Italy." And she gave more than all the rest.

(Continued from page 7)

ments, and he does not listen to ours, and neither of us convinces the other.

But after all most of us are lovers of truth. We would rather give up our belief than believe what is untrue. We would rather believe the truth and be despised and hated than to persuade men of something that is not true and honored.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Pupil: The Supreme Concern. Mrs. C. E. Weidner

Among the many things that we are thinking and doing today, the child is not forgotten. I say the many things we are thinking and doing, because they are legion. And there are not nearly as many now as there will be in a year from now. In the new world into which we are coming; this world that has been all but destroyed by war and is now suffering from its wounds, this world that must be entirely rebuilt, in the midst of all these problems of the rebuilding of nations—industry, society, education, law and religion—amid all these gigantic problems, the child is not absent from men's minds. Your properly graded and managed Bible school makes him the center of their activities. The community center activities are not forgetful of the child, but arrange for his play and development, that he may be made a good citizen and Christian. The child has been in the limelight for several years and we are realizing more and more that he is the crux of a very critical situation. Life is so important that all else is secondary.

Men and women who have given their lives in the study of the human mind tell us the child should be the supreme consideration. From the cradle to the grave, never is there found a time when impressions can be made on lives as they can during the period of childhood. Not only impressions made, but impressions so strongly impressed that their effects can never be wiped out. Now is the time to teach what you wish to cling through life. Now is the time to have them see and hear only what you wish to remain as long as the soul remains. This is the opportunity to make character; this is the time to make nations; this is the occasion for the molding and fashioning of civilization; now we can make the kind and quality of a religion we wish to have. The child's mind is very plastic and consequently is of the highest concern to men. Its mind is tender and not hard and brittle. Ideas that touch it do not rebound. The mind of the child is not full of grooves and ruts such as are apt to be found in the mind of the aged. Are we desirous of laying a broad deep foundation against the time to come? Now is the time. Are we desirous of giving beauty and color to years of thinking and usefulness? Now is the time. Are we desirous of enriching the visions of life and especially that of old age? Now is the time. From the standpoint of the individual, much of the hardships and gloominess of old age can now be softened and lightened. From the standpoint of society, now is the opportunity to begin the development of social feelings and responsibilities. If we wish to see a healthy humanitarian spirit begin to manifest itself, now is the occasion to begin its culture. If we wish to see a wholesome religious spirit reveal itself, now is the opportunity to begin calling it forth. This is the time when God is so very near and the idea of him as a Father, is so very real and close to human life. This is the time to begin "training up a child in the way you would have him go, and when he is old he will not depart therefrom." A "kind of a club" of geometers met at the Pascal home every week and there was continued conversation upon problems of geometry at the table in the evening. To thwart the awakened curiosity of his son, the father abstained from such conversation, locked up all the mathematical books, and endeavored in every way to keep the boy from so much as knowing what geometry was. The precautions were unavailing. The inkling of such knowledge which the lad could not but gather in such a home, so influenced his desire for more, that he employed his leisure time in contriving a system of geometry for himself, aided only by a piece of charcoal and some boards. His father, coming into his room one day found him so deeply absorbed in this pursuit that the boy heard nothing of his approach, but continued poring over his triangles and circles, until he was startled into consciousness by hearing his father ask, "What are you doing my son?" Father and son were equally moved—the son to be detected devouring forbidden fruit, the father to discover that his son of thirteen years had effected a demonstration of the thirty-second proposition of the first book of Euclid. Without ever knowing the names of figures, he had advanced so far. He called a circle, a "round" and a line, a "bar" but he understood the rudimental principles of the science. This is the impresional period of life.

No one who thinks will now reject the idea of our entering into a new world. In this world, the social expressions of life are being emphasized. We are not entering this new world; we are being hurled into it. It is a matter of sink or swim. If we want the child and the race to swim, we must grasp this impressionable time of life to socialize them. Herbert Spencer said, "Life correspondence to environment." We must help the child to live. I dare say that if the church had voiced the social aspects of Christ's teachings, we might not have had this war. If she had emphasized less of the individual and more of the social; if she had spoken less of "self-assertions," less of individual achievements, regardless of how they were achieved, and more of regard for and responsibilities for others, it is not likely that this world catastrophe would have taken place. It is this regard for and responsibility to the altar that will be prominent in the new world, and it is this also that we wish to call out of the life of the child. Not only is it our aim to make him religious, but also a Christian neighbor and citizen. If we conceive religion in its larger aspect, we will see that the making of the child truly religious implies and includes the making of him a good citizen. Christ's conception of religion includes being a socialized creature. There are and will be mighty conditions and circumstances that will press and crush men and women. There are many things that interfere with the health, happiness, and life of the race. It should be our aim to touch the child so that he will feel these burdens of his fellows to the point where he will act accordingly. There are multitudes of men and women compelled to labor under conditions where they never have an opportunity to develop and expand the soul that God implanted in them. If we are to alter such conditions, we must begin with the child, that the oncoming generation will wipe away such oppression. The church building, the Bible school rooms and their equipment, the playgrounds of the church, everything, is secondary and should be conducive to a healthy growth of religious life, thus socializing the child at the most opportune time. Many may see only the expense of the remodeling of churches, the equipping of Sunday schools and the building of playgrounds. Did not Jesus raise somewhat the same question when he said, "What doth it profit a man, to gain the whole world and forfeit his life? For what shall a man give in exchange for his life?" In our scientific investigations we are coming to the point emphasized by Jesus, that life is the important thing, all else is secondary, consequently Bible, science, church, equipment, lessons, and everything must be adapted to the greatest possible building of this growing thing we call life.

Then there is the religious expression of life. This is the time to make deep and lasting religious impressions. Religious impressions made now, even though they seemingly forsake them, yet in after years they will return to the kind and quality of thinking and ideas impressed upon them at this time. Much of the future, earthly and heavenly, is wrapped up in this period of life. Now is the time to use church playgrounds so that instruction can be reinforced and rightly used for the development of the life and character. Now is the time for pageants and dramatization to impress religious truths. The church of the future must minister to the whole man. The Bible school must be a vital part of that church and must be so equipped. Service is the cry of today and humanity is going to say that the church shall live or not live according as it copes with and supplies the needs of man. Religion, as an orderly, progressive development of life, is the need of man. Will the Bible school meet this need in kind of lessons, kind of teaching, and kind of equipment?

The pupil, the supreme concern! The child is and ever should be the supreme concern of the nation and the church. Emerson in exalting the position of the mother also exalted and emphasized the supremacy of the child when he said, "The hand that rocks the cradle forms the destiny of the nation." The future outlook of the church is wrapped up with the children. The future of the Brethren church depends a very great deal on what the church will do regarding equipment, lessons, teaching and organization for the child.

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

April—Personal Work Month. By Prof. J. A. Garber

"Training for Service" is one of the constant aims of Christian Endeavor. It seeks to train young people to serve in various ways, all of which are to bring others into closer fellowship with Christ. This evangelistic aim is to receive particular emphasis during April, our Personal Work Month.

One Friend by the Win-One Method

In John 1:43-51, we have the fascinating account of a friend won to Jesus by a certain young man. In the preceding verses we have an equally interesting record of a young man leading his brother to Christ. Neither of these earnest soul-winners, apparently deemed it necessary to engage in a lobared argument, but they did feel impelled to say "Come and sec." That is exactly what we are now asking our young people to say to their friends and relatives who know not the Savior. They may be waiting for an invitation and introduction to Jesus. Wouldn't you, dear Endeavorer, like to know the great joy of leading one person to Christ?

If so, make your unsaved friends and relatives objects of definite daily prayer. Place their names on a prayer list and as each one makes the good decision mark a cross opposite the name. Hold yourself in readiness to help to answer your own prayer. The love of Christ may constrain you to speak to these persons. Remember that what you do may be more effective than what you say. Special services may be arranged and conducted by the young people with most gratifying results. Several years ago the Endeavorers of a certain community asked permission to conduct a week's evangelistic services. Having been allowed the privilege they conducted each night a service of song, prayer, testimony and exhortation, which resulted in a score of decisions. There are Brethren societies with sufficient talent to duplicate this effort with similar results. Try it Endeavorers, as a definite means of winning your society's proportionate share of the 400 new church members asked for in Goal 4 of our Challenge. This would be a most fitting service for the week preceding Easter. Your pastor will be glad to second such an effort.

Personal Evangelism. By E. M. Riddle

"Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him; let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins." James 4:19, 20.

It is the Christian's exalted privilege and duty to co-operate with Christ in imparting life to others. This life is the Christ life. We are to be witnesses of this life. We are co-laborers with him and for him.

Personal evangelism is essential to the life of the church. As a rule, Christian workers do not show enough of the Christlike life during the week. It is easy to postpone that call until Sunday that should have been made during the week. Our great King went every day among all people making his life a channel of blessing, by the personal touch, the simple conversation, and by his public teaching and healing. So often we fail to show the reality of that which we possess and have to offer. The highest type of religious character may be upheld from the pulpit at every service, but unless pastor and laity are willing to witness for him and bear a true testimony of the highest type of life, not all will be rescued.

That Christian worker who goes out and forgets to try to save a sinner from the error of his way, has not the burden of a lost soul upon his heart. Such an one has not imparted a blessing. Our evangelists believe and emphasize the great importance of personal work. As a pastor it has been my experience that the conversation in the home with the one under conviction, is the one that counts. Let me say this too, that your exhortation to the good life must have behind it a truth as deep as eternity, else you will not seize and hold the conscience. Here is your opportunity to talk doctrine and talk it always that others may be saved by believing it and not dishonor God by unbelief.

Now let me whisper, especially to a brotherhood of Endeavorers, April is "Personal Work" month. I have tried to stress personal evangelism in this message. We want to enlist a large number of Endeavorers during the month of April. Have a revival of Christian Endeavor. Show that you are an Endeavorer by capturing a real one for Christ and the church. Cast an eye over your community and take names of all who are not in Christian Endeavor work. Go to see them about this work and nothing else. Show the size of the job and the need of "BIG WORKERS."

One of these two plans I suggest for use during the month to enlist workers. 1st. A live social in the city church, with non-Endeavor workers in attendance. 2nd. For the rural church this plan has occurred to me: Call for five or six automobiles. Assign to each a company of Endeavorers with one as captain. The captains shall have charge and make a report upon their return. These teams should divide their field and call at homes of prospective Endeavorers emphasizing the work.

Do not feel that all Christian Endeavor revivals occur in some far away state, it can be in your society if you want it.

MISSIONS

A Letter from South America

La Carlota, Argentina.

Dear Brethren in the homeland:

The heat of the summer is now upon us and has been so intense for several days that it is nearly impossible to get anything done. This section of the country is needing rain badly and during the dry weather we have lots of dust, yes clouds of it for hours at a time some days. The windows and doors can not be shut tight enough to keep it out of the house. On many days we can sweep the floors and in an hour's time see our tracks in the dust. This is just one of the differences between life here and in Uncle Sam's land which missionaries must get accustomed to,

We have been living in Carlota about three months and while we have not accomplished as much as we would like, the people at least know that we are here and what we stand for. We had just gotten our home and hall arranged, when the Bible Coach from Villa Maria gave us a most welcome visit of nine days. Mr. and Mrs. Langran, and Mr. Doorn from Belle Ville accompanied them and did the preaching. On November 3, a Sunday afternoon, in the "Plaza" or public square we began preaching the gospel in this town. We had hand bills printed announcing this meeting as well as the series to follow in the hall during the week. Also we put large posters on the Bible Coach and drove over town to be sure that all might learn of the meetings. As a result we had about 170 attentive listeners. During the week we visited, sold Bibles and gave out hundreds of tracts. Besides workers, we had from twenty to thirty present each night. It was a new thing and many came out of mere curiosity more than for any other reason. I am sorry to say that but few came back more than once or twice, so we had a different crowd nearly every night. It seems that they either didn't like it or got enough to last for a long while. Many expressed their sympathy with the gospel message, but as we urged them to accept, we found them to be like the young man who once talked with the Master, they had various kinds of "great possessions." On the following Sunday afternoon, we had another open air meeting with only about 80 present. We sold about 30 Bibles and Testaments during the week.

When the Coach left Mrs. Bock and I followed the meetings with a house to house canvass of the town with Bibles and Christian literature. We planned to finish the canvass by the end of the old year and to get a Bible or a portion in every home in Carlotota. We found Bibles or Testaments already in many homes, as the Bible Coach had passed here two years ago and sold what they could. We succeeded in selling 62 more books and gave away hundreds of portions and other wholesome literature. The Bible House of Los Angeles sends us hundreds of neatly bound copies of the Gospels, which makes a nice little gift for those who can not or will not buy the whole Book. Any good brother who would like to lay up a few dollars "where neither moth nor rust doth consume" could do no better than send them to the Bible House (or to Brother Bauman, who would gladly pass them on) asking them to send more literature to your missionaries in needy Argentina. We need it and can use lots of it to a good advantage. Yes, it is true that some of this literature is despised and destroyed, but it is also rich spiritual food to some benighted souls who are hungering and thirsting after righteousness and truth. Many cases are known where one little tract has saved a soul. What of the investment? (Mt. 16:26).

With very few exceptions (a few fanatic Catholics insulted us and refused to receive anything), every home in Carlotota now possesses a copy of the blessed Word or a part of it. We have sown the "good seed," some has doubtless fallen upon the "rocky places," some by the "way side" but surely some upon the good ground as well. We must now plod on with patience until God in his own good time is pleased to give the increase. Friends tell us that the priest is much concerned about us and that he preaches against us and our literature especially the Bible, urging his parishioners not to buy or even receive a tract.

Up to the present our preaching services have not been well attended, and sometimes we have no one. If they won't come here we are just going to keep on peddling it out to them. I used to get along very well peddling out aluminum ware, so I guess I shall just have to do the same stunt over again, but with a different sample case.

The most promising part of our work is with the children, or our Sunday school, for rarely any adults come. They love to hear the piano and to learn the songs we teach them as well as the Bible stories which I tell them every Sunday. Our highest attendance was 25, but we have nearly 50 on the roll. They haven't gotten the idea of regular attendance. One little girl remarked some time ago that she had not missed for four Sundays, then she suddenly took a vacation of two and then came back again. I feel quite sure that our greatest hope lies in getting hold of the children. I have put up some swings for them and a few more dollars could be mightily well spent in adding other such attractions.

Once a month we have services for the English speaking folks that live near here. We have Scotch Presbyterians, Congregationalists, some of the Church of England, Methodists and I don't know what all else, but we get along quite well and our crowd is growing.

We are now arranging to buy a sulky and an English friend has promised to lend us a horse. This town is so scattered that we can not well get about on foot. There are a good number of surrounding towns which we hope to canvass with Bibles and literature, also there are many farmers near here that we should visit.

This leaves us rather uncomfortable, due to the excessive heat but in very good health. Pray for your missionaries in the Argentine.

WM. A. BOCK.

A Kentucky Call.

By G. C. Carpenter

It is with regret that the call is sent forth for some one to serve as superintendent of the Krypton mission, that Brother Cook may be given a leave of absence for one year at least. Brother Cook writes that this is necessary in part because of the health of Mrs. Cook, who has not been blessed with any spare strength for a long time.

The call is for a worker who is fully consecrated and has much faith and patience and love of souls. A worker with experience in Christian work is preferred. Let the whole church pray that the Lord may continue to guide in this good work, for the work so well begun is indeed a good work and calls for a worker who knows God even as Brother Cook has known and obeyed him. Brother Cook desires that the change be made as soon as possible. May the Lord send forth the needed worker. Write at once if you can consider the work or if you know of some one to fill the place. Peru, Indiana.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Editor, I am sure we are going over the top in placing the Evangelist in at least seventy-five percent of the homes of our congregation. In about a week you will get the list and check.

We had a glorious day last Sunday; 24 consecrations and six conversions, and it was a regular session. Then we had one more at our last prayer meeting. Six were baptised after the prayer meeting service.

Yours in his name,

A. E. NEHER.

BIBLE INSTITUTE AND REVIVAL AT BRETHREN CHURCH, BERNE INDIANA

At the close of the revival at Nappanee, Indiana, we went to Berne, Indiana, where we met Brother E. M. Cobb, from Dayton, Ohio, and in connection with him, held a Bible Institute for one week,—rather, for five days. Each of us delivered three addresses during the day, fifty minutes each. Brother Cobb brought along his "A. B. C. D. (Ashton-Buck-Cotterman-Deeter) Quartette" from Dayton, to place the spice of their work between our lectures. How those girls can sing! Wish they lived in Long Beach! Then in the evening, Brother Cobb delivered his famous "Stereopticon Travelogues," each being followed by a brief evangelistic appeal by the writer. It was a great five days, long to be remembered by all who were there. The addresses were along the line of the old fundamental doctrines of the Bible, the inspiration of the Book, prophecy, Bible history, Bible geography, the deeper spiritual life, etc., etc. We will leave it for Brother Johnson to tell, if he cares to do so, as to what effect this meeting had on his church. We wish to say that never before did we realize (though we have long been somewhat intimate with him), what a wonderful teacher our good Brother Cobb is. He is simply great on that job! He knows what he is talking about, and he drills it in deep, and makes it stick with you.

We were made to feel what a wonderful thing it would be if Bible institutes of this sort could be held in every congregation in the brotherhood,—held by men who know what the Bible teaches, who believe what the Bible teaches, and who love what the Bible teaches. A church that goes before the world as a "whole Gospel church," taking as her very slogan, "The Bible, The Whole Bible, and Nothing but the Bible," certainly needs meetings of just this sort, especially when the heaven of unbelief in the things the Bible teaches is at work in our midst. Nothing can do more to preserve faith in the Word of God among us, and keep us true to our historic position as a church, than just such meetings as this held throughout our brotherhood.

The week of Bible Institute work was followed by one week of evangelistic work by the writer. When the Bible Institute week was arranged, this extra week was not contemplated. But they persuaded us to put off some other folks, and give them "just one week," and we did. As a result, even in one week, we managed to exceed our "limit" again, and sixteen precious souls took the stand for Christ. The remarkable part of it all is that twelve of the sixteen were men (two boys). The last night, twelve came forward, eleven of whom were of the male sex. It seems to the writer as though men are more easily reached these last days than are women.

God bless dear old Bethel! True to the Book is she as the needle is to the Pole. Her pastor, a farmer living right in her midst for years, still grips his people, not merely with his preaching but with his life. We were so sorry we could not stay and finish that meeting. Who knows what the end might have been. But we could not do it without disappointing those who have long been waiting for us, so, reluctantly, we came away. This short meeting cost them heavily; for the expenses and salaries of a force of eight people was no small item. But their own free-will offerings left money in their treasury at the close, to be used for the local expenses. They tackled a big job for a small country church,—but,—then,—it's just like that crowd. May their tribe increase! We are now at Clay City, Indiana, where we were first closed up last October first by the "flu" after holding for one week. We are here to finish up, now. Pray for us.

LOUIS S. BAUMAN.

UNIONTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

Present. That is, we are on the job after our private whirl with the general disturber, Herr Flu. Since last we wrote for the Evangelist family we have had a few things of moment take place in our midst. In the first place, and perhaps most important, we opened our revival meetings on the twelfth of January and kept them going for three weeks, the pastor doing the preaching, and we were quite successful considering all the things one has to fight in an industrial center such as is the region in which Uniontown is located. We had some good sized crowds, and with the assistance of a newly installed stereopticon we were able to present the Gospel story in picture as well as word so as to attract people and drive home the old, old story so as to convict and convert. As a result of the meetings we have baptized seven and received one by letter. There are others that have been impressed and we look for them to make the great confession at regular services later.

One thing that did not please us very much was that the very next Sunday after the close of the meetings the preacher spent in bed doing his best with the help of God and the doctor to fight off the above-mentioned attack of epifluitis. And to make it worse we had to miss the next Sunday also, making two Sundays immediately following the close of the meetings that the church services could not be held. As any one knows, that is not the best thing after getting the people stirred up, but it could not be helped and we look for God to help us overrule the effects of the enforced closing. So far as personal health is concerned, we are none the worse for the illness, there being no after weakness to bother us as so many seem to suffer when auld Nickie Flu leaves them. For that we thank God and resolve to do more for him than ever if at all possible.

Toward the close of the meetings, we lifted the postponed Home Mission Board offering and we are pleased to say that we went clean for our proportion. We are sorry that it was not quite as much as last year, but postponement never helps a thing and it did not help in this. Besides people were not able to get to the services owing to the second inroad of the "flu," and with us it was worse than the first in that it hit more of our people, even though it was not as fatal as the first attack seemed to be. Some of our families had as many as five or six members down with it at one time. These things do hurt and we are praying for the time when this awful thing will have disappeared never to appear again.

I must say a word in praise of the folks of this church and the way they rallied around the pastor when he was unable to do for himself. Times like this do prove folks, and I will say that our folks were found NOT wanting. Such things only tend to make a fellow work all the harder and consequently make for the growth of the Kingdom. May God bless and keep that spirit of mutual suffering and mutual helpfulness alive among his people.

The auxiliaries of the church are all going strong. The Sunday school was hard hit by the epidemic, but it started to come back last Sunday and with hearty co-operation on the part of all the members we hope to get back to form in a few weeks. The S. S. C. E. and M. and M. societies are awake and busy. And barring the smaller attendance due to existing conditions, the Y. P. S. C. E. is going nicely. The latter organization held its College meeting two weeks late owing to the leader not being able to be present on the evening scheduled, and the meeting was helpful in bringing the claims of the college before the folks, to say nothing about the offering that was taken for the good of the college work as carried on by the national Christian Endeavor movement.

Next Sunday we lift the superannuated offering, it also being postponed, and we will more than make our proportionate share. Shame on the churches that do not measure up to the TEN cent levy for this work. Maybe David Harum was right when he said, "Twas a pity our Dominie wasn't a horse instead of a man; then we could have shot him when we had worn him out." But as for most of us we feel differently about it, and I feel it in my system that the Benevolence Board will not want for funds to carry on their work the coming year. Let us not have any of them to lose their patience any more, for that is hard on the religion and we must not impair the religion of any of the men upon whom we lay hands for service such as that performed by this board.

As a parting word let me say that we have gone through difficult times and trials the past year. Our faith has been tried, but I think only to the strengthening of it. All manner of demands have been made upon the church and church members, but we hope not to the subverting of good morals and spiritual growth. Now we face the time of new effort and new demands—demands which will try us more than the demands of the past year, and what will the answer be? Surely with a whole gospel and a big challenge we are not going to be less brave to meet the work of peace than we were to meet the tests of war and disease. I am jealous for the church of Jesus Christ and my desire is to see renewed evangelistic effort put forth and that we put into action the lessons in giving that we learned during the time of strife, to say nothing about the lessons of sacrifice and self-denial that patriotism demanded and to which we all responded so nobly. Let us show King Jesus that we are as willing to do for him as we were able to do for the government under which we live. God is going to hold us responsible not for what we did or did not do for the United States during the late war, but he is going to hold us responsible for what we do or do not do for him, his cause and his sheep who are not of this fold, but who ought to be of it and possibly will be of it if we discharge our stewardship properly. Leaving controversy and strife behind let us push forward to the salvation of those that are dying in sin while we are inactive along missionary lines owing to petty differences. The blood of Jesus does save from sin and it is our duty to tell the world of it. Your brother Ed. could ask for nothing better from and for our beloved church than that it become a Spirit-united, praying, fervent, Pentecostal body living for only one thing and that to do the work of the Master irrespective of personal feelings in any matter. May his good spirit lead and may we follow. Yours for an enlarged Brethrenism,

E. L. MILLER.

ATTENTION! OHIO CHURCHES

As announced editorially last week, in lieu of a regular conference session we have planned a series of sectional meetings at strategic centers. Having not heard from some of the workers we were not able to announce the completed schedule, even when the paper went to press. And now we must omit a few of the churches located at outlying parts of the state. Each, perhaps, will have to have a rally of its own with the assistance of the district evangelist in charge.

Meeting Places and Dates

March 23:—Louisville with Canton, Middlebranch and North Georgetown participating.

Mansfield with Ashland, Ankenytown and North Liberty participating.

March 30:—Rittman with Zion Hill participating; possibly Fair Haven, also. Dayton with the Miami Valley Circuit and Pleasant Hill participating. Gratis with Camden, West Alexandria and New Lebanon participating.

April 7:—Columbus with Glenford and Washington C. H. participating.

Churches not named in connection with these centers that find it possible to send delegates are urged to do so. The principal meeting in each instance will be held in the afternoon, beginning about 1:30, and it should be attended by pastors, church and departmental officials and all interested in the work of the church. So far as practicable an exchange of pastors has been arranged for each district on the date announced. In that way the people detained at home will have the privilege of hearing a new voice and receiving some of the inspiration of the central meeting.

The purpose of these efforts is to stress all the interests of our state work. Special attention will be given the Four Year Program. Ohio must forge ahead and make the best possible showing. Then it is earnestly hoped that these meetings will give a boost to the work in every church so that the next three months, at least, shall be a most fruitful period of work for us. The choicest season of the year is just before us. As spring returns with all its rejuvenating influences let there be a revival of spiritual life and effort in all our churches.

"Let us work and pray

For this is the victory way."

J. A. GARBBER, Moderator.

DUTCHTOWN, INDIANA

The Dutchtown church is now in a revival with the pastor as the evangelist, and we are asking the help of God's people to help us. This report is short and sweet. We are too busy now to tell you much, except that on Sunday, March 2, we started with a crowded house and a rousing spirit. We are hoping that God will bless us with a new zeal, a consecrated spirit and a great harvest of lost souls.

Brethren, pray for us.

HOMER ANDERSON.

FROM WISCONSIN

I will write a few lines so that the many readers of the Evangelist may know that there is a little band of Brethren at Eau Claire, Wisconsin. We would be pleased greatly if we could picture to you our needs. We belong to one and the same family of Brethren as those of you who live in strong congregations. We are loyal to the same faith, and therefore our cries come up to you, one and all.

By having no house in which to worship, we are losing some of our own people. Some are going to the Baptists and some to the Presbyterians. We have house-to-house meetings every week, but some do not like the private houses to worship.

Our people here own their own homes but work in the factories. The writer works at carpentering. We would be glad to answer questions from Brethren looking for a home in a flourishing city of many factories. We have an organized church, but no church home.

Fraternally,

J. A. BAKER 631 Churchill St.

JOHNSTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

It has been some time since we have been heard from through the church paper. But silence does not always denote inactivity. Since all but closing the work at Rosedale and moving into the congregation of the Third church of Johnstown, it seems we have been busier than ever. Working for the Cambria Steel Company to help keep the boys at the front supplied during the war, acting as supply-preacher occasionally on Sunday and teaching in the Sunday school at other times, I had little time for anything else. But thank God the war is over and we are not rushed quite so hard now.

In January we were called to Prospect, one of the suburbs of Johnstown, to conduct a two weeks' evangelistic meeting. Although on account of our work during the day we could only devote the evenings to the campaign, God blessed our efforts with nineteen conversions.

Since conditions have become more nearly normal with the close of the war and the disappearing of the "flu," every department of the Third church has taken on new life. But with Brother Jones and his wife in the lead, a church would have to be very dead indeed if it could not be reanimated by their efforts. There is a marked increase in attendance at both church and Sunday school services. The prayer meeting and Y. P. S. C. E. are in a healthy condition.

Soon after moving to this congregation we were chosen teacher of the Adult Bible class. But owing to our work and occasional preaching we could not attend regularly. So on Thursday evening, February 26, we called a meeting of the class at our home for the purpose of reorganizing. At this time we thought to elect a teacher who could attend more regularly. But the class ruled otherwise. They came in force and almost filled the house. They not only re-elected us teacher, but assured us of their support and attendance, and showed their appreciation of our services by giving us a handkerchief shower. All of which we appreciate very much. We now have an adult class as interesting as any we have ever been a member of. And we pray God to make us worthy of our calling.

W. S. BAKER.

CLAY CITY, INDIANA

Though nothing has been reported from Clay City for some time, we have not been idle by any means. In fact our silence has been largely due to the fact that we have been so busy.

Ever since we were compelled to close our meeting last fall on account of the "flu," after having continued for just a week, we have been constantly looking forward to the return of Brother Bauman to conclude the meeting. And the pastor has been endeavoring to prepare the way for this event by keeping it constantly before the church, in the various services, as well as the community, through our local paper. The sermons have been prepared and preached with a view to this preparation. And during this time our attendance was much better than it had been for many months. And now Brother Bauman is here. And the attendance and interest has exceeded what we had expected, for so early in the meeting. The outlook is good for a great victory. May I not ask all the Brethren to help make a great victory possible by your prayers?

The church is in splendid condition. Our prayer meetings will average about a thirty-three percent attendance and our Sunday school will average about eighty-five percent of the church membership. Finances were never in better shape, though there is some indebtedness on the property still.

Pray for us that we at Clay City may be largely used of God.

GEO. W. KINZIE.

BUNKER HILL, INDIANA

On February 9, we began a series of meetings in the Loree church, and closed on March 2. We started the meeting in full swing from the start. Our people were all in line, and with a determination to do more for the Master than ever before, they went forward. In spite of the bad roads and weather which were against us, we were greeted each evening with a good crowd, eager to learn more about the gospel and the will of the Lord. When we saw their eagerness our heart was moved and made to realize what a feeble instrument we were to proclaim to them the unsearchable riches of God. We prayed much and let God have his way and "to him be honor and glory forever." Together we labored, and our labors were not in vain; the Lord rewarded our efforts by giving us seven souls—four young men, one man and wife and one mother.

We feel that our church has been strengthened in different ways, there is a deeper interest in all branches of the church, and pastor and people were drawn closer together.

We feel that these are critical times. There is so little concern on the part of unsaved people. They are hard to arouse from the state of lethargy into which they have fallen. Night after night they will sit in the house of God and listen to the plain gospel and leave without making their peace with him.

Brethren, we need to pray that God will baptize us anew with the Holy Spirit and with power that we may be able to reach the hearts of men.

C. A. STEWART.

ASHLAND COLLEGE NOTES

Several of our students attended the Student Volunteer convention at Wooster, Ohio, recently and report a great meeting.

It had been thought that this year there would be no College Annual published on account of 'after-war conditions,' but the Junior Class has rallied to the task and an Annual will be published which is destined to be the best yet. Better send in your order now for one as the supply will be in great demand.

Harold Beaver has quit school for a time and is working for an insurance company, and we are glad to say he is making good.

B. F. Owens and E. A. Rowsay began a revival meeting at the Mansfield mission on the ninth.

The writer came home from his Indiana meeting with banners flying, with thirty-three confessions, and twenty-nine baptized and received into the Oakville church.

Alvah J. McClain, of Philadelphia, A. L. DeLozier of Allentown, Pa., E. M. Cobb of Dayton, Ohio, and L. S. Bauman now in evangelistic work were in Ashland last week and met with Dr. Miller in a Foreign Missionary Board business session. Please notice the account of the new things launched for our foreign mission workers in The Brethren Missionary magazine.

Edwin Boardman and A. L. Lynn engaged in an important debate at Philo literary last Friday night. The subject of the discussion was, "Should Military Training be Compulsory in Schools?" Lynn won two points and Boardman one. The joke is on the boys. During the debate a high wind struck the College and off went the tin roof from the deck of the building, and lay a wreck on the campus to the east. We have heard of enthusiasm running high but never enough to loosen a roof in this fashion before.

The girls basket ball team played the high school girls a game on the College "gym" floor with a victory of 16 to 2 in favor of Ashland College. Our girls are learning to play splendidly.

Fred Vanator has assumed charge of the work for half time at Williamstown. He reports conditions there in good shape.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

The good work still goes on in the Kanemorado district. Hamlin was the third church to be canvassed and the result shows plainly that Hamlin, though smaller in numbers than either Falls City or Morrill, did not propose to be a bit outdone by her nearby sisters. In other words, Hamlin has too much loyalty and healthy pride to fail to lift her corner in a big enterprise such as endowing our college. And so Hamlin did the noble, beautiful thing when she enlisted at $2,200. This makes a little more than $10,000 for the first three churches at Kanemorado. Now lest somebody should get the wrong impression I want to say right away quick that money does not grow on the trees out in Kansas and Nebraska. Some of last year's crops were short at Hamlin and Morrill, particularly corn. And not a few of the men who gave to the cause of endowment were paying high prices for corn to carry their stock through the winter. I am saying this to assure the brotherhood that the result gained thus far in Kanemorado is not because of big numbers, and not because the crops were all big for the last few years, but because there are people out here with big hearts and big loyalty.

Brother Cone is the pastor at Hamlin. He succeeded Brother S. C. Henderson last fall. He, with Whitted at Morrill, and Stuckman at Falls City, is an Ashland College man. I found him ready for business. And the canvass at Hamlin was nothing less than a hummer. It was a real pleasure to work with Cone, and to get into the homes of his people. I preached several nights to splendid, appreciative audiences. The Hamlin church is blessed with an exceptionally fine lot of young people. I seldom find more in any church than I found at Hamlin. And it was quite encouraging to me to see the young people and children from night to night looking carefully at the pictures of the College and some of the College classes. One night Brother Cone sang as a solo one of our Ashland College songs and the next night he and his young people sang two more of the college songs for us. This was all very much appreciated and it gave a distinctly college ring to our services. We were also glad to have some of the Morrill people over to help us three nights while we were there. It is amazing how interested folks become in this campaign when once they have enlisted. When Falls City got in in good shape she wanted Morrill to get in right. And when Morrill, got in, then she wanted to see Hamlin get in right. And that is the way it goes. It only proves again that we become interested when we begin to invest.

Our friends in the $500 class will be glad to know that Hamlin has added two men to this list. Once more I must cypress my genuine pleasure at seeing this list grow. I can think of a lot of men in fields where I have already been who should have gotten up in that class too. They would look so much more at home and feel so much better up in the class where they belong. But I do thank the Lord that the doors will remain open all through this campaign. And if any of the brethren get compunctions of conscience because they did not get up in the $500 or $1,000 class they can relieve their sufferings at once by making their desires known to me.

Now Watch the Kanemorado District Raise the Mercury

COLLEGE
ENDOWMENT

Well, I shall not soon forget the Cones, and Berkleys, and Eglins, and Swinnays, and Blanchards, and Stumps and a lot more fine people I met at Hamlin. I want to thank Ross Berkley in a public way for taking me out through the Kansas mud one afternoon in his Ford. It was great. I don't mean the mud, but that was great too. When I left Hamlin for Morrill and Carlton I had enough mud on my rubbers to raise a bushel of Kentucky Wonder beans, and that is not because my rubbers are so big but because the mud is of that rare, sticky quality. When I got back to Morrill we rounded out an even $2,500. Carlton will be next heard from.

WM. H. BEACHLER,
Campaign Secretary.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

TERRY-OBERHOLTZER—Mr. Charlie Terry and Miss Vivian Oberholtzer were united in marriage at the parsonage in Clay City, Indiana, on Sunday February 16. Mr. Terry is a member of the Brethren church, and both are highly respected young people. May heaven's blessings rest upon them through life's journey. Ceremony by the writer.

GEO. W. KINZIE.

RHINEHART-MASON—Samuel Ross Rhinehart and Lucile Mason were united in marriage by the writer at the furnished home of Brother Rhinehart, seven miles east of Burlington, Indiana, at seven o'clock on the evening of February 8th. The contracting parties came from two of the best homes in the community. There were present on the occasion about forty relatives and friends. After the ceremony a fine two course lunch was served. May God richly bless this union is our prayer.

W. T. LYTLE.

KNAUER-MILLS—Benjamin Harry Knauer and Dorothy Emma Mills were united in marriage at the bride's home on the evening of January 31, 1919. The groom is a member of the Conemaugh Brethren church and the bride of the United Evangelical church of Conemaugh. The best wishes of a large circle of friends go with these young people for a happy and prosperous journey through life. The ceremony was performed by L. Garvin Smith.

WILLIAMS-PAGE—John Preston Williams and Freda May Page were united in marriage at the bride's home in Moxham on the evening of February 18, 1919, in the presence of a number of friends. The bride is a member of the Conemaugh Brethren church. The best wishes of a host of friends go with these young people for a happy and prosperous journey through life. The bride's father and mother were united in marriage twenty-nine years ago by the father of the officiating minister at this wedding.

L. GARVIN SMITH.

IN THE SHADOW

KNOLL—Miss Winona Knoll was born March 31st, 1893, and passed out of this life February 25th, 1919, at the age of 26 years, 11 months and 17 days, the cause of her death being pneumonia following influenza. She spent her entire life in the vicinity of Louisville, Ohio, where at the age of 12 years she united with the Brethren church. As she grew in years, she grew in grace and became one of the most faithful and efficient workers of the church. She was secretary of the Sunday school, chairman on the Purity committee in the Christian Endeavor, a member of the Sisterhood and active in all departments of the church. She was also an exceptionally successful public school teacher. A member of the school board said: "She was one of the most successful teachers we had in the country schools of this county." Amiable in disposition, she was loved by all who knew her, and her departure leaves a hard place to be filled. Private funeral at her home and services at the cemetery by her pastor.

GEOR. S. BAER.

COBAUGH—Wednesday evening, February 12th, 1919, Brother W. S. Cobough of Vinco, but for the past two years a resident of Johnstown, where he held his membership in the Third church, departed this life after a long illness, to be with the Lord. His death was due to paralysis. He leaves to mourn his death, a wife and one daughter, and a number of grandchildren. Funeral services by the pastor, assisted by Brother W. S. Baker. Interment in Wesley Chapel cemetery.

SLICK—Mr. Edward Slick of Johnstown, Pennsylvania. He leaves to mourn their loss, a wife and three little children. Interment in Mennonite cemetery. Services by the undersigned.

G. H. JONES.

FRESH—Harry Fresh, of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, died in the Memorial Hospital, of pneumonia, Tuesday, February 12th. He leaves a wife and one child. Funeral services by the undersigned, Interment in Benschoff Hill cemetery.

G. H. JONES.

PEARSON—Addie, wife of Jacob Pearson residing west of Flora, Indiana, passed away on January 30, 1919, after suffering from erysipelas and pneumonia. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. I. R. Berry, pastor of the Church of the Brethren. She leaves to mourn her departure, besides her husband, two daughters and one son.

W. T. LYTLE.

HUFFER—Mary Jane, the eldest daughter of our late Brother Jacob Huffer, departed this life at the home of her niece, Mrs. Webster Brown, on January 31, after six weeks of illness which resulted in paralysis. Sister Huffer was a member of the Burlington Brethren church. She leaves three half-brothers, a stepmother and a number of more distant relatives and many friends to mourn her. Funeral was conducted by the writer, Sunday, February 2.

W. T. LYTLE.

GRAHAM—William Edward, little son of Brother and Sister C. T. Graham, near Darwin, Indiana, departed this life at the early age of four months and twenty-four days. This is the third child that Brother and Sister Graham have awaiting them in the place prepared for them. Besides the son, there is left one sister, Blanche, to mourn. Funeral was conducted by the writer on the afternoon of February 5.

May God in his own way bless all these whose homes are broken up and whose hearts are crushed with sorrow, and turn their eyes to the place where "they may all be one."

W. T. LYTLE.

PHILLIPS—Mrs. Virginia A. Phillips departed this life Sunday morning, February 16th, at her home in Roanoke, Virginia. She was a member of the Brethren church. She had been confined to her home by the care of an invalid mother for several years. Her husband having passed away several years ago, she leaves a daughter and son, mother, a sister and a brother to mourn their loss. Funeral by the writer, Tuesday morning, from the home.

L. G. WOOD.

VANZANT—Marshall Vanzant departed this life February 14, 1919, in his sixty-third year. He was a member of the Brethren church of Altoona, having lived and labored there some months ago. He is survived by his wife and two daughters. Funeral services by the writer.

W. C. BENSCHOFF.

MILLER—Miss Catharine P. Miller was called into the life beyond February 20, 1919, at the age of fifteen years and five months. She was a member of the Altona congregation. She lived a very beautiful Christian life and was much loved by all who knew her. Death was due to a complication of diseases following the influenza. She fought bravely and her desire was to live that she might continue in the service of her Master. Funeral service by the writer. She is survived by her parents, two brothers and one sister. May the Lord give strength and comfort to the bereaved.

W. C. BENSCHOFF.

REICHARD—Dr. V. M. Reichard was born in Washington county, Maryland, October 16, 1858, and died January 26, 1919.

By the death of Dr. Reichard the church loses her staunchest supporter. He was a pillar not only in the local church, but in the Maryland-Virginia district and the General Conference as well.

Dr. Reichard commended the respect and admiration of all who knew him and the tribute of appreciation given him on the day when his earthly tabernacle was laid away will live long in the memory of this section. His body lay in state at the Fair Play church for hours as a stream of friends and associates passed his bier. The St. James College students stood at attention while the body was taken into the chapel. The honorary pall bearers were six of the medical fraternity of Hagerstown. A brief memorial service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Curtiss, Rev. A. B. Cover and the writer.

H. W. NOWAG.

GARBER—Eliza J. Garber (nee Milyard) died at Sapulpa, Oklahoma, March 2, 1919, at the age of 71 years, 7 months and 14 days. She was born near New Windsor, Carroll county, Maryland, where she grew to womanhood. After her marriage to Reuben Garber, she and her husband moved to Montgomery county, Ohio, and later to Ft. Scott, Kansas, where they lived till 1906, when they moved to Sapulpa, Oklahoma. She was the mother of six children, one son, Charles, and five daughters, Anna, Olive and Jennie, all of whom live in Sapulpa. Mrs. Ada Drushal of Lost Creek, Kentucky, and Mrs. Sarah Weeks of Portland, Oregon. She also reared two grandchildren from infancy, Mrs. Pearl Stuckman of Nappanee, Indiana, and Miss Geneva Strode of Lost Creek, Kentucky. She was a devoted member of the Church of the Brethren, and a member of the husband and the above mentioned children, six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren survive.

R. GARBER.

Business Manager's Corner

A KEEN DISAPPOINTMENT

Six months ago we announced the publication, by the Standard Publishing Company, one of the most practical aids to the Primary and Junior departments of the Sunday school in the use of the Uniform system of lessons that we had seen in a long time. This was the "Standard Cutout Quarterly." A goodly number of our schools tried it out and pronounced it good, and we were anticipating a larger trade in these quarterlies for the next quarter. Our schools from Pennsylvania to California had used the quarterlies last quarter, the highest number used by any one school being fifty copies. Many orders have been received for these quarterlies for the next quarter, but we will have to return the money to these schools as only a few days ago we received notice from the publishers that the expense of making the quarterlies was too great for the price they were able to get for them and consequently they would publish none for the next quarter. We are indeed disappointed, as our schools must also be, for we considered this one of the greatest improvements in helps to the Uniform Lesson system that has been made in recent years.

An Occasion for Rejoicing

Life is made up of joys as well as of sorrows, and while we have just given expression to a feeling of disappointment over one of the ordinary tasks of life that has failed we now would give an expression to a feeling of joy over another one that has succeeded. Last week we commended the splendid co-operation of our pastors in helping us to dispose of the Report of General Conference and the Brethren Annual. This week we are pleased to announce that the Kanemorado conference district has won first honors in disposing of the entire number allotted to that district. Every pastor in that district to whom we sent a supply of the Conference Report has sent in the full remittance for the number and we say, Thank you. Now, if the pastors of the remaining districts will do as well as those of Kanemorado we will be able to report the entire edition sold out, as we have less than fifty copies remaining on hand in the Publishing House that we care to sell and we have no doubt but what they will be called for. But pastors who have not yet reported are urged to act promptly as in cases of this kind prompt action is essential to the greatest success.

The Subscription Campaign

We can't hope to announce new churches added to the Honor Roll for the Evangelist every week. If we did that we would soon run out of churches; but we are glad to announce even prospects. While we can make no new announcements this week we can announce that there are three or four churches that are very near the goal and we hope to be able to announce their place on the Honor Roll in a very short time.

One of the most interesting announcements we can make this week is concerning how some pastors are determined to keep their churches on the Honor Roll when once they have won the place. A short time ago we were compelled to notify one of our pastors that his church still lacked a few names of being entitled to remain upon the Honor Roll, and a few days later we received his personal check for six dollars with an additional list of four names and with the statement added, "I am paying these subscriptions out of my own pocket." This is the determination that wins, but still I would hate to be a member of the official board of a church that would let its pastor carry this burden because they have not felt inclined to do so. Of course we will not give the name of this pastor, but we surely do admire his courage and determination. This is an expression of "the victory that overcometh the world."

R. R. TEETER,

Business Manager.

Brethren Home of Ohio

An Incorporation with
over $10,000 in Assets

PURPOSE. To build a home for the aged and infirm of our church and an orphanage for our children.

Why not make it a National Home for the entire brotherhood? The Board of Trustees will present this proposition at National Conference this year.

Gifts, subscriptions and bequests solicited.

Information cheerfully given.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Ira Fudge, Gratis, Ohio, Pres.
Orion E. Bowman, V. Pres. and Atty.
Elmer Wombold, Secy.
1718 W. Monument Ave., Dayton, Ohio
Jesse A. Garver, Treas.
J. Allen Miller.

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 13

MARCH 26
1919

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE IS YOUR MASTER AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN -

ELDER J. M. TOMBAUGH, D. D. of Hagerstown, Maryland

Who begins in this issue a series of articles on the Sunday School Lessons

Dr. Tombaugh is widely known and loved wherever he is known

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

The Chief German Ally Still Demands Our Attention—Editor...	2	The Silent Hour—Delbert Whitmer,	9
Editorial Review,	3	God, Our Heavenly Father—Dr. J. M. Tombaugh,	10
Reports Are In—Dr. Charles A. Bame,	4	Four Month Program—Miss Pauline Lichty,	10
A Community Spirit as a Factor in Evangelism—G. T. Ronk, ..	5	Louisville Celebrates Christian Endeavor Week—Prof. J. A. Garber,	11
How to Teach Feet-Washing to Non-Brethren People—J. F. Garber,	6	A Successful Christian Endeavor Week—J. F. Painter,	11
The Bible and Great Writers—T. Darley Allen,	7	Symposium Brieflets: Why Evangelize,	12
Christianity Summed Up—Quinter Lyon,	7	News from the Field,	13-15
A Mother's Prayer (Sermon)—N. W. Jennings,	8	Business Manager's Corner—Dr. R. R. Teeter,	16

EDITORIAL

The Chief German Ally Still Demands Our Attention

Some of us had begun to think the temperance warfare was a dead issue. We were folding our arms and preparing to take our ease and to enjoy ourselves in peace. But the liquor traffic can no more be expected to submit meekly to its fate than can German militarism. And it is not submitting. Just as Prussianism wherever it shows itself is still true to its old arrogant spirit and malign character, so is alcoholism still as deceitful, malicious and traitorous as ever. It is still the true ally of the old Hunnish hordes.

In New York City this German ally does not propose to submit to a change in a federal constitution by the orderly processes of law, it proposes to resist constitutional processes by violence. It proposed a revolution, and that in the name of Bolshevism anarchy and a German trade. Buttons bearing the words, "No Beer, No Work," and "No Beer, No Bonds," were distributed among ignorant and malicious people for the purpose of exciting rebellion against the United States government and the constitution. They call loudly for "personal liberty," but their action is in violation of the wishes and liberties of the great majority of people. They make a direct assault upon true American liberties, American law and American order.

It is significant that this movement had its birth at Newark, New Jersey, the home of the United Brewers Association. Here the red nose and the red flag have united to bring down law and order and destroy manhood. They make most fitting companions, and readily agree upon a third confederate—anarchy. The red nose uses anarchy as a means to accomplish his end, while the red flag makes anarchy the desired end. This triumvirate unless hindered will produce the most terrible condition possible in an enlightened land like America. We have known much of the vicious character and ravaging effects of the liquor traffic, but we have not known much of his new ally, Bolshevism. This is one of the greatest moral issues before the American people today. Bolshevism wrecks from the man who has worked hard and saved hard all that he has and gives it to the ne'er-do-well. It makes of his daughter a plaything at the call of any man. It eliminates large classes from participation in government. It wars against the church and all religion. In its train stalk famine, nakedness, murder and lust. And this is the very thing that has come to walk arm in arm with the deposed King Alcohol.

Bolshevism is inducing certain laboring classes to attempt to influence legislation by strikes and to balk the duly expressed will of the people by violence. It is reported that the Essex county (New Jersey) Building Trades Council has adopted the slogan, "No Beer, No Work," and is enlisting workmen for a general strike on July 1st to force nullification of the prohibition law. This proposed "strike" is not a strike; it is rebellion. It would be a libel to say that these traitorous rebels represent honest labor. Wherever prohibition has been adopted working men have supported the law. These are low-browed men who have been incited to action by the Brewer's Association.

A situation like that is a matter of concern to the church as well as to the government. Bolshevism, Prussianism and alcoholism are all enemies of the church as well as of the state. They hinder its purity, power and progress. They make men to hate the church and cause them to disregard both morals and religion. They lead men to be enemies to the state and to despise law and order. Against such a combination of vicious influences the church cannot but take its stand, and both speak and act boldly and promptly.

This treacherous and traitorous attitude and spirit of the liquor traffic is showing itself in Ohio very conspicuously just now. A great majority of the people have decided that the liquor business shall no longer be tolerated in the state, and have set May 27 as the date for its dismissal. The state legislature has been trying to enact legislation that will make possible the enforcement of the people's wishes. But the "wet" legislators and lobbyists of the liquor traffic have succeeded thus far in frustrating the "personal liberties of the majority of the people by preventing the passage of the emergency clause which would have made the prohibition enforcement law effective immediately and prevented a referendum. Now the "wets" are planning a referendum on this bill that provides for the enforcement of prohibition. Unless the house reverses its action on reconsideration, there will be no enforcement of prohibition until after November. This presents an opportunity for the church to exercise its influence. If all the churches would vote to request their members of the legislature to stand square on this prohibition enforcement legislation, and if every individual who believes in the triumph of the right would make a similar request, there would be a great influence wielded that would make the needed legislation possible. Why not put your Christian principles into practice by combating in an effective way this greatest organized enemy of the church today?

Everywhere in the land vigilance will need to be exercised by the church and her constituted agencies for the combatting of the liquor evil. This octopus is under the ban of the government, but it can no more be trusted to submit to the people's will and make a prompt and orderly exit than could Prussianism be trusted to leave Europe when conquered. To vote the saloon out of business or to legislate against it without making provision for law enforcement does not get us anywhere. And after providing for law enforcement, we must keep up an educational agitation to see that laws are strictly enforced. We must allow no let up in our vigilance and effort until the last vestige of the traffic has disappeared.

Mr. Bryan illustrates in a graphic way, the attitude we must take toward the liquor traffic. He says, "While in Arizona, I saw the peeniar bird called the road-runner, and I learned that when he meets a rattlesnake, instead of having a bloody encounter with him, he begins to pick off the cactus and surrounds the snake with a circle of cactus picees; then he picks them up piece by piece and places them closer to the snake, until the poisonous reptile is shut in a close place, and unable to cross the cactus hedge, he stings himself to death. That is what we are doing with the liquor traffic that biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder. We are shutting him up in close quarters in a few wet cities and a few backward states, and in this close confinement we are going to let him sting himself to death."

But we must keep putting the thorns of law enforcement in closer and closer to this traffic until there will be no place left for existence. He will die hard, but his death is necessary to the welfare of the race and the church. We must not cease our struggle with him until he is completely dead; we must not compromise with the Canaanites that remain in the land. This most vicious, ruinous and law-breaking organized force in the land today must be exterminated. Let us not rest before the battle is completely won, before the monster is fully dead, the burial permit is signed and he is put out of sight.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Everybody will be interested in Brother Bame's report on our reports; that is, if we reported. Read it anyway, it will do you good.

"Religion is, not by accident or chance, but by its own very nature, the happiest of all lives. Just so far as it ever grows sad and gloomy, it grows irreligious."

Brother Painter, president of the Christian Endeavor society of Louisville, makes an interesting report of Christian Endeavor Week services. We are proud of the "live wires" we have at Louisville, of which Brother Painter is a good sample.

Brother Anderson of the Dutchtown-College Corner charge offers his services in an evangelistic campaign to any church in Northern Indiana or Michigan unable to hire an evangelist. This is an opportunity for some church in need of help. Write him at Warsaw, Indiana.

Brother G. C. Carpenter calls for a speeding up of the payment of pledges to the Kentucky Mission support. Perhaps it never occurred to you that when pledges are not paid the salaries of our missionaries cannot be paid. Do it now. Read Brother Carpenter's report.

The young church of Mountain View, Virginia, seems to have been doing some splendid work. They have not only been growing in numbers, but have been strengthening the forces they have. It is not every church its size that is as well organized as is Brother Patterson's congregation at Mountain View.

We have a very interesting report from Brother Bell of his visit of the churches of Southern California. We feel more acquainted with these churches after reading this interesting sketch. Brother Bell promises us a report of the churches of Northern California soon which he has visited.

Sister A. B. Cover calls our attention to an error occurring in an item inserted in the Christian Endeavor page two weeks ago. We classed Maryland as one of the three tiny states that have not yet ratified the Federal Prohibition Amendment and we are glad to correct the error and state that Maryland, though a wet state, ratified in February, 1918, by the house on the 8th and by the senate on the 13th. It is Connecticut that must take her place with New Jersey and Rhode Island. How the mistake occurred we are unable to say, as the same bulletin used in correcting this error, we had when the original item was written.

As we go to press Dean J. Allen Miller makes inquiry if there are any Brethren families in Colorado desiring preaching. A student-minister who is compelled to go to Colorado on account of the ill-health of his little daughter would be willing to serve small groups of Brethren if such could be found. Any such Brethren should correspond with Dr. Miller at Ashland, Ohio.

From this incident we observe that there is at least one who really reads The Evangelist that one of our readers keeps in touch with the temperance situation, and that she is interested in the good name of her state, for she said, "We Marylanders are indignant." We don't blame you, Sister Cover, we would be, too, if any one would attempt to give Ohio a worse reputation than what she has.

After reading the splendid report of Brother Herman Roscoe, Secretary of the Board of Benevolences, you will be impressed with the fact that we have the right man in the right place, and that all our offerings given for the supernumerary ministers will be carefully handled. But say, are you not a little disappointed at seeing so many blank spaces following the names of churches? Suppose you put some figures there.

Miss Pauline Lichty, the live wire superintendent of the Waterloo Sunday school gives a report of the Four Month Contest, in so far as reports have been sent to her. That report would have been so much more interesting if all who accepted the challenge had reported. Say, folks, if we haven't got such a good report, let's make it anyway. If we lose, Let's be good losers. But no one has lost who has put in some good hard effort.

Dr. J. M. Tombaugh begins the series of articles on the Sunday school lessons for the second quarter in this issue. These articles will be of more than usual interest, both because of the writer and because of the intensely vital subjects. The subject of this article is "God our Heavenly Father." These articles are not to be "notes," but general treatments of these great themes. Read every one on the Sunday school page.

It will keep you busy for a while reading the splendid report of Brother Roscoe, secretary of the Board of Benevolences. The report is a splendid one, but some churches have a lot of white space showing following their names. But some have been very mindful of the needs of the dear old brethren whose welfare this fund is to secure. Does your church care whether the veteran ministers of the Brethren church are cared for as they should be? We have no way of judging your concern except by your offering.

The report from Powersville, Missouri, gives us the impression that there are some very faithful Brethren out there, folks who know how to stand alone. It is encouraging to hear from these little groups of Brethren people where they have little or no pastoral care and to know of their faithfulness to Brethren doctrines though not permitted to fellowship with Brethren people. One secret of the zeal of this little group, the only church in Missouri, is the fact that they are readers of The Evangelist. Brother Ronk is coming in touch with some fine people in his big parish. His parish paper is no doubt a great help in keeping his scattered flock faithful.

Next week will be Foreign Missionary Number, and it will have in it some things of interest, too. Of course you will find no small amount of missionary flavor in this number. An interesting letter from Brother C. F. Yoder of Rio Cuarto, Argentina, brings good news about the progress of the mission. They experienced a very good revival and among the new members received were Brother Yoder's two daughters. The Sunday school is one of which they may well be proud. The whole church is well organized, and all the auxiliaries are flourishing. But think of going on an outing around about Christmas time. It would seem pretty cold here wouldn't it? Brother Gribble also has a message in this issue. We find they are encouraged by messages from the homeland. Let us not forget to send them an encouraging word occasionally. Brother Gribble expresses hope of being permitted to continue their journey into Ubangi-Shari, the place where they are more and more convinced they should do their work.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

Reports Are In

Does it surprise you to hear that the reports have stopped coming? Well, they have; but they did keep coming for a good long time in response to this call. That would be good news, if I did not tell you in a later paragraph that not near all that ought to have come, appeared. We still seem to have some pastors who have better judgment than all the rest together. Some who deem themselves wiser than the whole conference. Some who think they are so spirit-led that they can not be directed by a conference along right lines. God pity them! They need a sermon and if they read this page as they ought, they will get some of it. If there were anything in this program that were contrary to the gospel or to the growth of the church, then church leaders might keep themselves aloof from the denomination of which they are a part and from which they expect favors. But there is not. No possible construction can be put on this program but that it is in line with the demand of the times and of the gospel. Many think, with me that it is too small; too brief; too circumscribed, but that need not limit a pastor or church leader from doing his bit toward it and thus encouraging the progress of the church in all the departments there represented.

Apologies to —?

No, apologies "for." Some of the apologies of District Keymen are not publishable. But scarce a man on the "Spiritual State of the Churches" for they are the District Keymen, but has had to apologize in some form for lazy or indigent people who do not report. Some tell why they do not. Others report that the work of getting reports is like a surgical operation. One good brother says, "This is not good as last year but it is the best I could do. But do not make me the goat." This is your justification, my dear fellow. You can see who is being made the goat. Another says, "I am ashamed of this report, but do not think it is my fault. We all know it has been a hard year but they might have reported something." That is not your fault, either brother—. Sure it is not. These folks—most of them—read the same paper you do; they acknowledge fealty to the same God and the same church but—well, but—. They ought to be ashamed and I wish they might accept a challenge to tell why they make you ashamed.

Better Yet

But this one is the climax. "Some of our preachers will be too slow for the resurrection if I do not miss my guess. It is simply a job to extract—"Extract," mind you—reports from— and — and — (names of 3 preachers). Of course it is hard to get reports from some of the smaller and withering churches. I am writing to some of them the third time. Well, brother, this has been a testing time and we need to be much at prayer in our larger activities. I noticed your last appeal in the Evangelist, and can say "amen" to every word of it, yet do not think your crosses are too heavy to bear when you think of the Master's sacrifice. You are right in your appeal but things will come out O. K." Now, that is optimism, right sure. It did me a lot of good to get those good words but the sad fact is that some of it is not true. This Program can not come out right without reports and he did not get near all the reports the state should have given.

Reports Are "IT"

Did you think that you could get your part of the Program without giving a report? Then you are mistaken. Part of the Program is reporting. What an inspiration to every lover of Ashland are the weekly risings of the Thermometer! It does us all good to see what the churches are doing, there. Do you not think that it will do just as much good to see all the "yellow" off the charts at the next conference. You know that "yellow" is the color of those who do not report.

Going "Daffy"

Now, I imagine that some one is saying that Bame is going "daffy" on this report business. Well, Bame does not care much what more is said about him. The Greeks thought that the preaching of the cross was foolishness but that did not make it so. I once heard the late J. Wilbur Chapman say he would gladly "stand on his head to preach" if he could convert as many people as "Billy" Sunday. Be sure that Bame is not deaf nor dumb yet. I hear and think and know what some are saying but it is not my program; I did not foist it; promote it; vote it. I was elected to try to get it finished by 1920 and all that I can do to get it I'll do. But what you must do, I can not do. I have pleaded, coaxed, cajoled, prayed, and now, I presume some will say I have scolded, but I challenge you to find anything more to the point along that line than some of the District Directors have said in this report. (None will ever know either who said which unless they betray themselves).

Man's inhumanity to man,

Makes countless thousands mourn."—Burns.

But the Committee is asking just what will keep yourselves and themselves from being ashamed in 1920; that's all. If the Lord tarry till that date, will you not want to be among that large conference that will celebrate the victory for Christ that four years of concentrated and consecrated effort will surely bring? Well, so be it.

See How It Looks

I am in the midst of a revival and therefore can not give all the analysis to this report that I ought. But that will come later. This is your picture for this mid-winter report:

District	Congregations	Reports	Per cent reporting	Order
Kanemorado,	18	7	39	First
Ohio,	35	24	70	Second
North California, . .	6	5	83	Third
Indiana,	40	29	72	Fourth
Illiokota	24	11	45	Fifth
South California, . .	6	6	100	Seventh
Pennsylvania,	40	12	30	Eighth

Of course there were, also, explanations why some states did not report sooner. But I can not go into that now. The basis for the number of congregations was the last issued Annual. I am sure that there are congregations named there that exist only in name but that can not be known by a man no more acquainted with all the districts than I am. I am glad to state that a number of pastors listened to my despairing cry and sent reports direct to me. This I do not want to happen again. I hereby serve warning. This was all "on account of the flu" and must not be made a precedent. The next report will show a fuller analysis I hope, of our present standing, by Brother Goughnour, our Secretary, who is good at "seeing through things like that.

I hope all congregations will get busy at once ere the working season opens, with revival efforts so that the harvest of this year will not go un-reaped. Congregations should not be slow to loan their pastors for a "drive" for converts in every congregation. AT ONCE. BAME.

GENERAL ARTICLES

A Community Spirit as a Factor in Evangelism. By G. T. Ronk

The church of Jesus Christ is a community of saints. It is the society of the comrades of Jesus, who have fellowship with him in his sufferings, his ideals, his plans, his work and his inheritance. This community dwells within a larger community of men, some of whom are outspoken enemies of Jesus and what he stands for, some are adherents, some are fugitives, some are renegads, some are imitators, some are substitutes,—all live under a civilization that like a light veneer covers barbarian passions and animosities, lusts and meanness. This carnality seems unchanged through the ages, if we are to believe Alfred Russel Wallace, the evolutionist, who confessed that in five thousand years of human history he could see no improvement in man; or if we are to believe Paul, the apostle, that man is carnal, sold under sin. It appears in the Bolshevik, smashing the law to seize (nationalize) women or in a university professor, discrediting the law, to live in free-love, both, whether in violence or in suavity, showing the same wild blood of the fathers.

In such a community, whether in Milpitas or Podunek, whether in Illinois, Argentine or Soudan, the church community flourishes and into such a community it projects its campaign to win souls from the community of what-you-ought. Let it be noted right here that unless there is present the sense of opposition, of conflict, of difference, between two ideals, there will be no evangelization. Your universalist, character-salvation, social-solidarity preacher may deceive himself, may dazzle a few substitutes, may "flim-flam" into qualified assent a few renegades, but he will receive only the jeers of your honest-hearted barbarian, who, whatever he may lack in historical bewilderment (called perspective) at least sees quite steadily and clearly, is tired of what he has and isn't looking for the same thing under a new name.

It is an elemental principal of pedagogy to begin with the pupil where he is, then lead him to where he ought to be. This is also a fundamental law of sermonizing, shown by a skillful introduction. Many an otherwise good preacher is ruined because he does not know where to begin—and quit. It is one of the secrets of successful evangelism to find early where the community lives mentally and let them know it. If the evangelist is a social theorist, bound for Utopia under the present world order, apologetic for human frailty as a transitory thing, he may receive pretty compliments but your typical citizen of the community will laugh in his sleeve, for he knows better; he knows how rotten human society is and is likely to be.

In spite of the opposition between the two communities, the church community is the center of a profound respect if it has been uncompromising in its ideals and life. It will find ready to hand for a special campaign all that is best in the general community. A general community spirit can be invoked which will bring under the preaching of the gospel some of the most indifferent elements of society as well as the best. The church will in turn give back to the general community transformed spirits who will be an aid in those great ameliorations which human society has so successively built up and as successively smashed in the wild orgies of change, as history repeats itself.

Practical Methods

The press, dodgers, banners, announcements and tracts can furnish the initial steps in enlisting the community spirit back of a campaign. In all these the cardinal point is observance of the laws of suggestion. One thing can be taken for granted: the community underneath its giddy round of pleasure, its cruel Moloch of vice, its hollow compliments of convention, its stolid exterior, is concealing a heart of pain, bitterness, emptiness, dreariness, and hopelessness of self as well as disgust with self and the race. Art and literature have sought to conceal this but the record of the ages is written so. Our own with its high sounding programs and paeans of triumph, is no less so; and its most radical community Utopians are the certain victims of their own moral obliquity almost in proposition to their enthusiasm. Never, since the early days of Christianity, have the masses of the race been so disillusioned as now. Then, as now, a widely disseminated philosophy of the power and worth of man had run its course only to show how empty are pretensions to real worth by man. Then it was the wise man of Hellenistic-Roman philosophy that found himself out; now it is the superman of evolutionary Germanophile philosophy and theology who has been revealed in all his shame. Then, as now, there was but one course for the heart-sick and weary people; that was to turn to a higher help than man. They have been sensing it for long; now they know it. Evangelistic publicity must take advantage of it.

The copy for such suggestions must be worked out locally. The point made here is that the people are in need, and they know it, in spite of the pretense. They have a longing for the genuine joy that God has planned for his children and more than a hint as to where it is to come from. Too many evangelistic efforts are advertised about the personality of man. Certainly we must have advertising; that is the theme of this article; but there is more drawing power in the simple invitation to come out and hear the good, old gospel than in all the eloquence, learning, degrees and logic that can be paraded before a community. Men are sin-sick; sound suggestion will emphasize the cure and not the doctor—he is an incident; if he can remain so throughout the campaign he is a great physician indeed.

Above, it was said that the products of the press furnish the initial steps in enlisting community spirit. Note that it is initial steps only. After the first hearing it is purely a matter of whether the community is getting that which it recognizes as genuine for its heart-ache.

1. Inner power: the masses of the people are adept at sensing what their souls need. There must be power, the power of a man of prayer, not of theories; that which convicts the heart, not that which convinces the intellect. All that devotion which calls the whole community to the feet of the soldier, singer, law-giver or other community savior is given to that man who can by the power of God dissolve doubts, burn in sayings, resurrect hope, salvage despair, and demonstrate the living power of the living God in the hearts of a community. No imposter can do this, the opinions of some people to the contrary notwithstanding.

2. External authority: the people want the power of the word of God. The writer is not afraid of the increase of the destructive critic, character salvation, social evolutionist crowd; were they dependent on evangelism or missionary work they would pass out in a generation; their only hope is in proselyting on the results of sound evangelism. The hopeless world will have only the authoritative Word that has vindicated itself on many a bloody field through the ages, and still stands amid all the fluctuations of changing philosophies. Your community can be reached only through the genuine. This explains the success of union evangelism where the people, tired of husks, rally to the man with a message in spite of his idiosyncrasies. Many a fair sized city has no other way to hear the real gospel today except from a John the Baptist with his locusts and wild honey.

3. Judgment preaching: many a youth leaves the seminary with fair theories of preaching naught but the love of God and finds that his genius is but anathema, his fair platitudes and compliments but a community joke. He isn't dealing with facts as the people know them too well. The community needs judgment preached on its sins as it needs quarantine, disinfectants, constables, courts, jails, reformatories and asylums. The community knows it and if the preacher doesn't and is afraid of the operating table it will have none of him. On the contrary the community will rally, to a man, around him who is laboring for the quickening of its conscience and the warning of its young. It smacks of law and order. You can no more preach the gospel without hell than you can maintain the law without jails; and the great, sensible, disillusioned masses, who make this world what it is, know it.

The community spirit is back of the success of modern evangelism even where the church community has kicked down its own walls and filled up its own wells of salvation to drink of the public cisterns—broken cisterns, of vain philosophy and deceit which are abroad in the world. He is a foolish preacher who fails to profit by it and who lacks the courage to appeal to it even over the heads of an apostate church. The great, lost multitudes who know too well the foul contents of their own witches' caldron, may not hearken, but they are glad for the truth and receive it with respect, as a reminder of the fixed order in which they do not choose to live. As the word of God demonstrated with the power of the living God, judging sin and the hollowness of human pretense, heads up in the atoning blood of the cross of him who is Master of death, hell and the grave, it vindicates itself as the greatest invoker of general community spirit in the world today. And at that, rights, wrongs, engenders kindness, promotes justice, advances morality, inspires service, checks crime, spreads fellowship, abolishes poverty, relieves oppressions. That gospel of the cross is at once the greatest social program in the world and the great power in human relations making for progress. It is at once the great evangelistic program and the power that makes community spirit possible as a factor in evangelism. Mottoes, circulars, dodgers, banners are a futile jest where that is absent.

Leon, Iowa.

How to Teach Feet-Washing to Non-Brethren People. By J. F. Garber

1st. Teach obedience to all of Christ's commands.

If we expect to be successful in teaching feet-washing to non-Brethren people we must first educate them up to the point where they will recognize the fact that our Savior came to earth on a great mission, and that he had no time to throw away on non-essentials.

Every command and every precept that he gave are a part of the great plan of salvation that he left the courts of heaven, and came to earth to give a sinful man. And all should admit that he expected his followers to fit their lives into this great plan of salvation, by obedience to each and every command, when they read the significant words that he uttered along this line. He said, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" And again, "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Read Matthew 7:24-27.

Yet in the face of all this testimony, there are those who claim to know the Master and abide in him, and at the same time scoff at the idea of obedience to his commands. To such John would say, "He that saith I know him, and keepeth not his commandments is a liar and the truth is not in him; but whoso keepeth his Word, in him verily is the love of God perfected. Hereby know we that we are in him." "He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also to walk even as he walked."

2nd. Humility is Essential to Salvation

I never preach that feet-washing is essential to salvation (Christ did not say that it was). But the spirit of humility, which results from the sincere observance of this as well as all other church ordinances instituted by our Lord, is essential to salvation. We are taught in the Book that "God resisteth the proud but giveth grace to the humble." Also, Jesus said, "Whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted."

It seems that the purpose of the whole plan of salvation is to take out of us that proud and haughty spirit that is so much at variance with the spirit of our Master and create in its stead a meek and humble spirit, that will help us to love our enemies, and be willing to stoop to the most humble service for others. In other words "the great divine aim is to 'clothe us with humility.'"

3rd. Obedience is the Offspring of Love

If the first two propositions have been successfully presented, an appeal to obedience on the grounds of love ought to touch the heart of any one who really desires to be a true follower of our Lord and Master. He said, "If ye love me keep my commandments," also "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me,"

All real obedience is the outgrowth of love; obedience that is compelled is not true obedience.

A mother says to her son Sunday morning, "Son, father and I are going to Sunday school today and you ought to go too; for we are trying to set a good example that you should follow." But the son reasons within himself and says, "It is not necessary for me to go to Sunday school; I can be good without it." After father and mother are gone to Sunday school, he goes fishing with some of the neighbor boys. The next day you hear him telling his mother how much he loves her. But does he really love her?

Jesus said "If a man love me he will keep (obey) my words." True love waits not to be commanded, but simply asks, "What is thy will?"

We cannot get around the fact that it is the will of the Master that his followers should practice the ordinance of feet-washing, for after setting the example, he said, "Ye call me Master and Lord, and ye say well, for so I am; If I then your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet; for I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you."

The Master here not only makes it plain that it is his will that we should observe the ordinance of feet-washing, but puts a moral obligation on us to do so by the use of the words ought, and should. He then shows us how inconsistent we would be to refuse to follow his example by saying, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the servant is not greater than his Lord; neither he that is sent, greater than he that sent him." "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

Usually the real truth seeker, the one that really wants to know and do the will of Christ, will not hesitate to accept this as a part of the Master's plan of salvation to all people, when it has been properly explained to them. But occasionally you will find some good conscientious people that contend that feet-washing was intended just for the apostles. To such I always quote from Matthew 28:19-20, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." The Master here commands the apostles to teach the baptized ones, to observe all things whatsoever he commanded them. If the apostles were to observe feet-washing, then we are to observe it also, if we are the baptized ones.

Weidon, Iowa.

Can't-do-it sticks in the mud, but Try soon drags the wagon out of the rut. Believe in God and stiek to hard work, and see if the mountains are not removed.—Spurgeon.

The Bible and Great Writers. By T. Darley Allen

In reading the biographies of men who have achieved distinction in literature one cannot help being impressed by the fact that very few fail to express indebtedness to the Bible or to recommend it as the best of all books for study by aspiring writers.

Hall Caine found his inspiration for "The Deemster" in the parable of the Prodigal Son, and "The Manxman," he asserts, is his version of the Biblical account of David and Uriah.

Nathaniel Hawthorne said that the Bible and "The Pilgrim's Progress," the latter the work of one who owed everything to the study of scripture, were his chief sources of inspiration. And Washington Irving said: "I think I have waked a good many sleeping fancies by the reading of a chapter of Isaiah."

Abraham Lincoln, whose Gettysburg address is one of the masterpieces in our language, was a constant reader of the Bible, not only in his later years, says Professor Harwood T. Pattison, but "when he worked, a barefooted boy in the field, and there are passages in his last inaugural which sound as though he penned them just after rising from his sleep."

It has been well said: "Could Job and David, Isaiah and Ezekiel, muster their literary children only, could the evangelists and Paul summon from our shelves the volumes which have sprung from their kindling words, we should find ourselves in the midst of a vast and radiant host."

To a correspondent who wrote to an editor, not long ago, for advice on how to write, the editor recommended the scriptures, because "there is no better style of expression and simplicity of language than our King James version of the Bible. It is the best English in the world."

To this book which, as Faber tells us, with its wonderful beauty and marvelous English, is as music that can never be forgotten "so that its felicities often seem to be almost things rather than words," the nation is probably more indebted for whatever power the readers of our day may have for appreciation of well-written English than it is aware.

As Professor Pattison asks, "Who shall say how the public reading of this book has trained the people of England and America to a knowledge of melody and to a love of harmonious prose?"

Rev. Charles E. Park well says of the Old Testament, that "to be ignorant of it is to be uneducated. When John Keats refers in one of his most beautiful poems to 'Ruth standing breast high amidst the alien corn,' or when Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, in one of his most forceful political speeches, talks about going forth to Armageddon, both are trusting their auditors to get the full value of these allusions from their own knowledge of the Old Testament."

And when we consider how so many of our public men constantly exhibit a knowledge of the Bible, showing that their thought and language are influenced largely by this book, can we fail to realize that it is indeed the best of text-books for aspiring writers?

Champ Clark has said: "When I was a boy I wouldn't read the Bible. I began to read it almost by accident as a youth, and I have been at it ever since. I found it a mine of wonderful thoughts and inspirations wonderfully expressed."

Samuel Smiles, the noted author of "Self Help," said that he never studied any text-book on rhetoric but read well-written books in his endeavor to learn the art of expression. One of the great universities has gone on record as against the plan, once so prevalent in our higher institutions of learning, of depending upon text-books as the chief means of teaching English and now recommends the reading of the best literature as the desirable method of acquiring an adequate knowledge of writing the language.

Ernest Thompson Seton says: "There has never been a great writer who was not more or less influenced by the Bible," and Meredith Nicholson, the well-known author, once said to the students of Washash College: "Read the King James version of the Bible, if you desire to cultivate the directness and conciseness necessary to become a successful story writer." And as everyone desires to be able to express his thoughts as well as possible, whether aspiring to enter the literary or journalistic field or not, he will not ignore the testimony of those whose opinion is most valuable that the Bible is the book that best repays study by those who seek to know how to express their thoughts with clearness and with force.

Cleveland, Ohio.

Christianity Summed Up. By Quinter Lyon

Probably the greatest of all scripture is the passage with which Matthew closes his gospel (Matt. 28:18-20). It is the passage which made the Gentiles rejoice. Without this command to go to the uttermost parts of the earth and preach, or tell the good news of eternal life as a gift, we would still be in darkness and unsaved, for the Gospel would have remained with Israel. It has been the road over which all the good tidings of God's glorious Word has traveled to the ends of the earth. Thank God for this command.

In spite of the fact that this command has brought about our own salvation, sometimes we do not appreciate its meaning. It is through the obedience of others to this command that we have heard the Word and have been made glad. But some people fail to realize that, having ourselves hard, we should see to it that others hear. Remember that the commission reads, "teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you," and further, the commandment says, "Go, teach all nations." In the light, therefore, of this great commission should the whole Christian life be interpreted and viewed. The Christian life is the sacrificial life, the selfless life. Having once heard, we leave self behind, and run to tell others the "good news."

This is the time of year when, above all other times, we stress the importance of foreign missions, and we cannot lay too much stress upon that work. If some of us would lay self aside and honestly consider God's will in our own lives from the standpoint of existing conditions and the pleadings of unsaved millions in heathen darkness waiting for the Word that God sent to them but which has never been delivered. I believe we would find some startling changes in our Christian attitude and plans.

Yet it is wrong to think that if we are not a foreign missionary we are not carrying out God's will as revealed in the great commission. Everything that we do can be made to count towards fulfilling this command. That part of our substance which we give for the maintenance of foreign missions and home missions gives us a small part in carrying it out. When we open our pocketbooks for the support of our own town church we are helping to carry it out. When we do work in city missions and slum districts we are helping, and when we are teaching a Sunday school class we are doing something. Remember that, according to Luke's record, the Lord said, "Preach the gospel to every creature." Perhaps we have come in contact with someone everyday for years who has never heard us open our mouths on this subject of salvation. Speak to the man next to you. When you neglect to teach him you ignore the great commission.

But some will say, "I cannot give money, and I do not know how to talk." Turn to Matthew 25:15, and notice that the Lord has given talents to men "according to their several ability." Will anyone say he has no ability at all, which the all-powerful God can develop within him? Many people decide at the very beginning that they cannot do

(Continued on page 9)

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

A Mother's Prayer

(This is the gist of a sermon preached by our pastor, N. W. Jennings, on the evening of Feb. 16, 1919. Subject, Mother's Prayer. TEXT: Matthew 15:25, "Lord help me," and a part of verse 22, "Have mercy on me, Lord." Reported by Fern E. McClain, Los Angeles, California.)

The prayer is short—only three words, but worlds of meaning are couched in it.

I believe in short prayers for public and prayers as long as the Mississippi River for the closet. The Publican's prayer was very short, "God be merciful to me a sinner." And he was justified over and above the man who offered the long selfish prayer.

The poor dying thief's prayer was a very short prayer, "Lord when thou comest into Thy Kingdom, remember me." I haven't time to tell you all about it. Thou knowest all about it, death is here, "Lord remember me."

The blind man's prayer was short, "Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me."

"Lord help me." Her daughter was vexed with a devil, and her own soul vexed with overwhelming sorrow. It was a very deep cry of a broken hearted mother, in behalf of her daughter whose life was tormented with a devil.

She did not try to cover up the sins of her own daughter as some mothers do; she was willing to acknowledge that her daughter had a devil in her. And I tell you that they are in many daughters and sons, and even in parents. A mother said to me sometime ago, "I want you to take my daughter into the church. She has been a Christian all her life; all she needs is to be baptized into the church." I said, "Mother, Jesus says she needs more; he says she must be born again."

"Lord help." She was helpless, but she made a wise choice. She went to the God-Fountain for help, THE SON OF GOD. Many times we have to lose all we have, like the Prodigal, before we go to the heavenly source. And many people never pray until they get in a sea of trouble up to the neck. An alarming disease lays hold on some loved one in the home—the doctors exhaust their skill, and when nothing more can be done then they turn to God, the God of all mercy, but he is the last resort to many. And it is a burning shame. Oh may God forgive us.

Listen, what beautiful words! "Lord help me!" "Have mercy on me, Lord!" Her soul traveled in agony for the life birth of her daughter. It was a soul-ery for mercy. "Have mercy on me!" Well, thank God she stood before worlds of mercy, THE BLESSED CHRIST. Rivers of mercy were all around her. Wherever Jesus is, outstretching seas of mercy roll around all the mountains of his love.

He is a merciful Savior even when we sin sore against him. Think of men and women living seventy-five years in sin—sinning every step of the way against the Son of God, THE LAMB OF MERCY. I have seen his mercy sweep over souls seventy, yes, eighty years in sin and his love melt them down in penitential tears, in answer to prayer. Mothers, don't neglect to step up before the throne of loving grace and call on God in the name of Jesus to have mercy upon your sons and daughters.

He is merciful in death. He does not treat us as we treated him; we nailed him to the cross. He takes the spikes out of our bleeding wounds and pours in heavenly oil of forgiveness and salvation, and lifts us up in his loving arms, and we take our exit from earth to glory with him. A merciful Savior in death: "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise."

This cry came from a mother who was a native of Canaan, a people despised by the Jews and looked upon as dogs. Perhaps the poor woman had heard that Jesus had said, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out," and notwithstanding the fact that she was looked upon as a dog in the eyes of the world, she believed in the light of the Master's own word that if she would go to him he would have mercy and not cast her out.

She steps into his loving presence, no doubt, trembling, and, with all the reverence that her poor soul possessed, looking him in the face, she cried, "Have mercy on me Lord." But Jesus "Answered her not a word. No doubt her cry was unbroken, "Have mercy, have mercy, have mercy on me, Lord," until it seems that she sent a shock through the nervous system of the disciples, for they cried out saying, "Send her away." But she worshipped him, perhaps falling on her knees at his feet looking him up in the face she cried, "Lord help me." I like that darling promise, "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you."

This mother would not give up until the blessing sought for was received. The silent Christ was moved to answer. "It is not meet to take the children's bread and give it to the dogs. And she said, "Truth, Lord, yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table." Then Jesus answered and said unto her, "O woman, great is thy faith, be it unto thee even as thou wilt." And her daughter was made whole from that very hour. I dare say an unworled song of gratitude welled up in her heart. "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine, O what a foretaste of glory divine." Someone may ask why Jesus did not answer her at first? You may say she was in need of help. Well, ask Jesus. I answer in this way: God must know some things that we need not know now, "But shall know hereafter." Just so he answers prayer and gives his blessing. What is it to us if "he tarry?"

I know a good woman who prayed for her drunken husband for forty-four years. He died at the age of about seventy-five years, but that good praying wife had the joy of seeing him take his stand for Jesus and boldly confess him as his personal Savior from sin before he left her to meet the Son of God. And so did I, for I was right there; it caused great joy in God's house among his people. I tell you God answers prayer. He takes great delight in your unworthy prayers and mine and makes them worthy because we offer them in the name of Jesus our loving Savior, his Son.

Let us spend much time in prayer. Prayer is the King's highway to the white throne, and heart of God. Pray with both arms locked around the foot of the cross and a golden chariot will come down the King's shining way and gather up your prayers and convey them to the God of all mercy.

It is heaven to the soul to feed it on prayer. Prayer begets a new birth in the soul and puts in motion God's thoughts in man. The same God who clothes the world with nature and hangs upon the curtains of the world in variety a thousand different pictures dipped in streams of a thousand colors, but all streams of love, can and will hang on the shoulders of your soul and mine, in answer to prayer, the white robe of immortality. Prayer gives a grand richness to the soul and puts more and more the likeness of Jesus in the life.

"Have mercy on me, Lord." Thank God he did. He is merciful in life, in death, and he will be merciful in the day of judgment. Dear Jesus would rather acquit you than to condemn you. I believe he will give then, as now, every advantage possible. He is impartial now and merciful. He is just, now, so will he be just and merciful in that great day.

Let us confess him now before men and in that day—that great day—we will realize his own promise, "I will confess you before my Father and the angels in heaven." May he not be ashamed of one of us in that day. If he is, we will be ruined forever, "Lord help."

OUR DEVOTIONAL

The Silent Hour

By Delbert Whitmer

Our Scripture

"And when he had sent the multitudes away he went up into a mountain apart to pray: and when the evening was come he was there alone." Matt. 14:23.

Our Meditation

The busy day is ended. The shades of evening invite to repose. The gathering darkness woos the soul to meditation. How solemn is the night! The stars that look down upon us from their serene heights rebuke our fretfulness, and our undue absorption in the trivial concerns of this transitory life. They speak to us of that fair world where sin never blights, where death never invades, and where no shadow of sorrow falls.

Let me, like the Master, retire a while to solitude and give myself to meditation and prayer. Oh the quiet, holy joy of the silent hour, when the soul is alone with God. Have you learned to love this hour, dear reader? If not, you have yet to attain to one of the purest and sweetest pleasures possible to a Christian in this life. And our souls need the silent hour.

Every day should have its quiet moments, when alone with God, the soul may meditate, with deep and silent awe, on everlasting things. This habit of reverential intimacy with God imparts that spiritual tone, that sensitiveness of conscience, that realization of divine presence, so essential to the molding of beauty of character.

Shut in from the noise and scenes of the busy world, in the solitude of our closet, we can better give ourselves over to holier thoughts. Have we not time to spend an hour with God? No time to get ready for eternity? Oh, how thoughtlessly the great mass of human beings are rushed on to eternity! Pressed by the demands of business, society, pleasure, how seldom do we take a quiet hour for reflection on our spiritual state and destiny.

Perhaps it is not until the heavy hand of affliction is laid upon them that they pause in the mad pursuit of the world's prizes and pleasures, to commune with God. And even then they find little enjoyment in these moments of introspection; so unaccustomed are they to being alone with God and their own conscience. It is like sitting in a strange room with strange company. The godless and the unthinking dislike to be alone. They have no company in their own thoughts and know not how to commune with their own hearts. The giddy crowd, the unseemly jest, the hollow laughter of gay companions—these have far more attraction for them than thoughts about God, eternity, their own souls, their duty or their destiny. They relish more the society of the devotees of pleasure, than of those whose delight is in the law of the Lord."

It cannot be denied that many professed Christians are living poor, lean, unscriptural and unspiritual lives, without any real relish for God's word, or for prayer, because of their habitual neglect of private meditation, self-examination and secret communion with God. And for this neglect few of them can give any better excuse than the lack of time. There is time to look after the condition of the farm, the stock, the shop, the office, but no time to inquire into the condition of the soul and its fitness for eternity. Can there be any greater delusion or self-deception than this? Is it not clearly one of the devices of Satan?

It is time that all such people awaken from their slumber, and betake themselves to self-examination and prayer. Oh that every reader of these lines would resolve that, henceforth, in the midst of daily duties, the lone (not lonely) hour with God shall have its place. Such a custom once universally established would work a glorious revolution in individual character, in family life, and in every department of Christian activity. It would fill the empty pews, increase the Sunday school, crowd the mid-week prayer service, supply the church treasury, swell the missionary offerings, furnish helping hands for weary and discouraged pastors, and raise the whole tone of church life and worship to a higher spiritual plane.

But this reform, like every other, must begin with individuals, and work like leaven in the meal, until the whole mass be leavened.

Will you begin at once this habit of private prayer, and meditation upon some portion of God's word; and when you realize its personal benefits, will you commend it to others? To all who feel the impulse so to do, may God give strength to carry it into immediate practice.

Our Prayer

O thou who hearest prayer, bend low thine ear to hear the faintest whisper of one of the weakest of thy children. I come to thee, O thou loving Father, because thou hast bidden me come, and because I feel my need of thee. Thou, O God, alone canst supply my needs. I am unworthy of the least of thy mercies, but I come in the name of Jesus, and beseech thee, for his dear sake, to hear and answer my prayer, and to accept my thanksgiving and praise, which I offer in his name.

I thank thee, Father, that thou hast called me into fellowship with thee and with thy Son, Jesus Christ. I thank thee for a place in thy family, and the privilege of calling thee "Father."

I would ask thee to grant, that I may hunger and thirst after righteousness. Oh, that my soul may be watered with the dews of thy salvation. As thou dost nourish all the living things of nature and cause them to grow, so, O Lord, wilt thou nourish this soul of mine which thou hast created, and stir up within me new thoughts of duty and new desires of holiness.

Cause me to delight in thy word, in thy house, the church, in the communion of saints, in the fellowship of Christian work, and in prayer. May I learn to love and to look forward to these precious moments of communion with thee, and to find here, grace and strength for my daily needs.

In the plenitude of thy mercy O Father, forgive my past sins, and strengthen me with might by thy spirit in the inner man, that I might overcome all my evil inclinations and triumph over every evil habit.

So, feeding on thy word, meditating on thy goodness, and communing with thee, may I grow up in the image of him, who is our living head, even Jesus Christ. And this I ask for him name's sake. Amen!

South Bend, Indiana.

(Continued from page 7)

anything for the Kingdom, and they will always remain at the same place and of the same opinion. Many people cannot even be dragged to a Teacher's Training class for fear they will not be able to master the lessons. "Prove me now, herewith," says God through the prophet Malachi. Wonderful things will happen when a person's will is entirely surrendered to God.

The entire Christian life consists in receiving mercy and truth from God through the instrumentality of his servants, and in turn becoming a servant, obedient to the commission, ready to carry the gift to others. Our every act should be directed to this end. When we hear the appeal for help, when we hear the call for service and sacrifice, at Easter time and at all times, we should rejoice for the privilege of having a part in carrying out the great commission in all things, great and small.

Let us think first of all, of the man next to us and the work at hand. Then let us also think of the millions in the darkness of ignorance and sin. Shall we answer their call?

Washington, D. C.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

God Our Heavenly Father. 'By Dr. J. M. Tombaugh

(Topic for April 6.)

Some doctrines of the Bible are properly referred to as fundamental; they constitute the great, broad underlying truths upon which are based all our religious faith and life. The topics set for our study for the whole of this present quarter in the Sunday school, and for the greater part of the third quarter, are all of this character; they are fundamental teachings.

In accordance to each of these basic doctrines, its proper place and importance, we give a stability and coherence, a kind of sweet reasonableness, to the whole of God's revelation which cannot but result in kindling anew our love and gratitude and in exciting afresh our admiration and praise.

No teaching of the Bible exerts a greater influence in moulding life and character than the revelation which God has made of himself, of his nature and the character of his government and of his relation to us.

The Scriptures teach that as a man actually thinks and believes in his own heart so is he. That is, the attitude of mind, the character of the affections, the view that one habitually takes of God and religion, are the determining factors not only in revealing but in making a man what he really is. Almost everything depends upon what sort of conception one has of God; the meaning and value of everything else in the world hinges upon that. When one's thought of God and of the soul's personal relationship to him has suffered a change, then unconsciously his estimate of everything else in the world changes along with it. If one were to adopt the Hindu's idea of God it would not be very long till he would be compelled to adjust his notion of every other thing to harmonize with that belief. If one had the North American Indian's conception of God then his hopes and fears, his purposes in life and his ideas of duty would be just what the Indians' are. If one were an atheist and believed there is no God but natural law, then his whole conception of life and conduct and destiny would be altered in conformity with the change in his faith.

In short our idea of what God is and what our relation to him is lies at the foundation of everything which touches life and character and hope and religious faith. Every task and sacrifice is hard and galling or else it is easy and light according to our conception of what God is. Every day is hopeful or it is bitter, every hour is bright with promise or it is dark with dread according as we go forth to contend blindly and hopelessly with an un pitying hostile force, or on the other hand, as we trustingly commit ourselves to the care of a loving heavenly Father.

One man rejoices because he is a child of God; he is loyal and loving and hopeful and happy, because to him God is a Father. Another man is only a servant; to him obedience is a task, service is drudgery and it is given reluctantly if at all, without enthusiasm and without joy, because his conception of God is not as a Father but as a stern Sovereign and an un pitying Judge.

It is very essential that we should have right views of God and in order that we might truly know him, Jesus came into the world to reveal the Father unto men.

God in heaven is in character just what Jesus Christ was on earth, and the especial and particular revelation of Jesus concerning God is that God is our Father. Five times in the New Testament scriptures God is spoken of as King and two hundred and eighteen times he is spoken of as FATHER. And that we might know what kind of Father God is, Jesus tells us to look at himself, (John 14-9) and so become acquainted with the nature and character of the Teacher.

Human relationship may express but imperfectly the nature of God and what he is to his people, but there is no way by which we can get a better idea of it than to say it is the relationship of father and child. The Fatherhood of God implies then not creator alone, but a similarity of nature between the divine Teacher and his human children. We were made in his image; we have inherited from him something of his own divine qualities; we have derived from him a deathless nature, the power of endless life, the necessity of perpetual existence. When the elements shall melt with fervent heat, when the firmament shall be rolled up as a scroll, when the mountains shall totter and fall, when the rivers shall forget to run to the sea, when the earth and the world shall grow old and perish and die then somewhere we, the children of the eternal Father shall still live on and on and on forever. It is that to have God for our Father.

Among the many practical teachings growing out of the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God is one concerning prayer.

If God is our Father, it is right and reasonable too for us to expect that he will hear us and answer us. Jesus himself based the argument for prayer upon his relationship (Luke 11:11).

This is the best answer to make to those who have conjured up objections to prayer. Some doubt the efficacy of prayer because of God's greatness and our littleness. Why should an infinite Being who controls millions of worlds bow down to hear the faltering petition of a poor worm of the dust? The answer is, because he is our Father.

Another doctrine growing out of the Fatherhood of God is the authority of God, that it is his right to exact obedience from us. Nothing is more fundamental than this. There are children who are disobedient to parents, it is true, but it is a mark of God's children that they do always those things which please him. It is not essential that the child should always understand the reason for an act commanded; the ground for obedience is in the relationship. The spirit of adoption by which we cry, "Abba, Father," is always accompanied by a spirit of obedience in greater things and small.

If God is our Father, then the discipline to which he subjects us is for our good. It is easier to bear chastening when we know that the rod is in our Father's hand. He loves us and when he chastens us it is for our good; it must be so, if he is our Father.

Paul in Galatians 4:4 to 8, teaches that Jesus came into the world to redeem them that were under the law that we might receive the adoption of sons. So here in a sense in which God is the Father of us all for we are all his offspring, but it is in a new and special sense that he is the Father of them that believe. Read John 1:2-13. It is in this relationship we should glory most, for "if children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ if so be that we suffer with him."

Finally, let us strive to live as becometh children of such a Father.

Report of Four Month Program

Owing to the illness of Reverend Goughnour, I shall send in such reports on the contest as have been sent to us. Only seven Sunday schools have responded. We had hoped that all schools should report at the end of two months, so as to make comparisons. Greater interest and effort could be obtained in each school if each could see just where it stands with regard to every other school.

Of the seven that have reported all seem to be doing fine. I am indeed sorry to report that three schools have outclassed us, but we console ourselves with the fact that the contest is only half over and we may show them yet.

One encouraging feature about all of these reports, is that all seem to have been helped in one way or another. We certainly can say that here at Waterloo, we have gotten back on our feet again, from the slump caused by the "flu." We are steadily gaining in attendance and new faces begin to appear again in our school.

Out of a possible forty points for January and February, the following will show the status of the schools reporting thus far:

School	Points
Freemont, Ohio,	22
Muncie, Ind.,	36
Johnstown, Pa.,	18
Elkhart, Ind.,	31
Milledgeville, Ill.,	37
Listie, Pa.,	23
Huntington, Ind.,	36
Waterloo, Iowa,	34

PAULINE LIGHTY, Superintendent.

P. S.—Brother Goughnour says that the schools who signified their intention to enter the contest, and have not reported their standing are a bunch of "pikers," and I second the motion. Come on now with the reports. It is not yet too late,

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

Louisville Celebrates Christian Endeavor Week.

Despite the pressing and exacting duties of the editorial sanctum Brother Baer finds time to think about the interests of the promising young people of Louisville. One night he came in (He is my next door neighbor now) with a full recital of finely conceived plans for the celebration of Christian Endeavor Week. While they centered about the needs of his own young people those plans comprehended more than his parish. He had already planned a union celebration to be introduced by him on one Sunday and closed by the writer on the following Sunday, with something worthwhile doing every night in between. The whole scheme bulked large with promise, but—but—could the desired ends be realized with the designer and promoter absent? That was my question, not his. He would not be guilty of questioning or discounting the fidelity and loyalty of those Louisville Endeavorers. Nor would they be guilty of hesitating to adopt or neglecting to promote a plan proposed by their beloved minister and trusted leader. Mutual confidence and co-operation characterize their happy relations.

Brethren J. F. Painter, Lloyd Hang, Frank and Louis Clapper form a quartet of leaders that can be trusted to carry through to a successful completion any worthy enterprise, and they enjoy the undivided support of a splendid group of followers. Moreover there is an evident spirit of fraternal regard and concern among the Endeavorers and churches of Louisville. This spirit was in evidence throughout the entire week and provision for its cultivation was made in the proposed measures which anticipate the reorganization of a City Union. We greatly enjoyed the cordial greeting and sympathetic hearing accorded by these splendid Endeavorers and their pastors, and shall expect good reports from their united labors of love. We shall gratefully remember the generous entertainment provided by the Clappers and Painters. We are pleased to add Brother Painter's report, and hope that he will continue to inform our young people of Louisville's accomplishments. The activity of one society is of vital interest to all.

Prof. J. A. Garber

A Successful C. E. Week at Louisville, Ohio.

By J. Frank Painter

The Christian Endeavor society of our church decided to observe Christian Endeavor week as outlined by the United Society, and had already partly planned the program for a series of special services when Brother Baer suggested that we invite the Endeavorers of the two other churches of our town to unite with us. The suggestion was a timely one, for the work of the young people in the way of united effort was at a low ebb, owing mostly to the lack of sympathy and encouragement on the part of a couple of other ministers, who have recently gone to other fields of labor, and whose places are now being filled by ministers who will heartily co-operate with the young people. A committee was then appointed consisting of a representative of each society and one of the ministers to act as advisor. We met about three weeks ahead of the time set for Christian Endeavor week, and planned things on a large scale and then proceeded to work our plan.

The theme of our first service, which was held on Sunday evening, February 23, was "Revival of Young People's Work." Brother Baer was the speaker of the evening and addressed a large audience. The program for Monday evening was made up of talks given by Christian Endeavor members of the different churches. The talks were on the various phases of Christian Endeavor work. A War Service Program was planned for Wednesday evening, consisting of a Patriotic Sing and talks given by a number of returned soldiers. Thursday was Church Loyalty night. Endeavorers were urged to attend services, each in his or her own church, this being the night for the regular prayer meeting. In our own church that night, we had a special service at which Brother Alvin Byers spoke to us on the subject of Church Loyalty. On Friday night we had a banquet for Christian Endeavor members and their friends and it was the best affair of its kind ever held at this place. Over two hundred were in attendance. On Sunday morning we held our own Ashland College service at which time Brother J. A. Garber of Ashland, spoke. On Sunday afternoon Brother Garber had charge of a Christian Endeavor conference which was attended by Christian Endeavor members of the various churches. At this meeting the first steps were taken toward organizing a local Christian Endeavor union. A fitting climax to our series of meetings was the decision service held on Sunday evening, when Brother Garber again spoke. The audience was large and the service very impressive.

The meetings were held in turn in the three churches co-operating and a feature of each service was special music furnished by the visiting societies. Every service was well attended and the interest and enthusiasm were splendid. The average attendance for the week was considerably over 200. A successful plan we used to bring out the attendance might be of interest to other Endeavorers. We had tickets printed similar to Chautauqua tickets, with the announcement of the program for each service, also the time and place, and spaces to punch the ticket each time it was used. A stub attached to the ticket was to be signed by those desiring to attend the banquet and placed in the offering basket. On the back of the ticket was a space to be signed by the individual giving out the ticket, and also one to indicate the church to which he belonged. These tickets were to be distributed among the Endeavorers and given out by them to the people of their own church, or any other, or of no church, with an urgent invitation to attend the services every night. Every person attending had a ticket which was punched as he entered the church. There was a friendly rivalry among the people to see which individual and which society could have the largest number present on their tickets.

We give much credit to this plan for keeping the attendance throughout the week above all expectations. It also gave each member something definite to do and thus enlisted his interest in the success of the meetings. It advertised our meetings in the best way at a low cost. It gave us an idea as to the number of people to expect at the banquet. It gave us a record of the number of people attending each service, also the average and the total attendance. It enabled each society to challenge the other for the banner attendance, and finally to know which society and which individuals worked the hardest to get people out. At the close of the last service honorable mention was made of the society and the six individuals who secured the largest attendance.

Now what are the noticeable benefits of this series of meetings? Summed up, they are as follows: new enthusiasm, new inspiration, new friendships formed, closer fellowship between the three societies, a determination to attempt larger work; a local Christian Endeavor union in sight, a number renewing their allegiance to Christ, and some making new decisions. There were secured some new members of the Tenth Legion, and some to become Comrades of the Quiet Hour, some to promise more regular attendance at the mid-week prayer meeting, some to promote good will among men and peace on earth and one to accept Christ.

We regret to say there were no new Life Work Recruits, but who can tell but that the influence of these meetings may yet bring young men and women to serious thinking along this line, and perhaps yet such decisions will be made.

We would like to add that our own society numbers 33 active members. Of this number there are two Life Work recruits, and another whose name we are expecting to be sent in at any time. There are thirteen who are members of the Tenth Legion and all are Comrades of the Quiet Hour.

Jane Addams, of Hull House, said at a mother's meeting, "How quaint the minds of children are! One New Year's day I gave a little girl a present of a diary. 'This is a diary,' I explained to her. 'Every day you must write in it a record of your life, a record of how you live.' The little girl turned the blank pages of it and said, 'But why is it called a diary? I'd call it a livery, ma'am,!' "

MISSIONS

Symposium Brieflets: Why the Brethren Church Should Do Its Share in Evangelizing the World

LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA

I am looking forward to Easter Sunday with much concern, because I desire to be faithful to HIM who died for me. Surely this Easter offering is one of the most important offerings of the year. In this offering we can fulfill in part at least the gospel as set forth in Mark 16:15. We might give to a cause without having any real love for it, but surely we can not have love for lost souls and for those in heathen darkness without giving to this Easter offering. Pray for the success of this offering as though it all depended on God, and then give and work as though it all depended on you.

HENRY V. WALL.

ELKHART, INDIANA

The Brethren church should do her full share in the evangelization of the world, NOW, because as never before was the world so open to the missionary: because never before has it been so apparent that only the message of Jesus Christ is able to redeem the world: the church has that message: it is therefore her duty to do her best to carry it to all the world. The world is white unto the harvest; unless the Brethren church does her best she must suffer an eternal loss.

H. H. WOLFORD.

NAPPANEE, INDIANA

The field is the world. The need is the Word of God. The harvesters must also plant. Pray. Give. Send. Go forth. Rise up in might as a church to make the grandest contribution for the preaching of the gospel in foreign lands in our history. C. E. KOLB.

ALTOONA, PENNSYLVANIA

The Easter offering should be the largest in the history of the church. Material prosperity makes this possible; the need of the world and the opportunity for the preaching of the Gospel demand it; God expects that we meet the need in keeping with our ability.

But money is not the only offering which should be made at this Easter time. Lives should be offered. Ministers should bring before our young people the claims of God upon their lives in the evangelizing of the world. The whole church should come forward and offer itself as never before to the greatest or all work—the giving of a “Whole Gospel to a Whole World.” “Ye are my witnesses.”

W. C. BENSHOFF.

MUNCIE, INDIANA

The greatest opportunity in the history of the Brethren church to do foreign missionary work is before us. The doors are thrown wide open. What will the church do, Easter morning? We should have $25,000.00 for this noble cause on the anniversary of the resurrection of our Lord. J. L. KIMMEL.

UNIONTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

The Uniontown church recognizes that the greatest work of the church today is to see that the Gospel is preached in all the world, and to that end we pledge our hearty support. His coming will be delayed until we do our part in bringing it in, so as well as pray, “Come quickly, Lord Jesus,” we must give to make good our part relative to the coming. Will we do it? Yes we will.

E. L. MILLER.

CARLETON, NEBRASKA

The churches or Christendom are face to face with one of the greatest problems of the age—viz., evangelizing the world. The leading denominations are bending every energy toward securing large funds for “extension work.” The Brethren church must measure up to the expectations of her Lord and Master. The Easter offering should be the largest.

WILLIAM BEND EVERETT, JR., J. D. KEMPER.

SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

A church having for her watchword “A whole Gospel for a whole world” must be missionary in every fiber. Then, our orders are, “Go,” “teach,” “baptize.” If there has been failure in any field, Brethren dare not fail nor falter.

G. W. RENCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

All who are whole-hearted believers are always glad to give for foreign missions. The First Brethren church of this city, I'm glad to say, has been in the class of those who have reached the high-water mark. God helping, we shall most likely reach still higher this year.

W. M. LYON.

HUDSON, IOWA

There is grave danger that the Anglo-Saxon race may lose the spiritual leadership of the world. The Orient is awakening and especially the great metaphysical thinkers of India. Unless the Anglo-Saxon race, and especially America, wonderfully bestirs itself they will be compelled to take a second place in spiritual leadership. Strenuous missionary work abroad that the thinking of these peoples may be given the right tone and color, and strenuous work at home that our people may be lifted to loftier conceptions of life, is necessary. We dare not play along the road; if we do we are doomed.

CHAS. E. WEIDNER.

DENVER, INDIANA

In view of the fact that Easter, our foreign mission day is approaching, I believe that every member of the church should prepare to make a good big offering to foreign missions. The war has brought a new day to the church and also given her a new field. She needs men and money. May Easter be the day when the church will go a long way in providing the money.

L. A. MYERS.

HAGERSTOWN, MARYLAND

The world war is over. How better can we proclaim our joy than by raising the largest foreign missionary offering in the history of the church? An unprecedented opportunity is open before us; men are seeking that satisfying panacea of the soul. God help us to share in the Christian conquest of the world.

A. B. COVER.

ASHLAND, OHIO

The democratization of Europe, with the League of Nations established and controlling all German colonies, will bring opportunities for greater missionary effort. Economical conditions will place the burden on the churches of the United States to “carry on.” The Brethren church must not fail to do its share. It is not alone the heathen of Africa, China, etc., who need the Gospel but civilized peoples whose god is not the God revealed by Jesus Christ. Our message of the whole Gospel, with a practical application of the spirit of Christianity, is what the world needs.

J. L. HAMILTON.

LEON, IOWA

Easter Message:—The whole church which has supported the government at great cost through the war should do no less for the program of Christ Jesus. Our internationalism will remain a shallow thing until it really becomes the internationalism of the Gospel.

G. T. RONK.

LOUISVILLE, OHIO

In this crisis time, when so many are questioning whether or not the church has succeeded in its mission,—when there is so much being written and spoken as to the advisability of “scrapping” the present church organization and inventing something new to properly serve this new age,—this is the opportune time for the Brethren church to “sit tight” on her “whole Gospel” plea and give to the world her answer as to the success or failure of her work, by giving the greatest offering for foreign missions that the denomination has ever made or even dreamed of. We have been “forging ahead” in missions, but let's give some real backing this year to the work that was uppermost in our Lord's mind when he gave us the Great Commission.

F. E. CLAPPER.

SUMMIT MILLS, PENNSYLVANIA

If our daily prayer is that God may send the Savior quickly in the clouds of heaven with the holy angels, in great power and glory, when the dead in Christ shall rise and the living in him shall be changed to meet the Lord in the air—if these are our petitions then we will have real pleasure in opening our hands wide and giving more freely than ever to hasten the preaching of the Gospel to all nations that Jesus may come quickly.

To withhold is to rob God.

And give not of necessity, nor grudgingly, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver.

JOHN A. MILLER.

FALLS CITY, NEBRASKA

As larger denominations plan to raise and expend vast amounts of money in these days of reconstruction, surely the Brethren church will do nothing short of a great offering this year. Our whole Gospel plea should stimulate us to action at once. “A whole Gospel for the whole world.” My people are already talking Easter offering. We will be there.

H. F. STUCKMAN.

NORTH LIBERTY, INDIANA

I cannot but believe that if there was ever a time when missions should be the great dominating thought of the church, that time is now. Surely the Brethren church ought to lengthen her lines in a time like this.

Let her banner, “A whole Gospel for a whole world” be unfurled as never before. Brethren, the hour is come; the call is sounding. How dare we fail to respond?

This ought to be the largest offering in the history of the church. I believe it will.

C. C. GRISSO.

PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA

Ever since the Boxer uprising in China and the United States returned the indemnity money to them, China has had a different attitude toward the United States as a Christian nation, and now since we have taken our part in this great world war, that has just closed, the whole world, even Germany, realizes that it was not material possessions we were after, but that we entered the war to uphold Christian principles for which we stand, and they are looking to the United States and expecting us to demonstrate this same Christian spirit in our every act. This fact opens the whole world as never before to the teachings of our Christ. It is, therefore, our opportune time to vigorously push our missionary program into as many lands and to the greatest possible extent in each of these places.

If we lose this opportunity and do not do our best the blood of these people may be required at our hands.

We cannot all go to foreign lands in person, but we can be much in prayer for the success of the work of the Foreign Mission department, and we can back up our prayers and make them effectual by giving of our means and giving others an opportunity to contribute.

H. F. E. O'NEILL.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

RIO CUARTO, ARGENTINA

Since writing last, a month ago, our church life at Rio Cuarto has been full of interest. First we had our Christmas program which was a representation of the preparation of the world for the Kingdom of God. There were tableaux, recitations and lantern views. Apparently not half the people who came were able to gain entrance. Instead of giving presents to the children, all brought presents for the poor. The children received their treat later.

The next day we had our annual outing in a nice grove at the edge of town. The Sunday school met at 7:30 in the morning, and with the Argentine flag, the Sunday school banner, Christian Endeavor and class banners we marched in order to the grounds. With nearly two hundred in line the procession extended several blocks and the people marveled that we were so many. Several of our young men who have a bakery, prepared the dinner, and a fine one it was. The group was arranged in a large circle, each class forming its own smaller circle. I am sending a photograph of the group for use in The Brethren Missionary.

The following week, we observed the week of prayer and closed with baptismal service and communion. There were fourteen more baptisms, our own two girls being among the number. The communion service we held in the yard where we hold all the night meetings during the hot weather. We thus have comfort and at the same time have larger audiences than could be accommodated in the church. We have had as many as three hundred in the audience outside.

On New Year's eve we had a watch meeting with a hundred present and on New Year's day we had a meeting of the young men and young women. We have now some twenty of each. The young men had organized before and the young women have organized now and are preparing for a Demorest Medal Contest next month. The young men call themselves the class of Andrew and Philip and the young women the class of Mary and Martha. We hope to have the latter follow the work of the Sisterhood girls at home. The young men have for some time been meeting on Saturday nights for special Bible study.

I should have mentioned as the first item in this report the visit of J. P. Howard, the Sunday school director for South America. He came in December to deliver to us our diploma for having a model Sunday school, having gained all the points in the standard. He said it is the second diploma granted in all South America, the first having gone to an old school in Montevideo. He remained four days and gave us a number of most inspiring addresses. We now have a dozen children on the cradle roll and the list is rapidly growing. We have also opened a new hall for Sunday school and other meetings in the southwest district of the city where there are many children and it is too far to expect them to attend regularly here.

We have also organized a Junior Christian Endeavor society with about forty members and mean to incorporate much of the Boy Scout and Campfire Girl teachings. The children are quite enthusiastic and we believe that the work will go forward nicely. Brother Barrio is a good help in such work.

We have just raised $32.00 for the Armenian orphans by collection in the church and subscription outside. There is a general good feeling and we look forward to a good year.

C. F. YODER.

January 15, 1919.

POWERSVILLE, MISSOURI

We are proud to announce that the faithful few at White Chapel have succeeded in having their names placed on the Honor Roll. The Brethren Evangelist is just splendid, and has been a welcome visitor to our home during the winter months more than usual on account of being barred from all services. We will try to help R. R. Teeter get his five thousand subscribers. White Chapel folks will be not only on the Honor Roll, but after the papers are read will be sent into homes where they know not the Christ, and I am sure our efforts will be crowned with success. Brother Lowman, Fillmore, California, can boast of the youngest church on the Honor Roll, but I believe White Chapel is the least congregation and one that has always been without a pastor and the only one in Missouri. Am I not right, Brother Editor?

We worship with the Methodist Protestants. We all love and respect their pastor and brotherly love prevails. Brother G. T. Ronk edits a little monthly paper he has named The Brethren Key Note, he sends it to all those under his charge. We have learned to look for it and read it with pleasure. A union evangelistic meeting is in progress at Powersville. Evangelists Burd and Turner are the leaders, and in spite of bad weather and roads, more than a hundred souls have taken a stand for Christ and the town is stirred up as it never has been before. And so the good work continues. We ask your prayers, that we may live better Christian lives.

MRS. JENNIE A. WOODS.

TRAVEL NOTES

On December the 31st we arrived in Los Angeles, a great and growing city in the southern part of sunny California. Brother Joe Shively and his good wife were at the station with their big auto waiting for us. They took us to their nice home where we shared their hospitality the most of the time for two weeks. Then we managed to secure a house until we could get the parsonage. Our brethren showed us much kindness which we will not soon forget.

I shall not say much about the work here at this early date. I have been informed by those who ought to know that as pastor I am located in the hardest field in Southern California. Well I thank God I was not brought up in a band box, I never found what we call a snap before I entered the ministry, and I have not as yet found a snap in the ministry but I have discovered an ocean of divine love in which to swim and every stroke of the hand in faith, hope and love make me stronger for the task. Thus far we are very happy and pleased with the new field in which God has placed us. Our reception to this state, city and church was more than we felt worthy or dreamed of. We could not feel otherwise than at home when all the churches of Southern California with their beloved pastors were represented on the night of our reception to greet and welcome us among the people of God. We also appreciated the letters of welcome from the ministers in the northern part of the state.

We expect to stand as heretofore for the whole Gospel, no more and no less, and by the grace of God we shall preach in these parts with all the God-given powers of our soul his heaven born message to earth born creatures. And we shall strive in all things to make King Jesus supreme.

We have visited all of our people in their homes and we find a band of people that I have confidence in, and I believe that God is going to bless us in a marked way as we work together to his glory and the salvation of souls. We do not expect the work to grow in leaps and bounds, but prefer a steady growth. We have preached three funerals since on the field, and received five into the church. Our prayer meeting has doubled in attendance. We have a splendid Sunday school, and an efficient superintendent, Brother Earl Hedrick, who was called to serve his country during the war but returned to us safe taking up his spiritual weapons. In the near future we expect to start a Teacher Training class.

We also have a Christian Endeavor of young people that I am proud of. Recently we had several socials which brought in new faces. We will begin a campaign if God permits with Brother Lowman and his people in Fillmore, March the 23rd. I ask an interest of all God's dear children who know how to pray in the behalf of the Fillmore revival. The campaign will last three weeks. After the Fillmore meeting we expect to launch a campaign here in the First church, so pray that he may give us a harvest here. We need a new church house here so much and we believe some of these good days hammers will be heard ringing around here. I want to say a word about the two thousand names on my prayer list, many being converts all over the country. This is what I want to say, I have a nice sunny study and before the great God of heaven and earth I fall and pray for you each day, that he may keep you until he comes in the clouds with power and great glory or calls "Come home." If there are others who would like your name on my prayer list send it to 217 East 42nd Street, Los Angeles, California, and in our weak way we will speak to the great King in your behalf. I was about to forget something very interesting, I have married a couple too since here, now guess—no, you missed it, well, I will tell you, Brother J. C. Beal and Sister Mary E. Trapp. Their wedding took place the 4th day of March, 1919. Brother Beal is known throughout the brotherhood as a teacher and preacher. He taught a number of years in our own Ashland College, but about four or five years ago he came west, first to Sunny Side, Washington, then to Los Angeles, the Compton Avenue church in Los Angeles, where he is doing a splendid work and is loved by his people. Brother Beal was very fortunate in finding Sister Mary Trapp as a helpmate for she certainly is an amiable and worthy woman. We were in her home three weeks last year while in a campaign in the Compton Avenue church. We felt at home in her house, kept set in beauty. We pray God's richest and choicest blessings upon this worthy happy couple. I know Brother and Sister Beal will have the good wishes of their many friends, both in the east and west for a life filled with all the joy and happiness possible.

N. W. JENNINGS.

HOLLINS, VIRGINIA

A word from the Mountain View church may interest some of you. It has been some time since we reported the work at this place, but we are still contending for the faith once delivered unto the saints, and upon which we believe the Brethren church to be founded. Our church at this place is still young in years, having only been organized in April, 1914. We now have a membership of more than sixty, a live Sunday school, an S. S. C. E., and a mid-week prayer meeting. While our work has not been so rapid, we are laying the foundation for a greater work in the future. We had fourteen additions to the church last year; included in that number were the fathers and mothers of three homes, also a son and a daughter from one of these homes and a son from another. We are now planning for our Easter service and mission offering in which we expect to reach the goal set in the Four Year Program. By the way, I find this much easier since having the Evangelist in a number of our homes. We pray God that this may be the greatest year in the Brethren church. Brethren, pray for us that God may continue to use us in his cause and kingdom.

J. E. PATTERSON.

EASTER MESSAGE

Dear Brethren:

Already it is one year, and by the time that you read these lines no doubt a quarter of a year more will have rolled by, since the first party of Brethren missionaries sailed from the American shores to carry the Gospel into one of the darkest places of the great Dark Continent. As you well know, save for the two months that it took us to get this far on our way, the time has been spent here at Brazzaville, in language preparation and waiting upon the Lord to make it possible, by the Government granting us the necessary permission, to make the Glad Tidings known to those who live in the grossest of heathen darkness in the great Eastern French Sudan, particularly in Ubangi-Shari.

While this long wait here at Brazzaville, which is something that, as far as we are concerned, was not scheduled, and because of certain conditions has not been a pleasant experience for us, yet we have never felt that we were more in God's will for us than what we have felt while waiting upon him to undertake for us here at Brazzaville. Yet, in a number of ways, God has, in our case, tempered the winds for the shorn lambs and the wait here has not been as hard as it might have been. Words cannot express the deep sense of gratitude that we feel toward you in your continued interest in this great undertaking. From all that we have received so far, letters, papers, etc., from those in the homeland who are interested in the work, not a single note of dissatisfaction has been read. Again may I say, we are thankful for this, for it is another evidence that God has been leading us by granting of such uniform harmony.

For some time now matters concerning the Gospel in French territory have been loosening up somewhat and we have many reasons to expect permission being granted us to carry the Gospel into Ubangi-Shari at any time now. Then, by the help and grace of our Lord, a real advance will be made into heathen darkness. And, within a very short time indeed, our forces can stand strengthening by an increase of workers amounting to, probably, ten-fold.

Since being here, where we are able to meet people who have been there and thereby learn more concerning Ubangi-Shari and the Eastern French Sudan. We can truthfully say that we have never in what we have written or said concerning that field overdrawn it a bit. At the present writing, I believe, that I can say that there is no more important mission field in all of the world than that. Also, it is one where we will be the first people to enter with the Gospel and definitely open a mission station. We will be preaching the Gospel to tribes, of the which as far as is known, not a single man or woman has ever intelligently heard the Gospel. Also, instead of working among some small tribes, we will be carrying the Gospel to some of the larger and more promising ones of Africa.

Unlike many mission fields, in Ubangi-Shari we will be able to make use of workers possessing a very wide range of training. Teachers, preachers, physicians, nurses, mechanics, carpenters, farmers, and most any person of proper age possessing a fair education and being spiritually qualified, can be greatly used to the glory of the Lord and the calling out of his church in that dark land. But we must not make the mistake and think that, because the people to whom we go are naked savages, education is not a cardinal point. There is very much work to be done in such a field which can be done only by those, who possess, either an unusual degree of education, are greatly talented, or are blessed by both. The Bible, the New Testament at least, needs to be translated for millions of people living there. Then, on the other hand, many of the natives are capable of taking on a high degree of education, and unless we will be prepared to give it to them, they will go to schools where either God is openly repudiated, simply ignored, or where a false religion predominates. At the present time, though there be but few, there are some well educated natives in the Eastern French Sudan.

For some time it has been the desire of those who now represent the Brethren church in Africa that, instead of there being a number of missionary societies crowded into Ubangi-Shari, the work which the Lord can do (if we will but permit him by trusting him sufficiently and daring in our trust) through us (that is the Brethren church as a whole) will be sufficiently large to meet the evangelical needs of that country. Or, if our work will not be the only one there, (for the needs of that country are too pressing to permit us to erect an evangelical board fence about the place and claim the field as our own), we trust that it will be large enough to set the pace concerning the form of baptism, the observance of ordinances, etc., just as is the case of the Baptist (English) Missionary Society in the Belgian Congo. In all of the Belgian Congo except in the southern part there is only one form of baptism observed—that of single immersion. The Baptist Missionary Society was the pioneer society through most of the country and they set the pace for the others to follow. As one put it, "The Baptist Missionary Society is the mule upon which nearly all of the other societies rode into the Congo." May not the Ubangi-Shari Mission be the Gospel mule for the Ubangi-Shari and adjacent territory! God is well able to use us just as much as we will permit him. Our degree of trust and obedience will be the only thing that will hinder God in using us for the evangelization of that dark land. Say not that we are only a small people, and then shirk, but look unto God and launch out into the deep. The Moravians were only a small people yet have set the pace for modern missions the world over. It is easier for a small people to set the pace than for a large and unwieldy rabble to get together and do it.

After all has been said that can be said upon this subject, the question is not, "What will the church do?" but "What will each individual in the church do?" Yes, even coming down to finer points, "What am I going to do toward obeying the last and great commission of our Lord, that he may see the travail of his soul and be satisfied?" Yes, and that even his coming may be hastened and that the only lasting peace that this old world will ever see may be established.

Yours in his blessed service,

JAMES S. GRIBBLE.

NEWS FROM SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

It has been nearly ten years since I visited Southern California, and many changes have taken place in that time. The only churches we had here then, were La Verne and the Miles Street church in Los Angeles. The work during these ten years has been multiplied three times, as there are now six churches in this part of the state, the churches being Fillmore, Whittier, Long Beach and Compton Avenue, in Los Angeles.

These churches constitute what is known as the Southern California District of which A. V. Kimmel is moderator. The work in this district has been fostered and developed without calling on our National Mission Board for aid, and all the churches are supplied with good, competent pastors.

These churches represent a combined membership of over 1,000, and was the only district that had no yellow in the Four Year Program report of the past year.

The La Verne Church. This is the oldest church in the district and was formerly known as Lordsburg, the name of the town being recently changed. This church is in the center of one of the greatest orange districts of California, located about 30 miles from Los Angeles. The membership here is 150, with a Sunday school attendance of 140. Brother Broad is the pastor here and is now serving the church for the ninth year. The church buildings are in good condition, but there is talk of erecting a new structure. The Church of the Brethren have a college in this place and it was my pleasure to meet with the faculty and conduct chapel exercises one morning. I met here Professor Lehman whom I knew in Pennsylvania, and Professor Hoover, formerly of Dayton, Ohio.

Whittier Church. This is one of the new churches and will be four years old in September. It ranks however second in membership in this district having 185 members, with a Sunday school attendance of 125. A. V. Kimmel, the oldest pastor in the district, organized this work and was the first and present pastor. The wonderful growth of the work in Southern California is due largely to the leadership of Brother Kimmel.

Whittier is a beautiful city of about 9,000 located 15 miles from Los Angeles in one of the richest sections of country in California, and is surrounded with orange and lemon orchards. This place has a large Quaker settlement in which is located one of their colleges.

The church building here is a beautiful structure and is well built.

Fillmore Church. This church is located in the center of the San Fernando Valley which is rich with oil, orchards of English walnuts, lemons and oranges. The town has a population of about 3,000 and is growing fast. This is the "baby" church of the family in this district, the building having been completed only a few months ago. Brother Lowman is in charge of the work here and is well liked by the people. At the present time they have a membership of 42, with a Sunday school attendance of 70. The building cost nearly $10,000, and is a credit to the town and our denomination. Fillmore is about 40 miles north of Los Angeles.

The First Church of Los Angeles. The building has been moved since I was here before and is now located on San Pedro street. This church has had its discouragements, but never in its history has it had a more promising future. They are now free from debt, with a fairly good building and a modern parsonage. There is much talk for a new building and I would not be surprised to hear that they will have a new building erected inside of two years. Brother Jennings has recently taken the pastorate here, and is the man for the place. The present membership is 130, with a Sunday school attendance of 130.

The Second Church of Los Angeles. This church is located on the south side at Compton avenue. It was dedicated in 1909 and all indebtedness has been provided for. The building here is in fairly good condition, but plans are being made to erect a new one. Brother Beal is the pastor, and is doing great work in the Sunday school, having an attendance of 215 with a church membership of 125. The church here has a good field and with a new building should do a great work.

Long Beach Church. When I visited here 9 years ago, Long Beach was a town of about 18,000, with only two Brethren families. I found when I arrived here, a city of over 50,000 with a church equipment second to none I have seen in the denomination, with a membership of 400 and a Sunday school of 300.

This is a unique church in its growth, constituency and work. Very few of the members were ever associated or knew of the Brethren denomination before visiting. In all my relationship and work in the denomination, I have never found a more loyal people to the Word of God and the work. It has been a pleasure to spend a few months among them and share the fellowship of true believers. Brother Banman was associated with this work from the beginning and no finer testimony could be given to any man's preaching, than the body of believers here.

There passed through the treasury last year $16,000.00 to different channels of church work; $6,600 went to foreign missions, while a free will offering a few Sundays ago for the unfortunate in Armenia was over $400.00 in cash. The spirit of giving here is manifest. We will be here until May 1st, when Brother Banman returns to his pastorate. I will write more fully later.

In the Blessed Hope,
W. S. BELL.

HELP FOR THE WEAK OR PASTORLESS CHURCHES

I could go any place in Northern Indiana or Michigan to help the church that is too weak to hire an evangelist. Give me a chance and let God use me to help you. I can supply either one of my churches for a while. I am not an evangelist, but a firm believer that God can use us when we will let him. God remains the same; he never changes, but man changes. Let us put God above all things. First God, then Jesus Christ, then the Holy Spirit, then the church, then self. Let God hold the steering wheel of the church and we will get somewhere. God doth work through me and not I alone. I feel that it is my duty to offer myself and that is all that I can do. Would be glad to answer any one who writes for help.

HOMER ANDERSON,
Warsaw, Indiana, R. F. D. No. 4.

REPORT OF BENEVOLENCES

Herewith find report of all funds received by myself as secretary of the Board of Benevolences from September 6th, 1918, to March 12, 1919, inclusive, with comparisons for 1918:

California-Oregon	1918	1919
Turlock,	$57.37	$12.00
Chaparral,	2.00
Long Beach,	20.00
Ashland, Oregon,	2.00	2.50
Sunnyside, Wash.,	19.31
Los Angeles, Compton Ave.,		9.50
Los Angeles, N. W. Jennings,
Pastor,		10.00
Pomona,		21.00

Illiokota
Lanark,	$40.00
Dallas Center,	12.00
Waterloo,	40.00	40.00
Astoria S. S.,	1.50
Garwin,	10.26
Milledgeville,	15.75	20.00
Union Iowa,	1.20
Crown Iowa,	4.25
Leon, Iowa,	7.50
Udell, Iowa,	12.00
Eau Claire, Wis.,	1.85	1.90
Cerro, Gordo, Ill.	11.58	4.55

Kanemorado
Mulvane,	4.00
Falls City,	25.00
Beaver City,	20.00	15.00
Portis,	14.50
Hamlin,	9.10	15.00
Morrill,	27.78	16.33
Carleton,		17.00

Michigan	Nothing to date
Maryland-Virginia
Hagerstown, Miss. Society, ..	$25.13
Roanoke,	19.75
Linwood S. S. C. E.,	10.00
Linwood, Church,
Maurertown,	5.45
Limestone, Tenn.,	6.50
Mt. View,	10.00
Stockton, N. J.,	5.55
Hagerstown Church,	6.26

Ohio
Louisville,	$10.00	$16.00
Ashland,	25.00	25.00
Bryan,	15.00	20.00
Gratis,	37.57
Williamstown,	2.50
Fremont,	17.31	16.27
Pioneer,	4.00
Miamisburg,	4.00
Fair Haven,	5.00	7.50
Canton,	27.44
Buckeye City,	3.00
Postoria,	1.92
Dayton,	10.00
Bear Creek,	6.00
Salem,	4.50
Washington C. H.,	5.00
Fairview Church,		23.03
Homerville,		3.32
Pleasant Hill,		4.35
Columbus,		2.69

Indiana
Loree,	$17.75	$25.00
Tiosa,	15.00	15.00
Flora,	5.90	8.96
Nappanee,	25.00	10.00
Sidney,	9.00
College Corners,	5.82
Roanoke,	1.65
Maple Grove,	14.00
Roann,	10.00
Oakville,	10.00	23.71
New Highland,	2.00
Clay City,	3.60	7.00
Corinth,	6.25
Elkhart,	15.50	19.00
Denver,	8.50

Goshen,	71.00	67.44
Warsaw,	7.25
Mexico,	10.00
Huntington,	4.88	5.40
South Bend,	18.63	50.00
Claypool,	2.39
Muncie,	5.00	10.00
New Paris,	4.11	25.00
North Manchester,	25.00	40.00
North Liberty,	11.00
Peru,		5.00
Milford,		18.65
Berne, Bethel S. S.,		18.52
Pennsylvania	1918	1919
Rosedale,	$10.00
Listie, S. S. and Church,	13.36	35.00
Conemaugh,	12.64
Meyersdale Church and S. S.,	37.33
Masonstown,	15.90
Uniontown,	16.20	19.45
Brush Valley,	15.00
Allentown,	5.00	12.23
Philadelphia, Church & S. S.,	38.40	41.00
Marlinsburg,	10.00	9.42
Altouna,	12.00	14.60
McKee,	10.00	9.00
Johnstown S. S.,	65.00
Vandergrift,	4.71	8.50
Pittsburgh, Church and S. S.,	50.00
Waynesboro,	11.70
Sergeantsville, N. J.,	10.00
New Enterprise,	7.00

Personal Gifts

Austin Miller, Meyersdale, Pa.,	$25.00
J. S. C. Spiekerman, Marysville, Mo.,	2.00
Mrs. H. F. Frantz, Enid, Okla.,	1.00
H. C. Williams, Bridgeton, N. J.,	5.00
Mrs. Mary A. Snyder, Glover Gap, W. Va.,	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ringler, Johnstown, Pa.,	2.00
Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Ringler, Johnstown, Pa.,	2.00
Mrs. Sarah Aultz, Johnstown, Pa.,50
Mr. J. S. Griffin, Pittsburgh, Pa.,	1.00
Mrs. Lizzie Wolf, Stockton, Calif.,	2.00
Mr. Philip Repsher, Penn Argy, Pa.,	1.00
Elizabeth Winnegar, Roanoke, Va.,	1.00

The Brethren will take notice of the splendid increase some churches have made over last year's offering. These churches have made their per capita offering and then some and feel very proud of the fact that they have gone over the top. It is earnestly hoped that those churches upon reading this report finding themselves delinquent in the 1919 column will get busy and send their checks as soon as possible, for our Supernatural brothers are expecting this of us.

Hoping by conference time to be able to report all churches checked and expecting to make additional reports from time to time to be added to this, I am,

Fraternally yours,

H. E. ROSCOE,
National Secretary of Benevolences,
Goshen, Indiana.

EVANGELIST HONOR ROLL

The following churches having met the requirements laid down by the Brethren Publishing Company regarding the placing of the Evangelist in the homes of the congregations are entitled to a place on the Evangelist Honor Roll:

Church	Pastor
Akron, Ind., (New Highland), D. A. C. Teeter
Allentown, Pa., 2nd Yr.,	A. L. DeLozier
Ankenytown, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	A. L. Lynn
Ashland, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	J. A. Garber
Beaver City, Neb.,	Vacant
Berlin, Penna.,	I. B. Trout
Berne, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	W. F. Johnson
Bryan, Ohio,	G. L. Maus
Burlington, Ind., 2nd Yr.,	W. T. Lytle
Carleton, Neb., 2nd Yr.,	J. D. Kemper
Clay City, Indiana,	Geo. W. Kinzie

College Corner, Ind., 2nd Yr.,	Homer Anderson
Conemaugh, Pa., 2nd Yr.,	L. G. Smith
Dallas Center, Iowa,	R. F. Porte
Denver, Indiana,	L. A. Myers
Dutchtown, Indiana,	Homer Anderson
Elkhart, Indiana,	H. H. Wolford
Fairhaven, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	B. F. Owen
Falls City, Neb., 2nd Yr., ..	H. F. Stuckman
Fillmore, Calif.,	Sylvester Lowman
Flora, Ind., 2nd Yr.,	S. C. Henderson
Ft. Scott, Kansas,	Mrs. L. C. Webb
Postoria, Ohio,	M. S. White
Fremont, Ohio,	H. M. Oberholtzer
Gretna, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	Edwin Boardman
Hamlin, Kansas, 2nd Yr.,	Geo. E. Cone
Huntington, Indiana,	J. W. Brower
Johnstown, Pa., 1st Ch.,	J. F. Watson
Johnstown, Pa., 3rd Ch.,	Geo. H. Jones
Laanark, Ill., 2nd Yr.,	B. T. Burnworth
La Verne, Calif., 2nd Yr.,	T. H. Broad
Leon, Iowa,	Geo. T. Ronk
Linwood, Maryland, 2nd Yr., ..	E. M. Riddle
Long Beach, Cal., 2nd Yr.,	L. S. Bauman
Loree, Indiana,	W. T. Lytle
Los Angeles, Cal., 1st, 2 Yr., N. W. Jennings
Louisville, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	Geo. S. Baer
Meyersdale, Pa., 2nd Yr., ..	E. D. Burnworth
Mexico, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	L. W. Ditch
Milledgeville, Ill., 2nd Yr.,	M. J. Snyder
Morrill, Kansas, 2nd Yr.,	A. E. Whitted
Mt. View, Va., 2nd Yr.,	J. E. Patterson
Muncie, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	J. L. Kimmel
Nappanee, Ind., 2nd Yr.,	C. E. Kolb
New Enterprise, Pa.,	Edward Byers
New Lebanon, Ohio,	L. B. Wilkins
New Paris, Indiana,	Ora I. Oxley
North English, Iowa,	W. H. Miller
North Liberty, Indiana,	C. C. Grisso
Oakville, Indiana,	A. R. Staley
Pittsburgh, Pa.,	H. M. Harley
Portis, Kansas, 2nd Yr.,	Roy Brumbaugh
Roann, Indiana,	W. E. Ronk
Salsbury, Penna.,	E. D. Burnworth
Sidney, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	L. A. Myers
Summit Mills, Pa., 2nd Yr., ..	E. D. Burnworth
Telford, Tennessee,	(Vacant)
Tiosa, Indiana,	Ora I. Oxley
Washington, C. H., O., 2nd Yr., ..	B. S. Stoffer
Waterloo, Iowa, 2nd Yr., ..	H. L. Goughnour
Whittier, Calif.,	A. V. Kimmel
White Chapel, Mo.,	G. T. Ronk
Yellow Creek, Pa.,	Edward Byers
Zion Hill, Ohio,	A. L. Lynn

Business Manager's CornerTHE BRETHREN EVANGELIST IN MISSIONARY FIELDS

That the real value of the Brethren Evangelist in developing strength of religious conviction is recognized by the workers in many of our home mission points is indicated by the proportionately large number of these mission organizations that have placed the paper in each family belonging to the church. Among this number we may mention, Muncie, Indiana; Allentown, Pennsylvania; Ft. Scott, Kansas; Fremont, Ohio; Postoria, Ohio; Huntington, Indiana; Leon, Iowa; Fillmore, California, and last and perhaps least, White Chapel, Missouri.

White Chapel is the latest addition to the Evangelist Honor Roll and though this is only a small organization that is looked after by Brother Ronk in his great church extension work in Southern Iowa and Northern Missouri, we welcome it to the Honor Roll with as real and as sincere welcome as we would if it were one of our largest and most completely organized churches. It is as real an achievement and as sure a mark of progress as though one hundred names had been added to our subscription list from some of our larger churches. Moreover we are quite sure a woman was behind this determination to win in the White Chapel congregation.

Related Recognition

We are pleased to announce that the Mt. View church near Roanoke, Virginia, has won its place on the Evangelist Honor Roll for the second year. This announcement should have been made several months ago, and perhaps it was mentioned, but in some manner the name of the church and of the pastor, Brother J. E. Patterson, failed to be included in the list of Honor Roll churches. We beg the pardon of Brother Patterson and the members of this congregation and thank him for calling our attention to the omission. If any other church has been overlooked that is entitled to a place on this roll we will gladly correct the error.

Other pastors are still working with their congregations in an endeavor to get them on the Honor Roll and it will not be their fault if they fail. We hope to make announcement of their successes shortly. In fact a goodly number of churches will have to get busy if we are to reach the FIVE THOUSAND mark before conference.

General Business Improving

It may be a matter of interest to our readers who are concerned about the development of the business of the Publishing House to know that the second week in March recorded the largest amount of cash business done in any one week in the history of the Publishing House. We were indeed glad for this record and we trust we may have the full co-operation of the entire church so that some of our plans for the future development and enlargement of the business of The Brethren Publishing Company may be realized. There is a field and an opportunity for a "bigger and better" publishing house in the Brethren church.

R. R. TEETER,
Business Manager.

Brethren Home of Ohio

An Incorporation with over $10,000 in Assets

PURPOSE. To build a home for the aged and infirm of our church and an orphanage for our children.

Why not make it a National Home for the entire brotherhood? The Board of Trustees will present this proposition at National Conference this year.

Gifts, subscriptions and bequests solicited.

Information cheerfully given.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Ira Fudge, Gratis, Ohio, Pres.
Orion E. Bowman, V. Pres. and Atty.
Elmer Wombold, Secy.
1718 W. Monument Ave., Dayton, Ohio
Jesse A. Garver, Treas.
J. Allen Miller.

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 14

APRIL 2
1919

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETHREN -

ELDER CHAS. F. YODER

PIONEER AND LEADER OF OUR MISSIONARY FORCES IN ARGENTINA.

Whose passion is to block the progress of atheism and agnos-ticism and turn men God-ward.
He and his co-workers ask us to share their passion.

WILL WE?

ELDER J. S. GRIBBLE

LEADER OF OUR FORCES
BOUND FOR THE HEART OF AFRICA

They would stem the tide of Islam and turn men from Grossest Darkness to the Marvelous Light.
They count on us to stand back of them.

WILL WE?

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

The Unprecedented Demand for Missionary Endeavor—Editor,	2	The Sunday School and Foreign Missions—C. E. Kolb,	10
Editorial Review,	3	Christ Our Savior—Dr. J. M. Tombaugh,	10
Another Climactic Day—Dr. Charles A. Bame,	4	Christian Endeavor, Missions and Easter—Prof. J. A. Garber, ...	11
Our Most Insistent Need—Dean J. Allen Miller,	5	Relation of Our Young People to the Missionary Enterprise—
The Appeal of Our Foreign Fields for Support—A. J. McClain, ..	6	A. L. DeLozier,	11
Our Easter Offering—J. C. Cassel,	6	Easter Sunday Prayer Meeting—M. A. Stuckey,	11
A Pauline Spirit to Meet the Present Crisis—L. S. Bauman,	7	The Urgency of the Hour—The Foreign Board,	12
After Marah—Elim (Sermon)—George H. Jones,	8	News from the Field,	13-15
Life and Things—W. R. Deeter,	9	Business Manager's Corner—Dr. R. R. Teeter,	16

EDITORIAL

The Unprecedented Demand for Missionary Endeavor

Never was the cause of missions laid so heavily on the hearts of conscientious Christians as now. The moving, stirring, spreading Gospel is laying hold of devout souls everywhere and seeking to invest them with a passion for evangelism. The spirit seems to be saying to the churches with an insistence that has not been manifest for many a day, "Separate me Paul and Barnabas for the work whereunto I have called them." The leaders of all the evangelical denominations are being impressed with a peculiar urgency of demand to press the battle for Christ's world dominion now as never before. The whole church is being gripped with the conviction that the time has come for the redoubling of its energies for the world-wide expansion of Christianity. There are many reasons for this conviction.

The distressed condition of the world makes a demand for the alleviating influences of the Gospel that we cannot refuse and remain true to the Master of compassion. The world was never so torn and bleeding as it is today and never was relief and sympathy so much in demand. This is what Christianity supplies and does no other religion. Nothing will do so much to give peace and calmness to the grief-stricken world as its consoling words and reassuring promises. Nowhere is there found such a burden-bearer, or so great a physician as it reveals. Nothing causes the oil of human kindness to flow so freely as the application of the gospel of Christ to the hearts of men. And never was this needed so much as now.

The world is torn with a terrible class hatred, evident on every hand. We see the unfortunate arrayed against the fortunate, the unsuccessful against the successful, the laboring class against the moneyed class and the ignorant, superstitious folk against the learned and designing. But the more untouched men are by the gospel of Christ the more do they suspect one another and the more deep-seated is the hatred of one class for another. The caste principle ceases to work after the gospel of Christ has permeated the heart. The slavery of woman is no longer countenanced when Christ enters the heart. The poor no longer consider the wealthy their enemies, nor do the wealthy grind down the poor when the Sermon on the Mount is made the working principle. The unchristianized masses are being rent asunder today by class hatred as never before, and there is nothing that can bridge the gap but the equalizing Gospel. There is no desire to minimize the good influence that an adequate supply of food would have in subduing the flame of hatred that is rising so high among the poor wretches of Russia and Austria. But after all, the only thing that can cure the world of the plague of Bolshevism and anarchy is the cross of Christ.

The world is thoroughly sick of war. For more than four years its ravages were endured. The strongest of the sons of men were sacrificed to the fiendish delight of the god of war; property was ruthlessly destroyed; relics of inestimable value and the heritage of the centuries were made into masses of wreckage in an hour; fertile lands were ruined by trenches and shell holes, fields of grain were turned into battle grounds; women were ravaged, the aged enslaved, babes slain and homes looted; hellish engines of war sailed in the heavens above and prowled under the sea; and food in countless tons was sunk to the bottom of the sea—all these things and many more the world has endured until it has grown deathly sick of the awful hell of war. It wants peace and everywhere cries, "Peace, peace." The nations call one to another saying, "Here is peace," or "There is peace." But when they reach forth to take it, it has vanished in thin air. "There is no peace to the wicked, saith the Lord." There is no desire to discount the beneficent influence of the League of Nations idea. All honor to the noble work of those God-inspired souls. The scheme will have a wonderfully deterring influence to nations entering into war, and it should receive the hearty approval of every Christian man and woman. It is a fruit of the spirit of Christian brotherhood. Yet not by any world constitution or peace treaty can peace be secured. It comes as a gift of the Son of God. "My peace give I unto you," said he; "Not as the world giveth, give I unto you." The world's heart and the hearts of the vast millions are troubled and afraid. Jesus says, "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." Christianity is the only thing that can guarantee to the world true peace. These who acknowledge this fact are under the most solemn obligations, if only from a merely humanitarian standpoint, to make known this most effective war-prevention and to seek its adoption by all people.

The world is unsettled religiously. Not only has the faith of many Christians been shattered by the conflict of the claims and practices of professedly Christian nations, but the non-Christian people have been completely bewildered. They cannot understand how people claiming for Christianity what is claimed for it can engage in the most colossal and destructive war of history. Consequently they are prejudiced against a religion which kings and emperors have declared sanctioned such wholesale slaughter. On the other hand, they have grown dissatisfied with their own pagan beliefs and practices. Their religious experiences have been disappointing and they have turned from their empty forms in disgust. But when they were in the act of receiving the bread from heaven, it seemed to turn to stone in their hands. Not being able to distinguish between inconsistent professors of Christianity and Christianity itself, what wonder if they should turn their backs upon all and go off into atheism or agnosticism. It rests upon us as a bounden duty to go forth with such prayerful, consistent lives to preach the Gospel so persistently and powerfully to every unevangelized and unchristianized soul that the genuineness and all-sufficiency of Christianity shall be established.

Being religiously unsettled, the world is seeking religious leadership. It is awakened and receptive as never before, if it can find the leadership in which it can have confidence. It is hungering and thirsting after righteousness. It is blindly groping after God, crying, "Oh, that I knew where I might find him." It feels assured that it was made for God and that it can find no rest until it finds rest in him. It cannot endure the emptiness that it has been experiencing; it cannot be satisfied with its husks and loneliness; it must come home to the Father's house. How will it find its way, who will give it reception, who will rejoice at its coming? This is the church's opportunity as never before to lead the world to Christ.

This religious awakening carries with it not only a consciousness of the world's need of God, but also a keen sense of the guilt of sin. Sinful men have wearied themselves by their sinning. Even without the Law they have been convicted by the law within. They have felt the awful lashing of conscience; they have experienced the terrible ravages of sin in their bodies; they have known its disrupting influences in the home; they have been crushed by age-long superstition, barbarism and terror. And they have grown weary of it all. They have become sick of sin and are seeking its healing, cleansing power. What better time than this for taking to the sin-sick world the knowledge of the great Physician who can heal the soul of its sin-sickness! Aye, what duty is more commanding! If the church fails now, it will be as the failure of a strong man to call a physician for a comrade who is sick and dying.

The church must hasten with the Gospel to the world in this hour of its transition and awakening, to prevent its becoming engrossed in the most blinding materialism—not the materialism of creed but of life. Multitudes of paganistic peoples have had forced upon them many of the benefits and blessings of civilization through the world war. In India can be seen advertisements of marmalades, jams and the many luxuries and necessities that go with the type of civilization to which these things belong. India has suddenly learned how to manufacture munitions, build railroads, make cities sanitary and to provide herself with all kinds of modern conveniences and means of advancement. In all the backward countries there has come a sudden and marked looking up and moving forward in the possession and use of the products of civilization. There appetites are being whetted to the point of being ravenous for the various civilizing agencies and fruits of progress. The war compelled them to taste, and now they demand more. We cannot withhold from them these benefits, nor would we, but there is something more important that we must supply them without fail. That is the gospel of Jesus Christ. Nothing else can save them from a cold materialism that will make them almost immune to Christianity. Unless we take them the message of Christ now, they will call our protested unselfishness during the war a mere sham, or "a very long-sighted quality of mercenary shrewdness." We are sending forth our merchants, manufacturers, engineers, prospectors and bankers, and we must be ready to send forth missionaries adequately equipped in numbers to equal those who go forth to exploit and to barter. If we do not, we deserve the reputation which half the world up till now has imputed to us and the rest of the world has half believed, namely, that we are a set of money-grabbers.

Now is the time for a forward movement in world evangelization. The doors are open; the demands are great; the resources are at hand. The situation demands action. Other world movements are going forward at a rapid pace and Christianity must keep pace with them in

(Continued on page 9)

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Brother Typton writes again from Evelyn, Kentucky, telling of a visit to Lost Creek.

You will notice that the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor departments are doing their full share in the effort to boost foreign missions. Notice the suggestion for a Christian Endeavor Easter morning prayer meeting. It's a good one.

It is with regret that we note the disbanding of the church and Sunday school at Astoria, Illinois, but such is the announcement made by Sister Susan Lehman of that place. They offer their song books to any one needing them.

Brother Goughnour sends additional reports on the first two months of the Sunday school contest which is to close the last of April. Canton, Ohio, 31 points; Ashland, Ohio, 36 points. Keep on sending your reports, they are still interesting.

Brother Bauman will be in a revival meeting at the Third Brethren church in Philadelphia during the month of April, and any one wishing to correspond with him by a more direct route than Long Beach, California, may address him at 5045 N. Smedley Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

McLouth, Kansas, wants a preacher. Part of this people are members of the Church of the Brethren and part are members of the Brethren church, but they have learned to worship together and be harmonious enough to be satisfied with a preacher of either of the above mentioned denominations.

It appears from the material and cuts that Brother Bauman is sending to the office that the next issue of The Brethren Missionary will be an exceptionally fine number. It will bring the work and the workers to you in a way that will interest and enlist you more fully in the great work that the Brethren church is doing in world-evangelization. There ought to be larger circulation given to this splendid little missionary magazine. Send your name and 25 cents in stamps to Brother L. S. Bauman, whose address is given elsewhere in this department, and you will get The Missionary for a year.

Brother W. H. Miller, pastor of the Pleasant Grove church, Iowa, reports the work of that field in this issue. Various conditions have hindered his work there, but he looks for better days with the returning good roads and warm weather. He is leading the people into a very important undertaking, the building of a parsonage. They are getting lined up for definite work on the Four Year Program also. Brother Miller announces his intention of leaving at the close of his year's work, and will be open to a call. His present charge will also be in need of a pastor.

A most interesting report is made by Brother Witter of the evangelistic campaign in which he assisted at Johnstown, Pa. Brother Watson and his large family of faithful workers certainly left no stone unturned in their preparation for the campaign and the splendid results fully justified their thoroughness. The combined enthusiasm, wisdom, perseverance and consecrated power of two team mates like Brethren Watson and Witter, supported by so efficient a corps of workers as the Johnstown bunch is could hardly fail of success. We confidently expect their continued growth will make the proposed new church an absolute necessity.

Again the Kanemorado district has done itself proud, and this time it is Beaver City's credit. When one knows the conditions of that little-but-never-discouraged church, it is really surprising that they did so well. They have lost heavily in membership during the last year and have been without a pastor part of the time. Nevertheless they are bravely holding up their local work and at the same time doing nobly for Ashland College. This church did not lag one inch behind the other churches of that district. Brother Beachler has certainly gotten into some fast company out on the prairies, a man with less "pep" and shorter legs could hardly keep up. But he can, and seems to enjoy it.

Another interesting letter comes to us from Brother Thomas under the caption, "Keeping the Home Fires Burning." He reports a great campaign with Brother Kimmel at Muncie, Indiana. Brother Kimmel seems to have the grip on the situation and is leading his faithful people on to larger things. Of course we would expect that of Brother Kimmel for he has been in the habit of succeeding, and Brother Thomas furnished the "pep" to make the campaign a stirring success. At North Manchester, the evangelist finds another real leader and a strong people with great ambitions. Brother Bame has been putting the forward look into his people for several years and they are making progress at every turn of the road. It was a great campaign, resulting from thorough work and consecration. Brother Thomas is now at Peru.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

Another Climactic Day

The wheels of time have ground on until we are again at Eastertide—resurrection time. The buds have begun to burst; the grass is already green; the gardener already busy; the farmer already plowing; the birds singing and nesting; the little chickens have bursted the shell and are peeping, peeping, peeping all around us. It is resurrection time. Soon, the buds will have bursted into bloom; the garden will smile with the new crop; the corn will be seen in rows, long, regular and beautiful. The little lambs will be sporting on the green pastures; the cow chewing the cud in the shade of the leafy trees. What a wonderful awakening nature will soon portray for us. Think it over.

Are Raised From the Dead?

"You hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins." Ah, we were dead but now are we quickened if we are his. The springtide of his unceasing presence has possessed our life and we die not. We die not, yet when the new life of another spring bursts upon us, we can not be irresponsible to the quickening of everything around us. We arise to new tides of action and inspiration. We sing with a new note of joy. We awake to larger opportunities and possibilities. We ascend to a higher horizon and see in the near distance the glory of the things we strive to do and rush on with quickened pace. We have been quickened, who once were dead. Think on these things

Are You Happy?

"Rejoice with them that do rejoice and"—well, we must "weep with them that weep." But the springtime is the happy time—happy because of what we see around us and because of what we contemplate. The newly sprouted crop is beautiful in itself; but a thousand times more beautiful because of what we expect of it. So, to the Lord of glory is the newly-born soul. It is beautiful in its purity but a thousand times more beautiful is it because it has within itself the making of a divine likeness. It is beautiful because born but a thousand times more beautiful to the great Master because it shall grow and produce fruit—the fruit of godliness unto life eternal.

When He Comes

"When he comes shall he find faith on the earth?" Once we wondered at the meaning of that. Now, we do not. With the tides of revolution sweeping over the earth menacing everything that means civilization and culture; with foundations crumbling like the foundation of sand from beneath everything that we counted precious and valuable; with the hands of time already running swiftly the wrong way, do we wonder that nineteen centuries ago, the All-Seeing wondered if, when he came, he should find faith on the earth? Then, he spake and by the graciousness of his words, woman was liberated from the bondage into which the lusts of sinful man had plunged her. But today, the hands of time are reversed and women in Russia—and because in Russia, beware!—is the slave of the state rearing children not to be hers nor for her love but for the aggrandizement of human lust and greed. Then, he warned of the fleetfulness of money and a money-mad world rushed on for it as if it were all, and today, he mocks at the calamities of nations trying to mend the world to save the money they have squandered on war that will never return to their coffers.

Then, he said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away but my word shall never pass away." But today, in the very house of his professed friends, in one of the best if not the best endowed university of our country—ours, mind you—they spew out this: "In the light of the new historical criticism, it has been discovered to be a natural instead of a supernatural book (the Bible) and to reflect the scientific knowledge of ancient peoples rather than to anticipate the scientific knowledge of the modern world." "Biblical infallibility is now abandoned." Conversation is merely "a natural phenomenon of adolescence." But the climax of it all as to the purposes of this paper in this sentence:

"The Christian world no longer looks on the heathen world"

There my friends is the challenge to every believer in the Brethren church. It is the challenge for our Easter offering. Is that foul statement true? We no longer see heathen. Ah, my God, is the time of the apostacy upon us? May it not be that we have come to the time when we shall make the last Easter offering in the church age? "The time shall come when they will not endure sound doctrine," said the inspired author. In the last days, shall they heap to themselves, teachers having itching ears. Have we come to that time? There is no Christian and no heathen world. Ah, then we are all very much alike. All going to the same destiny but some on the Buddhist route; some on Christian Science routes; some on idolatrous routes; some on God-rejecting routes; but all going on to God. My God! save us fro ma seminary that teaches such God-defying stuff as that!

Is It True?

But is it true that we do not longer look on a heathen world? If it is true, then why not tell it out? Surely there is no harm in telling the truth even though it may not be expedient, or may not sound well. The terrible thing is that there is too much truth in it to be successfully denied. When the cost of the world war is estimated to be all the way to 160 billions of dollars and we know how pitifully small are and have been the gifts of these so-called Christian nations, for the spread of the Gospel, then we wonder how far from the truth is such a statement even though it comes from a from a seminary that teaches such God-defying stuff as that! alarm.

Are You Alarmed?

No, I did not say frightened. I do not wish to frighten you but I do wish you might be alarmed at this trend of the times and make your gifts to missions accordingly. If the trend of things generally does alarm the Brethren church, then this Easter offering will go away and beyond anything that we have ever done, regardless of the splendid increase of last year. How that delighted us! Did not you feel glad when it was announced last year that our goal for foreign missions was reached the first year that we ever seriously tried? Well, we profess to take the word of God seriously and let us once more prove it. Let us accept the challenge of a gainsaying worldly theology that we no longer see a heathen world by proving that so far as the Brethren church is concerned, we do not believe it and we shall prove it by the dollar mark.

The Last Call

Yesterday, it was announced to the country that Dr. C. A. Eaton, pastor of John D. Rockefeller's church has resigned; giving it as his conviction that the world is on the verge of a cataclysm. He is reported to have said that we are soon to see the realization of the kingdom of God on earth or are to go back to chaos and lose our present civilization. It is awful but any one but a blind man must see the potency of the statement. It may be the last opportunity. Let us make the Savior glad by our Easter—resurrection—OFFERING.

BAME.

GENERAL ARTICLES

Our Most Insistent Need. By Dean J. Allen Miller

The Board of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren church recently held a most important meeting. An entire day was given to most careful and prayerful consideration of all our work and the difficult problems connected therewith. We found an unusual unanimity of sentiment and the board looks forward with great expectations to an enlarged work in this the greatest task committed to the church. It is the intention of the writer in this brief statement to set forth the most insistent and persistent need of the board at this hour.

This need is not money. Though we are praying and working to make the coming Easter offering for foreign missions the best in our history.

This need is not an opportunity to work. For have we not now the greatest open doors ever set before us as a people? Look at the unreached multitudes of the Ubangi-Shari districts of Africa. Look at the million of people living within our territory in Argentina. "Say not ye there are yet four months and then cometh the harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields, they are white already unto the harvest."

THIS NEED IS FOR MEN AND WOMEN WHO ARE PREPARED TO DO MISSION WORK.

Not long since in listening to an earnest appeal of a representative of a board of another denomination for volunteers for the mission fields the statement was made that ONLY ONE OUT OF THREE VOLUNTEERS was accepted. The speaker urged a greater number to volunteer. The ground of the appeal was that the board might have the opportunity of choosing the best who offered themselves. I was deeply impressed with our present situation as I sat and pondered. Your board at this very hour can not even fill needed positions much less make a choice of workers.

The board now is on the search for at least the following workers for our Argentina field:

A man and wife to take the place of the pastor and wife now on the field and soon due for a furlough to the home-land.

A man and wife to take charge of the Bible coach. These people would travel all over our territory and sell and distribute Bibles and literature among the people, hold open air meetings wherever they stopped, gather the believers found into groups and care for them. A wonderful work!

From a recent letter from Brother Yoder we learn that there is also needed a teacher to conduct a private school for English speaking children and for the children of the better classes of natives. Also a music teacher who could give instruction in voice and on the piano.

Besides we need to enlarge our work. For every new station established we need a man and wife. We ought to send at least enough workers to open one or two new stations besides the others before named to take places indicated.

AT THIS VERY HOUR WE OUGHT TO HAVE TEN WORKERS FOR OUR SOUTH AMERICAN MISSION WORK. Two young ladies as teachers and four couples would meet this need.

As for the need in Africa, we are also looking for additional workers. Our African party now has only two men in it. We do by no means disparage the great work Dr. Gribble and her lady companions will do when we say that we need more MEN in this party. By the time this is read we hope the permission may have been obtained to move forward. As soon as the field is selected and the work can be begun we must send more men to this field. To send the men needed we shall of course be glad to send with them their helpmates. Africa needs a dentist and a linguist. Fortunately we have a doctor and several nurses but we need a dentist in a field distinctly his own. As for the linguist, he will be needed in giving the word of God to the people in their language or dialect. No greater work can well be conceived than this. As this work opens and develops distinctive activities will call for workers and the board just must have a group of volunteers whose capabilities are known from whom to select as the need arises. May there not arise at once ten men and women of varied capabilities for this African field.

How can this great need of workers to come forth and offer themselves be met? What can be done to arouse these whom the Lord needs in these fields of labor? Or can it be possible that the board has to face these needs and have no hope of meeting them? Can it be possible that the men and women who ought to do this work and whom the Lord definitely calls to this work are not found within the church? Is it not true that we have both the money with which to support this work and the workers to do it? If the Lord makes an OPEN DOOR will he not also CALL THE WORKER? What then remains for us to do? May I suggest three things that the church ought unitedly to do? The first is PRAY. Is it not after all primarily a matter of prayer? Does not the Lord of the harvest himself say, The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest. When the church prays in faith no power can withstand the answer from heaven. When the church prays unitedly no men and women upon whom the Spirit falls can stay at home if called to Africa or Argentina.

The second thing the church ought to do is to inform herself of our work and our opportunities. The people yet perish for lack of knowledge. Missionary enthusiasm is measured by missionary intelligence. Uninformed men and congregations do little or nothing. We need to know God's will in the matter of missions. Jesus said the Gospel must be preached among the nations. The dire need of all unevangelized peoples ought to appeal to us. But the big and all-sufficient and determining factor in this whole matter of missions is and ever must be the WILL OF GOD. Know the will of God, my brethren and sisters, and we need appeal to you no longer for help. I have the assuring confidence that when once we know the will of God for us that a sufficient number will willingly offer themselves.

The third thing we ought to do is talk missions. If we are informed we can talk about this work. If we know the will of God we shall not be able to hold our peace. We shall talk and give and pray. If we are enthusiastic for a cause we can not hold our peace. He who talks missions speaks a good word for Jesus. He also speaks a good word for his brother. And this affects three men, himself, the brother whom he induces to go and the lost brother who is found for the Lord. What a wonderful opportunity.

May I conclude by speaking a rather personal word to those to whom these words may come and who may be led to offer themselves? Do not hesitate to pray over the matter of YOUR going. After having prayed over the matter write to the addresses given at the conclusion of this contribution. Ask any questions. If you think yourself unprepared consider the matter of securing the necessary preparation. God's call always carries with it the call to prepare for the task he assigns. Do you find any barriers that seem to make your going impossible? Perhaps if you were to write we could help you remove them. We need married men and women and you are unmarried and so may think we can not use you. We want you. Perhaps you could find a life companion and a life-work at the same time. Seriously, why not?

How can this appeal for help be made effective? What can be said to lay it more heavily upon the heart of the church?

Are we not face to face with the most momentous days in human history? Is it not time and opportunity passing? Will it not soon be too late for many and perhaps all of us? What have we really ever done that has been worth while in the publishing of the Gospel?

The day of penny-giving and penny-living is forever past for all men who sense the mission of the church in our day. We shall only be frivolling if we do not give LIFE. Life in terms of MONEY must be given—BIG GIFTS. Gifts that honor God because commensurate with ability to give. LIFE in terms of SERVICE must also be given.

I am pleading for men and women to come forward and offer themselves—LIFE in terms of SERVICE for Argentina and Africa.

I gave, I gave my life for thee,
What hast thou given for me?"

Will any one led of the Spirit to offer himself or herself for work write either to the Secretary of the Board, Brother Alva J. McClain, 5045 N. Smedley, Philadelphia, Pa., or the writer at Ashland, Ohio.

The Appeal of Our Foreign Fields For Support. By Alva J. McClain

There are fields in the world today which members of the Brethren church can truly call "our fields." The time was when there was no particular foreign field for whose evangelization we as a church had become responsible. But that day has passed. We have "our" fields, and therefore "necessity is laid upon us" for their adequate support.

In the Argentine Republic of South America our missionaries have marked out a field with definite boundary lines for the Brethren church. Request has been made for representation upon the Interdenominational Council in South America in order that this territory might be definitely assigned to the Brethren church for evangelization. According to our latest information this representation has been promised. Now some will say this is good because it will protect the Brethren work from being encroached upon by other denominations. And so it is, but let us not forget it also means that the Christians of the Brethren church have become definitely responsible for the souls included within the territory of this field.

In Africa the Brethren church has a party of missionaries who have as their objective field a portion of the Ubangi-Shari Tehad district of the French Sudan. I have just received the glad word that the Rollier family have arrived safely in Brazzaville and have joined the Gribble party which has been there for several months. The entire party now numbers six adults and three children. Reports from them indicate that the journey into the interior will be begun before long. Now there is in the French Sudan a vast territory which is untouched by the Gospel. Just as soon as our party has selected a desirable and permanent location for the central mission station, the problems and needs of the field will be carefully surveyed and our missionaries will mark out a definite field of labor for the Brethren church. This means that in Africa ere long there will be a definite territory which members of the Brethren church may call "our field."

Now these fields in Africa and South America need support. To speak plainly, it takes both missionaries and money, sanctified by the Holy Spirit, to evangelize the peoples of these fields. These missionaries and this money must come, in the main at least, from the Brethren church. The responsibility is ours.

A multitude of considerations enforce the appeal of these fields for our support. These fields are a part of the world for which Christ died. They are a part of the world of which it is written, "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself." The Brethren church is a part of the body into whose hands has been "committed the Word of Reconciliation." Then there are the moral and spiritual needs of these fields which in themselves constitute a mute but nevertheless tremendous appeal. Yes, the appeal comes to us as a church from various angles, but it seems to me that the urgency and the strength of the appeal for the support of these fields lies in the fact that THEY ARE 'OUR FIELDS.' No appeal could possibly be stronger. A man and his wife point proudly to a little child and say, "Our child." The use of that possessive pronoun implies an obligation to support, protect and care for the child. To Jehovah the nation of Israel was "my people." And when the nation sinned grievously against God, what a mighty appeal it was that Moses made for them on the basis of that possessive pronoun! "Save them, O Lord, for they are THY PEOPLE." And how gracious was the promise that the Lord made concerning those whom he called "my sheep!" Because they are such, "they shall never perish." And in his final high-priestly prayer the Lord Jesus speaks to the Father of those "which thou gavest me out of the world." He calls them "mine," and says "while I was with them in the world I kept them." O how faithful he is in caring for the ones he calls "mine!" Because we are "his" he has never failed to provide for our need in the past and he will never fail in the future.

May God grant unto us as members of the Brethren church the spirit of his faithfulness, that we as a church may provide for the need of "OURS" in South America and Africa.

And may it not come to pass in the day when we shall all stand before the Bema-Seat of Christ, that the Brethren church shall have cause to be ashamed before him because we failed to care for "OURS."

Philadelphia, Pa.

Our Easter Offering. By J. C. Cassel

The time is again at hand when it is necessary for the Board of Trustees of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren church to make its appeal to the church for the wherewithal to carry on the work of the Society for another year.

Not being the treasurer of the Society any more, I do not know the exact figures of the budget for another year, but I do know that we still owe about five thousand dollars on the property at Rio Cuarto, and that we ought to have at least five thousand dollars to purchase a property at Calota where Brother and Sister Bock are located.

With the strong anti-Protestant opposition in Argentina our mission work will always be involved in uncertainty as long as we occupy rented properties. The priests are always conniving how to drive out Protestant Christian work and if they can influence property owners to dispossess our missionaries they will do so. Hence we should own the real estate wherever we aim to establish a permanent work.

Last year we went "over the top" on our financial goal, but this year we ought to go "over the top" on our financial needs which is a matter of at least ten thousand dollars in addition to our treasury balance.

Easter comes but once a year, and when it comes we should all appear with our "once a year" foreign mission offering. Will we do it?

The Holy Spirit works for eternity, and only eternity can give the results of his work. And he never fails. He knows where Christ's sheep are and goes straight to them. —Samuel Levermore.

A Pauline Spirit to Meet the Present World Missionary Crisis

BY LOUIS S. BAUMAN

Few people realize what a tremendous crisis the church of Jesus Christ is facing in her missionary activities. During the war there were tragic sufferings on nearly all mission fields. These were due to a number of causes, among which were, the stoppage of money transmissions and difficulties in overcoming these stoppages; the difficulties in securing transportation for missionaries going to the fields because of the oftentimes total disappearance of passenger vessels; the constant long delays and necessary re-arrangement of travel routes and dates for sailing, as the Rolliers, for instance, are well able to testify; the stoppage of freight transportation, especially to African fields, as is instanced in a large order for the Gribbles placed with a large Chicago firm last May, but which lay packed and waiting in New York for transportation until last February; the discouraging attitude of governments when trying to secure proper passports or special permits to enter mission fields, as instanced in the Gribble party still waiting at Brazzaville, Africa, for permission to enter Ubangi-Shari; the long delays and uncertainties in the forwarding of the mails; the tremendous increase in the rates of exchange;—these are just some of the things that have added to the load our missionaries and the executive officers of our missionary societies have had to carry.

Again, in many fields, such as Syria, Persia, North Africa, West Africa, and the entire Ottoman Empire, war conditions put practically a complete stop to the gathering in of vast "fields of ripening grain,"—much of which, after many years of patient sowing will go forever ungathered. We well know here at home what a few weeks of the "flu" did to our church activities. What must months and years of such stoppage have done to the work in the inhospitable darkness of paganism?

We think we have suffered here at home through the "high cost of living." Have we ever thought of its meaning to thousands of missionaries whose allowances were barely above a living wage, if any, before the war and were not increased during the war? In many fields, the cost of living arose as much as 700 percent and more. Freight rates across the Pacific increased 300 percent and even 400 percent in some cases.

Then, we have to remember that before the war there were twenty-one Protestant German missionary societies doing good work in heathen darkness, and that their activities were practically all ended during the war; indeed, many of them are probably forever ended. These societies had over 1,250 workers in the fields and have left a baptized constituency of nearly 400,000 souls unsheltered, to say nothing of thousands upon thousands of adherents.

Then, the tremendous crisis in the church at home cannot fail to create a similar crisis in the fields beyond. The church here at home is at the parting of the ways. She is hesitating between becoming a materialistic, time-serving institution, concerned almost wholly with things temporal and a spiritual soul-saving institution whose mission it is to deal with the things that are eternal. She must choose between the unbelief of the so-called "Higher Critics" who are leavening her with the leaven of death, and the belief of her men of faith in the infallible word of God as set forth in the Holy Scriptures.

Last, and by no means least, difficult as was mission work before the great war, missionaries now have to face the heathen world with further and exceedingly difficult explanations! With nearly all heathen peoples, religion is closely allied with the state. To them the national aspects of religious faith mean much. And they are thinking mighty hard that in the tremendous breakdown of so-called "Christian civilization" in the so-called "Christian nations," that Christianity itself has failed. Dr. Barton tells us of one educated Mohammedan, who, in a public address, pointed with scorn to the "Christian nations" that were "busy cutting each other's throats," and said: "That is Christian civilization! We spit in the face of such civilization!" This alone has increased infinitely the tasks of the missionary in many lands.

Such is the crisis we are facing in our mission fields. How are we to meet this crisis? Nothing less than a rebirth of the old Pauline spirit that hurled itself against even greater barriers nineteen centuries ago, and shook the foundations of paganism until it tottered and fell, can again meet the crisis the church is facing in the twentieth century of her existence!

The rebirth of the Pauline spirit in the church will mean true democracy within her which does not yet fully exist. There are churches whose exclusive sets give anything but a hearty welcome to the horny-handed laborer. Within but a few weeks past we have heard even members of so democratic a church, as Brethren churches are supposed to be, protest against the reception of persons into the congregation whose skins happened to be of another color. The Pauline spirit would mean utter death to any such aristocracy of blood. Listen: "Paul stood in the midst of Mars' Hill, and said, 'Ye men of Athens, * * * God * * * made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth!'" The Pauline spirit must dim to extinction all lines of race and color and class. To Paul, all were his brothers in the flesh, though their skins be black and their noses flat. The great war has surely made the world realize this as never before. Men of many nationalities, fighting for life and liberty, all under one command, side by side, found that after all they were of one uncommon stuff; that the lines between capitalist and laborer, between autocrat and democrat, between Bolshevik and bourgeoisie, were more imaginary than real. This is finely expressed in the recent poem of Robert Freeman, "That They May All Be One:"

"I used to think him heathen
Just because—well, don't you see,
He didn't speak 'God's English,'
And he didn't look like me;
He had a burnt complexion
Which is heathen, goodness knows;
He ate a heathen's rations,
And he wore a heathen's clothes.
But there's a s'prising skinkful
In that bloke from far away:
He fights like any Christian,
And I've caught the beggar pray;
He's kind to little kiddies,
And there's written in his eyes
The willingness to render
All a Christian's sacrifice.
Yes, you'd know him for a heathen
If you judged him by his hide;
But, bless you, he's my brother,
For he's just like me inside."

The Pauline spirit knows just two kinds of men,—the regenerate and the unregenerate; those who are in Christ and those who are out of Christ; those who are brothers in the Spirit and those who are brothers in the flesh; those who are of the fatherhood of God and those who are of the fatherhood of Satan. To him, the only line that divides men is purely a spiritual line.

The rebirth of the Pauline spirit in the church will mean the rebirth of her sense of tremendous obligation to those who are out of Christ, no matter who nor where they are. Listen again to his cry: "Woe is me if I preach not this Gospel," for, "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise;" "none

(Continued on page 16)

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

After Marah-Elim. By George H. Jones

And they came to Elim where there were twelve springs of water, and three score and ten palm trees. Exodus 15:27.

When the children of Israel left Egypt for Canaan, the journey, begun under such favorable circumstances, suffered many disastrous stoppages. The Red Sea experience was unexpected, yet necessary. The songs of deliverance encouraged and strengthened them. No expectation of the long, hot and dusty marches entered their minds; they were children in outlook as well as in faith. And their sufferings eclipsed their trust.

Their complaints were deep and bitter. The maddened mob felt free to murmur their complaints without fear of consequences. Three days marching through the trackless wilderness had wearied and worn the tribes. The pitiless sun beat down on the long straggling columns of weary men, women and children. Here and there a beast stopped in stubborn protest. Burdens were becoming unbearable. Throats were parched and the ground was hot and dusty. When patience was about exhausted the lure of water began to be felt by the burdened animals. Soon the columns began to converge toward the distant waters until with a rush many broke from the ranks to hasten to slake their thirst. What was their disappointment to find the water brackish and bitter. Noxious herbs and stagnant scum made the very look of it nauseating. Long and loud were their complaints. Their leaders were just as keenly disappointed. Who could know what the future might bring forth? So in their desperation, "They cried unto the Lord; and the Lord shewed him (Moses) a tree, which when he had cast it into the water, the waters were made sweet; and the name of the place was called Marah."

The Bitter Draughts of Life

Israel's pilgrimage is a type of all earthly journeys. The light-hearted start, full of joyful anticipation; the unexpected obstacle, impossible to surmount; the divine intervention, unlooked for and so marvelously effective. The reaction, like the rebound of a child's rubber ball. After the depth of despair came the height of delirium, then the dogged determination and the days and nights of suffering which culminated in the bitter wail of anguish and woe.

It was a blessing that the future was hidden from them. It is one of life's richest inheritances that the future is veiled in the mists of uncertainty. Many of God's noblest saints have looked back from a mountain peak of achievement and chastening and acknowledged their thanks to God for his merciful hiding of the "furnaces of affliction" through which they have passed. The children of Israel would have made no effort to leave Egypt, had they been given a vision of the hard and thorny way over which they later traveled. How many, too, out of the richest of useful lives, have praised God for the benefits which affliction has brought to them. Life is always enriched by varieties of experience.

God knew their needs. Marah is only a temporary obstacle on the way. After Marah comes Elim. After Calvary was Paradise. After earth's enmities come heaven's felicities. But direction determines destiny. Elim was only in one direction. Any other line of march would miss it. It is always direction rather than distance that eventually brings the victory. Strong lives are always made stronger by temporary delays. Defeat after all is only a question of disposition. Discouragement stimulates faith. Character is molded in nobler form more from adversity than prosperity.

John Bunyan was indebted to Bedford jail for the leisure and privacy necessary to produce Pilgrim's Progress. The world which has profited from the volume was enriched more by the persecution and sufferings that made the book possible, than had Bunyan never known affliction. Milton, Shaftsbury, Paul the Apostle, Fannie Crosby; time would fail to enumerate the galaxy of noble manhood and womanhood, who were shining examples of faith, hope and love, made more helpful to man by the alchemy of suffering. And when the element of sacrifice enters in, we have JESUS of Nazareth.

The best by test, is God's plan. Leader and follower both travel the same road. The difference between the status of the two, is the feeling with which disappointment, discouragement, delay and danger is met. It takes size to be able to work with God. John Mark had not grown large enough when he had the opportunity to accompany Paul to Pamphylia, but went back to Jerusalem. Later he grew large enough to be used for a big work. Breadth and depth are acquired only as experience is allowed to teach.

Applications

There are present day Marahs for all. Discouraged parents take heart, "the darkest cloud has a silver lining." Toiling men take heart. "There is rest for the weary." "Anxious mothers take heart, there is relief for the worried. Tempted souls take heart, Marahs are common to man. But beyond is Elim. Even Marah can become sweet. The bitter waters can be changed; and are for the child of God. Life contains many forgotten wells of refreshing and shades for the heat of the day.

1st.—Our Homes.

What they can become, if we will! How precious are their memories only the wanderer in a far country can feel. The lasting good possible, the aged patriarch can best recall. When all else is forgotten the querulous cry of the dying sojourner haunts the memory, "I want to go home." Across the decades the heart goes straight to the early nest. Its joys of childhood come with an all-consuming power. Home! How it refreshes the soul. Mother and father, the family circle, the quiet evening hour, the family altar, the odor of a favorite dish that mother made so well, the long dead companion who passed away in youth—the mind sweeps back across the years and there are no recollections more tender. It is a perennial spring.

2nd.—The Sanctuary.

Our church. It must have been built for our spiritual needs. What cared we for architect's styles; we thirsted for the Water of Life. The streams of worldliness have made an ocean of tears. Our hearts are aching for the pure water of life. Just that the weary soul can rest, under the shade of the "Tree of Life." We want no "book reviews" here, unless they are reviews of The Book. The "Quiet House" beyond the turmoil and noise of the worldly struggle. It must be a pure well to refresh for the renewal of the struggle is what we seek. Our journey is a continued one, we have only begun it and Marah has left a bad taste in our mouths. We come here to "See Jesus." We want to partake of the "Water of Life, freely." This is the pilgrim's need. The church must supply it.

3rd.—Our Friendships.

Nothing is more precious in our accessions than the bond of a strong friendship. "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." Friends are people of like-mindedness. Few sources of inspiration bring more strength than the consciousness of companionship. Friends are those who through adversity or prosperity "stick closer than a brother." The number and kind usually denote what "manner of men" we are. "Association begets assimilation." What a privilege, or a solemn opportunity!

4th.—Our Heavenly Home.

This is the goal of our earthly pilgrimage. The bitterness is all forgotten. The hardships are only remembered by their challenge. The weary journey is over at last. There remains just a dim recollection of the hot sun, the dust and the desert, the parched throat and the swollen tongue, the shallow complaining, the bitter recrimination, all swallowed up in the all-pervading joy of the soul at home with its friends and God.

These are perennial springs. Pure, refreshing supplies for every need. Easy of access are they, and numerous to contemplate. They are the source of all noble inspiration. Elim is God's provision after Marah.

OUR DEVOTIONAL

Life and Things. By W. R. Deeter

OUR SCRIPTURE

For a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth. And he spoke a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully: and he thought within himself, saying, "What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?" And he said, "This will I do: I will pull down my barns and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, 'Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry.'" But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy should shall be required of thee: then whose shall these things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself and is not rich toward God.—Luke 12:15b-21.

OUR MEDITATIONS

When a man hath abundance, his life is not derived from his possessions.

I. What men will undergo for possessions.

From the way we see men seeking possessions we would suppose the very opposite from the scripture to be true. A few of the things they sacrifice and undergo to get possessions may be mentioned here: The cold of the Klondyke, the heat of the Tropics, the fevers of South African jungles, the perils of the depths of the sea, the loneliness or privations of the prairies, the height of mountains, the dangers of war and the diseases and discomforts of city slums. These do not deter men in their mad rush to possess "things." And yet we are plainly told, and lack no conviction of the fact that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." Is it not strange THAT SO MUCH ENERGY ON THE PART OF SO MANY people should be so greatly misdirected?

But let us at the same time notice this, that the Bible no where discourages the possession of things. It says nothing whatever against it. But what it does say is that a man's life does not consist in things, or the abundance of the things which he may possess. He may possess things; that may not be wrong, may not do the man any harm; but it is very wrong and of very great harm when the things begin to possess the man, or when the man begins to estimate his life by the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

II. In What Then Does a Man's Life Consist?

1. In the first place it consisteth in being a Christian. However simple it may sound, and however oft one may have heard it, yet the fact is that that is the principle thing.—the being a CHRISTIAN. Whether we have things or not matters but little, but whether we be Christian or not matters all. "Wisdom is the principle thing; therefore get wisdom." And this means the sort of wisdom of which the wise Solomon wrote when he said: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."

2. In the second place, a man's life consists in leading others to be Christians. The foolish man was going to tear down his barns and build greater and there store up his goods that he might keep them for himself. Selfishness is death. Every selfish man is standing in the shoes of "the rich fool." His trouble was that he had somehow failed to get the true idea that man's life consists, not in gathering to himself possessions, but in helping other people to possess. The best possession any one can have is life eternal, and the best use any one can make of his money, his time, his influence, his efforts, his social powers and all, is that of directing and leading others to be Christians. There is abundance of opportunity for all to become thus "rich toward God."

3. In the third place, a man's life consists in the perfecting of his Christian character. There is one kind of covetousness God encourages in us. He even commands it. "Covet earnestly the best gifts." A man's life consists in coveting the best gifts and in acquiring them, gifts of patience, meekness, gentleness, faith, charity, power to be, power to bear and power to do. No man is ever better occupied than when engaged in the use of means for strengthening and perfecting his character. "Things" are trivial. Character is important. "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth," but in the number and quality of the graces he acquires and the strength and beauty of the character he develops.

4. In the fourth place, a man's life consists in helping others to perfect their characters. The poorest men in all the world are not the men who own the least money, not even those who possess in themselves the least character, but those who lay stumbling-blocks or use means to drag down the characters of others. The richest men in all the world are not those who own the most money; but those who are Christians themselves and who do the most to help others to be Christians: who use the greatest endeavor to perfect, not their own character only, but also that of others. Poor indeed is every one who "layeth up treasure for himself and is not rich toward God." Rich indeed is every one who is rich in faith, rich in hope, rich in love, rich in good works, "rich towards God." Whether rich or poor in this world's goods you may be a millionaire in character and an heir of eternal glory, having a right to possess mansions above.

OUR PRAYER

O Lord, may we not forget at this Easter time that life's blessings do not come from "things," but from thy bountiful storehouse of love, mercy and peace. We do not receive them because of merit, but out of thy compassionate love. May we in turn give of our means, and be willing to help in an humble way to glorify thy name in other lands, by helping to promote Christian character in those less fortunate than ourselves. Amen.

(Continued from page 3)

order to make the most of her opportunities. Material development, commercial expansion, political alliances and social adjustments are making their way among the most backward of the world's people. Christianity should not follow, but lead. There are counter forces and contending religions at work among heathen peoples; if Christianity tarries, she will find her work made more difficult and her future less hopeful. Even now, Islam is seeking the conquest of the continent of Africa and atheism has all but captured the student body of South America. This is the day of Christianity's challenge. With one mind the church must go forward to the task. There must be no quibbling or internal conflict. We must not get our eyes so close to minor issues that the task of supreme moment is obscured. He, who by insistence upon conformity to his own private interpretations makes a united, harmonious, aggressive campaign impossible, must surely be considered an "obstructionist." The compelling need is not to know how a church stands on this or that item of only minor theological significance, for the lost world will not be saved by a church that "stands." The all-eclipsing need at this hour is a church that will concentrate all its power in one grand effort to meet the supreme and unprecedented demands for service made of it in this unparalleled world situation, and to make Christ known and loved in all the world.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Sunday School and Foreign Missions

By C. E. Kolb, National Supt. of Missions

To the business world, "today" presents the greatest opportunity which the country has ever experienced for enlarging the selling area for all merchandise. The market of the American manufacturer is the world and in government-owned ships his salesmen and his products are being distributed to the four winds. Keen, efficient business strategy has taken hold of the favorable and new situations and turned them into gold dollars. Before the war, the age was characterized as "advertising mad," but now the most gorgeously beautiful multi-colored advertisements vie one with another in the highest priced advertising mediums of the country. The "trade" at home and abroad is buying and will buy more extensively. The future will likely see the collapse of efforts to sell inferior goods and the success of those houses offering "A-1" commodities.

Christian acumen recognizes "today" as the crucial moment for the advertising and dissemination throughout all countries of earth's and heaven's greatest product—Jesus Christ. The world wants the best of everything and will ultimately reject the "just as good." All of which applies to religion. The trend of missionary activity in the Brethren church is toward the giving of large sums and noble lives whereby may be sent with constantly gathering momentum the gospel to all the world. If "Eventually—Why Not Now?"

While our Sunday schools remember all the various departments of our church's activity, yet they are strongest in missions. The Sunday school force is a mighty host of dependables for the promotion of all missionary movements. The officers plan and present larger missionary programs each year. The teachers collect vast amounts of missionary illustrations and information, which as occasion offers, they dispense to their classes. (Teachers, note various articles in this issue of the Evangelist). The Sunday school scholars voluntarily constitute themselves partners with God in giving themselves and sending their dollars to the foreign mission fields, that the program of the Foreign Mission Board may be carried out.

One of the most practical plans for the raising of the foreign mission offering in any congregation is this: Let the pastor of the church, upon whose interest in the cause the whole plan hinges, gather his corps of Sunday school officers and teachers and presidents of adult classes one or two weeks prior to Easter and submit the following slogan: "Every Sunday school class with one or more memberships in the Foreign Missionary Society." The Sunday school cabinet would then apportion the number of memberships ($5.00 each) to each class which would constitute a basis for their offering, the money to be raised in such a way as seems best to the class and teacher. At the same time the superintendent of the Sunday school would launch a campaign of attendance for the Sunday preceding Easter and for Easter Sunday. In this way of raising the offering the Sunday school will receive credit for that much money given to missions all of which helps boost the school. Since the pastor has general supervision of the plan he can arrange accordingly for receiving the offering from the rest of the church.

A strong missionary program should be presented in the Sunday school on Easter Sunday morning. If there is no superintendent of missions some one should be appointed at once, so that in conjunction with the pastor, helpful recitations, stories and music of a missionary nature may be selected and given before the lesson study. This together with a short appeal by the superintendent of the school will encourage the classes to gain their memberships. If necessity demands, a week or two of time may be given after Easter for the classes to collect their money.

Such co-operation of church and Sunday school, of pastor and superintendent, will yield the largest offering in the history of the Brethren church for foreign missions. It will also be the means of stimulating general Sunday school work and will challenge the classes to big endeavor.

Topic for April 13: Christ Our Saviour. By Elder J. M. Tombaugh

No more precious truth ever was written than the words of John 3:16—"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life."

Almost everything which could emphasize the greatness of the salvation we have in Jesus Christ, is brought into prominence in this scripture. Here is eternal life, full buoyant abundant life, the gift of God through Christ our Savior. Standing as a dark background to his attractive picture is the grim and terrible alternative—death.

To be joined to the Savior by a definite act of faith by which we become sharers in his merit and righteousness, brings eternal life, eternal joy. To fail in this is to perish, and in the word perish there is suggested the awful truth of our guilt and alienation from God, our hopelessness and helplessness, our misery and woe. In this single verse of scripture is set forth the love of God for the world, his inestimable gift to men, and, upmost and chief and principal of all, there is presented the doctrine of a divine, personal and all-sufficient Savior.

An adequate appreciation of Jesus as Savior waits upon the perception of two great distressing, alarming truths. The first is the universality of sin and its loathsome and fatal nature, and the second is the utter insufficiency of every humanly devised means of delivering man from the power and consequences of sin. To appreciate the Savior's office, we must have a conviction of his own and the world's lost estate. We must realize that sin has left him an alien from the commonwealth of Israel, a stranger from the covenants of promise, without hope and without God in the world. Not only so, but there must be also a profound conviction that no effort of our own, however well directed or long continued, no striving or agonizing, no frames of mind or fancied virtues or personal graces can take the place to which God appointed Jesus in the plan of saving a lost world. In a word, to appreciate Jesus as Savior, we must accept the truth that there is no other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved. This shuts us up to dependence upon one only Savior, but thanks be to God; he is a Savior able to save to the uttermost all who put their trust in him.

Jesus the Savior is both human and divine. The humanity of Jesus binds him to our human nature and makes him our Elder Brother. The divinity of Jesus gives priceless worth to the blood of atonement and qualifies him as the world's emancipator.

As to the person of the Savior, no uncertainty exists in the scriptures and none should be permitted to find lodgment in our hearts. Any unworthy conception of the person of the Christ not only robs him of his glory, but it robs us of our salvation. His greatness and the value of the salvation we have in him are commensurate. By so much as his fullness is diminished and his glory lessened, by so much is our spiritual life imperiled and impaired. Whatever is taken away from the fullness of his divinity and the perfection of his person, is taken away from the sufficiency of his atonement. The efficacy of the blood which cleanseth from sin is due to the fact that it is the blood of the holy Son of God.

The ceremonial institutions of the old Mosaic system employed the blood of sacrifices for spiritual cleansing. But these sacrifices were but types of the true Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world. The efficacy which in him was but nominal and ceremonial, is real and actual in the atonement of Jesus. Paul might have been crucified for us, or Peter or James or John, but the sacrifice of such a life would have been utterly unavailing. Our ransom could be purchased only with that of infinite value. So whatever takes away from the glory and completeness of Christ, takes away, at the same time, from the value of his mediation.

If Christ be not the Son of God, Calvary has no meaning. The whole Christian system falls into irretrievable and hopeless ruin if

(Continued on page 15)

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

Christian Endeavor, Missions and Easter. By J. A. Garber

Those three terms constitute a natural trinity. From its inception Christian Endeavor has been true to the missionary ideals of the Kingdom. With each recurring year the missionary enterprise receives renewed emphasis at Easter. This year the missionary appeal may be made with peculiar appropriateness and special urgency.

The incalculable cost in life and substance of four years of terrible war has demonstrated the futility of misplaced confidence. An increasingly large number of persons have seen through the illumination of battle the folly of trusting the uncertain resources of materialism and militarism. In the language of a modern prophet: "Evidently our beliefs have retreated under necessity to the fundamentals and have thrown us back on God and on his Son, our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." No one who believes in him, the scripture says, will ever be disappointed. Every one who invokes the name of the Lord will be saved. But how are they to invoke one in whom they do not believe? And how are they to believe in One of whom they have never heard? And how are they ever to hear without a preacher? And how can men preach unless they are sent? As we sent the best of young men to remove the great barrier from the world's progress so we must send the best of our young people to teach emancipated peoples the way of faith, which will stabilize their liberty. As certain young men considered it a privilege and a duty to die, if needful, for the principles of freedom so Christian young people must count it an opportunity and an obligation to surrender their lives for the propagation of Christianity, which will safeguard democracy. Here is another chance to plead for Life Work Recruits.

But our plea can be made effectual and fruitful only through prayer. Pray ye the Lord of the harvest to thrust forth laborers is the Christ-given injunction. Scores of Endeavorers will wish for large sums of money.

You may not have much of silver or gold, but such as ye have, the ministry of prayer, you can invest, and thus become instrumental in causing others to give and go. This prayer, of course, cannot be prayed consistently without being willing to help to answer it to the full extent of your ability. Since the dawning hours of Easter are specially conducive to the prayer-spirit we heartily commend the plan announced by Brother Stuckey for Sunrise Prayer meetings. Every society that can possibly do so should join this concert of prayer. Only the infinite Father to whom we pray can tell the limitless good that may be accomplished in this way. From these special meetings should come many new members for the Mission Prayer Bands that are promoted by Brother DeLozier. In that way the impressions of the Easter morning meetings will be conserved. We would be pleased to have you report your plans for joining this united league of intercession, both on Easter Sunday and throughout the year.

Relation of Our Young People to the Missionary Enterprise

By A. L. DeLozier, National Missionary Superintendent

I sometimes wonder if our young people do not get the idea that the older members of the church are to be the life and spirit of our missionary activity.

True, the older men will and should find their place in an executive capacity, but it is to our young people that we are looking for the real work. Our young people will be the ones to promote and keep alive the missionary interest in the various churches. It will be our young people who will dedicate their lives, order their education accordingly and then go to the fields in which we shall be working.

To me one of the most hopeful signs in the Brethren church is that we have a large and fine body of young people who are just awakening to their opportunities and responsibilities. We have many good live Y. P. S. C. E.'s with good live officers. We are proud of our young people.

As we go from society to society over the brotherhood, we find quite a few of the young men in the uniform of Uncle Sam. What does this mean? It means much and makes us proud again because the individual wearing the uniform has volunteered for the service of his country.

During the past months my heart has been touched more than once as I have seen young men dedicate their lives to their country. The thing that appealed to me was the spirit of being willing to go anywhere for the sake of the U. S. A.

My heart is equally touched with the spirit of the "poilus" who said to a young French lieutenant: "Avec vous, mon aspirant nous irons partout." (With you, my probationer-student officer in the military schools of France,—we will GO ANYWHERE.)

But now that the war is over we want to think of giving life with even more gladness to our Lord and Savior. Let the spirit be the same, WILLING TO GO ANYWHERE as it was for one's fatherland. Jesus is more worthy than even one's country. Moreover it is equally touching, heroic and impressive to give life to our lord as to give it to the country as during the past years.

How nice if a number of our young men and women, the church's very best, would come forward and say: "I enlist in the army of King Jesus. I will go where he wants me to go. I am simply under his orders."

Indeed in every society some ought to be encouraged to do this by the pastor and also by the officials of the church and her auxiliaries.

Now we need to remember another thing, namely, that all who may feel led to dedicate their lives to missionary service can't go immediately. But there is an advantage in dedicating the life now. If you do so, you will be preparing for your life work from now on. The mission board will be learning of you and taking an interest in you.

And then above all your influence in your home society and church will count for so much.

It is a universal testimony that detained volunteers for the foreign field have been an untold blessing to the church at home. Indeed such men as John R. Mott are responsible for the statement that the delays of missionary candidates are frequently nothing less than providential.

But in any case, whether volunteering or not, let us as young people champion the cause of missions as never before. With the unquenchable energy of youth let us set the church on fire for the most important piece of work in the Kingdom, in an age when the opportunities for that work are as they have not been since the early days of the church.

Just let the young people see a thing and they will "put it across." I believe in the young people of the Brethren church. They will not only "see visions" (Acts 2:17), but they will perform noble deeds. They will play their rightful part in the reconstruction period. But they will hold that reconstruction incomplete unless the heathen get to know Jesus.

Easter Sunrise Prayer Meeting

Having been selected to lead the Christian Endeavor prayer meeting on Easter Sunday, we have suggested the plan of having the meeting in the early morning with a view to encouraging the best possible use of the day and preparing for the largest Easter offering possible. This is not a new idea, as it has been the custom of the Louisville Christian Endeavor society for several years to have their prayer meetings on Easter morning. It is a good way to begin the day that means so much to us all. Brother Garber has suggested that we tell you of our plan with the hope that others may take to the idea. There would be some inspiration in the fact if we could know that on Easter morning, the Endeavorers all over the brotherhood are meeting in the early morning stead of the evening for prayer and the study of their Easter lesson.

MELVIN A. STUCKEY,
Ashland, Ohio.

MISSIONS

The Foreign Board's Appeal—The Urgency of the Hour

DR. J. ALLEN MILLER, PRESIDENT,
Ashland, Ohio

Permit me here to call the roll of our workers in the foreign fields. These men and women have not counted their lives dear unto themselves. They have determined to fulfill their ministry which they received of the Lord to testify the gospel of the grace of God to the lost. Argentina, — Read the names:

Elder and Mrs. Charles F. Yoder, Rio Cuarto, Africa.
Elder and Mrs. E. G. Atkinson, Cabrera, Argentina.
Elder and Mrs. W. H. Bock, Carlotia, Argentina.
Brother and Mrs. John Barrio, (Native) Rio Cuarto.

Africa, —
Elder and Dr. James S. Gribble, Brazzaville, French Equatorial Africa.
Elder and Mrs. Antoine Rollier, Brazzaville, French Equatorial Africa.
Misses Estella Myers and Mae Snyder, Brazzaville, French Equatorial Africa.

If these dear brethren and sisters are willing to make the supreme sacrifice can we in the home land do less than give them the best possible support? Support in the work means two things: First, personal maintenance, and then equipment for their work.

Pray that the Lord may lay it upon the hearts of our people to abundantly supply every need of the Board in carrying on this work. Pray for the work and the workers. Pray for the Board.

E. M. COBB, Dayton, Ohio

This is our bi-centennial as a church. It is just two hundred years since the Brethren first landed upon American soil. What have we accomplished as a church? Are we satisfied? What do you think is a reasonable percent of annual increase for a church? Ten? Well all right, say ten percent.

Just to convince yourself just how far we have fallen short of anything like a common average of missionary spirit in the last two hundred years, take a pencil and a few moments and begin with the eight members baptized by Alexander Mack in 1708 and add ten percent to the principal annually and see what the amount will be when you reach our present year. You will not believe your own figures at first. We should have a membership equal to the population of the world.

What is the matter? Who cares? How many are really alive to their opportunity? There have been in every age men and women who have hazarded their lives for the souls of others, but the large majority are satisfied to be saved and not anxious about serving. Brethren, if we expect to redeem the time we had better begin soon to do our mission work systematically. The greatest chance for missions ever offered to the church is RIGHT NOW.

J. C. CASSEL,

Lansdale, Pennsylvania

Every kind of work is URGENT these days that tends to elevate mankind, because the peoples of the world almost everywhere are looking for an uplift into a higher plane of life, and it is up to the Christian church, especially to the foreign missionaries of the church to bring to the longing nations the elevating influences and forces that they so greatly need.

They are looking to a prospective League of Nations for deliverance from the horrors of war. That may bring relief for a time, but unless there is back of that a league with God through the Lord Jesus Christ, it will not last. Not until Jesus comes will there be abiding peace upon earth. It is, therefore, increasingly urgent that more missionaries are sent abroad, and that they are left in bringing to people everywhere light where there is darkness, hope where there is despair, peace where there is strife, and assurance where there is doubt.

L. S. BAUMAN, SECRETARY-TREASURER

Long Beach, California

We often hear it said, "The world can never be the same again as it was before 1914." That is doubtless true. No more can the church. All programs have been tremendously enlarged. Christian workers are confronted with unparalleled opportunities everywhere. Nations are being moulded and remoulded. A spiritual basis must be provided for them NOW. Tomorrow will be too late. In no country is this more true than among our Southern neighbors. Educated classes down there had about come to the conclusion before the war that religion could be eliminated from our modern life. Now they are realizing and admitting their error. They are acknowledging that some spiritual basis is an absolute necessity for personal and national life. The Brethren church, with all others, stands at the cross roads. It is "Forward or die!" And to go forward is going to call for more than a pitiable "two cents per week per member!" It is going to call for more than the proceeds of an ice cream supper or two, and the sale of a few old clothes. It is going to call for our richest life and treasure. The glory of every church is found in her heroic martyrs and missionaries. We must give them, or fall by the wayside, and watch those pass by us who will! Our annual Easter offering is going to speak volumes as to what we are going to do about it!

E. L. KILHEFNER,
Ashland, Ohio

The great modern missionary enterprises had their birth in times of dire national stress — the Napoleonic wars, and our own great civil war. It would be a misfortune of lasting consequence if the missionary program of the world should be interrupted at this time.

Do you hear God's call? He is a wonderful Paymaster, his dividends are sure. "Give and it shall be given unto you; pressed down, shaken together and running over shall men give unto your bosom, for with what measure ye mete it shall be measured unto you again."

We must look to far-sighted men and women who realize the conditions confronting us and are ready to give of their lives and means to carry on this great work.

A. L. DELOZIER
Allentown, Pennsylvania

In 1910 John R. Mott wrote that splendid book, "The Decisive Hour of Christian Missions." The substance of his argument was that there was then a high tide of opportunity and that it always pays to take advantage of a high tide.

But what of the urgency of this hour? Some of the opportunities of 1910 have been grasped and made good. Many of them have gone into the irrevocable past. But a world war has come and gone since 1910. Along with its unparalleled sorrow and distress it has brought unique and unredeamed opportunities.

Reconstruction—this is the watch word of the day. The nations are plastic and will be made anew. Upon what basis is this reconstruction to be. Should not evangelism count big in such a program?

The urgency of this hour—there is one more thing: Jesus is coming. It is a case of "What thou doest, do quickly."

M. A. WITTER
Waynesboro, Pennsylvania

If the predictions of those who are most familiar with the world's progress along commercial, industrial, and political lines are to be taken seriously the next few years will see unprecedented development of the neglected fields of Africa, Asia, and South America. Thousands of miles of railway will pierce the vast areas of hitherto undeveloped and uncivilized territory, the natives of those lands are destined to be brought face to face with the material blessings (†) of modern civilization. What will be the result if their first contact with civilization brings them into conflict with the greed, the selfishness, and the deception of the heartless commercial world? Now is the time of golden opportunity. If the Spirit-filled missionary can reach these vast fields before their minds have been prejudiced against the white man's civilization the work of winning them to Christ will be much easier. "The King's business requires haste."

ALVA J. McCLAIN, RECORDING SEC.,
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

"The world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

It is the "will of God" that every individual soul in the world should hear the "good news" concerning the Lord Jesus Christ, his death for sin, and his glorious resurrection. As the time of our Easter offering for Foreign Missions draws near, let each one of us ask ourselves this question, "Am I investing my time and money in the "world" or in "Doing the will of God?" Be assured that money invested in "the world" is eventually money "thrown away," for "the world passeth away." But it is just as certain that money and time invested in "Doing the will of God" is in a real sense a "Gilt-edged Investment," for it "Abideth forever." When Easter comes, put some of your money into a "Sure thing."

W. S. BELL,
Long Beach, California

The Gospel program is a world program; "God so loved the World" is its genesis. And "God in Christ reconciling the world unto himself" is its objective. The Message of the Christ — the message of "good tidings" is for the "who-so-ever." I reaches over boundary lines of nations, ignores castes and class and declares "that God hath made all nations of one blood."

In one sentence Christ has marked the field of operation. "The field is the world." The command of his followers is imperative and distinct: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature."

The unfinished task of making Christ known to those who have not heard of him, is the great challenge to the church of this age. "Go ye" lays the responsibility upon every true believer to the extent of the ability to perform. The age moves fast; speed and efficiency are on the front line of advance; church of God Make Haste.

ership of Superintendent Albert Trent it is accomplishing a great work.

A letter from Brother Watson tells of the results of the campaign to be 15 added to the church by baptism, 11 by letter and 5 others not yet added to the church. The intense zeal and enthusiasm of the pastor combined with his discreet leadership are marking his pastorate at Johnstown with gratifying progress. The church very wisely has given him a call to continue his pastorate with them and I hear that they are planning for the erection of a new and commodious church to take the place of the old one in which they are now worshipping. This will mean much to the work of Somerset Street church for they have been decidedly handicapped by their cramped quarters. When they build we can expect this congregation to put up one of the largest and best equipped plants in the brotherhood. Such a building is much needed for their growing Sunday school and church work.

The fellowship with Brother Watson and his loyal people made the time spent in this campaign a delight. Nor will we soon forget the hospitality of the home of Brother and Sister Taylor where the preacher made his home, and of all the other homes where we were entertained. Of course the greatest joy of the campaign was in witnessing the decisions for Christ. May the Lord keep each one faithful and make of them valiant workers for Christ.

Our return home was a happy one after the three weeks' absence but was soon clouded by the "flu" which had every member of the family on their back within three days after my return. We are now all sufficiently recovered to be in our usual places for which we are thankful. Dr. J. M. Tombaugh most acceptably cared for my pulpit work while I was away and while I was in the grip of the "flu," giving the Waynesboro congregation helpful and inspiring sermons and a very acceptable change from the sermonizing of the pastor to whom they have patiently listened for nearly ten years. Just now at Waynesboro we are in the midst of a revival conducted by Brother M. L. Sands. The interest is good and the outlook encouraging. Pray for us.

M. A. WITTER.

ARLINGTON, MARYLAND

The Brethren church should do her full share in evangelizing the world because of the boldness of her claim. Has any broader platform or a larger liberty? She should therefore have a correspondingly broad vision and a love that will not lag until the whole world has been served with the Gospel.

VIANNA DETWILER.

KEEPING THE HOME FIRES BURNING Muncie, Indiana

The readers of the Evangelist have read the interesting reports from Oakville and Maple Grove in connection with the Delaware County, Indiana, campaign. Muncie being in the same county, perhaps you are wondering how about the results of the meetings at the mission. Well, we went "over the top," 33 in all. It was a splendid campaign and we en-

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

SUNNYSIDE, WASHINGTON

The times in which we live are critical and urgent. The world is ripening for the harvest. Already the fields are teeming both with tares and wheat. The bride of Christ is being selected and formed. What we do we must do quickly. Satan is putting forth his greatest efforts. Dare we do less? The adversaries are rushing forth to their tasks. Shall we not leap to ours? Nothing less than the strongest Christianity will meet the needs of this day. This must be the best Easter offering in our history. Soon the Bridegroom will come for his own.

CHARLES S. ASHMAN.

JOHNSTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

For three weeks and a day, from February 2 to 23, it was our good fortune to work with Brother J. F. Watson and his splendid congregation in an evangelistic campaign at the Somerset Street Brethren church, Johnstown. Under the wise leadership of the pastor the church here had been carefully planning the campaign and making preparations for effective work. Some of the things done by the congregation that are especially worthy of mention were the holding of a great many small group cottage prayer meetings during the weeks just preceding the meeting, the study of personal work by the Men's Study Club, a lot of visiting reaching every home of the church in several ways just before the meeting, over fifty volunteers secured for personal work ready to go anywhere they might be assigned, and the insistent teaching of the pastor touching the prayer life and the work of the Holy Spirit. All of these preparations could not fail to open up the way for the preaching of the Gospel when the meetings began. A fifteen minute prayer meeting each evening just before the evening service was another great help, as were also the earnest prayers of the men at the luncheons served at the supper hour each Friday. Another helpful event was the gathering of the men on the first Tuesday night of the meeting. After the regular evening service the men gathered around the tables set in the Sunday school room below and after enjoying the refreshments a number of short earnest talks revealed the zeal and earnestness that the men were ready to put into the work of the campaign. The Sunday school took an active part in the campaign, classes vying with each other in their efforts to fill the church with hearers. Brother Darr's class of nearly 40 ladies succeeded on "Sunday school night" in having 100 percent of their class present with many invited guests besides. A decision day was observed during the campaign and at that service about 16 decisions for Christ were made by the members of the school. This is one of the best organized schools of our brotherhood and under the capable leadjoyed the work every minute. We shall not report the meeting itself leaving that for the pastor Brother Kimmel, to do.

However, being a mission point, you are all interested in knowing something about the work and the workers. First, I was impressed with the field; the personnel of the people, the location of the mission, the neat little chapel in which we have public worship, all add to the powerful opportunity that lies in our pathway in this wonderful city. It is my honest judgment that the work here will be heard from in the years that are before it.

The Sunday school is growing very nicely under the direction of Brother Ora Paul and his splendid corps of workers; in fact, the whole organization bubbles over with progress that is beautiful to behold.

The workers, Brother Kimmel, and his wife are certainly winning their way into the hearts of the people of Muncie. We found them in the campaign to be surely consecrated to the task that is before them, which is by no means easy. They are the right people to be at the head of this work. It is our prediction that a still greater revival will be held next year if the Lord carries until then. With the new material gotten in during this campaign and the field full of prospects, the future indeed is encouraging.

May the Lord richly bless Muncie and its workers, is our prayer.

North Manchester, Indiana

After a brief rest we commenced a campaign with Brother Bame in this city. We found a very different battle ground. To assist us we had a great general in Brother Bame and a church comprised of old veterans in the "faith of our fathers." The meeting itself, was full of inspiration. Although the field was well gleaned and hard work faced us due to this and other causes, we buckled down to work, all of us, for three weeks. In the college, in the high school, and shop as well as the church we landed on sin and indifference wherever we found it.

In the church we were greeted with great crowds, which reminded us of old times before the deadly "flu" came around. Good singing, led by Brother Bame and a chorus choir, ably assisted by special music by the College Glee club and other solos of merit, meant a great deal to the campaign.

In high school, we found life, expressing itself very forcibly in the students. They gave us a good hearing and made us feel at home.

A visit to the college of the Church of the Brethren was made, and upon an invitation of the president we gave a chapel talk, our reception here was very warm, and cordial. In the shop we talked to the laboring class, and here, too, the gospel was received with mighty effect.

We are glad to preach a gospel that is adapted to meet the needs of all, no matter in what state our lot has been cast.

We are pleased to report that we were asked to repeat our message on Church Unity, by the Church of the Brethren people, and we shall be happy indeed to know if we have been able to bring about a union of faiths so alike as ours are.

The results of the meeting were 30 in all. More were near the Kingdom, so the pastor decided to continue the meeting a few nights. We felt the need of a rest, hence we came home for a short stay before beginning at Peru, March 30.

In conclusion we wish to thank the Brethren Kimmel and Bame for their kind co-operation during our stay in their midst, and for the courtesy extended to us by them and many others while in the homes.

May God richly bless us in our labors together. Our next report will be from Pennsylvania. Pray for us.

EVANGELIST A. E. THOMAS,
South Bend, Indiana.

ASTORIA, ILLINOIS

Owing to removal by death of some of our members and others moving to distant states, we have been forced to disband our Sunday school and church work here. We regret to disband, but although we have asked different times for help from the Mission Board to secure a preacher, we have received very little. And with such a small membership it is impossible to keep up the work, and as a result we have had to "just quit." We have about two dozen Pentecostal Hymn books, Nos. 1 and 2; also about 3 dozen Alexander song books, which we will gladly donate to any church or Sunday school that is in need of such, providing they pay for the shipment.

MRS. SUSAN LEHMAN.

PLEASANT GROVE, IOWA

The writer has been on this field not quite a year and can say that the experiences here have been very similar to what others of the Brethren have reported. Our services were greatly hindered by sickness and bad roads. We are planning to work out the Four Year Program as far as we can in a country church. To this end we plan to systematize our work by having certain objectives. So we elected a mission secretary and treasurer and ask all to let their offerings pass through the hands of the same.

At our last business meeting a committee was appointed to investigate the advisability of either buying or building a parsonage. There is quite a strong sentiment here that a parsonage is needed, when a change of pastors takes place.

It was decided to have our spring communion service on Easter Sunday evening. We invite any who can to be with us.

I shall close my work here with August, and beginning September first or after general conference be in position to take up work in some other field. I will be pleased to give any information to any one who may be interested in the work here. This is a country church. Brother W. N. Sanger owns a farm near the church. He offers to let the pastor live in the house and let 5 acres go with the house this summer if an exchange is made, or for the 1920 season to rent the pastor 80 acres or whatever portion he might desire to farm.

A person can get all the wood for fuel he needs for chopping. So any pastor inclined to farm, garden, raise some stock and poultry in connection with his church work will here find an opportunity to his liking.

We hope to do more effective work with the return of spring. And then forget all of our past difficulties.

Wm. H. MILLER,
Williamsburg, Iowa.

R. R. 3.

EVELYN, KENTUCKY

I visited Riverside recently. The school is closed now for a time. It would be fine if these days could be improved by a revival effort. It would be a good thing for the school as well as for the people. They are doing good work there.

Revivals are a good thing for any community. They help to bring the spiritually dead to life again. The strong are enlisted by them to help bear the burdens of the weak, and the weak are encouraged again to partake of the sincere milk of the word, according to 1 Peter 2:2.

I helped a Christian out of the mud as I was coming down Troublesome creek (That creek has the right name) and after taking the party to the depot, I never got "thanks" for it. I was made to think how scarce gratitude is. There would be more kindness shown if there were more gratitude. "Thank you" is the key that unlocks the doors of heavenly kindness.

WM. TIPTON.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

Logically this report should be from our canvass at Carlton. We are holding back the Carlton report however until we have had opportunity to see some non-resident members of the Carlton congregation, after which we will report from that place. But I will serve notice now that when the Carlton report does appear it will make folks sit up and take notice. That is all I will say now.

From Carlton we came to Beaver City. We felt acquainted here because two years ago we re-dedicated the church at Beaver. And when we came we were not unmindful of the fact that the Beaver Brethren were only two years removed from their rebuilding experience, and also that those two years witnessed crop failures in this part of the west. Consequently I did not come to Beaver expecting our people to be in as good position to meet the endowment proposition at this time as many of our churches are where there has been no recent building programs carried out and no crop failures. Nevertheless when I consider the Beaver result for endowment I am inclined to feel that if Beaver had a fair chance she might have made some of the other Kanemorado churches look a little sick.

When I say that up to the moment I am writing this, Beaver has gone $1,600, and that there will still be more added to this amount, you can be assured that that is a magnificent result. And it is surprising how little whining I have heard here at Beaver about crop failures. I heard a lot more hard luck stories in sections where folks don't really know what crop failures are. Anyhow, the Kanemorado churches can feel justly proud of their little sister at Beaver.

In this church we had one $500 gift and two for $200 each. The remainder of the result came in sums of $100 and from there on down. The Sunday school here showed great loyalty and faith by enlisting at $200. We have no fears about this being taken care of by the Beaver Sunday school. The superintendent, Miss Lilla Johnston, and the treasurer, Brother George Seibert will lead their forces to victory in this. The S. S. C. E., the Sisterhood girls, and the Y. P. S. C. E. also gave substantial help in making possible the splendid result which stands to Beaver's decided credit Beaver is the home of Brother C. Forney and his good wife. Here they are spending their last days in their own cosy little home in the midst of their children and many warm, life-long friends. Most any preacher might wish to be as happily situated in his old age as is our dear Brother Forney. I found Brother Forney and his wife enjoying splendid health for people at their age. Brother Forney is always happy. And he and I sure did have some good visits. In the absence of a pastor at Beaver, Brother Forney guided me to many of the homes in this congregation; and when folks saw that it was Uncle Christ, that had me in charge I was always sure of a cordial welcome. Uncle Christ has the keys to the city of Beaver and to all Brethren homes; in other words he is a privileged character. Nobody asks him any questions. Well, we had a nice time together. And though Brother Forney is one of the oldest men in our ministry, he has in no sense relinquished his interest in the affairs of our general brotherhood. No one is more pleased than he is over the success with which the endowment campaign is meeting.

A man I have missed keenly since I am here is the late and much lamented brother Frank Seibert. I became acquainted with him to love him when I was here two years ago. When men like Brother Seibert pass on to their reward they leave large empty places in the ranks. Upon his death the Beaver church lost one of God's elect. But it is good to know that Sister Seibert and her daughters are loyal to the cause of the church which was dear and sacred to his heart.

During most of my stay at Beaver, Brother Kemper was here on the field with me. To be more correct in my statement I should say he was here visiting his wife and baby. But he rendered me good assistance just the same in my work here. I am grateful to him for the help he gave me.

Our general headquarters was in the home of Mrs. Frank Seibert, who is the "patient, long-suffering" mother-in-law of Kemper. The hospitality of this home was of the highest order; but I can say as much for all of the other homes in the Beaver congregation in which I was entertained. I covet God's richest blessing for all of our good people at Beaver.

What Beaver needs now is a real shepherd—a man who loves to visit the homes of his people, and a man also who loves his Bible and knows how to feed the sheep. It seems they have been pretty well fed on "historical fodder" but it does not seem to nourish and satisfy the soul. I hope God may guide them to the man they need.

Campaign Secretary.

WM. H. BEACHLER,

Now Watch the Kanemorado District Raise the Mercury

COLLEGE
ENDOWMENT

(Continued from page 10)

our Lord be taken from us. Not a single one of his divine attributes must be dimmed, not one star from the coronal of his infinite perfections must be removed or the world is left without a Savior. It is the knowledge that he who has become our surety is the high and holy God from heaven that gives confidence that he will be able to save to the uttermost. And if we be reduced to the necessity of depending for salvation upon righteousness of our own, the ground of our assurance sinks from beneath our feet.

Jesus our Savior is God manifest in the flesh. He is the image of the invisible God, the brightness of the Father's glory and the express image of his person. All the fullness of the divine nature, lacking nothing, is in the divine Son. The language used in the scriptures in setting forth the person of Jesus implies his perfect equality with the Father in substance and nature and eternally. Not only is he perfect God, but perfect man. The Word became flesh and the fullness of the God-head now dwells in the Man Christ Jesus. He was born of a woman, born under the law. He partook of our human nature; he suffered our bodily ills and temptations; he wrought with human hands; he looked through human eyes; he spoke in the language of men; he suffered weariness and hunger and thirst as a man; he sat as a guest at our tables; he stood as a mourner at our grave-sides and finally he died the human death in the body of his flesh and found a resting place in an earthly tomb.

But the same Jesus rose again and in the same body, glorified, he ascended into heaven, far above all principalities and powers and now appears in the presence of God for us. As the divine nature in Jesus is truly and unchangeably divine, so is his human nature truly and unchangeably human. Through his incarnation he became our brother; he took upon himself our nature and by a new tie he bound us to God. The veil of his flesh for a little while dimmed the effulgence of his glory and we could approach him without fear. The story of Hector and his wife Andromeda might serve to illustrate how the incarnation of Jesus encourages, timid, shrinking men to approach the awful presence with confidence and love. Hector, clad in his suit of mail, was about to go forth to war and his wife, carrying in her arms their little son, accompanied him to the gate. There the warrior bids his wife farewell and then reached out his hands to take his little son in his arms for the last time, but the child looking upon his shining helmet, shrank back affrighted. Hector removed his helmet and the boy sprang into his father's arms delighted. So the unveiled glory of God is too bright for human eyes to look upon; fallen man shrinks back affrighted from the spectacle of the mighty God upon his glorious throne; but Jesus incarnate is God with his helmet off. We no longer fear, but trust and love for he has become our Brother.

COMMUNION NOTICE

The Pleasant Grove church will hold communion service on Easter Sunday evening. The usual invitation is extended.

WM. H. MILLER, Pastor.

Business Manager's Corner

"THE WORLD DO MOVE"

It is not alone a scientific fact that the world must move, but it also seems a moral necessity. Progress is a law of human nature and it is no more unusual to anticipate advancement in human achievement than it is to look for growth in the plants of the farm or kitchen garden.

The church must observe this law of growth and progress or content itself with a prospect of future failure and in time an entire blotting out. It is because of this great necessity that the Four Year Program was launched by the Brethren church.

Many things have interfered with the development and consummation of these plans, but it is enough to know that SOME progress has been made, and where there has been some progress there is a fighting chance for more progress, and the thing we ask for now is that this fighting chance be seized upon and put to some practical uses.

Among the goals the writer is personally interested in is the one requiring the Evangelist to visit with regularity seventy-five percent of the homes of the brotherhood. Thus far the campaign in behalf of this paper has made commendable progress, nor are there any signs that the campaign has reached a stopping place as yet. We are glad to announce three more churches that have won places for themselves on the Evangelist Honor Roll. These churches are, Windber, Pennsylvania, with Brother E. F. Byers as pastor; Rittman, Ohio, with Dr. J. Allen Miller acting as pastor at present, and Crown Chapel, Leon, Iowa, with George T. Ronk, pastor. This last named church should have been announced some time ago, but seems to have been overlooked in some manner. While these are among the smaller churches, some of them being still regarded as mission points, yet it is none the less important that they get in line with the larger churches. Moreover there are enough of these smaller churches to help us reach our goal for five thousand subscribers if they will all catch the vision and develop proper enthusiasm; but there are still a number of our larger churches that should be "in on this thing" before the campaign closes.

We can again announce that there are still a number of churches that are working toward this end and we will be glad to give them honorable mention when once they reach their goal.

To show the real spirit of this movement when it once possesses a church we need only to call attention to the act of the Oakville, Indiana, church. This church went on the budget plan for the Evangelist with the beginning of the year, but recently they enjoyed a splendid revival meeting under the leadership of their new pastor, W. R. Deeter, and this week we received about a dozen new subscriptions for the Evangelist to go into the homes of the new families that were added to the church during their evangelistic meeting. This is as it should be if the church would keep itself up to date.

We have been working under difficulties the past month, as the heating elements in the electric crucible of one of our typesetting machines burned out the last of February and it was nearly five weeks before the General Electric Company that manufactures these elements could catch up with their orders and supply us with the broken parts. This made one of our machines stand idle for more than a month right in the busiest season of the year. The repairs have now been made and we hope to catch up with our work very shortly.

A strange occurrence took place in connection with the getting out of the Evangelist last week. The War Industries Board required all publishers to get out their publications during the war with as few "left overs" as possible to conserve paper, and most publishers try to observe this request even now for economy's sake, but we always aim to have a hundred or more papers left over each week to be ready for any emergency; but somehow last week we ran short of papers and more than two hundred subscribers received no paper. The register on the press recorded the usual number of impressions, but in some unexplainable manner there were not enough papers to "go around." All we can say is "we are sorry," and to assure you that we will try to prevent another occurrence of such an event.

R. R. TEETER,
Business Manager.

(Continued from page 7)

of us liveth to himself!" America can never again be the same America she was before this great agony of war. She has lived for more than a century largely to herself. In this war she leaped over the barriers of her narrow provincialism and poured forth her richest blood and lavished her richest gold—for others! The war has given her a new vision—a world vision. The most un-American in the future will be the mole who crawls back into his hole, shuts his eyes to the world's agony, his ears to the world's cries for help, and says: "I don't believe in foreign missions." God pity any such religious (?) old moss-back as that.

The rebirth of the Pauline spirit will lift once more the eyes of the church from the glory and riches of Egypt to the eternal. She will again endure "as seeing him who is invisible." That spirit calls us once again to "seek those things which are above,"—to "set our affection on things above, not on things on the earth." The materialistic "social gospel" must give way to "the gospel of the grace of God." "Is not the life more than meat, and the body more than raiment?" The only way for the beautiful dream of the "social gospel" ever to be realized on earth, is by the gospel of the grace of God conquering and changing the hearts of unregenerate men. Let the church return to her mission of saving the souls of men by bringing them into fellowship with Jesus Christ and the bodies of men will not be forgotten. Put first things first. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness (the righteousness of faith); and all these things (i. e., things to eat, to drink, and to clothe), will be added unto you." The problems of the church are problems dealing with spiritual life, spiritual death, spiritual enemies, spiritual wealth, problems vastly more important than the problems of the physical realm. True it is that the dead must be buried. A duty lies there. But, "Let the dead bury their dead: but go thou and preach the kingdom of God." It will be a great day when the church of Jesus Christ comes to really understand in this materialistic age what her God-given business is.

Finally, the rebirth of the Pauline spirit in the church must mean the rebirth of the spirit of supreme sacrifice for Christ. Hear him once again: "What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea, I count all things but loss for Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things." When millions upon millions of men rushed forth to the shock of battle, ready to give their all for earthly governments, that today flourish and tomorrow pass away; when countless millions more have laid down their golden treasure, ready to give to their utmost farthing, that the corruptible kingdoms of men may live; shall we now witness the disgrace of the citizens of the kingdom of God giving hesitatingly, niggardly, and selfishly to their King, "whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom?" Ah! in the words of another,—

"Never again will our Christian men and women use the standard of giving which means that God is entitled only to what is left after we have given ourselves the best time possible, or that God is entitled to nothing if there be no surplus.

"Never again will we have the face to sing doxologies over the raising of missionary assessments which represent a pitiable outlay of less than two cents a week per member.

"Never again will we pay our hard working preachers salaries which represent a payment of less than six cents per member.

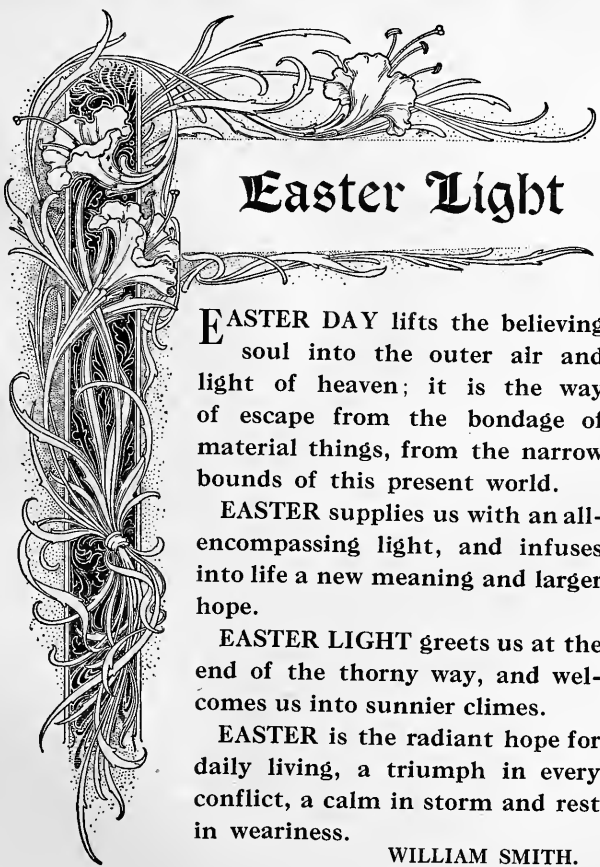

"Never again will the cause of the worn-out preacher be considered as belonging to the realm of charity and as having no place in the great enterprises of the church.

"Never again will we pay tribute to Almighty God out of the proceeds of oyster suppers, charity functions, and the sale of old clothes.

"Never again will the Kingdom of Jesus Christ be bound by local ecclesiastical and geographical lines."

The BRETAREN EVANGELIST

- ONE IS YOUR MASTER AND ALL YE ARE BRETAREN -

Easter Light

EASTER DAY lifts the believing soul into the outer air and light of heaven; it is the way of escape from the bondage of material things, from the narrow bounds of this present world.

EASTER supplies us with an all-encompassing light, and infuses into life a new meaning and larger hope.

EASTER LIGHT greets us at the end of the thorny way, and welcomes us into sunnier climes.

EASTER is the radiant hope for daily living, a triumph in every conflict, a calm in storm and rest in weariness.

WILLIAM SMITH.

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor.

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

The Greatest Fact in the World—Jesus Lives—Editor,	2	Our Risen Lord—Dr. J. M. Tombaugh,	10
Editorial Review,	3	Christian Endeavor at Lost Creek—Miss Mary Pence,	11
Impractical (?) Men the Demand of the Times—H. H. Wolford,	4	International Christian Endeavor Convention—Wm. Shaw,	11
Easter Symposium—The Most Convincing Proof—W. R. Deeter,	5	Our Mission Offering—Dr. J. Allen Miller,	12
Fred Vanator, C. L. Anspach, A. L. Lynn, Edwin Boardman,	5	"Go Ye"—James S. Gribble,	12
A Preamble on Life—J. A. McInturf,	6	News from the Field,	13-15
Interesting Clippings from Recent Letters—L. S. Bauman,	7	The Tie that Binds,	15
The Stewardship of Life (Sermon)—A. B. Cover,	8	In the Shadow,	15-16
Perfect Submission—Quinter M. Lyon,	9	Business Manager's Corner,	16

EDITORIAL

The Greatest Fact In the World—Jesus Lives

In the living Christ is found the center of the world's hopes, the realization of its needs and the explanation of its progress. On the fact that Jesus lives Christianity is dependent for its life, the Christian for his faith and the preacher for his message. The singer has no song who has no note of victory. The artist has no inspiration and the poet no theme who know not a triumphant Christ. The philanthropist has no love for man, the reformer no convictions and the missionary no motive who cannot see beyond Calvary. No fact is so great, so significant and so precious as this supreme fact that Jesus lives.

Take away this fact and the world has no Savior, for we worship not a dead Jesus but a living Christ. If he be not a living Savior, he is no Savior at all. His death on the cross proved his love, but his resurrection proved his power. His love was deeper and stronger and more sacrificial than any other's, but if the grave had remained sealed his death would have been only the death of a good man and would have belied his claims. He said, "I will rise again," and this was to be his credential as the Son of God. If he be not risen from the dead then is our preaching in vain and our faith misplaced and we are yet in our sins.

Take away the fact that Jesus lives and you take away our life. Paul said, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." "The life which I now live, I live by faith in Jesus Christ." Jesus himself declared "I am come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly." "I am the way, the truth and the life." And the Father so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever should believe in him might have everlasting life. The free gift of God is eternal life. To give life was the supreme purpose of Jesus' coming into the world, and if he himself were conquered by death his coming would be a dismal failure. To receive life is the heart-ery of the race and if men could not receive it at Jesus' hands they would be eternally mocked by a desire which can never be satisfied.

'Tis life of which our souls are scant,

'Tis life, more life for which we pant,

'Tis life, and fuller that we want.

If the world has no living Christ then it dwells in darkness. Nothing is more important than light. Life itself is dependent upon light. Growth is dependent on light. Progress is dependent upon light. Where there is no light, there is ignorance, superstition and terrible fear. Where continual darkness is, there is disease and decay, death and destruction, crime and immorality. All manner of hideousness and sorrow and terror lie hidden in the ways of darkness and only evil men seek such ways. Jesus said, "Men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil." He also declared, "I am come a light into the world that men might not walk in darkness." And the world that sat in darkness has seen a great light and behold, that light is spreading and brightening as the dawning light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. Jesus lives and sheds abroad his light unto all men. That is the greatest and most necessary fact in the world. For as the plant cannot live without the light of the sun, no more can the soul live without the light of God which shines from the face of Jesus Christ.

To the fact that Jesus lives is due the great humanizing influences at work in the world. Buddha never taught men to build hospitals. Mohammed never inspired men to benevolence work. Confucius never organized a Red Cross. They never taught men how to treat one another as brothers. They never sought the prevention of crime by the prevention of the criminal, or the cure of crime by the saving of the criminal. They never established children's courts and "detention homes" where sympathetic men and women seek to correct delinquent children. They never built homes for the blind and aged, for the poor and feeble minded. They never sought to equalize men's opportunities for wholesome life, happiness and prosperity. They be dead founders of dying religions. It is the living Christ who is bringing about all these humanizing influences. It is he who is making men human as well as religions. For his religion turns men's hearts not only God-ward and self-ward, but "other-ward" as well. This fact, that the living Christ is constantly leading men to regard one another as brothers and to treat them so, even though they be weak and unfortunate, is one of the greatest facts in the world.

To Jesus Christ who lives and reigns, is due the wonderful national and race transformations and class regenerations. The world has witnessed a gradual rise under the attractive power of Christ through all the centuries until many of the grossest sins have been banished forever from many of the nations and races. Today there is no enlightened nation that will deny the worthiness of the "Golden Rule" as a principle of international conduct, however far they may come short of the practice of it. Today there is no nation that glories in the fact that it deliberately made war on another nation. Every nation engaged in the late conflagration sought to lay the blame for starting the war on other shoulders than its own. Today there is no nation that is haughtily disregarding of the people's wishes and welfare. Today human slavery and the degradation of women is a thing of the past wherever the gospel of the living Christ has penetrated. Among the most marvelous things of the centuries we witness the development and uplift of society, the progress of civilization and the transformation of tribes and nations under the spell of the name of Jesus.

The steady conquest of the world's millions to personal allegiance to Jesus Christ is a testimony to his living vital reality. The power of Christ's resurrection has cast a mysterious spell over about 600,000,000 of living people of the present day, so that they love him and are exemplifying him in all the various parts of the world. Everywhere its power is being manifested in gripping lives, making them new and imparting to them the spirit of devotion and service. The slavery of sin is being exchanged for the freedom of the Gospel. Great multitudes in whom the divine image is almost completely defaced, the divine life almost lost and the divinely imposed responsibilities almost wholly neglected are being renewed, ennobled and strengthened. The exalted Christ is causing them to be raised anew in enduring life and measureless power. Everywhere he who was not only "lifted up from the earth," but was exalted in power and great glory, is overreaching the world with the greatness of his personality and drawing the hearts of men to his living presence. JESUS LIVES—GREATEST OF ALL FACTS.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

The churches are still getting on The Evangelist Honor Roll. See the Business Manager's Corner for the particulars.

Brother Ankrum, Illiokota District Goal Director, is ambitious that his district shall go 100 percent on the Foreign Mission goal. Why not make it 100 percent throughout the brotherhood?

Usefulness is the rent we pay for our place in the world. If that be true, and it is the essence of verity, there are thousands of people walking about the earth with an enormous amount of back rent owing.

The courageous little band at Peru, Indiana, under the aggressive leadership of Brother G. C. Carpenter are now engaged in an evangelistic campaign with Brother A. E. Thomas as evangelist. They desire the aid of your prayers. The Peru Sunday school is a real live wire school.

Still they come—those "White Gift" offerings. Brother Trent has another report in this issue. Better late than never. That holds good in cases of all other special offerings, too. Did you send your Thanksgiving offering and your Benevolence offering to the proper parties? Time to get busy.

A folded card containing the announcement and pictures of the principal speakers of the Northern California "Convention and Bible Institute," also a little booklet containing the program has reached our office. The convention is now a matter of history, as it was scheduled for March 23 to 30.

We are favored with a report from the pen of our good friend, Brother Glenn Carpenter concerning the work of the new Ardmore church. They have recently experienced a brief, but successful revival with Brethren Thomas and McInturf doing the preaching as they found time from their other work. Their success reveals that an eager, faithful people were backing them in their efforts. Brother Carpenter believes that the harvest is not fully reaped yet and hopes to have another series of meetings soon.

Kanemorado springs another sensation in the College Endowment campaign. Carleton went to the amount of—, well, I'll not tell you for you wouldn't believe me until you would read Brother Beachler's own statement. Say! that man's traveling bag must be a very big one if he is able to carry away all the money those loyal westerners give him. Carleton, perhaps more than any of the other Kanemorado churches has a reason for getting back of Ashland College with its cash. Besides having a live wire Ashland college product for a pastor, one of their own number is on the college faculty. See Beachler's notes for particulars.

I have seen so much good from suffering, so much good from pain, that I believe in the good of both. It is pain and suffering that bring out sympathy, self-sacrifice and strength of character.

Its a wonderful testimony to the value of Christian Endeavor that Miss Mary Pence writes. What it is doing for Lost Creek, it is doing in varying degrees in many places, depending largely upon the energy and wisdom with which it is worked.

Michigan is heard from once again and judging from the spirit of our correspondent, Brother L. J. Miller, it is not the last time we will hear from that district. Under the leadership of Brother Garrison they will doubtless have reason to speak out again.

Brother N. C. Nielsen of Long Beach, California, gives us a good report of the work at that place. They have secured some expert help on Sunday school building. Why not make use of experts in the work of the Kingdom as well as in other lines of activity? Our correspondent states that Brother Bell's health is improving since he has been on the shore of the "Peaceful Ocean."

A splendid report comes from Brother Austin R. Staley, pastor of the Udell Iowa, church. Several conversions have taken place at the regular services, the Sunday school and prayer meeting are looking up and the Evangelist is finding its way into an ever-increasing number of homes. We wouldn't be surprised to hear of them landing on the Honor Roll before long.

A very successful revival was held at Spokane, Washington, under the leadership of Brother Miller as pastor and Brother Ashman as evangelist. The new members and the awakening of interest on the part of the town's people means much in the way of encouragement and strength to this growing mission church. They are now in the act of completing their structure, and deserve the help of the brotherhood. If you have made no investment there yet, send an offering to Brother Paul Miller at that city.

We are very much pleased to get a report from Brother J. I. Hall, pastor of the Martinsburg and McKee churches of Pennsylvania. Brother Benshoff gave excellent assistance at the former church and Brother Hall himself held a brief meeting at McKee. The churches have shown their appreciation of their pastor's services by increasing his salary to the point where it is fully adequate. Wonder if the churches that are trying to bargain with their pastor for the smallest salary possible will take a hint from the Martinsburg-McKee charge's example.

We notice in the last number of the Woman's Outlook that the suggestion is made to the societies that they have Woman's Day on either the Sunday preceding or the Sunday following Mother's Day. We wish to commend those responsible for this change. For years they have been trying to work a combination of Mother's and Woman's day, with the result that Mother's day has been gradually dispossessed of its influence and in many places the observance of the day has been practically lost sight of. The mother influence is too vital and far-reaching to thoughtlessly lose sight of a day universally set apart for the reverencing and memorializing of motherhood. And to attempt to make the day serve the double purpose of advancing the interests of an organization so noble and doing so grand a work as is our Sister's Society of Christian Endeavor and fostering the mother influence the honor of motherhood is to fail to do justice to either interest and ultimately means the neglecting of one in the interest of the other. And in this case, it is Mother's day that has been sadly the loser during the last few years. There is no small number of Brethren people whose great regard for mother and motherhood will make them welcome this wise change. Expressions of approval have already come to our ears and we wish to take this opportunity of giving an expression of appreciation to our sisters which is more than personal. And we should like to lend our encouragement to every church to boost the noble work the S. S. C. E. is doing. We have always been one of their most loyal supporters and now we want to boost still more.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

IMPRACTICAL (?) MEN THE DEMAND OF THE HOUR

The above is the heading of a magazine editorial of a few weeks ago. If I rightly understand the writer his idea is this; that the conditions and uncertainties of the world at the close of the war are such that men are not able to definitely judge the needs of the future and hence are afraid to launch out in business enterprises as they were before the war; also that such great possibilities are open to business men that ventures on such gigantic scale as to seem impractical must be made if the business of the world is to meet the needs of the next few years. Therefore men of vision are needed; moreover men of such vision as to seem impractical to others. If this be true, and scarcely any one is willing to say that it is not, then how much more does the church need men of vision. Yea, even men who venture to lay plans for the kingdom of God which in the minds of many seem impractical and foolish. Before the war the cry was continually being made "give us practical men" not only in the business world but in the church. Perhaps the day is here when the church needs men of such far reaching vision and such faith in the plans and purposes of God as to seem impractical and foolish.

Indeed when we look back through the history of our religion, have not most of the prophets and leaders of the church appeared as impractical men to their own generation. The prophets of Israel were said to be impractical dreamers and visionaries by the kings of Israel while they hailed the false prophets as practical. But the seemingly impractical prophet became the practical inspiration of a few years later. To many in his generation Jesus was an impractical dreamer. When he brought his message to men they laughed him to scorn. Some of his critics lived to see the day of the beginning of his triumph.

When Paul looked toward Rome with a longing in his heart to have some part in the transforming of that empire no doubt many said he was impractical in thinking of Rome becoming Christian. Yet not many centuries passed until a Christian was crowned emperor. So the leaders of every advancing movement in the church have been called impractical.

This has not only been true in the church but in every endeavor of human life. Watt, Fields, Fulton, Edison and others were called dreamers in their day, with foolish and impracticable ideas. But each in his own day or later was heralded as practical and a benefactor to mankind. A few months ago Wilson was ridiculed as an impractical idealist when first advocating the idea of a league of nations. But soon we shall see his dream realized.

If men of every age and in every field of endeavor have dared to be impractical shall we not much more dare to be impractical in things concerning the kingdom of God when we have at least some bases for our dreams. Believing as we do in the power and wisdom of our God and having seen the practicability of the teachings of Jesus to transform and redeem men, we dare predict that we are on the threshold of the mightiest advance of the kingdom of God that the world has ever seen. If men dare to dream and bring into being a league of nations that will guarantee peace to all the world are we presumptions and foolish when we preach and expect a whole world bound to the foot of the cross by the message of Jesus Christ? We are living in a great day when we need to believe in God with all our heart and face the future with a faith that will meet every challenge of the world and with this an unfaltering faith that God and the church with the message of Jesus Christ will conquer. Let us be impractical enough to believe that the Kingdom of God like yeast hid in the meal will permeate and change the whole world; that the church is going to grow and sweep onward by leaps and bounds; that God still rules in his world and has laid upon us to be his workers in bringing that rule to recognition in the hearts of men. Let us believe that however great and comprehensive the plans of the church they will be realized. If governments dare plan billion dollar enterprises let the church begin to talk in trillions and believe it will be realized. If our government dared to say, we can bridge the ocean in face of all dangers and opposition and transport millions of men, let the church believe she can span all oceans and put thousands of men and women into the heathen world.

We have not done big things because we have not dared big things. We have not accomplished what God intended we should because we have not believed deeply enough in the great dynamic of the kingdom of God. When we dared as a church to ask for the whole goal for foreign mission the first year, it was accomplished. Let us dare to double and treble our budget. We started out for one hundred thousand dollars for the college. We now see, we set our aim too low. If our church means business and we intend to maintain Ashland College with credit to ourselves let alone credit to God, let us double and treble our aim. Beachler can not do it alone but if every preacher and layman will dare to be impractical it can be done.

Impractical in the things of the Kingdom! Let them be impractical! Dare to undertake it. There never has been to our knowledge a big thing undertaken for God but what it has been accomplished. If we but pause in all sincerity and unity of mind to find out God's will we may launch enterprises that will stagger men but which will be done.

Our Four Year Program was called impractical in the beginning, is now and ever will be by some men. The only trouble with the Four Year Program is that we did not plan big enough. We were too practical. Some goals may not be attained but they will be minor ones. The goals that are going to mean most for the church and the Kingdom are going to be reached in spite of the war. Some of our churches may not reach a hundred percent of the goals but the Program has already done more than many ever dreamed it would do. If pastors in the Brethren church are not men enough and energetic enough to tackle this program they ought to get a job nearer their size.

Personally I believe in God, a God of wisdom and power, the limit of whose possibilities has never been tested by the church. I believe in a living, reigning Christ whose teachings are able to meet any situation in human life and triumph over it. I believe this whole world is not too big a problem for the church to solve. Victory is bound to be with the church so long as it keeps close to its God and Christ, no matter how big and impractical the undertaking.

Brethren, let us be so impractical (with judgment and reason) to actually undertake some big things for the kingdom of God. God is calling for faith that will project itself into the future and dare big things. Paul said when I have seen Rome, then on to Spain. Paul dreamed of all Europe civilized and Christianized. He was one man standing alone with God. Let the church be ashamed of its little dreams and plans and ask God to show us, what to men seem impractical but which in his name will be accomplished.

H. H. WOLFORD.

Elkhart, Indiana.

STATISTICS

Now to be practical about a thing which has been impractical because preachers and church secretaries have not done the little things which they have been asked to do. What will you do this year? By order of last Conference the General Statistician will send out report blanks for the church only. Each auxiliary will collect their own statistics. Blanks will be sent to you soon. Statistical year to close March 31, 1919. Get your reports in hand. Be accurate. Let us find out once what and where we are as a denomination as concerns statistics. Let goal directors in the various districts prepare a list of actual churches so that blanks may be sent as soon as received. Now by actual churches I mean those that are actually in existence. It is apparent that there are many names of churches in the annual that have ceased to exist. Let us find out how many churches we actually have. H. H. WOLFORD.

AN APOLOGY

To the District Director and pastors of the Maryland-Virginia Conference District, Greetings:

By some inexplicable circumstance, I failed to get your record in the last Evangelist. It was not the fault of your Director, L. G. Wood. Some of his churches were the first to report and his report of those was the first in. I must have made out the rank of your conference and then just overlooked it. The reports are now in the hands of the secretary and I surmise that he will have yours along with the rest in next issue. If you will pardon this time, I'll try to be good hereafter.

Sincerely yours,

CHARLES A. BAME.

GENERAL ARTICLES

The Most Convincing Proof of a Living Christ—Easter Symposium

The Joy of the Resurrection

By W. R. Deeter

"And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word." Matt. 28:8.

The fear evidently was not that of terror, but of joy, a kind of excitement or surprise. The joy was over the fact that Jesus was risen.

What greater joy could we ask than to know that Christ arose from the tomb with a glorious body; and if he arose, we too shall arise in newness of life. It thrills us now as we think of Jesus who so gladly came and ministered unto those whom he loved and suffered the cruelties of trial and death on the cross, was buried in a stone tomb, came forth from the earth-bands that held him. No wonder the women ran to tell the disciples the glad tidings of the resurrection. It is in this confidence that we partake of the sweetest happiness in telling others of a risen Savior. The very wine of human experience is that we can bear testimony to the greatest fact of history—that Jesus arose from the dead. If he did not arise, our hope is in vain, and we are of all men most miserable. Life would not be worth living if Christ were still in the tomb. The gospel would have no meaning for us if Christ had not conquered death. The whole Bible would be a farce if Jesus did not live. There would have been no civilization had it not been for a living Christ. We would be trodden under foot by the hosts of evil if Jesus had not proved himself Lord of all.

The resurrection of Christ was the pledge to us that there is a life beyond the grave. Upon this, Paul founds the hope of immortality, and the Christian faith finds its cornerstone in the belief in the risen Savior. The doors of mercy are opened wide and today the call comes to us to "run and tell with joy" that Jesus arose and whosoever will believe may also have assurance of their hope of life everlasting.

Ashland, Ohio.

Testimony and the Ever Widening Influence

By Fred C. Vanator

"If Christ hath not been raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins" 1 Cor. 15:17.

The fundamental postulate which forms the foundation upon which is builded the entire fabric of the Christian faith is expressed in these two words—"Jesus Lives."

Saint Paul strikes at the very heart of the matter when he says in 1 Corinthians 15:12ff, "Now Christ is preached that he hath been raised from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there is no resurrection from the dead, neither hath Christ been raised: and if Christ hath not been raised, then is our preaching vain, your faith is also vain." That this faith, a faith in a living Christ, a faith once delivered to the saints, is not vain is a matter of history. Without the shadow of a doubt the whole purpose of the early Apostolic church was to present Jesus as a living Savior. The burden of Saint Peter's message to the people was, "the Christ whom ye crucified and whom God raised from the dead." To look back over the years through which Christianity has come, comparing and relating the progress with its humble beginnings, we are compelled to say that the only justification there remains for the existence of the Christian church today lies in the statement quoted at the head of this brief article. Take away a living Christ and you take away every vitalizing agency connected with the Gospel. But that there is a vitalizing force in Christianity today is amply attested by its ever widening circle of influence; "The Most Convincing Proof of a Living Christ." Even as Jesus spoke to Saint John of old, he speaks to us today,— "Fear not; I am the first and the last, the Living One; and I was dead, and behold, I AM ALIVE FOR EVERMORE."

Ashland, Ohio.

The Hope of Immortality

By C. L. Anspach

It has been said that, "There is no personality in all history so virile, so daring, so powerful, as that of Jesus Christ. Born in a stable, crucified between two thieves, the God-man had power and grace enough in his anguish to look over to the repentant thief and say, "This day thou shalt be with me in paradise." The example here established seems to have been bequeathed to the followers of Jesus Christ. When Bishop Hugh Latimer was burned at the stake with Ridley in 1555, he said, "Be of good comfort, Master Ridley, and play the man. We shall this day light a candle, by God's grace, in England, as I trust shall never be put out." When the summons came to Patrick Henry, the hero of colonial times, he said to the physician, "Doctor, sit by and I will show you how a Christian can die." Daniel Webster on his death bed said, "What would the condition of all of us be if we had not the hope of immortality? The gospel of Jesus Christ brought immortality to light." Donald Hankey, a soldier from over there says, in speaking of a companion that had passed over, "When they got to the other side I think they were met. Some one said, 'Well done, good and faithful servant.' And as they knelt before that gracious pierced Figure, I reckon they saw near by the smile of the Captain. Anyway, in that faith let me die, if death should come my way; and so, I think, shall I die content." And so to believe in the resurrection of Christ gives to the individual a hope and ideal that strengthens him in time of death.

Ashland, Ohio.

His Re-incarnation In Men

By A. L. Lynn

The most convincing proof to me of a living Christ is the power of the Gospel to transform the lives of men. And everywhere this is true. Men are everywhere being gripped and renewed and given larger hope by the Gospel of the risen Christ. Jesus not only holds up the highest ideals before men, but there resides in him the power to make possible the attainment of these ideals. He is the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believeth. Christ as portrayed in the Gospel is the pivotal fact of Christianity. Christ reincarnated in the lives of men and women of every class is the most stupendous and marvelous fact of all history, and constitutes for me the supreme proof of a living Christ. "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive for evermore" (Rev. 1:18). Let us hasten to tell this good news to the millions who do not know this Christ.

Ashland, Ohio.

The Ever Increasing Spirit of Mercy

By Edwin Boardman, Jr.

Jesus lives! I know this because of the increasing spirit of mercy that is finding firm place in the hearts of men and nations.

Consider the world into which Jesus came. Was it a merciful world? No! No! It was a world in which Rome ruled supreme. To her, might was right and her legions had made subject races of much of the human family. Mercy was a word never used by the Romans. If anyone stood in the way of the Empire, death was his portion. Whole peoples were exterminated. Crucifixion or the block were the lot of all prisoners; religious and political reformers and all others who went counter to Rome met death. There were no asylums for blind, maimed or diseased. Survival of the fittest was the central tenet of faith held in Jesus' day.

Jesus changed all this by his life and teaching. Think you, that the teaching of a despised, rejected, ill treated Jewish fanatic—for such did Jesus' contemporaries consider him—would have brought in the change? Certainly not, for Jesus in his life was discredited. A poor Jew could not have worked the change, but the Son of God filled with resurrection power, conqueror of sin, death and the grave could and did for his resurrection set the seal on his life and work. The prayer on the cross, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do," became one of the center points in the message of the resurrection, for among Jesus' first messages to the disciples was that message of mercy and pardon found in Mark—"Go tell the disciples, and Peter." "I came that ye might have life and have it more abundantly," adequately expresses Jesus' message of mercy.

What do we see since Jesus' day? We see a world in constant change. Barbarians becoming imbued with the gospel spirit; Rome becoming Christian; the Renaissance and Reformation; revolution following revolution; war following war; blood being spilled almost like water on a thousand battlefields in the name of the Christ and for his ideals. A dark picture, say you? We grant it, and yet after nineteen hundred years of effort do we not behold the principles of Jesus being given a primary place by both Christian and pagan nations?

No longer is the weakling child or the aged woman carried out into the jungles and left to die of exposure because they are not wanted. No longer are massacres perpetrated without stirring protest and rigid corrective measures being voiced. No longer are races enslaved and bound by spiritual and material fetters. Whence came the hospital and the sanitarium, the institutions for the blind, deaf and dumb? What has outlawed the use of the submarine and barbarous methods of killing men in war? What makes even the rules of war respect Red Cross camps, hospitals, and the rights of the defenceless? Is it our own inherent goodness? I trow not. We are just beginning to get the truth ground into us that the Lord desires us "to do justly and love mercy."

No dead man could have made "mercy" a living issue. How has it happened if Jesus be not risen? As we trace back through the centuries to the real source of the quality of mercy we stop reverently before the open door of the rock cut tomb and there we learn the lesson anew from the lips of the Risen Christ who came to shed abroad in our hearts the "love that passeth knowledge."

A Preamble on Life. By J. A. McInturff

Last fall in company with Mr. Jeffery I was walking through a woods when I noticed a small mound of dead leaves. After examination it proved to be a plant. It had actually forced six or eight pounds of wet and dead leaves from earth until it held its burden ten inches from the original bed. What was it in the plant that took hold of the dead matter and transformed it, and created such force? What organized the elements and produced the plant? Just the other day I was walking down a street in our city when I struck my foot on a piece of upheaved pavement. I stopped only to find that a shade tree had sent its root under it and by this strange way of expending force, had lifted more than one hundred pounds. What was it in the tree that started the force which was here expended? While on a trip to Virginia and following the direction of a very old history I was searching for the grave of a well known Indian chief. While climbing the side of a cliff to the plateau above I was attracted by a large stone which had been forced from its bed. Investigation proved that years before a pine tree had inserted its roots into the seams of the rock and forced the parts asunder. Here is force which is almost measurable. The seat of this force seems to be in the milky substance under the bark which is called cambium. But what is it that takes the earth and compounds it and forms it into the root and thereby exerts this force? It was life. The naturalist, John Burroughs, while walking in a beech woods noticed a "sprouting beechnut which had forced its pale radicles down through the dry leaves * * * piercing two or three of them, * * * into the mingled soil, and leaf-mould a couple of inches." Here is force, and if the life of the beechnut didn't exert it what did?

The origin of life is the subject with which most scientists and naturalists deal in their efforts to explain life, and it is often claimed by a "certain class" that science as it stands today is a plain denial of the Christian conception of creation or the idea of imparted life in matter. But an examination will prove that this exists in the "ignorance of the class" and not in reality. Mr. Haeckel speaks of the "soul" in the atom. What is the "soul" except life? He assumes this to begin with and this soul is the life and force which builds his atom. Henri Bergson finds the solution to the origin of life in "an external force which has grouped its elements together." What is the external force, which expends force in the act of grouping? He assumes that this force exists before the "grouping." Prof. Loeb in his theory of "mechanical, accident origin of life" began his biological experiments upon which he based his theory with "living matter." He begins with "living matter." Herbert Spencer says "life consists of inner action so adjusted as to balance outer action." If he would tell us what it was that caused the "inner action" and "adjustment" we would be interested. To be sure it is life, but what is life? Tyndall found the key to life in the hidden world of molecular attraction and repulsion. He says "Molecular forces determine the form which the solar energy will assume." What forces does he see in the molecule? The force of that "something" we call life. Huxley said that if the "properties of protoplasm result from the nature and disposition of its molecules." Well, what is the nature and disposition of the molecule? Where does this force which he calls nature or disposition come from? It is the life. Sir Oliver Lodge, famous psychist sees in life a tendency or impetus which he thinks arose in matter at a certain time. He says "it has continued to interact with and incarnate itself in matter ever since." What is this force that acts? It is life.

Many more of the same class of naturalists and scientific men could be quoted, but this will show you that they all admit, and in fact state, that there is that "something" which has been planted in matter which acts upon it, and forms it into the thousands of different forms of life. This is just what the old naturalist who is said to have written the first book of the Bible said. "God created the heaven and earth." "The Spirit of God moved upon the face of the fluid." He speaks of "plants before they were in the earth." "Herbs before they grew." Again, he says "God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into * * * (him) the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

Goshen, Indiana.

Interesting Clippings from Recent Letters from Our Missionaries. Selected from Letters to Louis S. Bauman

"I believe the Lord is calling us to a wonderful work in the Eastern French Sudan, or in that part of it that is governed by France, which includes what had been governed by Germany before the war. We do so hope and trust that The Brethren church will be in shape to enter the door that will then be opened to her. Instead of there being any confusion as to different kinds of baptism, there need be only one kind employed in all that vast field, if we will but have faith enough to enter the land."—J. S. G.

"Our hearts have just been encouraged again by reading some of Judson's experiences when he first went to India and Burmah. We have nothing like the odds that he had to face, and then to think that there were 55,000 Christians in Burmah when he died! Six years ago, some of us who are waiting at Brazzaville now, formed part of the small group of A. I. M. missionaries that entered the Eastern Congo and opened the first Protestant mission station in all of those parts. In those days, some smiled at our feeble efforts. Now, there are upward of a score of A. I. M. mission stations in Northern and Eastern Congo, manned by about seventy missionaries, and the African Inland Mission has probably more missionaries in the Belgian Congo than any other Protestant society working there."—J. S. G.

"The closing of the war will shorten, by possibly a month, the time between Brazzaville and America, but the distance from here to where our work will be located will consume all the time that will be saved by swifter service after the close of the war. So if you will always count on six months to get a reply by 'return mail,' you will be hitting it about right."—J. S. G.

"There is one thing sure about our first mission station site, it will be quite free from mosquitoes. We have been chewed up so much by those nasty little things, and some of them are not very small either, that we are simply sick and tired of that game. Just after sitting down to write, I noticed a new kind of mosquito sitting on my paper. I never saw like of him before."—J. S. G.

"I have very little news to add but what I have already written. Since soon after the closing of hostilities in Europe we have had word from the Government. At the time that I have just referred to a letter was sent to me from the Governor-General stating happiness over the close of the war. But this letter was simply one in reply to one from me bearing on the same subject. In neither letter was anything said about permission to go into Ubangi-Shari. I believe that it is best to leave that matter all alone until the Rolliers arrive. Of course, if the Government opens the question, we will be only too glad, but, as far as we are concerned, I think that it is best not to be too aggressive in our requests to the French Government. We have just learned that the Swedish missionaries are registered in French territory as 'farmers,' save Mr. Ceder, who is regarded as a dentist. But our flag is unfurled as 'missionaries.' That is definitely stated on our passports, because the American Government wants to know why the one who asked for a passport wants it, and then they put upon the face of that passport, the purpose for which the voyage is being taken."—J. S. G.

"We look upon the coming of the Rolliers as one of the wonders connected with our work. When we left the homeland, nothing seemed more impossible than that of the Rolliers ever coming to Africa, and then the very first thing we heard about them after reaching Africa was that the way had been opened for them to come. Who could blame us for not keeping our feet still even at that time. Yes, we were like David when the ark was brought to Jerusalem. Now there will be another time when we hear that they have actually reached the Congo."—J. S. G.

"Mr. Rollier boasts of the fact that he never missed a meal; but, I have a distinct recollection of him giving up one, and he would not have cared very much if the boat had gone down just then."—Mary Rollier, written on the ship en route. In between the lines at this point in her letter, Brother Rollier wrote: "Yes, but I got even with the next meals for quite awhile. Never give up except when you have to!"

"The children attract a great deal of attention here (on ship off west coast of Africa) as white children are seldom seen in Africa. Some of the passengers seem to doubt our sanity. They seem to think we are committing a crime. One party fears they will be ruined for life. But surely God knows, and he has made it plain for us to take them. They are his to keep or take as he may see fit. What a wonderful Savior is ours,—whether in life or in death, we are in him."—Mary Rollier.

"We believe the way must soon open for our augmented forces to go forward. We are anxious for your sakes at home to go on, to enter in, and to take possession of the vast field to which in Jesus' name you have sent us forth. We are anxious from the natural standpoint also, for to serve is far easier than to suffer and to wait. We are anxious for the people's sake who wait in darkness. But most of all, we are anxious to go forward for Jesus' sake, that he may see the travail of his soul and be satisfied."—Dr. Florence N. Gribble.

"Wait is a very important word in a missionary's life. Waiting on the Lord teaches many things. We are glad for the faith of the loved ones at home. We praise him that we have not received letters from the church like our fellow missionaries have talked to us, for we could not have turned to Belgium Congo and been true to our calling to Ubangi-Shari. Keep praying for us."—Estella Myers.

"We have just had a visit from Mr. Howard, the superintendent for Sunday school work for South America. He came to deliver us the model Sunday school diploma, as we have attained all the seven points. He said that it is the second that has been awarded in all South America, the first being given to a large school in Montevideo."—C. F. Yoder. Long Beach, California.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The Stewardship of A Life. By A. B. Cover

(TEXT: "Render the Account of Thy Stewardship." Luke 16:2.)

The text points us to the fact of a personal stewardship "Thy stewardship." The teaching of God's Word on this vital theme is pronounced. In the parable of the talents, we are taught that individuals are entrusted with certain endowments to be used in the Master's service. Each one is entrusted with some ability for which he becomes steward and for which the Master demands an accounting. Failure to use the least we may have for God brings condemnation.

The true meaning of life with its possibilities comes to individuals at different periods of life. It may come in the golden glow of youth, and happy are such that dedicate their young lives to their God with all the powers and vigor of life unimpaired; who can render a long term of service. To some it does not come until middle age, who amid the burdens and responsibilities discover a new relationship. Life for them had been a burdensome routine, with passing joys perhaps but no abiding happiness; they had been living for self, but now life is illumined by the fact of purpose; life is to be spent in the attainment of spiritual assets; life itself is a trust. And by others, the secret of life may not be discovered until old age. But happy is the man or woman who finds this stewardship of life; who is conscious of living a life dedicated to God; who uses his or her talents for the enrichment of life and the promulgation of the kingdom of God.

The "rich man" of the parable came and demanded an accounting of his steward. Oh, what a perplexity for the unfaithful steward! He had been accused of unfaithfulness; he could no longer be steward. I turn to the book of Revelation in the twentieth chapter and a great scene is before me. "And I saw a great white throne and him that sat upon it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them. And I saw the dead, the great and the small, standing before the throne; and books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of the things which were written in the books, according to their words." I am thinking of the Master of life demanding of me an account of my stewardship as I stand before that "great white throne." Have I been faithful with the possibilities of my life or have I burned away those treasures entrusted to me? How sad it is that often natural ability is wasted and then suddenly comes the call, "This night thy soul is required of thee." It is urgent that we daily examine our account with God and keep the credit and debit columns balanced.

I. What Has God Entrusted to me?

He has perhaps given me robust health, a strong body and what an asset for the kingdom of God. I remember the strong healthy athlete who had dedicated his life to service in Africa, testify of the joy that came to his life in consequence of a full surrender of that life to God in service. Yet it is the sad history of the race that health has been jeopardized by intemperance. What will the Master say to his stewards concerning this great evil; it has wrecked homes, nations and lives by the millions, often sanctioned by those in covenant relationship to render faithful stewardship. Do we conserve our health by proper care? Yea, we overwork and forfeit that which God has given us as a trust. We need to eliminate some of the haste in this materialistic age of speed and conserve that strength to hasten the things that pertain to the King's business.

God has given us the senses as a trust, how are we using them? What do we look at? The Psalmist said, "I will set no wicked thing before mine eyes." "For mine eyes are ever toward the Lord." If the writer of those words were living in this age, he would find almost the reverse true. People are impairing sight by looking at the too often immoral, character wrecking moving picture. Does the Lord care what we look at? Yes! for it may lead into sin and away from Christ. Oh, that we might reap the harvest of the quick eye and behold the beauty of the Lord.

What stewardship do we exercise in speech? "Every idle word that men shall speak they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." (Matt. 12:36). The Psalmist said, "I will take heed that I sin not with my tongue." I pass along the street and I hear a little boy take the name of the Lord in vain. At once I think of the home and the parents of that boy. Some one is responsible for the stewardship of speech. "By thy words thou shalt be condemned (Matt. 12:37). Thus at once there is a reflection upon the home. And how the Master's business is hampered by lying and gossip; many a reputation shattered by that uncontrollable "little member." Used as an asset, consecrated speech may become a great power for good either to the multitude or the individual.

We are entrusted with a stewardship of privileges. We can have fellowship with God. Can the finite companion with the Infinite? Yes, this intimate friendship Christ offers to every one that will pay the price and assume the obligation. "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." As he commands us to "present our bodies a living sacrifice," we face the fact that fellowship depends upon obedience and the yielded will. In the hour of meditation and communion we hear the command, "Be still and know that I am God." This is the stewardship of the presence of God.

Prayer is a great privilege. "Call upon me and I will hearken unto you." In the moment of distress or glorious exaltation we may talk with God. What a source of spiritual supply for our famishing souls this is; yet may I ask about this stewardship? I dare say many men and women refuse to say one word to him and what will they say in reference to that account, before that "great white throne?" Jesus Christ by precept and example set forth the urgent need of prayer. We are stewards of prayer and of the will to pray. To the believer the Holy Spirit becomes an indwelling presence, and our prayer has not far to travel. Are we faithful in this divine privilege?

Some one says, "that prayer is the one deeply buried talent," but if evidence is proof, reading of God's word is also a greatly neglected privilege. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). A man cannot truly live without knowing God's plan for his life, and what a comfort it is to know that in the Bible we may find a message for each life, and of this message we are stewards. We can accept this challenge in three ways, viz.: "We can neglect the Bible and thus get nothing from its pages; we can criticize it, denying its inspiration and still get nothing, for we lose our faith in its message; or we can accept its truth, though only partly understood. Then faith lays hold of its promises and learns to wait for the Spirit's unfolding of its truth. We need to go back to the Bible of our fathers and feed the soul on the "manna" from heaven.

Again I turn to the debit side of the account with God and find entrusted to me material treasures. First, I find home, the unit of all society; the place where the foundation stones of character are laid, demanding stewardship. Am I giving my loved ones my best or do I neglect my obligation there? I need only call attention to the sad fact that fathers and mothers are found anywhere but in the home, di-

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

The Christian Endeavor At Lost Creek

By Miss Mary Pence

A Sabbath afternoon in a mountain region devoid of church services is anything but ideal. No sooner is the noon meal over than young men and maidens, old men and children, women, babies, dogs, go to some place of gossip where the language and conversation are anything but elevating. These groups of people are found around the store doors, or it may be at a home where some one is ill. The more ill the person is, the larger the crowd and the hotter the room. The young people have no papers and books to read, and no uplifting place to go. The wonder is not that the people are so low in culture, morals, and religion, but that they are as high as they are and retain such susceptibility to higher ideals of life under the circumstances surrounding their lives.

In the Lost Creek community the Christian Endeavor is helping meet the situation for the young people. The Christian Endeavor meets at two o'clock in the afternoon. It is usually the only service of any kind for miles around and to it come most of the young people of the community. I have known as many as 75 young people from 14 to 25 years of age to be at one of the Christian Endeavor services, though not always that many attend. Surely it is a fitting place for the young people to be. Were it not for the Christian Endeavor where would they be? Often after the Christian Endeavor service as many as 50 and more will take a long and orderly walk. Thus the Christian Endeavor of our missions is a factor to save the young people in a social way.

The Christian Endeavor does not end its work here however. It is an educative factor in the lives of those who attend its services. Timely topics are discussed that are wonderfully instructive and uplifting. The young people learn much about their relation and duty to God, to their fellow men, and to their country.

The Christian Endeavor is also a training factor along the line of speaking and praying in public, of leading meetings and working on committees. Thus a leadership is trained for the home community from which the pupils come.

We will mention just one more thing to the credit of Lost Creek Christian Endeavor, and that is the fact that it affords the best opportunity of the whole mission to lead the young people to give their lives to Christian service. No consecrated mission worker can fail to see and grasp this opportunity in the interest of the young people and the cause of Christ. Some of the tithers may not hold out faithful, some of the Life Work Recruits may not keep the vision, but everywhere there are the choice few who will be faithful.

The young people of the Christian Endeavor of Kentucky are a challenge to the young people of the Christian Endeavor of the Brethren church. We of the National Christian Endeavor are at least partly responsible for the very existence of the Lost Creek Christian Endeavor and we should rejoice to hold ourselves responsible for its maintenance. The need is consecrated, talented, prepared teachers and workers, consecrated money and prayer. The Lord can use these things for the young people of Kentucky. Said a conductor on the L. and E. train: "As I pass through I see such great changes in Krypton since the Mission was put there." Similar things have been said of Lost Creek. It is up to us to help keep up the good and make it possible for similar reports to come from the vast number of other needy places.

International Christian Endeavor Conference

For patriotic reasons the International Christian Endeavor Convention that was to have been held in New York City, July 1917, was postponed until the end of the war.

Upon the signing of the armistice the question of holding the convention next summer was taken up with the New York Convention Committee. After careful consideration and consultation with representatives of the United Society, the committee decided that on account of local conditions it would be impossible for New York to entertain the convention this year.

In view of the abnormal conditions still existing in our country and the short time in which to secure another city to assume the responsibility of entertaining one of our great mass conventions, it was decided by the Executive Committee of the United Society to change our plans and hold an International Conference, at which the great questions growing out of the new-world conditions and Christian Endeavor's relation to them could be discussed.

A cordial invitation has been received from the Buffalo, New York, Christian Endeavor Assembly to hold this conference in Buffalo, and the invitation has been accepted.

The location of Buffalo is ideal for such an international gathering.

The Conference dates will be August 5-10, 1919. The Conference will open Tuesday evening, August 5, with a key-note service. The forenoons will be given up to conferences on important topics under expert leadership, the afternoons to business sessions of the United Society, Trustees and Field Workers, and the evenings to strong platform addresses by speakers of international reputation. Saturday afternoon and evening will be given to an excursion to Niagara Falls.

The registration fee for the Conference will be $2.00 which should be sent to the United Society of Christian Endeavor, 41 Mount Vernon Street, Boston, Massachusetts, with application for enrollment.

Full information in regard to program, hotel rates, etc., will be given later through The Christian Endeavor World and other publications.

WILLIAM SHAW, Gen. Secretary,
United Society of Christian Endeavor.

Every identified grave of an American soldier in France will be photographed by the American Red Cross and the picture sent to the soldier's next of kin.

(Continued from page 9)

know of the doctrine, whether it be of God or whether I speak of myself" (John 7:17). Submission is an act of the will, just as anything else is an act of the will. On that memorable night preceding his crucifixion our Savior could by an act of will either have turned back and evaded the shame of the cross, or have proceeded submissively, as he did, to the cross. But his will was to do his Father's will. It was by a definite act of will that he submitted. There is no perfect submission without a will to do the Father's will. When men and women learn this lesson they will find it far easier to live the Christian life.

The necessary accompaniment to the will to do his will, is faith in Jesus Christ. The things we cannot understand, which may be hard to hear, will all pass away if we look to him, "the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God" (Heb. 12:2).

OUR PRAYER

Our Father, who are in heaven, our lives are in thy hands. Thy will is best for us, and we would do it. Teach us to submit to thy will in all things, and to bear all burdens with unwavering faith in thee. When the glamour of the present tends to lure us away from thee, oh Father, give us strength to overcome according to thy perfect will. Help us to yield ourselves entirely to thee. Give us the faith that will overcome this world. Give us a vision of the power that comes from thee through submission to thy will. Strengthen our faith in Jesus our Savior. Help us to live as Jesus lived, and if it be thy will, to be obedient even unto death. If thy will is that we go through the dangers of heathendom in a faraway clime, help us to be true to the call, submissive to thy will. If thy will is that we continue to serve thee where we are, may we serve thee here with all our heart. Teach us that perfect submission to thy will, which will always lead to victory.

Washington, D. C.

MISSIONS

Our Mission Offering. By J. Allen Miller

The requirements of the Board to meet the obligations for the work of foreign missions the coming year will be much larger than before. It is the purpose of this brief article to lay upon the hearts of the people the needs and we do this with the confident hope that the Lord will move a response equal to our necessities.

First of all to be sure, is the support of the workers now on the field. This includes not only living expenses but also rents for homes and the places suitable for services. We should not have less than $6,000 for support of the workers now on the fields.

Secondly, it is imperative that we send additional workers to South America during the year. This will mean equipment and fare to the field. It will also mean support. Just how much is rather hard to indicate beforehand.

Thirdly, we should by all means acquire property in both the fields. For Africa we can not as yet speak. In due time when the missionaries are permanently located we shall have to secure property there.

Just now it is necessary to acquire property at both stations, namely at Cabrera where Brother Atkinson is at work and at La Carlota where Brother Bock works. At neither of these places do we own our own property. Look at these reasons, very briefly stated, why we must have property:

1. Mission work carried on in halls places the workers at the mercy of the owners both as to rents charged and tenure. High rents and frequent moving destroys the work.

2. In such a method there is no real outward evidence presented to the people of permanency. Therefore an appeal to the better classes is wanting.

3. People much prefer to go to a church, and that one they can call their own. Halls, makeshift quarters, for church services do not appeal to people.

4. Rents are high and the amount the Board pays for rentals would more than carry the obligations necessary to assume in the acquisition of property.

5. Letters from both Atkinson and Bock lay this obligation heavily upon the Board and through us upon the church. In both places at this time property can be bought to an advantage. Wisdom dictates that it should be done.

6. A final and a very strong reason is that we should make the work for the workers as easy as possible. These people whom we send to our mission fields have a right to as good a home as we can possibly afford them. Besides they have a right to be supplied with the necessary equipment to carry forward the work committed to them.

How much should we have to meet these property requirements in our Argentine work? To acquire the properties needed in the two places indicated above and to pay off the balance on the property in Rio Cuarto the Board will need $15,000.

We plead for a large offering this year. It should exceed by far the one made last year. Is our faith too small to ask for $25,000 during the present year for all our work? This would be an increase of about 33 percent over the last year's contributions. Be sure and read Brother Bauman's financial statement in next Evangelist.

"GO YE." By James S. Gribble

And Jesus * * * spake unto them saying, "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore, etc." Matt. 28:18, 19.

In this article I shall limit myself to two little words as a subject. They carry with them very great weight indeed. They are the two little words that place the burden of the world's evangelization upon our shoulders. What a shame it is that we do not heed them more! I say it is a shame and a great one, too!

The little word "GO" is used in the imperative mode. It is imperative, and absolutely so, that someone, or someones, should go. The Lord himself, yes, the One in whose hand has been committed all authority, has given the orders. It is a positive command, which, if not obeyed to the very letter, by the one or ones to whom addressed, places them in the embarrassing position of being guilty of flatly disobeying the Highest Power in the whole universe.

Now we come to the second one of these two little words. Here we are told who shall go. The word is used by the Lord so as to include every one of his children. If YOU ARE NOT A CHILD OF GOD, you are, in no wise whatever, included in this "ye." No, if you are not a Christian at the present moment, you have neither part nor lot in this matter. The Lord has not addressed you, for you still belong to those who are against him and are not for him. You are among those who, if the Lord were to come this moment to take his own unto himself, would be left behind with the Anti-christ and his wicked host. The Lord would not take you, for you still have your back turned to him and spurn his offer of free salvation.

But, if YOU ARE A CHILD OF GOD, you are, in a very real sense of the word, supposed to obey the Lord when he has said "Go." The little word "ye," by not being modified, includes every child of God. If God did not modify it, why should we attempt it, so as to bring a class (including ourselves of course) who would be exempted. No, the word is not modified whatever by the Lord who gave it, and neither you nor I, however poor or infirm we might be, have any right to disobey. And, mark it well, not to do what the Lord has said, is to flatly disobey him. If you are not obedient, you surely are disobedient.

But, there are at least three distinct ways of going to the "utmost parts of the earth." Of these three ways, many of God's children are well able to "go" by each route. The first of these is BY PRAYER. The Lord, in his teaching, commenced at this place and said, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." Matt. 9:38. Unless one is spending time in prayer for missions, he is not likely to do any very wise giving, and surely will never go himself. All real interest in this matter begins with prayer. And, mark you well, prayer will cost you something. Simply saying a few words before retiring at night when one is all tired out by chasing the dollar all day long, is not prayer. The writer did such kind of praying ten years before he was ever a Christian. Communion with God should occupy some of the best time of the day when we feel fresh and not when we are all tired out. That is the kind of prayer that God wants and the kind that counts. And, in obeying the great commission, that is the kind of prayer that God expects us to offer. Such kind of prayer will cost us something and God will not overlook the account either. People say that "Time is money." God knows all about it and will enter the account accordingly. This way, BY PRAYER, is one way by which every child of God CAN go to the very uttermost parts of the earth.

Then there is another way in which nearly every one of God's children can go to the very "utmost parts of the earth," and that is by giving. Take a piece of money out of your pocket. Look at it. Consider how you got it. It cost you honest toil to secure it, did it not? That very thing makes that piece of money part of you. Lose it and it gives you keen sorrow. Lend it to a friend and it helps him as if you were helping him yourself. And, give it away so that it will glorify God and it will give you a deep sense of joy and satisfaction which you would not, for a thousand times, part with for the amount of money that you had given. And, the more the money you give means to you, the more God will bless you in giving it. The average person could give a "mite" and the Lord would scarcely notice it, for, to the average man or woman, the value of a mite is but little. But the poor widow, when she gave her "two mites," attracted the Lord's attention to a very wonderful degree. The reason of this is that she did her very utmost in the way of giving. If some of our American millionaires were to give "the widow's mite," it would require one of our large locomotives to pull it, provided it were given in metal currency (and not silver and copper either).

And there are those, who can actually go in person to the "very uttermost parts of the earth." Yes, there are many more that can do this than one might think. There is scarcely a single church congregation in America that has not in it a number of young people who would be, provided they gave themselves into the hands of the Lord for his fitting, very suitable candidates for the foreign mission field.

Brethren, this is Easter time, the time that is commonly supposed to be the time of the year that our Lord and Savior rose from the dead. It is very fitting that this should be a time when we give special interest to the sending of the Gospel to all of the world, but it should not be the only time of the year that we think seriously about this matter, for it is the ONE work that God has given us to do. We should be thinking seriously about it all of the time.

Brazzaville, French Equatorial Africa.

dition. The attendance has exceeded our expectations. Sunday evening, March the 16th, one young woman came and made the good confession and one raised her hand asking an interest in our prayers. Sunday the 23rd, the house was again crowded, and when the invitation was given three more stepped out on the Lord's side.

The Sunday school under the leadership of Brother Harrison Atkinson has been steadily moving forward. The attendance is around 60 and 65. The young ladies and young men classes have reorganized and are doing splendid work. The writer has been chosen teacher of the young men's class and can say that it is a class that he is proud of.

In connection with the prayer meetings which have just recently started we are studying the Book of Acts and we can see a growing interest in these meetings.

When we took up the work here we found that there were but four Evangelists coming to this congregation. We are not on the honor roll yet but we are glad to report that the church paper is now making is weekly visits into sixteen of the homes.

We feel that this report would be incomplete if we said nothing concerning the S. S. C. E., as they have been doing splendid work. On the 27th of February they served lunch at the sale of Brother C. A. Ulrick and came away with a credit of $36.50. They meet for their devotions regularly and have reported many good meetings.

We are planning on a few weeks' meeting in the near future and we solicit the prayers of the entire brotherhood that the UdeU congregation may be largely used of God.

AUSTIN R. STALEY.

MARTINSBURG AND McKEE

We haven't reported for some time but we are nevertheless on the map to stay. We were very much hindered because of "flu" conditions and quarantines, but we have come out of it all and continue earnestly.

All departments of the church are now active and doing good work. Especially our Teacher Training class. We lately closed a two weeks' meeting which was a great success. The membership was faithful and absolutely loyal. Brother W. C. Benshoff, pastor of the Altoona church, did the preaching and did it so well (great) that we heard it said that Benshoff is the best preacher they ever heard. He was certainly at his best and fearlessly proclaimed the great Gospel truths, stirring the Christians to be more in earnest in the work, to lead better lives and to warn sinners to accept Christ as their personal Savior. The visible results of this meeting were five. All have been baptized. The only regret I have is that we closed too soon. There might have been three times as many if we had continued another week, but the Church of the Brethren began a meeting one week before ours closed, so we thought it best to close, not that their meeting inspired ours, nor ours theirs, but all things considered it was better for us. So we feel encouraged to keep plodding on.

McKee.—The McKee church passed through quite a trial when the "flu" was raging. Some of the best of this little congregation

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH OF ARDMORE, SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

You have not heard very much about Ardmore through the Evangelist, but we have been busy. We wish to report now a record meeting which was held from March 2nd to the 7th. Rev. A. E. Thomas preached for us Sunday morning and evening and also Monday evening, but was then called to North Manchester. He secured in his place Rev. J. A. McInturff, of Goshen. Brother McInturff continued the meetings until Friday evening. During this short time ten made the good confession. We regretted very much that the meetings could not continue longer, for we know of more who were almost persuaded; but Brother McInturff could not be with us longer because of his many duties at Goshen. We feel very much indebted to both Brother Thomas and Brother McInturff for the success of the meeting.

On last Wednesday evening Brother Rench baptized seven of our people. The others will be baptized in the near future. We hope to have another series of meetings before long, for the harvest has just begun.

A. GLENN CARPENTER.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON

The first thing of note that occurred after our last report was our revival. It was a success from the word "go." Brother Ashman surely held up the "Faith once for all delivered unto the saints" as the only hope of man. We strove with one purpose from the very first, and that was to exalt Jesus. Through the meeting we won many new friends, a host of "prospects," (one of the main results from revivals in this city) and all told twenty-three came forward. Eight of these were reconsecrations, three were received by relation, the rest were either baptized, or are waiting baptism. Numbers really mean very little in revivals in this congregation, because there is a constant, steady influx during the year. While many churches have large numbers at revival time, yet in the main, I venture to say there are really very few churches growing faster than the Spokane church, considering the size and age of the work. And the meeting we have just closed, with Brother Ashman leading us, has given us a great shove ahead, and increased the respect of this city for the church that dares to preach the whose gospel today.

I certainly want to say "Amen" to Brother George Ronk's article on mission work. It certainly hits the nail on the head. But Brother Ronk, as extenuating as the circumstances surrounding the building up of a new church may be, I'm ready to start another one after I'm through here, rather than feed honey and conscience salve to a self-satisfied congregation at a fat salary.

Our work here is progressing fine. Our Sunday school has just hit the 158 mark last Sunday, with no especial service to attract. The regular services are better attended than ever. We are going to start building the rest of our church in a couple of weeks, as soon as weather permits. By the time this reaches you we will be hard at work, if nothing happens, laying the brick. But the work is great and we are still $2,000 short above all that we have or can borrow. But we believe that the Lord will supply all our need according to his riches in Christ Jesus, and that the brotherhood will stand by us in the critical hour of need. We are trying to erect a building worthy to represent the Brethren church in this great field, one of which the brotherhood need not be ashamed. Yet it is not expensive in ornaments, but everything is designed with a purpose of 100 percent efficiency. That's the Lord's way.

We are planning to dedicate August 3 and if any brethren are planning on going east or west about that time, be sure and arrange to be present at that day, for we are going to make it the biggest day the Brethren church in the Northwest ever saw. We will surely give a whole-hearted welcome to all who come. You'll never forget the day. Pray for us that the Lord may solve all our problems according to his will.

R. PAUL MILLER.

UDELL, IOWA

It has been some time since Udell has been heard from through the church paper, but we have not been idle by any means.

We had scarcely got settled here last October, when the state closed all public gatherings for two weeks. There was no "flu" in Udell at that time so when the ban was lifted the church started off in good shape. The work had got under good way again when suddenly this dreaded disease came into our midst and within two days there were 40 cases in Udell. There were four more Sundays without any church service.

Although we have had bad roads and have seen some discouraging times, we have not failed to trust in the Lord to give us the victory, and we feel that he is wonderfully blessing our efforts. The church is in splendid con-went to their reward, but still the Lord is raising up others to take their places. Since our last report we have baptized five with three yet to baptize. This is a faithful little band of Christians, struggling sometimes under great difficulties, yet succeeding.

We have a good Sunday school and Christian Endeavor society, also a fine class in Teacher Training.

They have installed a splendid lighting system which adds very much to the church work. They also have made other telling improvements, amongst which is the new piano, and are planning for other necessary improvements. The pastor held a ten day meeting resulting in four confessions and a stirring of the membership to greater activity.

The pastor feels under many obligations to both Martinsburg and McKee for their loyal and liberal support, having increased the salary until it is ample to meet every demand.

Each congregation is very much interested in the Four Year Program and trying to make as many points as it is possible.

J. I. HALL.

LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA

A few retrospective and prospective items from Long Beach will perhaps be of interest.

Brother W. S. Bell arrived here the second week in October, took charge of the mid-week prayer meeting and before Sunday a "flu" ordinance closed all churches and Sunday schools. They were closed for five or six weeks. When we were allowed to have services again, the Sunday school made preparation for a White Christmas service which came off very nicely. The church laid plans to hold a revival meeting beginning the last part of January, but the "flu" epidemic multiplied so that closing up was ordered for several weeks which upset that plan. Then we decided to begin revival services the first Sunday in April, but lo and behold, the east side churches of which we are right in the center, decided to have a union revival beginning the last Sunday in March so we thought it unwise to have a revival at the same time. Instead we will join with them in this union effort and begin our revival the first Sunday in May. Brother Bell will do the preaching and Professor B. P. Stout will lead the singing.

When Brother Bell came here (from the too hot in the summer and too cold in the winter climate) he was in poor health, but inhaling the gentle breezes and basking in the balmy California sunshine, he has improved right along and is now apparently in good health and as his health has improved so have his sermons. He has more energy (pep) and is giving some very practical and soul stirring sermons. The congregations are about as large as when Brother Bauman was here, which speaks well for Brother Bell, for Bauman has the reputation here and on the coast of being one of the very best expositors of the Bible, especially on prophecy. As proof of this, the Christian Endeavor societies have called him again and again as a speaker to their county and state conventions and as a lecturer at their summer assembly at Mt. Hermon to which come the officers and cream of the societies from all over the state.

We expect Brother Bauman back by the middle of May to assist us in closing up the revival and to resume his pastoral work. We ask the prayers of many in the brotherhood for a glorious revival and the salvation of many souls. Four have been baptized by Brother Bell and Brother Eli Hoover and wife have been received into membership.

At the February meeting of "The World Wide Missionary Society," Brother H. V. Wall, who visited the Kentucky missions last summer, gave us a very interesting lecture with stereopticon views he took down there. We raised one hundred and eleven dollars for the "Well" at Krypton at this meeting. On January the seventh, the church raised over four hundred dollars for Syrian, Armenian relief fund.

The Sunday school was somewhat on the decrease by the "flu" and other causes, so a Mr. J. H. Barton, who makes a business of helping Sunday schools to increase their attendance, had our teams for church work to canvass the surrounding neighborhood and a good many new scholars were brought in. There is quite an interest in the school under the leadership of our efficient superintendent, Sister A. W. Mayell. This shows that if we would do more work in visiting as well as otherwise, we could have more scholars. We have secured Mr. Barton's services for one month to follow up the effort.

On the fourteenth of March, we had a "Father and Son" banquet under the auspices of the Men's Bible class, and although it was a rainy day and evening, ninety-two men and boys surrounded the tables. N. W. Jennings of Los Angeles, S. P. MacLennan of San Pedro and W. S. Bell each spoke on the different phases appropriate for the occasion and it was a very successful meeting long to be remembered. The Dorcas society prepared the supper.

At our mid-week prayer and testimony meeting the general attendance is 75 to 100 and on Sunday evening before the preaching service the older men and women each have a prayer circle besides the three Christian Endeavor societies. The Word of God and prayer gives strength and power to the child of God to live the victorious life. The Word of God and prayer give the church power with God in winning lost souls. Let us, therefore, be true and faithful to God in using his means of grace.

N. C. NIELSEN.

PERU, INDIANA

The "flu" abides with us still and refuses to accept an honorable discharge. However, we are beginning "An Old Fashioned Revival" on Sunday, March 30, with Brother A. E. Thomas as evangelist. Will the brotherhood pray with us that the Lord shall overcome all hindrances and make them glorify him. Pray that a great victory may be won in our midst.

The Sunday school has been making a fine record, considering the roughness of the path as we climbed up the hill. For several weeks we have been in a friendly contest with the Sunday school of the First Brethren church of Huntington. Peru is ahead at present but what the final result will be at Easter time when the contest ends remains to be seen. We think we know but Brother Brower, the pastor, and Brother Landis, the superintendent, at Huntington may beg to differ, so we will refrain from further utterance until Easter time.

G. C. CARPENTER.

TO THE CHURCHES OF THE ILLIOKOTA DISTRICT

Last year in this district twelve congregations out of sixteen reached the Foreign Mission goal. Let each pastor and leader make an effort this year to have each congregation reach the goal. Make an effort to have Illio-kota 100 percent when the offerings have all been reported.

Yours for victory,
FREEMAN ANKRUM,
District Goal Director

KENTUCKY MISSION RECEIPTS FOR FEBRUARY

S. S. C. E., Flora, Ind.,	$ 10.00
Yellow Creek Church, Hopewell, Pa.,	8.00
Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hounshell, New Market, Va.,	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. Guy Pittenger, Wooster, O.,	5.00
C. E. Society and Church, Clay City, O.,	13.80
C. E. Society, Flora, Ind.,	5.00
S. S. C. E., New Paris, Ind.,	5.00
Sisterhood of Mary and Mathra, For Kentucky Nurse,	93.00
Rev. H. H. Wolford, Elkhart, Ind.,	5.00
Sunday School, Fillmore, Calif.,	6.00
Sisterhood Girls, Elkhart, Ind.,	5.00
C. E. Society, Flora, Ind.,	5.72
Mr. and Mrs. H. F. E. O'Neil, Pittsburgh, Pa.,	10.00
Sugar Grove Church, Aleppo, Pa., ...	6.00
Brethren Church, Burlington, Ind., ...	10.00
Brethren Church, New Enterprise, Ind.,	10.20
White Gifts by National S. S. Association, by Albert Trent,	500.00
Brethren Church, Krypton, Ky., On Pastor's Salary,	20.00

All pledges for the year 1918-19 should be paid soon. Come on, Endeavor Societies, you too have likely been delayed by the "flu," but now is the time to speed up and return to the old schedule or a better one.

G. C. CARPENTER.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

I have no doubt many of our Kanemorado people have been anxiously awaiting the report from Carlton. Carlton should have been reported before Beaver City. However, I reported Beaver City first in the hope that when I did report for Carlton it would be final. And while the report for Carlton is very good, still I am hoping that it is not even yet final.

On Sunday, March 2nd, I began the work at Carlton. Brother J. D. Kemper, the pastor, had everything in good shape, and ready for the canvass. We had fine audiences at both services on the first day. And everything seemed to bid fair for a fine week. However, on Monday morning we found that another "flu" scare had swept over the town and community; and this, in connection with bad roads most of the time meant that our audiences were small for the rest of the week.

But we did business just the same, and the Carlton folks were ready to talk endowment, as the results will show. Carlton's score for the present stands at $3,600, and I do not believe this is all yet from Carlton. This puts Carlton in second place among Kanemorado churches, and in fourth place among the churches so far canvassed. But a lot of the Carlton people are not yet satisfied; they would like to take Carlton enough beyond $4,000 to get in ahead of Myersdale, into third place. I am sure not going back on Myersdale, and yet, if Carlton highly and nobly purposes in her heart to go ahead of Myersdale in this great, good work, who am I that I should put a straw in her way to prevent her? At any rate, I look for more results from Carlton.

I am glad to be able to report that at Carlton a brother and his good wife enlisted in the thousand dollar class. Thus, while the five hundred dollar class is growing at a most encouraging rate, the thousand dollar class is growing some too. This brother and his wife celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary by giving $1,000 to Permanent Endowment. To my mind there is no more fitting way to celebrate a wedding anniversary than just that way. I do hope other men of our brotherhood may profit by this suggestion, and go and do likewise.

We also had two of the Carlton people to enlist in the $500 class. There was also a $300 gift, and the remainder in sums of $100 and down. Aside from some bad weather and bad roads we had a very enjoyable week at Carlton. I have no doubt the Carlton people have a peculiar interest in Ashland college because one of their own girls from the Carlton church, Miss Wilma Lichty, has for several years been highly successful as head of the Department of Instrumental Music in our school. Indeed the Carlton folks feel a just pride in this fact.

I counted the parsonage as headquarters, with Brother Kemper in charge. Sister Kemper happened to be at her home at Beaver City at the time. Kemper and I did as we pleased—something every man enjoys occasionally. I can say too, that we never lacked for company, for Brother Elias Lichty came in often. We were treated royally in all of the Carlton homes; nor shall we soon forget the Beachys, and the Lichtys, and the Millers, and the Esterbrooks, and the Whipkeys, and others. The Carlton people are a splendid loyal people, and I covet for them as a church God's rich blessings.

WM. H. BEACHLER,
Campaign Secretary.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

FAHRNEY-DEETS—On February 19, 1919, Ralph A. Fahrney and Florence Mae Deets, both of Milledgeville, Illinois, were united in marriage by the undersigned at the home of the bride, in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. These estimable young people are members of the Brethren church, and the best wishes of their many friends accompany them in their wedded life.

MILES J. SNYDER.

PLOCK-HEFELFINGER—Miss Maud Plock and Ray Hefelfinger, both of Lanark, were united in marriage by the undersigned. They are estimable young people who will reside on a farm in this community. They have a host of friends that wish them prosperity and happiness.

Now Watch the Kanemorado District Raise the Mercury

COLLEGE
ENDOWMENT

HEPFER-WED—Miss Pauline Hepfer, daughter of Brother and Sister Harry Hepfer of Lanark, and Mr. Lloyd Weed also of Lanark, but recently from across the seas, were united in matrimony by the undersigned. Mr. Weed is an electrician in the employ of The Lena Light and Power Co. They will reside in Lanark where both were reared and have their parents and many friends that extend congratulations.

B. T. BURNWORTH.

IN THE SHADOW

VORE—Earl George, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. George Vore, was born in Miami county, near Loree, Indiana, July 11, 1915 and departed this life at the home of his parents in Kokomo, Indiana, March 13, 1919, at the age of three years, eight months and two days. Death was due to a complication of diseases. Funeral services at the home in Kokomo, Sunday, March 16th, the writer officiating.

C. A. STEWART.

MILLER—Elizabeth Anna Miller was born in Peru, Indiana, May 3, 1842, and departed this life at her home in Bunker Hill, Indiana, February 27, 1919, aged 76 years, 9 months and 24 days. She was united in marriage to Jared Ellars on May 10, 1865, to which union were born three children, Frank, Clarence O., and Rosa Blanch. Her husband, daughter and one son preceded her to the spirit-world. She was a good mother and neighbor and loved by all who knew her. She leaves to mourn their loss, one son, one grandson, three great-grandchildren and a host of friends.

C. A. STEWART.

HOOVER—Earl Cecil, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hoover of Marion, Indiana, was born October 9th, 1899, died in a Fort Wayne hospital, January 31, 1919, aged 19 years, 3 months and 22 days. He leaves to mourn their loss father, mother, one brother and one sister and a host of friends. Earl was employed as a drug clerk in a drug store in Fort Wayne, Indiana, where he will be greatly missed by his friends and associates. Death was due to pneumonia superinduced by influenza. Services by the writer. Burial at the Corinth cemetery at Twelve Mile, Indiana.

C. A. STEWART.

PETERSON—Mrs. Melvin Peterson, mother of Brother Glenn Peterson of Buckeye City, Ohio, died at her home east of Flora, Indiana, March 20, 1919. Mrs. Peterson was past 62 years of age and has been a resident of Carroll county, Indiana, all her life. She was a member of the Christian church for many years. She leaves to mourn her departure a husband, three sons and two daughters. The funeral was held from the home by her pastor, J. C. Reynolds, assisted by the undersigned. Brother Glenn has the sympathy and prayers of his old college friends and classmates, as well as the First Brethren church at Flora.

S. C. HENDERSON.

URICH—Daniel Urich was born in Wayne county, Indiana, April 5th, 1838, and departed this life at his home at Lone Star, Kansas, March 21st, 1919, being at the time of his death 80 years, 11 months and 15 days.

He came to Kansas with his parents when only a boy of 17 years of age, locating in Wyandotte county, and in 1856 moved to Douglas county.

He was married to Mary Weybright September 5th, 1861, who departed this life January 23rd, 1890. This union was blessed with seven children, three of whom are still living, four having already preceded the father. His second marriage was to Mary Winters, July 13th, 1892, who is left to mourn his loss.

Besides his wife he is survived by three children, Mrs. Etta Shank of Caruthers, California, Charles of Leocompton, Kansas, and William H. of Lone Star, also one brother, two sisters, thirteen grandchildren, one great grandson and a host of loving friends.

Having come to Kansas in an early day he had many hardships to endure and did much to help the community in which he lived. He was always kind and considerate to all and everybody loved him. He was not neglectful of his Christian duties, having accepted Christ as his personal Savior over 30 years ago and lived a devoted Christian life.

W. H. URICH.

HOLSINGER—Winfield Scott Holsinger was born at Mt. Morris, Illinois, on July 26, 1867, and died at his home at Norcatur, Kansas, March 17, 1919. When quite young he went with his parents from Illinois to Norcatur county, Nebraska and later to Maple Grove Colony, in Norton county, Kansas, where he united with the Brethren church. He spent most of his life in Norcatur and vicinity. He was an industrious, hard working man and generous to a fault. He suffered many years from an affliction brought on by accidental blood poisoning. Funeral services were conducted from the M. E. church, by Rev. V. V. Whitsett, pastor of the church and Rev. Groseclose of the Lutheran church. He leaves an aged father, S. R. Holsinger; two sisters, Mrs. W. W. Reager and Mrs. J. L. Webster, and one brother, Ray R. Holsinger, all of Norcatur, to mourn his passing.

S. R. HOLSINGER.

BOWMAN—Mary Etta Bowman of Dayton, Virginia, departed this life on March 18, 1919, aged 21 years 8 months and 26 days. She is survived by her parents, Noah and Fannie Bowman, and one sister, Minnie.

Three weeks prior to her death she was taken to the Rockingham Memorial Hospital at Harrisonburg, Virginia, for an operation for appendicitis. Other complications followed causing death. At an early age she gave her heart to God and lived a beautiful Christian life. She was loved by all who knew her and was a consistent and faithful member of the Dayton Brethren church.

The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. S. L. Bowman of the Church of the Brethren, and the Rev. D. D. Brandt of the Presbyterian church.
J. M. BOWMAN.

BLOUGH—Sister Clara, wife of John Blough departed this life at the age of 49 years, 4 months and 11 days. She leaves her companion, a son and daughter, besides her aged parents, who depended largely upon her. She was a member of the Brethren church, especially interested in Sunday school work.

GORDON—Mrs. Emmet Gordon (nee Mary Engles) was reared in Wyck township and was married to Emmet Gordon, September 14, 1913. They had resided at Thief River Falls, Minnesota the last few years where her death occurred at the age of 28 years, 1 month and 10 days. She leaves besides her companion, her parents and three brothers. She was a member of the Brethren church at Lanark and her funeral was held here conducted by the pastor and assisted by Z. T. Livengood. May the Holy Comforter abide with these sorrowing ones.
B. T. BURNWORTH.

FAHNEY—Lizzie Emmert, died January 25, 1919, after about a month's illness. Sister Fahney was of a quiet, unassuming disposition beloved by all who knew her. She possessed a rare mind and was able to comprehend above the average listener. She leaves to mourn her departure the following children: Miss Grace A., Fred, and A. Emmert, of the city, and Mrs. E. D. Butz of Philadelphia, Pa., and one brother living near the city. Funeral was held at the pastor, assisted by Brother J. M. Tombaugh from the Hagerstown First Brethren church. We pray God to bless the remaining ones.
A. B. COVER.

DAVIS—John L. R., infant son of Brother and Sister J. Franklin Davis died February 9, 1919. This little life came to sweeten the lives of the loved ones for but a little while. It was a blossom too frail for this world. Funeral from their home by the pastor, the undersigned. May God bless the bereft.
A. B. COVER.

Business Manager's Corner

THE SECOND MILE

In one of his matchless sermons, published years ago, Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman makes it clear that the thought in the mind of Jesus when he said, "If a man compel thee to go with him a mile go twain," was that the greatest blessings come to those who do more than mere duty requires. We are convinced that many people miss the real joy of service because they stop the minute the "whistle blows." No worker, who is more interested in watching the clock or in looking for the time to come when the blowing of the whistle shall call him from his task, can hope to become a master of his profession or his trade. And no Christian who seeks to do only the things he must do in order to maintain his place as such can hope to get much enjoyment out of his service.

The Four Year Program as outlined for the work of the Brethren church has not taken into consideration the ultimate achievements of the church, but has set a standard for a minimum achievement, and the churches or their pastors that are satisfied to simply reach the goals set have not caught the real spirit of the program. They must go the "second mile" to make their efforts worth while. This spirit has been caught by a number of our pastors in regard to Goal 9, or the goal in regard to the figures set for the Evangelist. One of the most successful pastors along this line is L. A. Myers of Denver, Indiana. Last year he succeeded in getting both churches in his charge on the Evangelist Honor Roll and only recently they have won this honor for the second year, but the remarkable thing about the achievement is that the list from the Denver congregation is that the number of subscriptions sent in is equal to one hundred and eight percent of the families belonging to the church. If there is another church with an equal record we would like to learn of it. And yet there are some congregations that seem to be afraid to try to reach the goal of seventy-five percent. We remember that more than ten years ago we spoke the words that made Brother and Sister Myers ONE, and perhaps he is taking this method to get even with us. All right, Brother Myers, we would like to have a few more pastors to even up in a like manner.

New Business

While we are always glad to have all old lists of subscriptions renewed it is the new lists that will bring our lists up to the FIVE THOUSAND we have set as our goal for this year. And we are glad to announce one more church has come to our help by winning a place on the Honor Roll. This time it is the Darwin, Indiana, church with Brother Lytle as pastor. The Business Manager is glad to see in this list the names of some of the people he baptized and received into this church at the time he organized it twenty-two years ago. Brother Lytle is right up to the front line trenches when it comes to bringing the congregations he serves up to the standards set by the Four Year Program committee. The work of the Evangelist goal may be going forward slowly, but it is going, and we are glad that the prospects are good for still further advance along this line. The question is, What church will be the next to reach this goal?

E. R. TEETER,
Business Manager.

EVANGELIST HONOR ROLL

The following churches having met the requirements laid down by the Brethren Publishing Company regarding the placing of the Evangelist in the homes of the congregations are entitled to a place on the Evangelist Honor Roll:

Church	Pastor
Akron, Ind., (New Highland),	D. A. C. Teeter
Alentown, Pa., 2nd Yr.,	A. L. DeLozier
Ankentyown, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	A. L. Lynu
Ashland, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	J. A. Garber
Beaver City, Neb.,	Vacant
Berlin, Penna.,	I. B. Trout
Berne, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	W. F. Johnson
Bryan, Ohio,	G. L. Maus
Burlington, Ind., 2nd Yr.,	W. T. Lytle
Carleton, Nebr., 2nd Yr.,	J. D. Kemper
Clay City, Indiana,	Geo. W. Kinzie
College Corner, Ind., 2nd Yr.,	Homer Anderson

Conemaugh, Pa., 2nd Yr.,	L. G. Smith
Dallas Center, Iowa,	R. F. Porte
Denver, Indiana,	L. A. Myers
Dutchtown, Indiana,	Homer Anderson
Elkhart, Indiana,	H. H. Wolford
Fairhaven, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	B. F. Owen
Falls City, Neb., 2nd Yr.,	H. F. Stuckman
Fillmore, Calif.,	Sylvester Lowman
Flora, Ind., 2nd Yr.,	S. C. Henderson
Ft. Scott, Kansas,	Mrs. L. C. Webb
Fostoria, Ohio,	M. S. White
Freemont, Ohio,	H. M. Oberholtzer
Gretna, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	Edwin Boardman
Hamlin, Kansas, 2nd Yr.,	Geo. E. Cone
Huntington, Indiana,	J. W. Brower
Johnstown, Pa., 1st Ch.,	J. F. Watson
Johnstown, Pa., 3rd Ch.,	Geo. H. Jones
Lanark, Ill., 2nd Yr.,	B. T. Burnworth
La Verne, Calif., 2nd Yr.,	T. H. Broad
Leon, Iowa,	Geo. T. Ronk
Leon, Iowa, (Crown Chapel),	Geo. T. Ronk
Linwood, Maryland, 2nd Yr.,	E. M. Riddle
Long Beach, Cal., 2nd Yr.,	L. S. Bauman
Loree, Indiana,	W. T. Lytle
Los Angeles, Cal., 1st, 2nd Yr.,	N. W. Jennings
Louisville, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	Geo. S. Baer
Meyersdale, Pa., 2nd Yr.,	E. D. Burnworth
Mexico, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	L. W. Diteh
Milledgeville, Ill., 2nd Yr.,	M. J. Snyder
Morrill, Kansas, 2nd Yr.,	A. E. Whitted
Mt. View, Pa., 2nd Yr.,	J. E. Patterson
Muncie, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	J. L. Kimmel
Nappanee, Ind., 2nd Yr.,	C. E. Kolb
New Enterprise, Pa.,	Edward Byers
New Lebanon, Ohio,	L. B. Wilkins
New Paris, Indiana,	Ora I. Oxley
North English, Iowa,	W. H. Miller
North Liberty, Indiana,	C. C. Grisso
Oakville, Indiana,	W. R. Deeter
Pittsburgh, Pa.,	H. M. Harley
Portis, Kansas, 2nd Yr.,	Roy Brumbaugh
Rittman, Ohio,	J. Allen Miller
Roann, Indiana,	W. E. Ronk
Salisbury, Penna.,	E. D. Burnworth
Sidney, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	L. A. Myers
Summit Mills, Pa., 2nd Yr.,	E. D. Burnworth
Telford, Tennessee,	(Vacant)
Tiosa, Indiana,	Ora I. Oxley
Washington, C. H., O., 2nd Yr.,	B. S. Stoffer
Waterloo, Iowa, 2nd Yr.,	H. L. Goughnour
Whittier, Calif.,	A. V. Kimmel
White Chapel, Mo.,	G. T. Ronk
Windber, Pennsylvania,	E. F. Byers
Yellow Creek, Pa.,	Edward Byers
Zion Hill, Ohio,	A. L. Lynn

Brethren Home of Ohio

An Incorporation with
over $10,000 in Assets

PURPOSE. To build a home for the aged and infirm of our church and an orphanage for our children.

Why not make it a National Home for the entire brotherhood? The Board of Trustees will present this proposition at National Conference this year.

Gifts, subscriptions and bequests solicited.

Information cheerfully given.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Ira Fudge, Gratis, Ohio, Pres.
Orion E. Bowman, V. Pres. and Atty.
Elmer Wombold, Secy.
1718 W. Monument Ave., Dayton, Ohio
Jesse A. Garver, Treas.
J. Allen Miller.

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 16

APRIL 16
1919

The BRETAREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETAREN -

Christ in Agony for a World in Sin

(By Courtesy of Foreign Missionary Society)

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $3.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

There Are Two Sides to Every Question—Editor,	2	The "Glad Hand" in the Sunday School—G. E. Cone,	10
Editorial Review,	3	Springtime Joy and Work—Dr. F. E. Clark,	11
The Decline of the Family Altar—W. T. Lytle,	4	Increasing Interest Through Gifts—G. C. Carpenter,	11
Religion After the War—Dr. J. L. Gillin,	5	What Christian Endeavor Means,	11
The Returned Soldier—Rev. F. W. Hoffman,	5	The Easter Offering—A Final Word—L. S. Bauman,	12
Modern Bible Whittlers—C. H. Ashman,	6	Our Foreign Missionary Needs—L. S. Bauman,	12
The Second Coming of Christ—W. S. Bell,	8	Rio Cuarto, Argentina—C. F. Yoder,	13
Appeal for Prayer—A. J. McClain,	9	News From the Field,	14-16
The Holy Spirit—Dr. J. M. Tombaugh,	10	Business Manager's Corner—Dr. R. R. Teeter,	16

EDITORIAL

There Are Two Sides to Every Question

We are indebted to a very loyal supporter of The Evangelist for a clipping from the Kansas City Journal of an editorial entitled "Militant Christianity." We thank our correspondent, for the clipping brings to our attention a subject on which something ought to be said.

The text of this editorial was a statement made by a certain Kansas City minister: "If the Christians of Kansas City were as active as are the criminals, the crime wave which is making our city notorious throughout the United States could be stopped quickly." It begins by stating that "no one will doubt the absolute correctness of such a statement for it is obvious that the church element of the community is not entrenched in the management of its affairs in any approximate degree as compared with the criminal element. Nobody ever heard of the officials of Kansas City taking orders from the church people, for the simple and sufficient reason that the church people do not give them orders. Such orders as are obeyed come from the politicians and their henchmen."

These statements apply not only to Kansas City, but to every city and village throughout the land and whatever truth or error they contain is of vital interest to all Christian people.

It should be remembered at the outset that there are two sides to every question, and this is no exception. Our newspaper editorial contains both truth and error; true statement, mis-statement and exaggeration. It will be admitted that there is much to be criticized in regard to the proper functioning of the church and there are many Christians who fall far short of what is expected of them. Every earnest-hearted pastor is made to cry out often as he sees the indifference, inconsistency and lethargy of the average church member. And every Christian man with a vision of what the church might be and do, of the power it might possess and the influence it might wield, is made to lament its narrow vision and feeble efforts. The church ought to be a savior of the community as well as of the individual. It ought to help to make men strong as well as get them converted. It ought to induce them to live right in the community, at their work, in their politics and social relations as well as be faithful in attendance at public worship on Sunday. It ought to influence, through the Gospel it proclaims, men to deal justly with one another and to be honest and upright in all their relations. It ought to lead out in efforts to right community wrongs, be quick to detect every enemy of society and not only sound the alarm but marshal the forces to drive it out. It ought to make it easier for the men of the community to do right and harder for them to do wrong. All this and much more should be brought about by aggressive leadership in the community. To say that it has not had vision nor willingness to undertake and to do all that has been rightly expected if it, is only stating what is commonly observed. And no one regrets it more than the wide awake leaders of the church.

All this however does not justify much of the widespread and indiscriminate criticism of the church. The church is weak because she is composed of and is working with weak human creatures. She does not always make use of the divine power with which she might be filled because it is a slow, tedious process by which her members grow out of their selfishness and weakness into the full surrender and strength of the complete man in Christ Jesus. The church is weak, too because some of those who are nominally her members are standing aloof and criticizing her instead of staying in the harness and adding strength to strength and vision to vision. The church's severest knockers are her disgruntled members. The church is weakened by every criticism from within that is not of a constructive nature. The weaknesses that are apparent to the men of vision ought to stir those souls to more earnest endeavor and far-seeing planning to make it all, under God, they know it ought to be.

Another thing that adds to the weakness of the church and makes unjust the wholesale criticism of her ineffective efforts to influence community conditions for the right is the not infrequent sprinkling of the criminal element in the church. True, she is at fault for not seeing more carefully to the pruning out of the dead branches. But this, too, would bring upon her criticism by the malicious and make her liable to do injury to some one who is good intentioned but very weak. It is no easy task to distinguish between the sincere but weak souls and those who use the church as a cloak for their criminality. The church would probably be stronger however, and could speak more effectively if she would cast out some of the political wire-pullers and confederates of criminals.

Some of our critic's complaints of the church are unfair and some fall short of the facts. Why should the church be criticized for not being "entrenched in the management of affairs" in a way that the criminal element is? "Entrenchment in the management of affairs" by those unauthorized is itself criminal. Only criminals will seek to exercise an unjust and unlawful influence over affairs. Such influence is only wielded through some consideration; the church cannot barter. Why criticize the church or true church people for not being partners to crime? But so far as legitimate influence is concerned the church is not entirely negligent nor ineffective. The Anti-Saloon League, one of the most effective organized efforts to influence affairs for the right is an organization within the church. The church supplies it's men, funds and inspiration. Law-enforcement leagues are almost invariably fathered and officered by prominent and worthy church people. When political parties of whatsoever creed become drunken with power and corrupted by illegitimate influences, it has invariably been the great Christian leaders of the land who have gathered the forces for the dethronement of the "politicians and their henchmen." When industrial greed has ground down laboring men and driven them into the squalor of "industrial settlements" of great cities, it has been God's far-seeing prophets, such as Graham Taylor and Jane Addams of the Inland Empire of America, who have led the oppressed to relief and final freedom. When the world is reeking in the blood of a world war, it is the offspring of the churches, the Red Cross and the servant of prevention, the Y. M. C. A., who go with relief and sustenance. And even while the nations are trembling with hatred and thrusting at one another's throats, it is the Church Peace League and other pacifying agencies and movements within the church that prepare the way for the bridging of these gulfs of hatred. Everywhere and in every situation the church is exercising an inestimable influence in the management of affairs.

To criticize the church for making protests that are ineffective for lack of "punch" behind the protests is simply an innocent acknowledgment of the higher methods employed by the church than are used by the criminal gangsters. For thus the editorial continues: "The church people go down to the city hall occasionally and protest against some particularly menacing situation. They send delegates to object to the granting of saloon licenses in residence neighborhoods or to voice their wishes along some other line making for the betterment of the community. They hold meetings and pass resolutions when matters go out of hand. Their intentions are admirable but their influence is negligible, simply because the politicians and those whom they control know there is no 'punch' behind the protests and resolutions. When election day comes around the same old gang wins and another era of protests and resolutions set in." It is true, the church has often been too feeble in her efforts to right the wrongs, but she has been more feeble in preventive measures than in curatives. But notwithstanding, she has not been as impractical in her methods as her critics often suppose. She has not only protested against granting saloon licenses, but has carried elections against them. Churches not only pass resolutions, but encourage the election of good men. There were pastors in Ohio during the last statewide prohibition contest, who had their entire memberships pledged, not by bribery but by appeals to right, to vote against the saloon and in favor of clean men. But to say church people do not have the "punch" that makes politicians take notice is to say church people do not stoop to methods that are effective on "politicians and their henchmen." Only money or its equal talks to such men. Protests, resolutions and honest voting are the church's methods. She does not always win quick victories by those methods, but she is certain to win and her victories when won are more permanent. She cannot, dare not become criminal herself by the use of criminal methods to combat evil. She must keep clean to be strong and to finally win the affection and loyalty of even the criminal. She has weaknesses many and failures many, yet she is the mightiest force in righting wrong and in bringing in the kingdom of righteousness in the world today. The church lays no claim to perfection, though a divine institution because she is composed of imperfect human beings, and she invites constructive criticism. But let him who offers the criticism be in the van of the battle.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Have you prayed about your foreign mission offering yet? You can't give right until you do.

As a farmer shows his faith in the laws of nature by building his granary when he sows his seed, so we should build, expecting results in the spiritual harvest.

Brother J. M. Bowman of Harrisonburg, Virginia, writes in the interest of our Washington, D. C. church. He has recently been on the ground and secured first-hand information concerning the needs of the Capitol City church for larger quarters and also testifies to the splendid work being done by Brother Lyon and his co-workers.

Brother Carpenter is still looking for a successor to Brother Cook, who, as announced, is planning to leave Krypton on account of his wife's health. Pray that God may direct the Board to the right man.

Not long ago an Italian woman with all the earnestness of the woman of Sychar asked a missionary among the coal regions of Pennsylvania, "What is the Gospel?" Wonder if we are going to permit the heathen in our very midst to live and die without the Gospel?

Brother Myers reports his work at Denver and Sydney, Indiana. It has been a long time since we heard from Brother Myers, but we hope it will not be so long again till we get another interesting report. Both churches are loyal supporters of The Evangelist, and are awake on missions. Denver's new Christian Endeavor society has shown commendable strength and both churches have a splendid Sunday school vision.

Brother Orion E. Bowman gives us another report of the offerings for Home Missions. If the churches keep coming long enough we may reach our goal yet. It is certainly fine on the part of those churches that were hindered from taking their offering at the regular time to send their offerings even though they must come late. We are still $2,500 short. Keep on coming till we go "over the top."

The Evangelist subscription list is growing still, and with every added name the paper becomes all the more valuable. It is worth while to write and to give your very best, Brethren, when you can give a message to approximately 25,000 readers. Your support has been most loyal and we thank you for it. We know you will continue to respond whenever we call upon you as you have done.

In this issue we have an article from the pen of Rev. F. W. Hoffman, pastor of the Reformed church of Louisville, Ohio. He is a friend and fellow-laborer of the editor, and promised at our solicitation to give a report of the conference on Y. M. C. A. work for the returned soldier held at Camp Sherman, Ohio. Brother Hoffman represented our township "Y" organization at the conference. His report is of more than ordinary interest and we are pleased to be privileged to pass it on to our readers.

A good meeting is reported at the Third Brethren church of Johnstown, Pa., at which time the pastor, Brother Jones, was given splendid assistance by his neighboring pastor, Brother Watson. The number of confessions is at least one indication of the effective work of this team. The work of the Third church is looking up, and we doubt not that their felt need of a new building will be met if the people follow the leadership of their enthusiastic pastor.

Brother Beachler springs the surprise for the season on the brotherhood by his report of the Portis, Kansas, gift to College Endowment. It's really hard to believe, but doubtless it must be so, because Beachler says so, and as Anthony would say, "Beachler is an honorable man." Well, we believe it, but, it is certainly some surprise. I suppose we all wish we were members of the Kanemorado district, especially, of Portis. Of course those states that haven't seen Beachler yet, will get a chance to see him and show him what they can do. But they will have to go a lively gait to get around "Kanie." That little district went $——, what was the amount? It is larger than I am used to dealing with. Turn back and see. God bless the prairie churches for their loyalty to Ashland College. With that kind of backing, she will be able to weather every storm.

It appears that all repairs have been made in the mechanical department and that the back work has been made up, and now we are expecting to have things go on scheduled time. Accordingly, we will put our material in the hands of the operator on Thursday noon. This will enabled us to get The Evangelist mailed not later than the following Wednesday. We expect every paper to be in the hands of the post office authorities by evening of that day. Some will doubtless be mailed sooner. But the important thing to remember is that if you want any matter to appear in The Evangelist in a certain week, be sure to send in to the editor so as to reach him not later than Thursday noon. Special announcements will be received as late as Friday evening, and telegrams may reach us as late as Saturday noon. Your co-operation will help us to get the paper out on time. Thank you very much for your kindness.

GENERAL ARTICLES

The Decline of the Family Altar. By W. T. Lytle

In treating this subject, I want to be practical yet brief. There is a very evident cause for decline, or rather for the falling off of home devotion, at least of the type where there is an appointed time in the day when the family is brought together for the Bible reading as the WORD of GOD, and PRAYER, for the daily renewal of the covenant, and for petition for the family and home needs.

First.—There has been no small amount of emphasis during the last twenty-five years placed upon organic union, an attempt to effect a compromising organization between the man formulated and the God programed.

Man has been trying to find for his center either mental development or physical development under the cover of political ecclesiasticism, at the cost of man's finer sensibilities, or inner consciousness.

Man has been trying to live too much "by bread alone," rather than "by every word of God." There has been too much talking about heaven, and too little manifested reality of heaven considered.

Second.—The family altar has had no support in the homes of many because of "not having time," a very popular excuse made by many of those who make the strongest profession of faith and seem most fully to believe in the promises of Christ and his power to save. Like Jeroboam led Israel to sin, many keep trying to make their religion (as rules and practices of life), so convenient that to one seeking the difference between the man of the church, and the man of the world, (so termed) he would have to be an expert and do some research work in this new field before he would be able to determine by the manifested difference at hand.

A man told me he was building a fence on a very pious elder's farm for two weeks, and said, "I heard nothing about the Bible nor about Christ at his table, nor in the evening as we were sitting around the fireside; but he talked continually about how he had prospered and gave the pedigree of every hog and every cow he had on the place until I was convinced that those things were the very center of all home thought."

Again, to illustrate, once I said to a good man making a very loud profession: "Why is it you do not have family worship in your home at all times, like you do when the preacher or the evangelist is in your home?" His answer was like this: "It is not convenient at all times, and another thing is I want you to realize that in this age we have to be so busy to make a living that we cannot take time to get our family together at any suggested time. Yes, and another thing you must remember, I always have a number of hired hands and a good many times a lot of company, to me it is not the plausible thing to do under such conditions. You know the good Book says, 'we should not cast our pearls before swine.'" Dear Reader, does this strike any ways close to the mark at some of your excuses?

Third.—The family altar has been dealt a death blow in some communities where for years the families have not trained themselves in being able to see the value in character and true godliness that comes by the way of the family altar and the HOME DEVOTIONAL periods. There is everywhere to be seen a "lack of vision." Too much time is spent in making home a place to stay, instead of a place for the family to live and have comfort, and consolation and full joy.

Yes, with so many childless homes and so many cat and dog parlors, what can we expect? Although I know a woman who teaches her dog and cat to say their prayers together before she puts them to bed. That is more than some boys and girls are taught. If some of the children to be found in some of our good Brethren homes ever are taught to pray it will be when they get homes of their own or land in some one's else home. I sometimes wonder what some of the folks mean by day by day driving the children their hobbies and their bias ways and then expect an evangelist or a practical teacher of the truth to come in and give twenty or thirty lectures and Bible readings and undo all they have done during the periods of development and unfolding of the youth. Some occupants of homes do not have a true conception of what a real God-loving devoted Christian home is like, and therefore we must be careful in our censure, for they have been too long among the "sayers" and not the "DOERS."

Lastly.—Family devotional periods in the home have died out because it has not had faithful suggestion offered and emphasized by the leaders of religious activity. This has seemingly had the greatest effect and has dealt the worst blow to the home devotional periods which are the greatest period of real development.

Year after year, we have been able to hear nothing else except standards of efficiency and goals, and organization and demonstration. These we are not assailing, but to say, "This ought ye to have done and not to have left the other undone." The one-sidedness has left its visible marks, and the home devotional periods have given place to forms and ceremonies in our organizations. And even such cold forms and mechanical prayers are confined to a few who are yet old fashioned enough to go to "Public Worship."

Many under these extreme conditions have actually gotten to a place where they say "we pay our preacher to do our praying," or they say, "It is the business of the deacons to do the praying," or perhaps some old saint who has done the praying for many a congregation for years. We are forgetting how to pray and losing the desire to prayer; both in the home and in public worship.

In concluding, the decline of the family altar has left its visible marks as a result in ways that are so conspicuous that we cannot help but see in a very large way the crop of unbelieving and doubting persons that exist under the very roofs, and in the communities where once every boy and girl could say with on accord, "we have a praying mother and father." I had one, and thank God, he has spared her to the time when she is always praying very definitely for the things we try to accomplish for the kingdom of God, and my prayer is that he will spare her many more years to teach others the value of praying, for such efforts in the Lord are not in vain. If you are in doubt of the visible marks in the falling off of home devotions, on next Sunday you have the Sunday school superintendent ask all the boys and girls to rise that have ever heard their mother or father pray, and you will get your answer.

Another result that has left visible marks because of the neglect of the family devotions are made manifest in the discords among the parents and their children, to the extent that home ties are severed, estates are divided among lawyers, instead of among legal heirs, and many a hatred has been kindled in which folks have severed their relationship with local churches. The thing that has given rise to these dislikes and dissensions was the falling away of the family altar. Most of the misunderstandings in the home could be overcome if the homes were pervaded with prayer.

Church misunderstandings can be brought to the place of understandings when the families have home devotional periods with the Bible and devoutly thinking of the truth, instead of three times a day backbiting and gossiping about the weaker brethren.

The decline of this Godly institution has wrought havoc, and in some cases ruined many an otherwise successful work for Christ and the church.

My prayer is, that God somehow will quicken the Brethren church to a realization of the true worth of the family altar, and that it will be placed where it belongs in church activity, and that in the homes of Brethren people God will be worshiped in "spirit and in Truth."

Burlington, Indiana.

Religion After the War. By Dr. J. L. Gillin

To the surprise of a great many of us, doubtless, the returning soldiers have indicated in more or less unprintable language their opinions of the Y. M. C. A. It shocked us to hear a young men's organization soundly berated by young men. Here is an organization which specializes in religious work with young men. It is manned by a fine bunch of clean, earnest, hard-headed fellows. It has appealed to men with a program of concern for "body, soul and spirit," the famous triangle. It is officered by "sound business men" and leaders against whose orthodoxy there has never been a question.

Its general is a figure of international reputation, who has been proclaimed as the religious statesman of his generation. Yet its endeavors for the "boys" in France, backed by the country's goodwill and millions of the people's money, has brought it only exorciation from those it was supposed to help. Why is this?

The best answer I have seen is that given by Judge Lindsey in the Metropolitan. He says it is not because the "Y" gave away to the boys, but because it preached individual sold things at high prices or things which other organizations salvation when the boys were dying for the salvation of society. It preached "Save your soul" when the boys were living a religion which meant dying for a great cause. It exhorted the boys to save themselves from the "wine, women and song," when they were concerned with the larger thing of saving the world from injustice. In short, he says, it failed because it appealed to them with the lesser as a substitute for the greater thing.

Lindsey has put his finger on the real trouble, not only of the "Y" but of organized religion today, not only religion in war but in peace. We live in a new world. New values have emerged. New issues must be met. The old wine-skins will not do; the wine must be put in new wine-skins. Lindsey says the churches as well as the "Y" must meet the new situation or suffer irreparable loss. It must make religion practical for the social problems of our day. Men will no longer be satisfied with a religion which exhorts men to save their own souls and stops there. The church must apply the doctrines of Jesus to the social evils of our day. It must interest itself in the problems of the workers. Jesus concerned himself with the problems of the poor. His church must do likewise today.

The Returned Soldier. By Rev. F. W. Hoffman

"What is an adequate community program to meet the needs of the returning soldier?" This was the general subject of a conference held at Camp Sherman, February 24-28, attended by 100 delegates composed of Y. M. C. A. and religious leaders from all parts of Ohio. Among other things discussed were:

1. The Recreational Problem. The returned soldier has been much in the open. Shut in again he will be restless. Eighty-five percent. of the soldiers did not know how to play. They have learned how. Use them as leaders. There is need to have the play-life of the community directed by men of high ideals. Men will not play the game of life fair unless they learn as boys to play the play-life fair. Clean sport builds men up physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. Unclean sport undermines character. One speaker said: "While I got my knowledge in the class-room I got my education on the athletic field."

2. The Problem of Public Health. One speaker said

Is it not something of a travesty that the church is still concerned chiefly with the problem of individual salvation when the world is asking for guidance for its conduct in social affairs? It asks for the bread of inspiration for its social salvation and, behold, the church gives it the stone of the individual salvation. Is it not a pity that the Brethren church, with its doctrines and ordinances fitted to this larger task, is as silent as the rest of the churches? Shame, that our name has not taught us to do better. Are we "Brethren" in adherence to evangelical orthodoxy, or to ecclesiastical rites? or, "Brethren" in the sense of a common interest in solving the world's problems in accordance with the fundamental principles of Jesus? Does our baptism "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit" mean simply a magical rite to insure my salvation, or confession of the fatherhood of God for all men, the brotherhood of man and fellowship in a common task to make the world better? Does our Lord's Supper stand only for a piece of peculiar differentiation from other churches, or is it symbolic of common equality of men? Does the ordinance of Feet-washing mean only a piece of ceremonialism or does it teach us to emphasize humble service of our fellowmen?

And, yet some of our leaders would have us believe that our chief duty is to convert men to the acceptance of our doctrines in order that they individually may be saved. They would divert our efforts from the task of bearing testimony to the efficacy of the simple teachings of Jesus to post- or pre-millennialism. I sometimes wonder if we are not in danger of Jesus' condemnation of the Pharisees, "Ye compass land and sea to make one proselyte and when ye have found him ye make him ten-fold more the child of hell than yourselves." Are we straining out gnats and swallowing camels? Are we more interested in making "Brethren" than in making men converts to the social ethics of Jesus? Are we more concerned in the individual's salvation from a future punishment than to a devotion to the kingdom of social righteousness?

Are we more concerned with church forms and numbers to be reported in statistics on the "Four Year Program" than in trying to solve the problems of social injustice by the application of the principles of Jesus? If we are, woe betide the Brethren church.

Glen Ellyn, Illinois.

the returned soldier will demand better ventilated houses and better sanitation. The government spent vast sums of money to make the camps of the army ideal centers in which to live. This was done to make good soldiers, to make men fit and keep them fit to fight. Each community ought to be interested in making men fit to live. We need good, sound, able bodied men to serve in times of peace, as well as good soldiers in times of war. Next to the budget to provide for interest and the sinking fund should be a liberal allowance for the uses of the Board of Health in each community of the state.

3. The Problem of Public Education. Our schools must more than ever serve the public. They must serve not only the young, but must provide instruction for the adult as well. There were 700,000 in the army who could not read or write English. We must adopt better methods to assimilate and Americanize the foreign born. 730,756 men of the first draft were rejected because of physical disability. Most of these could have been rendered fit for service, had the proper corrective exercises been given them. Our school program must be based in the future more on the problem of public health. There ought to be in all our schools regular and systematic examinations of each child by a regular appointed school physician. There must be a change made in our educational system that there may be a greater salvage of manpower.

4. The Problem of the Venereal Menace. The American Army was the cleanest army that ever fought. Five-sixths of all venereal cases in the army were contracted in civilian life. The army camp was the safest place for young men. Our communities must be made safe for them. The government is emphasizing this danger. It is preparing to fight this menace. It is not alone a religious question. We must fight the double standard of morality in all our communities. The time is not far distant when physicians will be compelled by law to report all venereal cases to the Boards of Health, as they are now compelled to report cases of smallpox. Twenty-five percent of infantile blindness and 95 percent of all operations on women are made necessary by the sex evil. A man can hardly be straight in business and be wrong in his sex life.

5. The Problem of Work. The returning soldier will demand a job. He does not want to be banquetted or pampered, but he wants to be put to work. He will want to identify himself with the economic life of the community. The soldier out of work will lose his perspective on life, he will lose his equilibrium, and will become a source of danger to the community. There is very little Bolshevism in the army, but the seeds of this modern propaganda will rapidly multiply if men are not industrially assimilated in the economic life of the community. The first thing he will want when he gets back home will be a suit of civilian clothes and the second thing will be a chance to work.

6. The Problem of the Church. The returned soldier will be much the same that he was before. He will be religiously inclined if he was so inclined before. He was up against the real thing that has made him think. He has had plenty of time to think as he stood in the mess-line waiting his turn to be served. He has had plenty of time to think as he has stood at attention while the roster of his company was being called. He has thought of home, of the meals mother prepared, he has thought of the old church and its services and wondered if he would ever see these again. He was up against the real thing that has made him think. He is not going to be essentially different from what he was before. He is not going to emphasize sectarianism. He is not going to care as far as the spirit of comradeship is concerned whether a man is Protestant or Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, Reformed or Jew. He will emphasize the four elemental values of life. He will have a new experience of the presence of God, of the Saviorship of Jesus Christ. He will love home, mother, wife as he never did before. The Bible will be more a book to live by than a record of past experiences of God's people. He will want a religion that works as well during the week as on Sunday. He will not want to be put on a pedestal or in a class by himself. He wants to belong to the general mass of humanity, assuming his share in the work of life. He will be more thoughtful of others. Selfishness has been more or less repressed in him. He will know the meaning of sacrifice. He will demand a more practical kind of Christianity.

Louisville, Ohio.

Modern Bible Whittlers. By Charles H. Ashman

It has been foretold in prophecy that during the absence of our Lord many professed followers of his would repudiate sound doctrine, after their own lusts heap to themselves teachers having itching ears, turn away from the truth unto fables, opinions, and traditions of men, and deny the "faith once for all delivered unto the saints." That hour has struck! On every hand, self chosen but not divinely called men stand in places from which we would have a right to expect the Gospel to sound forth with no uncertain sound, but these men deny almost every fundamental of the divine revelation. They are usually the finished product of some godless theological seminary in which upon entering they slew their faith in the Scriptures as the inspired Word of God. Outside the door of many such a theological seminary exists a cemetery containing many graves over which should be erected a monument bearing this inscription, "Here lies the faith of many, sacrificed to Higher Destructive Criticism in the name of boasted learning." Over these graves angels weep as they behold the ruthless slaughter of genuine faith. From these hotbeds of infidelity, there has come a body of men who in the name of advanced scholarship are noisily demanding the setting aside of the Word. They are the "certain men" who have crept in unawares, which are mentioned in Jude. They have no belief in the supernatural, but demand that all faith be "scientific." Their watchword is, "Keep abreast with the times."

What happens when this spirit enters the church of Christ? It finds itself face to face with a mass of Bible truth, believed to be inspired of God. It is forced to make a choice, either to forsake its so-called scientific deductions or reject the Word. It is usually too proud to acknowledge it might be mistaken, so at once begins to tear and cut and whittle at the Bible. It denies the Genesis account of creation, the origin of man and sin and other emphatic teachings of the Old Testament. According to its verdict, the Old Testament is not divinely written history, but human records only. It sets aside the Virgin Birth of Christ, his miracles, redemption through his blood, salvation by faith, the resurrection of the body, the return of Christ, the joys of heaven, the sorrows of hell, and the Kingdom to come. Every doctrine of the Bible which this modern spirit could alter, it has altered and when it faces some which it cannot alter, it sets them aside as impractical and figurative. Many preachers today have imbibed this spirit and in tones of supposed superior knowledge teach that the Bible is more human than divine. One would expect such things from scoffers, mockers, infidels and devils, but not from ministers of the Gospel. But like Jehudi of old they cut the Bible into pieces and burn it on the hearth of their worldly wisdom. What do you think of a preacher who claims the Genesis account is only a Hebrew myth and contrary to real fact; who claims God never wrote the Ten Commandments and in flip-pant language declared, "God never was a stone-mason;" who claims the Old Testament is just a bunch of poems, songs and old traditions of the Hebrews; who claims Jonah and Job are fictitious characters like those in modern novels; who claims there is no prophetic element in the Scriptures; who denies the virgin birth of Christ thus branding Christ's mother as a fallen woman; who denies the atonement thus making the death of Christ nothing more than a barbaric, brutal murder; who denies the teaching of Scriptures that Christ is at the right hand of God and substitutes the popular sentiment that he is in the world today in the spirit of education, reform, progress, etc.

What do you think of the preacher who scoffs at the oft-repeated promise that Christ will return to claim his own and, as one northwestern preacher did, compares those who long for his coming to an "idiot sitting on a stump;" who calls the teachings of Jesus on hell "a frying pan religion;" who claims the Bible is impractical; who claims the Word does not mean what it says nor say what it means and thus is not to be taken on its face value, but twisted, warped, altered, changed, modified to fit one's own peculiar thinking? This is what we think: If ever we get into such a state, we pray that God will give us self respect enough to quit the ministry and enter some other calling from which to secure our bread and butter. We would feel that we were getting respect and money under false pretenses.

What is the result within the church of such setting aside of the Word of God? The church is losing her voice of authority. She no longer speaks with authority, but as the Scribes and Pharisees. She is becoming paralyzed with doubt and unbelief. She is losing her message. She seems to have no distinct and unqualified mission. She holds out to the world a Book believed to be inspired only in spots and as a consequence has developed a spotted religion. Like Israel she has become a speckled bird. She is losing her grip upon the human heart. People do not care to come within her walls to hear about uncertainty; the human heart longs for the final word, for the supreme court decision. If I were not a preacher, but free to come to church just to listen, what would I want to hear? I would not want to hear about politics for to hear such, I would go to a political meeting; I would not want to have paraded before me the world happenings, for to know such I would read the newspapers; I would not want to hear poetry and fiction, for the public library supplies such; I would not want to be entertained, for I could go to the theater for entertainment; I would not want to hear about "the psychology of religion," but the Spirit of God: I would not care to hear about luncheons and society frazzles, for the better way would be to get a bunch of debts and an outward show of money and join the upper ten; I would not want to hear about doubts, unbelief, questionings, for I would have enough of these among men; I would want to hear about God, his being, his truth, his love; I would want to hear about Christ, his deity, his atonement; about the Holy Spirit, his guidance and comfort; about salvation. I would want to get rid of the stifling atmosphere of the cares of life and drink in the fragrance of heaven's breezes for just one hour. I would not listen to a man who could not say, "Thus saith the Lord."

Another result of this "Bible Whittling" is the confusion of the tongues of Protestantism. When the Protestant church came forth she stood out bold as a protest against two prominent features of Catholicism, her teachings of the traditions of men and her denial of the Word of God. On the banner of Protestantism was inscribed this slogan, "The Bible; All the Bible; Nothing but the Bible." Then people listened to her voice and followed her, for the human heart longs for the last word of finality upon which it can rest in "Blessed assurance." But today Protestantism has made a surrender and a compromise. The responsibility for the prevailing "isms" and their rapid paralyzing growth is hers. She has only herself to blame. On the other hand, the Catholic church is prospering rapidly. Not because she is right, but because she at least makes the people believe she speaks with authority. It has been well said that "a lie well told and stuck to will win more people than a truth half told for a half truth." The Catholic church tells her lies well and sticks to them and gains followers where the Protestant church tells her half truths or truth in a half hearted way and goes begging for adherents.

What shall be done? The "Bible Whittlers" are here and here to stay. In fact, prophecy indicates that they shall wax worse and worse. The world is getting better and the world is getting worse. This is not a paradox. Genuine faith is growing stronger, firmer, more persevering. Surrendered faith is growing weaker and weaker. When it is dark turn on the light. When this darkness of denial of the Word begins to settle about us, turn the light of the Word on and let it blaze out. Over against this modern spirit we put this position. We have accepted it prayerfully and consecratedly. Our church here at Sunnyside of which we are earthly shepherd has by a standing vote accepted it unanimously.

First, we believe in the verbal inspiration of the Scriptures as originally written. I Corinthians 2:7-15 indicate to us four steps. The truth of God cannot be discovered by the human mind unaided by the Spirit. God has revealed his truth to divinely chosen men. He has taught it in Spirit-chosen words. It is only understood by the spiritual mind. We concede that the various languages becloud the meaning.

They are a result of sin beginning back at the tower of Babel.

Second, we believe in the literal interpretation of the Scriptures, except where the context or language clearly indicates that it is figurative or symbolical.

Third, we believe that the Bible is the final and complete revelation of God to man. There is no place for the added revelations of Christian Science, Mormonism, Russellism, Adventism, and New Thought, etc.

Fourth, we believe the Bible is the only authoritative Book for life, experience, character and practice.

Finally, beloved Brethren, God will honor the church that honors his Word, but withdraw his Spirit from the church that disowns it. If ever there was a time when the Brethren church had an excuse for existence and a mission to perform, it is now. Oh, our burning prayer is that God will hold her true to her calling! Now is her supreme opportunity. Now is the time to push with relentless energy her Four Year Program. Oh, we pray for the leadership of the Holy Spirit! We pray for divine wisdom in these days of exaltation of human conceit! Pray for us, brethren.

Sunnyside, Washington.

Clippings from Missionaries' Letters

By L. S. Bauman

"We have sold a good number of Bibles and Testaments, over sixty, and put a portion of the Bible where they cannot or will not buy. I expect to have the Bible, or part of it, in every home in the town before the end of the year. I will plant good seed, and surely some of it will grow, and produce fruit. The old priest is doing all he can, but his influence reaches mainly the fanatics."—W. H. Bock.

"I want some money for a library. I believe it will pay big to put good wholesome literature in the hands of these people. I think of opening the room two or three afternoons a week to the public reading. I am putting up swings for the children, and other things of that character. It has worked well at Rio Cuarto."—W. H. Bock. (A mighty good idea, Brother Bock. Who will send along the price of a book for this library of Brother Bock's reading room for the public down at Cabrera, Argentina? Send it to Louis S. Bauman, 1905 E. Fifth St., Long Beach, Calif.)

"Here at Inkongo, we have a boy,—only a young fellow about twenty years old, the oldest son of the big Chief here. And the Chief here is a great man, too, for he has many minor chiefs under him, and the state regards him as a big man. His son, several years ago, was converted, much to the disgust and anger of his father and mother. The mother is Queen, also. While the Chief has twelve living wives at this time, he has had many others before. Some are dead, and some he sold off. The Chief himself is quite an old man now. Well, this son, when quite small, was given three wives. These he had until Jesus came into his heart. Then he chose the one he loved, and the only one who had a child by him. The other two he put away. This made his parents very angry. They took him and hanged him over a fire, smoking and burning him terribly. He remained firm. He was about fifteen or so then. At first, he said he couldn't give up everything, but as he read and learned more and more of God's blessed Word, he obeyed and put off the things that belong to this world of sin. He said, 'I can't stop drinking wine. Why, when my father has big feasts, I must drink with them.' Well, he held out on that for some months, when one day he came all alone and said, 'I give up. I will not drink again. I'll do what Jesus wants first.' And he hasn't taken any wine since. It is he who comes to teach me their language. God bless him, he is a great help to me, for his manners are perfect. He is one true gentleman without knowing it. I thank God every day for him, for it shows me just what the real love of Jesus can do even for a poor, dark boy."—Myrtle Mae Snyder,

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The Second Coming of Christ. By W. S. Bell

(Synopsis of an address delivered in Los Angeles, First Brethren church, at the Bible Conference of Southern California Churches.)

Text: "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. These things speak, and exhort, and rebuke with all authority."—Titus 2:1-15.

The Brethren church stands pledged to the whole Bible and to the whole Gospel, to all the world. That which gives us a distinct individuality is our literal interpretation of the commands and teachings of Jesus Christ. With this kind of a platform it is unnecessary for me to make an apology for this theme.

We will consider the subject under four heads in the form of questions as follows: Will he return? How will he come? Why will he come? When will he come?

I have no theory of my own to offer in answering these questions, but will endeavor to present only what God's Word says on the theme.

Will He Return?

It is difficult for me to understand how any reader of the Gospels can fail to recognize that Jesus plainly taught his disciples that they were to expect his return and be prepared to meet him. In that comforting passage of scripture, John 14:1-3, Jesus said, "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself." He commanded his disciples to watch and be ready for his coming. "Watch therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh." Matt. 24:42-44.

Certainly none can question that the disciples did not believe in the visible and personal coming of Christ, which is made prominent in their teaching. The record given in Acts 1:9-11 of Christ's ascension tells of two messengers who said to the disciples, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken from you into heaven, shall come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." In Hebrews 9:28, we have the words, "So Christ has once offered to bear the sins of many and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin, unto salvation."

We have two scriptural references to defend the ordinance of washing the saint's feet and one command given by Christ for baptizing by trine immersion which we interpret most literally. How can we as a people, in the face of the plain teaching of Christ and the disciples, be consistent without believing in the personal coming of Christ.

How Will He Return?

Christ has answered this question too plainly to be misunderstood in these words, "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." Matt. 24:27. And again, "Then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man, in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory." Matt. 24:30.

The messengers at the time of his ascension stated, "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1:11. John in his wonderful book, "The Revelation of Jesus Christ," says, "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him." Rev. 1:7. These scriptures plainly teach that "the same Jesus" who died on Calvary's cross, and came forth from the tomb, and ascended to the right hand of God, will return in person and that this manifestation will be visible and that "every eye shall see him."

Why Will He Come?

There is a distinction as you will notice between Jesus' coming for his saints, and his coming with the saints.

Christ will gather out of the world his own and resurrect the bodies of the saints who have died, who will be caught up to meet him in the air, as the following scripture teaches: "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive, and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first, then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4:15-17.

Paul in his letter to the Philippians refers to the event in these words, "For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." Phil. 3:20-21. Christ refers to his coming for his own in these words, "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself." John 14:3. And again, "Then shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds, with great power and glory. And then shall he send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth, to the uttermost part of heaven." Mark 13:26-27.

The event of Christ's coming for his saints precedes his coming with his saints to reign on earth. The coming of Christ with his saints is in kingly power to execute judgment and to establish the throne of David, from which he will rule the nations and usher in the millenium. "And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, 'Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints to execute judgment and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds.'" Jude 14:15. Peter in his wonderful sermon recorded in Acts, states, "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3:20-21.

Christ describes this scene in these words, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another." Matt. 25:31-32. John's description is found in Revelation 6:14-17. "The heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?"

It is at this time that heaven's chorus will shout, "Say, est people in the work of our School if we watch carefully.

When a new scholar comes to our school we should meet him with a good warm handshake such as he is accustomed to receiving when going elsewhere. The "Glad Hand" should be extended to him. This handshake should be of such a nature as to spontaneously impart to its recipient our joy in meeting and their welcome into our midst. This will come only through the vigorous shake. The flimsy half-hearted kind will only repel and send a shiver where we wished to have a warm welcome expressed. Along with this we should artfully and tactfully speak to the newcomer of our pleasure in his attendance.

Then, to be sure, attention should be given to the comfort and ease of the newcomer while in our midst. This may be accomplished by introducing the stranger to as many as possible. This will put him on an equal footing with the others. Especially should this be done in the class. It would be well if he could receive a welcome from each member of the class and shake hands with each of them. The "Glad Hand," how important it is! And, by the way, a warning may be necessary here. Never, in trying to extend a welcome, make the newcomer feel bored. If one is not discreet he will spoil all the good that has been done. One never goes anywhere to be bored. I mean by this that no one cares for too much attention. This is as true with the Sunday school as anywhere else.

Last of all when the new member leaves give him the "Glad Hand" and welcome him back. That will leave a good impression as he leaves. That will assure him of the warm interest we have in him and intend to hold toward him.

We believe that a Sunday school never loses any friends by being courteous. Nor do we believe they will find the "Glad Hand" a detriment to the cause. On the contrary we believe friendliness will beget friendliness in the Sunday school as it does elsewhere. Try the use of the "Glad Hand" in your school and note the results. And remember that good results will come from courtesy to old as well as to the new members, so give the "Glad Hand" whenever you can.

Hamlin, Kansas.

J. A. Garber
PRESIDENT

Our Young People at Work

G. C. Carpenter
SECRETARY

Springtime Joy and Work

By Dr. F. E. Clark

Let us in this glad springtime rejoice together. "The signs of the times" are all in favor of Christian Endeavor. New societies are springing up everywhere; denominational opposition is breaking down before the universal demand for interdenominational fellowship; the soldier and sailor boys are getting back more eager than ever to serve; unions are resuming their former activities and going over the old "top." I have seen or heard from Endeavorers in most parts of the country, and am not writing at random.

The Months to Come

April and May should be great Endeavor months, for the harvest of souls may most easily be gathered now. These are our "win one" months,—the months of precious anniversaries that point us to the Savior of the World. Special Lenten services have been held in thousands of churches. Good Friday tells us of him who died that we might live; Easter of him whom the grave could not hold, and seven weeks after Easter comes Whitsuntide, to celebrate the Day of Pentecost, when thousands were converted.

How can we so well use such anniversaries and the days that follow, as by making them soul-winning days? Now we can bring home the appeal to our associate members, and the unconverted generally, and say, "Think what he has given you,—his life, his all. Will you not give to him your love and service?" "Personal evangelism," "Decision for Christ,"—let these be our watchwords in the weeks immediately before us. Special decision services may well be held; union meetings when the net may be drawn by some wise pastor or layman. Unusual efforts to bring to Christ the Intermediates, those of high school age,—the age of conversion,—should be made. Have you ever seen the charts that show that the great majority of people who come to Christ at all are converted between the ages of fourteen and eighteen or twenty? This undoubted fact puts a tremendous emphasis upon the Intermediate age, whether you have an Intermediate society or not, as I hope you have.

The Alumni

These coming weeks, too, are vastly important weeks for Christian Endeavor, because the Alumni proposition is to be put before our unions in all sections of the country in sixty great meetings, when Dr. Poling will present this vital subject. Their success will mean the strengthening of every union, local and state, the reconstruction of Christian Endeavor in war-devastated Europe, the vast expansion of our work in missionary lands; and eventually the doubling of Christian Endeavor numbers, influences, and activities. Harrisburg, where the campaign starts, is planning to meet Dr. Poling at a banquet 500 strong, and an evening meeting four times as large. What city will outdo Harrisburg?

Buffalo 1919

Everywhere I hear of great and increasing interest in our coming convention. Let us all go, and go with a purpose.

Increasing Interest Through Gifts

One of the best ways of attaching people to any good cause is to get them to pay something toward its support.

Father Chidlaw, a much revered home missionary, used to tell the story of an old woman in the back district of his mission field who was loath to give anything toward the purchase of a bell for the new church. She declared that bells were a nuisance. But at last she was prevailed upon to give $5.00 toward it. "I've always declared I did not like bells," she said the first time she heard it ringing. "But I will say that is the sweetest sounding bell I ever heard." "Ah!" said Father Chidlaw, "the secret of it was this: 'With every sound of that bell she heard the jingle of her five dollars.'—Selected.

Now is a splendid time for you to increase your interest in Mountain Work.

Now is the time to meet that Christian Endeavor pledge. Only a small part of the Christian Endeavor pledges for Kentucky missions for this year are paid at this writing and the year will soon be gone. Anyhow seven months have passed and we are going down the hill on the other side. Every pledge should be met soon.

Now is a good time for new investors to get interested in a good cause. Just invest in home missions and then you will boost for home missions the year round. And the call for the Home Mission offering at Thanksgiving time will have a sweet sound in your ears. Has your church paid up in full the thirty cents per member apportionment. Ask Orion E. Bowman, Dayton, Ohio, if you want to know.

Peru, Indiana.

G. C. CARPENTER.

What Christian Endeavor Means to Me

Oh, how I wish I had the power to express my thoughts about this great, real, gripping organization of Christian Endeavor!

Before I became an Endeavorer I worked a little in the church, if the work was easy. I prayed once in a while, if I had time, which was not often. My Bible lay on the table, and once in a while I brushed the dust from it. Yes, I was a Christian in my own estimation. I belonged to the church; what else was necessary?

Then our minister organized a Christian Endeavor society. This brought us into touch with the Christian Endeavor leaders of our state, among them Paul Brown and Roy Creighton. Before long I attended my first district convention, and that same year I was sent by the society to the state convention. There, among that mighty throng of God's young people, I realized that there was something in their lives I had never known,—Jesus Christ.

I wanted him then. Oh, how I needed and longed to know him. Before that convention was over I had accepted Jesus as my personal Savior.

Not very long ago God called me to definite life service, and I have answered, "Yes."

Yes, do you know? there are folks in this world who say that Christian Endeavor is not worth while.

I wonder.

—C. E. World.

MISSIONS

The Easter Offering—A Final Word

Note—The material for this paper was all set up and ready for the forms when Brother Bauman's material reached us, but we set aside two pages of matter to give place to this final word on the foreign offering. The needs of our mission fields are great and urgent, and we have sought in every way possible to impress this fact upon the minds of the entire Evangelist family. The Foreign Board, too, has left no stone unturned that might make for the greatest possible success in this most important work. The issue is now up to every individual member of the church—Editor.

THE GOAL. The churches that send in 40¢ per member during the year beginning September 1st, 1918, will be considered as having made their Four Year Program Goal (11) for Foreign Missions. A list of the churches that have made their Goal will be published in The Brethren Missionary. However it will be necessary for the Four Year Program Committee to raise this amount for the Goal next year, as, since our party in Africa has been increased in number; and, the South American forces will be reinforced by at least another man and wife during this coming year, 40¢ per member is not sufficient for our needs, and the Goal should not be less than our needs. Our church is just beginning to get awake on this great work. When the Easter Offering is all in, we shall publish a list of all dollar-per-member churches this year, for, according to an article appearing elsewhere, this is the sum necessary for a "clean slate" this year.

SENDING MONEY. (1) Please do not send cash in letter. Send personal check, postal money order on Long Beach, California post office, express money order, bank draft, or registered letter. Letters and packages frequently go astray these days. (2) Send your letters plainly addressed to the undersigned at 1905 East Fifth Street, Long Beach, California. However, until May 10th, letters may be sent to me direct to 5045 N. Smedley Street, Philadelphia, Pa.—the office of the Secretary, Brother McClain. I will get mail addressed to either place, but this last is more direct. I will be here in Philadelphia until I leave for home, the 15th of May.

REMIT EARLY. Please send in your report as soon as possible. It seems from past experience that it is almost useless to talk about this, but the Easter Offerings drag along all summer. We would like to have a COMPLETE REPORT in the "Brethren Missionary" that will be issued on July 1st. We will make a report of the entire amount through the columns of The Brethren Evangelist as soon as we can, but the detailed report will appear in "The Brethren Missionary" only. Every family of the church should have this magazine in the home.

MEMBERSHIPS. All persons paying the sum of $5.00 per year to any of our missionary activities may be enrolled as members of the Foreign Missionary Society upon request. You remain a member just so long as you continue to give this sum annually to missions. 25¢ is taken out of the annual offering of all members and placed in the magazine fund as a subscription to the "Brethren Missionary." The balance of $4.75 goes to whatever fund the donor designates. If you send in your annual offering as a Membership through the local church treasury, be sure and have them state that the offering contains your annual gift. Membership cards will be mailed to every member by July 1st.

DESIGNATE THE PURPOSE OF YOUR GIFT. We prefer to have every person say just where they want their gift or gifts to go. In case money is sent us, and the purpose of the gift is not stated, it will be placed in the General South American Fund.

"THE BRETHREN MISSIONARY." This magazine goes to all members of the Foreign Missionary Society whose dues are paid up. All others, must pay 25¢ per year. Old subscribers should renew their subscriptions as soon as they are due, as otherwise we will have to drop them from the roll. This is U. S. Postal Rules. The July issue will contain a lot of interesting matter from our missionaries. The magazine is the spokesman of our missionaries in South America and Africa. The Easter Report will also appear in the same issue in detail. SUBSCRIBE NOW! Send 25¢ in stamps to the undersigned.

AFRICAN MISSION RECEIPTS. All money sent for the African work will be receipted to the donor, and each gift will be numbered. No names will be published in the report,—simply number of receipt, and the amount. This is in keeping with the express wishes of the workers in Africa. The names of all givers and the number of their gifts are sent, however, to the workers in Africa; and, it is their intention to acknowledge each gift personally from the field. Remember, however, that it will be from four to six months (has been longer) before you can hear from them that your gift has been received by them.

And now, may the blessing of God rest upon every one who shall help us provide the necessary substance for those who have "gone to the front." A brother wrote us some time ago, and said: "Bauman, something must be done to save the church." Serious minded men are saying the same thing these days in every denomination. A book in my library is entitled, "What Must the Church Do To Be Saved?" Brethren, I have a firm conviction that nothing can save the church of Jesus Christ from perishing amidst her own follies in these days but the instilling within her breast in larger measure the spirit of Jesus Christ, which spirit is pre-eminently the spirit of missions. As for my own congregation in Long Beach, I am expecting that she shall make her Goal, this year at least $5.00 per capita. If she does, then I expect her to receive the divine blessing from above. I will not be at home this Easter, but I shall be very much disappointed if Long Beach shall give less than $2,000 as her Easter Offering for this year.

LOUIS S. BAUMAN,

Financial Secretary and Treasurer,
Foreign Missionary Society of The Brethren Church, 1905 E. 5th St.,
Long Beach, California.

Our Foreign Missionary Needs

We have just received word from each of our three men in South America, that throws light upon our financial needs down there for the coming year. This information should have been in our hands earlier, but we feel that our church will not fail to meet these needs.

In the first place, Brother Bock informs us that they are very uncertain of being allowed to remain in their mission property another year unless we purchase the property. Remember that every available influence of the Catholic priesthood will be used to shut us out of a place of worship down there at all times. Brother Bock informs us that the property, which is ideal for our work, can be purchased for from four to five thousand dollars. Question: Will our Easter Offering be sufficiently large to justify us in the purchase of this property at once? How anxiously we will await the returns.

The same need that confronts Brother Bock, confronts Brother Atkinson at Cabrera. These two places should have $10,000 for the purchase of mission property. From a purely business standpoint, the purchase of mission property down there is of vital importance.

Word has just come from Brother Yoder, saying that he is going to give up his school work in the college there, and devote his time to the work of the mission exclusively. Since Brother Bock has opened up the mission at Carloti, we believe it is of the Lord that Brother Yoder should give all his attention to the work in Rio Cuarto. As Brother Yoder received no salary while in the college work, giving us his service at the mission without price, this will now mean $1,200 a year more in the way of salary. I am just sending Brother Yoder his first draft for $400,—four months' salary.

Moreover, we need $5,000 to complete the payment of the splendid mission property in Rio Cuarto, as I am informed that the man who holds the mortgage down there, will want his money this year.

It is now fully expected that Brother and Sister Clarence Siekel, of Los Angeles, will leave immediately after National Conference, for Argentina, to care for the work of the Gospel Auto Coach, and to take the place of Brother Bock, when he comes home on his furlough. This will call for an expenditure of about $3,000 for the coming year.

The salaries we are paying for those already on the field, amount to $3,400.

Therefore, if our needs are fully met for South America alone this year, it will require the sum of $21,400. Of course, we can get along with less, by continuing to rent, or to purchase property and mortgage it. But why should we do so, Brethren? How easy it would be for every member of the Brethren church to give at least one dollar for our foreign work, and sweep the board clean of all debts, etc., this year. Any way, we want you to see that we will have a place for all the money sent in this year. We have on hand at this time a balance of about $4,000, to set against this $21,400. Am I hoping for too much, when I hope that God will put it into the hearts of those who have this world's goods to meet all the needs herein stated, and thus give us our own property clear of debt in South America this year?

We have said nothing concerning the African work here, as no public appeals are to be made for that work, according to the rules by which the missionaries over there wish their work governed. But God, in answer to prayer, will care for his own over there also.

The first offering to reach me as an Easter offering from any church in the brotherhood comes from Muncie, Indiana, under date of March 25th. It amounts to "25c per member." Good for Muncie,—a mission church itself! Brother Kimmel writes: "We paid first to the Home Board, and first to the State Board, and I think we will be first to the Foreign Board." Well, they hold the record all right. Now, who wants to be at the other end,—the tail end? That opportunity is still open. The opportunity to be first is gone!

Now, then, if every church would do equally well with Muncie, we would certainly have bread enough and to spare for every need of the Foreign Board this year. But most of our churches will have to pass the dollar-per-member goal to do anywhere nearly what the Lord would call "equally well with Muncie." How many dollar-per-member churches will we have this year? Forty cents, I am ashamed to say, is the goal to make the Four Year Program, for that looks so pitifully small. Let's make it two and one-half times as much as that this year for the whole offering. What say you? The fields are white. The time is short. The Lord is at hand. What we may yet do, let us do with our might!

LOUIS S. BAUMAN,

Rio Cuarto, Argentina

Time seems to pass more rapidly in Argentina than in North America, partly because there is so much to do and partly because it takes longer to do things on account of having to wait on other people. There are so many methods that are slow compared to the North American way.

Since writing last we have launched our work for the new year with good organizations and a program for the year which we believe will mean progress and blessing. Then I left the work for a week in the hands of my assistant, Brother Barrio, and went with two of our leading young men to the mountains about fifty miles away. We distributed literature in all the towns on the way and on the train. Our literature is everywhere well received whereas a few years ago it was often destroyed in our presence. This time the news boy on the train pretended to be greatly interested and begged for a few papers to distribute further up the line after we got off. We gave him a few and next day found people who had bought these papers of him at twenty cents apiece. But, as Paul would say, "so Christ is preached and therein do we rejoice." We held a number of meetings during the week among the mountain people and found them very eager to listen and learn. One home will henceforth be a center for propaganda. We had some time also for bathing and mountain climbing and returned much refreshed.

I next visited La Carlota where Brother and Sister Bock have been laboring since October. This is about seventy miles in the other direction to the east.

I was delighted to find so good a beginning for our work in this place. Brother Bock has worked hard and the people esteem him for it so that he has the respect of the best people in town. The priest of course does all he can against the work but he is so notoriously bad that he has little influence with the men. I could stay only long enough to hold two meetings in Spanish and one in English. The little hall was pretty well filled each time. At the second Spanish meeting there were a number of the leading young men of the place, including the chief officer of the district, a former student of mine. But the people are still later there than in Rio Cuarto. We could not begin the meetings until 9:30 P. M. Brother Bock is adapting his work to conditions and has won a nice group of children to more or less regular attendance at Sunday school. The English group is also far superior to what we have here. It was a great pleasure to have eight or ten English speaking families, all leading people, genuinely interested in the work. They want to see us buy a property for the work and I am confident will help substantially to do so.

By renting we have the usual disadvantages as the place now occupied is to be sold and we must buy or move. To be moving makes it difficult to build up or adapt the premises to the work. For about $3,500 we can have a suitable property of our own as property is much cheaper in Carlota than in Rio Cuarto.

Here I have made another payment of 1,500 pesos, leaving only 2,000 to pay (about $830). Mr. Barnett, who holds the mortgage has intimated that when we pay this he will be disposed to give us another loan to enlarge the building. We much need more room. During the summer we have the evening meetings outdoors and thus have large crowds. The work is now so large that it demands more time than I have been able to give and the extension work also needs attention so that I have decided to keep only a part of the college work so as to keep in touch with the students and be only partly self-supporting.

We have only recently learned of the terrible ravages of the "flu" in the home land. The censor did not allow the news to get into the papers down here. We hope that by this time the epidemic has passed. We rejoice in the news of the adoption of the amendment to the constitution prohibiting the liquor traffice. That means great things for the future of the country. "La Nacion," one of the two leading dailies of the country, has a long editorial today praising this move on the part of the United States and arguing that it is much better than high license as adopted by Argentina, but at the same time reminding the readers that even with prohibition the people must have a change of heart in order to be successful. That is good gospel and we are walking along that line. Conversion is the basis of true life and civilization.

A prohibition law here just at present would cause a revolution. It will come in due time but it must be preceded by a long campaign of Gospel teaching. The corruption we must witness continually would be unbearable were it not for the good fruit of the Gospel which we are also permitted to see continually. We hope that other workers may soon share with us this joy.

C. F. YODER.

Rio Cuarto, Argentina, Feb. 12, 1919.

NOTE: The above article was sent to me for publication in "The Brethren Missionary," but arriving too late for the present issue, I am sending it to "The Brethren Evangelist" for immediate publication. We wish to call attention to two matters, lest the readers of The Evangelist will not fully understand what we have written elsewhere under the heading, "Our Foreign Missionary Needs."

With regard to the $3,500 for the mission building at La Carlota, while this will purchase the property, we should have at least $1,500 more to put it in proper repair, and make some necessary changes for the work of the mission. Therefore, our estimate was $5,000.

With regard to but $830 yet being due on the Rio Cuarto property, that is true so far as the mortgage thereon is concerned. But the Missionary Society owes Brother Yoder himself in the neighborhood of $1,400 for money he has put into the property personally. It will take a little better than $5,000 to clean up the indebtedness to both Mr. Barnett and Brother Yoder.

Fine reports are now coming to us of the work in South America, and we believe that within a few years, the Brethren church will have great cause to be proud of her South American branch. We have just heard of another most excellent young couple who are preparing to go to that field two years hence. The Lord is providing both workers and funds, wherein we greatly rejoice!

LOUIS S. BAUMAN.

All power in heaven and in earth is given unto Christ. He is the Commander-in-chief of the whole human race. He is the "Beginning and the end, the first and the last." He came forth from the Father as his representative placed high over all. He it is who says to every Christian today, "Go and make disciples of all nations." He plans to win the world through us. He makes us partners in the great task that moved the heart of God to sympathy. It is a great trust and a wonderful commission. Who will dare to betray it?

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

JOHNSTOWN THIRD BRETHREN

Emerging from the "flu epidemic with a badly shattered attendance record, we began building up again. A long pull and a strong pull, and we finally reached our old mark once more. Next the badly disarranged schedule of winter meetings received attention.

Brother Watson of the First Church kindly agreed to preach for us. After a three weeks' meeting we were able to report twenty-six confessions and four letters. Twenty-one will be baptized and added to the church and the other five being very young, will later be baptized, we hope.

We recommend the plan of securing a neighboring pastor, as it worked successfully for us and made but little inconvenience in the pastor's home plans. He being able to be at home for any emergency.

Brother Watson did splendid work in an "off" year. We want to pay him a justly deserved tribute. His preaching was of a type that can be heartily approved of as constructive. He resorted to no sensational methods, nor messages, but confined himself to those of a character that promises permanence and stability.

All departments of the Third Church seem once more to be in a healthy condition. Sunday school, Christian Endeavor and S. S. C. E., all seem to be going good. Our drawback is still the need, greater than ever, of a new building. With faith and hope that we will eventually be housed where we plan and that our building will be adequate to our needs, we plan to build at our earliest convenience and become a greater force for usefulness than ever.

G. H. JONES, Pastor.

HARRISONBURG, VIRGINIA

It was my privilege to spend nearly three weeks in the city of Washington, D. C., during the month of February in a business capacity, and while there I enjoyed the privilege of attending the services at the Brethren church and to be associated with the pastor, Brother Wm. M. Lyon enjoying some pleasant visits in his home while there.

It is an inspiration to attend the church services, Sunday school, Y. P. S. C. E., and weekly prayer meetings. Things are moving right along. Brother Lyon preaches the word with power. Brother Dooley the wide-awake superintendent is making good headway with the Sunday school, and all is moving along smoothly and successfully.

These services are all well attended, large congregations morning and evening and the church is usually full at night services. They are in need of more room and if the work keeps advancing, the membership increasing, the attendance larger as it surely will be, they will be very much handicapped for want of room.

Would that some of our wealthy brethren could see the need of coming to the rescue, that they might be enabled to erect a larger and more commodious building for the work there. It could be done, for the work under the efficient and earnest direction of the pastor and the superintendent is bound to advance. They must have more room. They are already handicapped in their present quarters, because of lack of space and the much needed equipment for the work which is so rapidly growing. O, that some one or more brethren could be inspired to lend the necessary aid, which would encourage others to follow in their wake, the necessary building and equipment would be forthcoming, and the Lord would abundantly give the increase.

The Washington City church has the push and energy to do things, but money is needed. None of its people have any great amount of means, but they have large hearts, give liberally as the Lord prospers them, and with more and better facilities for service much more good can be accomplished.

The writer was in a number of homes of the active, working force of the church, and all with one accord spoke in the highest terms of Brother Lyon and his work, which shows a unity of feeling and Christian regard for his excellent services as pastor in looking after the welfare of the congregation.

Yours for service in the Master's vineyard,

J. M. BOWMAN.

LAKE ODESSA, MICHIGAN

"Well, Well", Here we are again, since the "flu" has flown and, God be praised, we did not have any dreaded results among our flock, although some were very sick.

We will try to pen a few of the happenings from this part of God's vineyard. It has been some time since the brotherhood has heard from here. We were without a pastor at the time of our last report, but not so at this time. We have with us Brother M. Garrison of South Bend, Indiana.

The work of the church is doing fine under his leadership. The brotherhood has not heard very much of him for some reason or other. We feel there are others who ought to be filling the pulpit of the now pastorless churches and may God strive with men until all pulpits are filled, not only in this state, but in others as well.

The church just closed a successful series of revival meetings conducted by the pastor. There were seven confessed Christ as their Savior and one reconsecrated his life to his Master. Five were baptized and others are waiting the rite, while others are "looking this way." The Holy Spirit was striving with men when the meeting closed. It seems as if people are hungering and thirsting after the true things of God in a way they can't find them in just every church. We are hoping and praying that the good old Brethren faith will not degenerate during these trying times. It takes courage for our pastors to preach such things as will meet the approval of God when the tendency is to please the people, but we pray that our ministers will preach as God would have them preach regardless of what people say.

The different auxiliaries of the church are progressing, the prayer meetings are well attended. We are accomplishing some things on the Four Year Program. We will have old Michigan on the map at Conference time this year, by the help of God.

We ask the prayers of God's people that the churches of Michigan may keep their faces Zionward. L. J. M.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

This report represents the finals from Kanemorado by congregations. From Beaver City we came to Portis. Brother Roy Brumbaugh is now serving this congregation, and although many things have arisen to hinder his work in the short time he has been there, he has already won the confidence of his people and the outlook for his work is very encouraging. This was Brother Brumbaugh's second experience with me in the work for endowment. The first was when he was still pastor at Roann and Center Chapel. He therefore had the advantage of knowing our methods and our program of work in a congregation; and needless to say he entered with me into the campaign among his people at Portis, with the same spirit of determination as he did in his former charge.

As for the results of our work at Portis, I am telling folks it is the surprise of the season. Portis sure did catch us all napping and put one across on us. Portis is in the "short grass" region, and they have been having some crop failures too; but I have about made up my mind that I wish all of our churches were in the "short grass" region. These "short grass" people are "long" on loyalty and "long" on liberality and that is why I enjoy very much to work among them. Portis went $3700—what has anybody to say about that? That is certainly a great result for Portis; and the joke about it is, nobody in Kanemorado outside of Portis expected a result like that, not even the optimists, like John Lichty and Stuckman at Falls City, and Elias Lichty at Carlton. But that is my kind of a surprise. The other kind doesn't appeal to me.

The Portis people, young and old, showed a remarkable interest in our canvass there right from the start. Everybody seemed to want to see everybody else do his part so that the grand total for Portis would show well. Now right in this connection I want to give out a little piece of information. At one time the Portis church had seven of her young people in Ashland College. Do you have any notion that maybe there is some relation somehow between this fact and the fact that Portis was ripe and ready to do her part in endowing the college? Personally I think there is a very vital relation between these two facts.

We had two $500 men at Portis. One of those men is a non-resident member living at Eldorado, Kansas. But he wanted to help in this good work and he also wanted to help make a good showing for his congregation. There was also a $300 gift, three $200 gifts, and many $100 gifts, and many more in sums less than that. Also the various auxiliaries of the church such as the S. S. C. E., and the Sisterhood Girls, the Y. P. S. C. E., and the Sunday school all took a part. And that is the way we reached the $3700 mark. I count it one of the finest victories in the entire campaign up to this time.

During most of our stay in Portis, the home of Brother George Lemon and his good wife was headquarters. But I was also entertained in the homes of Brethren Harry Brumbaugh, Frank Ratliff, T. N. Garner and H. A. Turner. Then, too I stopped quite often at the parsonage with the pastor and his parents. But no matter where I stopped the hospitality was so genuine and warm-hearted that I had to feel right at home. And I want to say that I shall always remember with great pleasure the canvass at Portis, and I shall remember the Portis people as a downright loyal people. I think I ought to say to the brotherhood in strict confidence that Portis needs more church room to do her work—maybe it is a new church she is needing. And no one will deny that $3700 would have gone quite far in helping to put across a new church project. But to the decided credit of Portis, the people did not take that as an excuse for not doing their very best for Ashland College at this time. And I believe their royal response to this challenge will only make more surely their greatly needed new building or enlarged building as the case may be. I believe God honors and blesses the folks who honor him.

My work took me from Portis to Eldorado and Wichita. And being then very close to Mulvane, I slipped over to that church. Mulvane is a country church, and it has had no pastor for more than a year. Moreover, Mulvane is so far removed from all other Brethren churches that it is next to impossible for her to join with some other church in supporting a pastor. Hence it is hard to say just what Mulvane is to do. However, it is very evident that something must be done very soon or nothing will remain to be done. I found some good folks in this congregation, but quite naturally they are somewhat discouraged. I preached one night for them and would have preached two nights had not a rain made the roads bad. I spent one day on the field here and raised $100. This could have been more and should have been, but when people are discouraged about their local work it is not easy to interest them in a general work. I shall remember the Schapers, and the Howards, and the Whitteds, and the Fellers, whom I met at Mulvane. I am glad I met these good folks and I hope the way may somehow still open for a Brethren church at that place.

I think I should say in this report that I have now visited all of the churches in Kanemorado that I shall visit in this campaign. I have been purposely excusing mission points in this work. That explains why I did not go to Fort Scott. And other small, pastorless churches in that district were so far away that I did not deem it wise to use either the time or the money to make those long trips. However, I want to say here and now that all Brethren in the Kanemorado districts at points where I did not visit are cordially invited to help in this endowment work and you can do it through the mail. You can mail your Liberty Bond direct to the College, or, if you want the installment note that will give you five years in which to pay out, write me at Ashland and we will send it at once. Or if the Liberty Bond idea or the note idea fails to appeal to you, you can send your check or draft. I want you to feel that you may enlist in this too, and you are invited to do so.

Now Watch the Kanemorado District Raise the Mercury

COLLEGE
ENDOWMENT

In conclusion I want to make the following observation: I visited seven churches in Kanemorado. Those seven churches went $19,255. Six of those churches went $19,155. And Kanemorado is not done yet. There are still other isolated folks to be heard from. It would not be a very great shock to me if Kanemorado went even $20,000 when all results are in. Now then, it is to be remembered that this result comes from six churches in which the membership of the largest is not to exceed 200, and the smallest perhaps 80. In other words, six churches with a resident membership of perhaps less than 800, have given $19,155 to the cause of permanent endowment, and Kanemorado is not done yet. I feel that no comment of mine can add a whit to the real glory of this record. All I will venture to say is this, the Kanemorado people are great people and their pastors are good fellows who gave me fine assistance in the work. Kanemorado has the pennant church so far. In this little district there were three men who enlisted for $1,000 each. And there were nine folks who enlisted for $500 each. And by this time it must be apparent to all that if any other state or district is to equal or exceed the speed of Kanemorado that state or district will have to go SOME.

I said Kanemorado has the pennant church up to this time. I am glad she has it. Cavanaugh had it quite a long time. And I know Cavanaugh yielded it to Falls City gracefully. But my word to Stuckman is "Enjoy the pennant thoroughly while you have it because something might happen." I go to Iliokota next, and I seem to see some writing on the wall.

The mercury ought to show $88,000 now. Praise the Lord! WM. H. BEACHLER, Campaign Secretary.

DENVER CHURCH

Some one has said, "Don't speak unless you have something to say." We have been applying the truth of this saying in writing to the church paper until it has been necessary to break the spell of silence so as to keep the friends of Denver and Sidney form forgetting that we are actually on the map. We have not written because there has not been much to write. It seems useless to say that we have been handicapped because the same conditions prevailed here as elsewhere. Practically all our churches have met the same fate. We have not accomplished much since the "flu" presented itself last fall. However we are trying to be invigorated by exerting more energy. Denver has been under the handicap for so long that it appears to have become a matter of course. Those who stayed at home for fear of the "flu" are inclined to be satisfied to remain there. We have had no revival meeting because of health conditions and the Sunday school attendance has been small, especially with the children. There are some evidences of encouragement.

The interest along some lines are a little better and the attendance at the services is increasing somewhat. Our Young People's society has been less affected than any other auxiliary of the church. We just organized last year and the young people have been loyal all the time. We are planning for our Easter services and hope to have Denver go over the top for foreign missions that day. Denver does not lack the spirit to do if that spirit could be directed or controlled in the proper course. Too much enthusiasm runs rampant sometimes and the church gets nothing out of it but division and strife. We are going to make the goal for the Evangelist in every home and hope to reach as many other goals of the Four Year Program as possible.

L. A. MYERS.

SIDNEY, INDIANA

This is the other half of our field of labor. We are here on our second year. The church was making good progress and we were just beginning to make some definite plans as we could begin to see the needs of the field, after having been there one year. The "du" visited us as at Denver and we have been little more than existing since. However this part of our field was not as hard hit as Denver. The "du" let up earlier and the church is now making pretty fair progress. We are planning to make several of the Four Year Program goals. Our Sunday school is going to make the required standard. Denver has held this standard for a number of years and the two schools will be together in efficiency standards. Both schools are maintaining a Teacher Training class. Sidney has placed the Evangelist in practically every home again this year. We are planning for a few days meeting to precede our communion service some time next month. The outlook for the future is encouraging if nothing hinders the work through the summer.

L. A. MYERS.

REPORT OF MISSIONARY OFFERINGS FOR MARCH. (HOME MISSIONS)

*Compton Ave. Br. Ch., Los Angeles, Cal.,	$ 61.12
Interest on daily balances for Feb.,	5.42
J. S. C. Spickerman, Maryville, Mo.,	3.50
Hagerstown, Md.,	6.76
Lathrop, California,	16.00
Sidney, Indiana,	8.00
National S. S. C. E.,	25.00
Mrs. Sylva Nickerson, Lake Odessa, Mich.,	5.00
Rose Johnson, Corning, Iowa,	1.00
Whole Gospel Church, Philadelphia, Pa.,	8.00
Denver, Indiana, Sunday School, ...	20.00
Mrs. R. D. Martin, Pioneer, Ind., ...	5.00
Previously reported,	5,082.18

Total Receipts,$5,250.72
Correction—Clay City, Indiana, is a Star church, having contributed $21.00 as reported in a previous report.

Respectfully submitted,
ORION E. BOWMAN,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Dayton, Ohio, March 31, 1919.

If there is no sunshine in your religion do not be surprised if nobody wants it.

COLLEGE NOTES

Walter Niechwitz spent a week out in Indiana visiting friends and former students.

Caryl Miller has been doing office work for Dr. Worst, afternoons.

Mrs. Griffith is assisting Professor Hendrickson in the office work of the College here of late.

Dr. Jacobs has given two lectures at the Y. M. meetings recently, which were very helpful and appreciated by the men.

The Girls' Athletic Club entertained the men of the College with games and a splendid Lunch Friday evening after the meeting of the literary societies.

Benjamin Owens is back home after assisting Brother Rowsey in a revival meeting at the Mansfield mission. Nearly twenty confessions are reported.

Dr. Miller preached at the Church of the Brethren here in the city on March 30th. Brother Baer filled his appointment at Rittman on that day.

The Hesperian literary will give a play on April 11th to which all are cordially invited. A small admission fee will be charged to meet the expenses. A hearty laugh will be yours.

Marie Lichty spent Sunday in Dayton visiting with Ruth Teeter and Maud Billman. She found those girls still had a warm place in their hearts for dear old Ashland. Thanks, girls.

Mr. Phillips of Kenton, a former resident on College Hill was here recently, looking after property. He will repair his two houses ready to be occupied by students the coming fall.

Prof. A. A. Grubb, former faculty member, has been discharged from his war duties in the east and is working in one of the large factories in Mansfield. We noticed him around the Campus a few evenings recently.

Mrs. Trellis Whitehead Harley, a faculty member for five years, but in the last year living with her husband in Cleveland, died of influenza, April 1st. Burial will take place in Dayton. Mrs. Harley but recently made the College a visit, and was at home but a few days until the death messenger came. This is the first member of the faculty lost by death for nearly twenty years. A memorial service was held at the chapel on Friday morning.

Rowsey is back from his campaign at the mission at Mansfield. His church went over the top in a drive to wipe out the old debt and make some extensive repairs. This will be done soon. Good for you, Brother Rowsey.

Business Manager's Corner

GOING UP

That is what the elevator boy announces as his elevator is about to make its ascent in our tall business blocks of the city, and that is what we can announce about the subscription list of the Evangelist. Since our last report we can announce the winning of a place on the Honor Roll by one more church: namely, The Compton Avenue Brethren church of Los Angeles, California, with J. C. Beal as pastor, and A. E. Neher as acting agent. We roomed a year with Brother Beal in college twenty-six years ago and we ordained Brother Neher to the deacon's office about twenty-five years ago and we are glad we can still work together, though nearly two thousand miles of America lie between us.

Secondly, the Bryan church has won a place on the Roll for the second year, with an increased number of subscribers. We certainly appreciate what Brother Maus has done as our representative in the Bryan church.

Thirdly, the first church to get in its list of names for a place on the Honor Roll for the THIRD year was also the church to win this place FIRST among all the churches two years ago, namely, Gretna, Ohio. Edwin Boardman is pastor of this church.

If there remains a shadow of doubt in the mind of a single remaining pastor in the brotherhood, the experience of these churches that are placing the Evangelist in the homes of their members for the second and the third years in succession, should brush all cobwebs away and they should catch a clear vision of not only a duty, but a most blessed privilege. We are near the top of our goal for the year, but there is always room at the top, so come on Brethren and help us reach it.

R. R. TEETER,
Business Manager.

Ashland College Summer School

TWO SIX WEEKS' TERMS MAY 12—AUG. 1, 1919

This Summer School is fully Recognized by the State Department of Education for the training of Elementary Teachers. Expenses Reasonable.

Address:

Ashland College Summer School
ASHLAND, OHIO.

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 17

APRIL 23
1919

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETHREN -

Elder and Mrs Wm. H. Bock, La Carlota, F. C. C. A. Argentina, (Courtesy of the Brethren Missionary)

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Where Most of the People Live—Editor,	2	More and Larger Classes—Prof. J. A. Garber,	10
Editorial Review,	3	The Need of Missionary Education—Mrs. Grace P. Srack,	12
Four Year Program—Charles A. Bame,	4	Letter from a Little Missionary,	12
The Things That Are Mine—Prof. C. A. Byers,	5	Why the Brethren Church Believes in Mission Work—J. H. Swihart,	12
How to Make Baptism Vital—B. T. Burnworth,	6	News From the Field,	13-16
Work—N. J. Paul,	7	Communion Notices,	16
The Larger Friendship—Miles J. Snyder,	8	Business Manager's Corner—Dr. R. R. Teeter,	16
Consecration—Mrs. C. L. Anspach,	9
Man Made in the Image of God—Dr. J. M. Tombaugh,	10

EDITORIAL

Where Most of the People Live

I have been wondering where most of the people live. I am concerned about the masses; I am interested in the crowds. Jesus loved the crowds and had compassion on them. He taught them, fed them and healed them. And it has been growing upon me that we, as followers of the lowly Nazarene, should be more concerned about the conditions of life, tastes and character of the masses. I doubt if we can escape this conviction and be both normally human and genuinely Christian. Our normal humanity seeks the crowds; it enjoys their chatter, it craves their fellowship, it loves their spirit, be it frivolous or grave. We all flock together as naturally and almost as aimlessly as sheep. And so we are only acting normally, if we seek the company of our fellow-humans, desiring to know where they live and to catch the spirit of their lives.

But the thing that is of deep concern to me is not to know where the houses or places called homes of people are. It is not any building or material dwelling place that I am wanting to know about. The big question with me is not where people keep their physical bodies, but where do they keep their real selves. Where do most of the people live mentally, morally and spiritually? What do they think about? What do their eyes feast upon? What causes them to bend the ear and hold the breath? What holds their affections? What do they continually seek after and worship? Tell me these things and you have told me where most of the people live.

Of course we cannot entirely dissociate the places men gather from the things they seek there, and so we must go where folks gather to learn where they live. First, let us take a peep into a moving picture theatre and watch the crowds there,—watch them move forward in their seats, hear their undisguised expressions of approval and study the scenes that grip their interest most intensely. There we learn where many people live. There we see old men and young men, gray-haired women and plump-checked maidens, fathers leading their little sons and mothers with babes in their arms, young lads with their first sweethearts and boys and girls of tender years. All alike sit motionless before scenes, most of which cause people to feel less noble to contemplate. The themes set forth by the pictures in the movie we visit will be found quite representative of commercialized moving pictures—"free love" and the slandering of the marriage bond, bestial passions and unfaithfulness of husband and wife, drunken revelries and cabaret scenes, shooting scrapes and swindling games. Of the characters depicted some are upright and some are cunning crooks, some are virtuous and some are sensual beasts. All sorts of characters and scenes are introduced to the eager crowd. But the scenes that send the thrills through the high-tensioned spectators and make them unconsciously lean forward with bated breath are those that make the boldest appeal to sex, that contain the most pointed suggestion, that arouse the most deeply seated passions. That fact is shrewdly recognized by the advertising specialists. The many-colored advertisements displayed outside the theatres show the heroine as scantily gowned as even the most loyal supporters of Dame Fashion would tolerate. And the display bills do not misrepresent the actual scenes. Such scenes hold the people unwearied for an hour or two in a stuffy crowded room. Hundreds gather in these places, whereas many church auditoriums with several times their capacity must be satisfied with a fraction of the movie crowd. We are not speaking of the special nights in movie-land, but just the ordinary attraction with the ordinary crowds. Where do most of the people live? Where the delight of their eyes is, there will their hearts be found also. The hearts of many are in the movie world, feasting on the ideals there set before their rapacious appetites. The lovers of the movie might be offended if we should say they live on a low plane, but if they are honest with themselves they must admit that there are hosts of ideas suggested by the average commercialized picture that make the soul recoil before the purity of its ideal self and causes it to seek to hide itself from the presence of God. The atmosphere of the picture theatre and the scenes on which people there lavish their time, cause them to have less time for and less enjoyment in the great ideals and work of the church. He who has witnessed the average movie scenes knows that these words are true.

No inborn prejudice for the moving picture theater inspires these statements. They are rather given in spite of a personal fondness for it under proper direction. Doubtless the movie has come to stay and wisdom would seem to direct us to seek to redeem it from its commercialized state that it may be made a wholesome institution.

But this does not satisfy our inquiry as to where most of the people live. Let us continue our investigation by a visit to the dance hall. Our purpose is not to gather material for a tirade on the public dance, notwithstanding the fact that our findings might inspire such action. But if people's conduct and spirit tell us anything as to where they live, we must not neglect to make observations here.

It will hardly be doubted that there are revelations awaiting us here, for it is scarcely possible that the close relations assumed in the act of dancing do not have some influence on thought and emotion. A man can hardly put his arms about the waist of another man's wife and permit that other man's wife to rest her head on his shoulders, as is not infrequently done, without having at least some feeling as to the unusualness of the situation. And a woman cannot permit such familiarities without causing the embrace, the symbol of the tenderest and strongest affection, to lose something of its sanctity and distinctive meaning for her. A youth, in the strength and vigor of his young manhood with his soul unsoiled by undue familiarities, can hardly draw to his bosom with a closeness of contact such as he has not experienced except in response to the love of mother or sister, a girl who is of only temporary interest without feeling a strangeness in the situation. He can hardly press her lithe figure to his own, as they perform their gyrations, contortions and promenades, until they each feel the warm blood of the other without experiencing a thrill unlike anything that has ever come to him from his contact with men or his mother. That thrill is the appeal of sex. And the tender maiden unschooled in familiarities from the other sex and in full possession of feminine modesty, cannot yield herself to such embraces, movements and sensations without experiencing a confusion of ideas and a decided doubt as to the propriety of such conduct. Both have cheapened themselves in the eyes of the other because such familiarities are to be expected from others of no more intimacy of friendship than their own. Such conduct may seem embarrassing to the uninitiated, yet it is engaged in with a relish by the crowds who frequent the dance hall.

We would not permit our feelings to speak out, but in strict fidelity to our purpose our judgment must state that such people can hardly be living in a world of noble thought and high purpose. There is no inspiration to sacrifice and service received from the dance, but it does inspire selfish gratification and the re-experiencing of strange sensations. There is no tendency on the part of those gathered here to sing psalms and to converse on lofty themes, the atmosphere of the place forbids it, but there is every encouragement to flippancy and the singing of silly and even ridiculous songs. It is a world of light pleasure and sex. And how many people live in it! The average church house would be well seated if its average attendance equaled that of the public dance.

Then let us take a glance into a poolroom just for the sake of seeing the crowd and learning where the men live who frequent the place. It will not serve our purpose to quarrel about the rightness or wrongness of this or that game. What we want to know is the kind of atmosphere found there. Is it wholesome or otherwise? Consider the place. Is this stuffy room clouded with smoke an ideal place to get needed recreation? Is the profanity and vulgarity likely to encourage divine reverence and personal purity? Is the cheating and ill-temper so constantly manifested inclined to promote honesty and self-control? Will the neglect of the home help a man to be a better father, husband or son? Will the tendency to gamble help him to be true in character, or the waste of time encourage him to make his life count for good? We need not but ask the questions, for their only true answer will be unmistakable if the heart itself is true. And if we know the answer to such questions, we will know where the people live who gather there. And how many there are! Every Bible class of men in town would be more than doubled by the number of men who pass in and out of this place every day.

If we had the patience we might with profit visit still other places, such as the cabaret and the amusement park, the circus and the fair, the sporting club and the pink tea and observe the crowds to be found there. We do not call in question all these places; some have been made to serve good purposes under proper conditions, while others have been associated with much that is evil. Our aim is to discover what people get at these places that brings them back so repeatedly; what these institutions stand for that the people want with such persistence; what associations and ideals are met with here that seem to grip so large a number of our fellow-beings. When we have discovered these things, we shall know where most of the people live. Without detailing evidence, let it suffice to say that the more we find delight in these things, the more they become the real food of life, the less do they relish the great and noble things of life and the less interest do they have in the things that concern the kingdom of God. Where the delight of the soul is, there do most of the people live.

This is a serious fact that ought to be made a revelation to every Christian heart. Would that every conscientious soul could be made to realize it that he might be made more thoughtful and scrupulous in the selection of his recreations and pleasures. Would that it might be brought home so forcibly to every professed follower of the holy Christ that it would stir all to more consistency of living. And would that the church as a whole might know this fact that it might be more concerned about the great masses of people on whom Christ had compassion. When the church really knows and when every individual member knows where most of the people live, there will come to the church such a vision of neglected service, such a conviction of unconcern, such a deep sense of the people's needs and such a self-forgetfulness and love of service, that it will become a power the like of which the world has never known for remaking life, sanctifying social conditions and bringing in the republic of God.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Brother Wall reports a special conference of the Southern California churches. Evangelism and Bible Institute work featured at the conference.

Brother Stewart of the Corinth, Indiana, church announces a revival meeting to be held in May under the leadership of Brother A. T. Wirick, who is returning from Florida. Such a team ought to bring things to pass for the Master's cause.

Brother Bell gives us another interesting report of Pacific coast churches, this time of Northern California. He states that he expects to enter the evangelistic field after Conference time and may be addressed at 602 Stanley Ave., Long Beach, California.

Brother Garrison writes an interesting letter concerning his work at his Michigan charge. The people have experienced a reviving, received several new members and are getting organized ready for some intensive work. They seem to be enthusiastic over missions.

Brother Bame reports a most successful revival conducted under unusual circumstances. He brought into action quite a variety of evangelistic material and made a number of attempts to hold the campaign before the "flu" related sufficiently to permit success, but they finally went "over the top" in good fashion.

The Roanoke, Virginia, work is moving along in fine shape under the efficient leadership of Brother Wood. The Enlistment-Service campaign will doubtless result in a more intensive working of the field by all the members. We have received one of Brother Wood's cards and it calls for greater faithfulness in every line and holds out opportunity for pledging for service of many different kinds.

We are favored with another good report of the work at Goshen, Indiana, from the pen of the re-elected corresponding secretary. Congratulations, Brother Horner, we shall be glad to get your letters frequently. Of course, if you can persuade your pastor, in the midst of his many duties, to write an occasional letter, we shall be glad to get that too. The work at Goshen is in a prosperous condition under the leadership of Brother McInturff.

It will be a pleasure to read the good report of the work at Altoona, Pennsylvania, from the pen of Brother Benshoff. It is an annual report and shows that some very good work has been done during the past year. One especially commendable feature is the splendid financial showing. These people have gone "over the top" in every respect financially. They nearly trebled their requirement in the College Endowment offering. And they have not forgotten their faithful pastor, but have increased his salary as his good service and the high cost of living require. It is a good omen that the churches quite generally are becoming more unselfish and are coming to reward their long underpaid pastors in a more adequate manner.

It has been some time since the re-dedication of the remodeled Lanark church, but the report of it will be no less interesting. Brother B. T. Burnworth tells us about it in this issue. The Lanark Brethren have a very commodious building, well adapted to the needs of the modern Sunday school, splendidly equipped and well lighted. A happy feature about it is that it was dedicated entirely free from debt, and it was done during these war times. They not only have a larger building but they have a larger crowd to put in it. They are prepared for a larger and more effective work and they seem determined to make the most of their opportunity. Brother Beachler was called to assist in the dedication, and with the two live wires like Beachler and Burnworth in charge of a day's service backed by the loyal Lanark Brethren, we may be sure everything went off fine.

FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM PAGE

NOW THEN DO IT.—II Samuel 3:18

Conducted by Charles A. Bame

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR

While the printers are setting the type for Brother Goughenour's analysis of the reports of the pastors and key-men I am here trying to call attention of the same men to "the duty of the hour." You ask what is the duty of the hour. Is there a "THE" duty of the hour? I think there is. In a general way, it is to finish the work of the left-off ends of the Four Year Program. Doubtless you are in the same predicament of my church (I do not feel a bit lonesome) with the unfinished work of the Goals of the early part of the year. Some of our mission apportionment has not yet been collected. We have not yet reached a goal that many of our churches have on the Honor Roll of the Evangelist. Well, I do not care to bother you with the details of our short-comings, but we have them, and we are going to get rid of them as far as is possible in the very near future. Next week—the week that you will read this, we shall be busy with a house-to-house canvas trying to enlist the support of every household in this program by asking them to do their part as set forth in this PROGRAM.

Each Doing Their Part

Why should it be thought a thing impossible for each family to do its part in this national work of the church? Certain assessments against each member of the church have to be paid by some one or lose the goal. We shall ask each family to do its part. That will mean that they will be asked to pay $2.00 for the Evangelist; 40c each for Foreign Missions; 30c each for The Missionary Board, etc. Shall we win? Well, the family can no more than turn down the solicitor. But I feel that we shall thus get much that could never be gotten in a regular Sunday service appeal. There may be better ways; if there are for you, go to it. But do not neglect to make a positive definite effort to gather up the unfinished ends of the Program before it is "too late."

But, "the" Duty of the Hour

The duty of the hour is evangelistic efforts. Not enough of our churches have had meetings. Too few have had "big" gatherings. It is not too late! It is never too late to try; never too hard a task to win. We can have ingatherings if we want them enough to get them. Last July, the Huntington mission had a big revival right in the heat of the hottest time. The Muncie church or mission was founded in the heat of the summer. The Glendora church was started in the same manner. The North Manchester revival was held in the most inopportune time of the spring months, and we went away over the 7 percent we had to add to keep pace with the program. I had to enlist the second evangelist to have as long a meeting as we needed to do it, but we added five pairs of the best the community afforded on a single night—five husbands with their wives. One family is seven miles to the south; one, five miles to the north and two, 12 miles to the northwest. In a recent article on this page, I said, it could be done. Now, we have proven our faith by our works. Do not lull yourself to sleep with the notion that some years are harvest years and some are not. Meet the conditions of revival and it will be a result as the fading of the mist before the morning sun.

Try, Try Again

It is an old motto but it is a good one. Brush aside the thought that you have gone through the motions of a revival. Jesus could do no mighty works at Capernaum because the unbelief of the disciples hindered. Pity us if we do likewise. We can hinder him the same way. God have mercy on us if we do. Many pastors can do good service in the field of evangelism even though we do not have evangelists afIELD to cover the territory. Churches will listen to an appeal for help and loan them if it is made for the sake of the Program and the Kingdom, I am sure.

Did You Write Ronk?

A. T. Ronk, Warsaw, Indiana, is the Secretary of the Evangelistic Association of the Brethren church. Pastors who have spare time were advised to write him and tell him that they could be spared at certain times. Churches needing helpers were asked to write to him and ask for it. Did you do it? Well, if you did not, then some of the duty you owe this Program has not been done. I greatly fear that there are too many sleepy or faithless folks to get the results we ought to get. I am concerned about it, deeply. Are you,

It Costs Too Much

Is that the cry you raise? Well, if you are really unable to do what ought to be done for the Cause in your corner, then you deserve pity. Evangelism does cost more this year than it ever did, but so does everything else. Churches must awaken to the fact that preachers can not live as cheaply as they once did and that God will never pardon them for piling the gold higher in their own coffers while they allow the Cause to suffer. This is a time when God's own should prove themselves worthy stewards. There can be no excuse for the man who buys more farms and bonds and then makes the excuse that it costs too much to get evangelists for the revival the church must have or lose itself in the maelstrom of worldliness. It does not cost too much to have a revival but vastly too much not to have one. The price we pay for the things we must have and do not get, is so appalling that we lose our souls in the barter.

Keeping the Home Base Strong

This is necessary as missions. Soon, as we now see it, we shall have one of the greatest opportunities of any church that ever entered a mission field. Central Africa, will call mightily for conquest. After the daring party of our brethren that are now waiting for entrance, have possessed that colorful land of opportunity, there will come a call across the deep so strong that it will make us heartsick that we can not fully occupy it. Is not that call already getting to be a thunderbolt to many of us from South America? Well, how shall we make answer? By going into the home field right now with God's call on our lips and hearts and putting squarely before people who are looking for a man's job the outlook for the Master's work, tomorrow.

Figures.—I do not wish here and now to go into figures; but I do wish you would. Seventeen months from now, our program, coming to a climax in September, 1920, asks for from 6,500 to 7,500 more members than we had in 1916. Had we not better be figuring now than then, when it will be too late? Will we then say, "The harvest is passed, the summer is ended" and we have not done our share? Now, we are asleep; then we shall awaken to a mighty discomfiting fact that we have not accomplished. Figure right now for the Master's sake; for the Program's sake; for the brotherhood's sake; for your own sake. The day of rewards is coming. He who said, "Occupy till I come" will make a reckoning with his servants. Will it be "Well done good and faithful?" Pastors! Official Boards! Leaders of the Cause! The night cometh; pray, "Revive thy work, O Lord" and then do your part in bringing it into reality.

BAME.

GENERAL ARTICLES

The Things That Are Mine. By Prof. C. A. Byers

The sense of ownership is quite deeply rooted and grounded into the very fiber of our being; not selfish, not vain perhaps, but a racial inheritance that we cannot escape. To be sure, these physical shadows which we call our own, are essential, but that they should occupy such a prominent place in the minds of all classes and the things which are really ours such a small place, is the subject that has aroused my curiosity many times, and unconsciously in my walks alone or in the silence of the evening hour, I hear the question inaudibly asked,—What things are truly and genuinely mine? What does this question of ownership mean? By what right do I claim a thing as mine? And what can I give in return for that which I desire to hold as my possession? Possibly from a legal standpoint and in the language of the courts, such questions would be absolutely absurd and superfluous. But that does not altogether determine the reality of the case. Man's riches do not consist in the abundance of his possessions. The wealthiest man I ever met and conversed with, was one who owned not a single acre of land nor the house in which he lived, yet his thoughts were clothed in the finest raiment, his deeds were enforced by the purest motives, and his vision echoed from the fairest palaces. That man inspired me with a sense of power I cannot forget. I felt so empty, so foolish because it seemed that all I had lived for had counted for so little. The man had only blown away the shadow, and put in its place the reality.

By what right then can I claim a thing as mine? Not by the paper the court has handed me; not that I can appropriate all to myself, for this is impossible; not that I can sell it for twice what I paid, or give it away. A material thing is rarely mine if ever. Our actual ownership goes beyond the material world. When is anything mine? It is only mine when I am able to hold it constantly in the realm of my appreciation. That mountain is mine be it ever so high, when I can stand in awe in the majesty of its presence. That little brook is mine when I can sit upon its banks and watch its flowing beauty and feel in my joy that deep thirst and longing, that discontent of "something still more deeply interfused, whose dwelling is the light of setting suns." And within the presence of each changing scene "a motion and a spirit that impels all thinking things, all objects of all thought and rolls through all things." That group of flowers is mine though it grows by the humblest cottage or stands waving and nodding by the rich man's gate, when I can carry away in me and communicate to others the sweet influence of such a scene. The stars of the night are mine, when they have a voice and seem to speak. The fields are beautiful in their covering of waving grass if I am able to see the fine texture of their raiment. Each bit of earth we tread upon, is holy if round about it we can hear the voice of the Creator. Indeed, it is not always what I see in what I look immediately upon in my admiration, but what it actually suggests and will suggest.

"All shapes and sounds have something which is not of them;

A spirit broods amid the grass,
Vague outlines of the everlasting thought,
Lie in the melting shadows as they pass
A touch of an eternal presence thrills
The fringes of the sunset and the hills."

And indeed is it not true that when I admire, I worship; when I appreciate, my world grows larger; when I draw in the presence of that which is serene and holy, I enter into the reality of life, for in this I feel more discontented, more unhappy for that which I have not seen but the presence of which I have deeply felt. I know even with all this I live, but in that life I touch such a small world, but in it all I feel a spell from an outside source, a mystery from an unseen sky that echoes again and again in the chambers of myself.

Nothing is mine until I am able to appreciate it, to hold it in my grasp, nor is it mine until I have the power to give it away. But it is not even then, no, not until I and others can feel the influence of its return. A painting is mine not when I can see only perfection there in technique but forgetting this can see in fairer and more glowing lines, the vision of the artist and his deep struggles to paint what a mortal man is not able to produce. A statue is not mine until I forget that it is made of marble but see in its presence a light that never was on sea or land. The beauty and influence of art does not depend so much on what actually is present in the artist's interpretation as it stands before us, as in its potentiality. This shows indeed that a man's reach does exceed his grasp. A picture is never finished, an artist's song is never complete, a man's life is never ended. And here it seems to me lies all the charm of a man's achievements; we feel the sense of incompleteness in it all. We look upon nature and feel that same restraining limited power of interpretation. To be sure in the world of art or nature or any other sphere of human appreciation there is nothing truly mine nor yours, it is only relatively so. Thus in this as well as that which I hope to speak of further, you will find not what I would like to speak of, but only an apology for that which I would desire to interpret.

The real possessions of my life and of yours are large and filled bountifully only on one condition and that is, that life will be a continual struggle into a larger and more beautiful field. The competition where money is no factor in the issue and personal influence no temptation, but where each individual may possess as much as his ever growing capacity will permit.

The success of my life and yours will be marked by the roads of thought we have attempted, by the distance we have traveled and by the ever increasing scope in view. Socrates was great and the source of his greatness was his eager search after truth that was fundamental. He proclaimed the gospel of "Know thyself." Hence he was said to have brought philosophy from the heavens and introduced it into the houses of men. Sometimes we glibly say even the common school boy knows more than Socrates did. But no one would be rude enough to say he therefore is greater. But why this difference? Nothing can be mine unless I go through the successive stages of ownership. Are the beliefs I hold mine or have I filched them from some book? Have I stubbornly questioned every step of the way? Do things appear more uncommon now than ever before? Nature for one perhaps and human nature for the other. What is this world? what are the people? I know not why I come, only the question I may ask of everything else,—where am I going? How can I be certain of what I look upon and say I see it? Sometimes I must shake off my innocence for my faith has outlived its purpose. I wish my thought could inscribe a wider circle, the present life and outgrown shell seems so cold, so small, so cheerless, it was my house only for a season. But where does all this longing and achievement lead? The gate is open, always before the road is ended. We do not know, we cannot know now. Like the moving star it ever leads us on.

We are children who make strange worlds out of our own desire. My declaration that I will live hereafter somewhere, did not its form and kind spring full grown from my fancy that it be just so? And how true am I to my childish nature, for each year or day I live I desire to make my eternity of endowment something different, for I could no more be happy with yesterday's world. I need not be a Caliban; but am I a child building he knows not what, going he knows not where, and living only in terms of his own dreams?

When I try to consider what I am, I tremble, a mystery so deep that all seems dark, a light so dim I cannot see:—

“But what am I?

An infant crying in the night

An infant crying for the light

And with no language but a cry.”

As Professor Seeley has said in his book, Ecco Homo, “No heart is pure that is not passionate; no virtue is safe that is not enthusiastic.” Perhaps we might with equal truth say that no life has ever tasted of its real fruitage until it has passed through the center of indifference to its fuller assurance in a more positive answer to his real life questions.

I feel too, the hours and moments which are mine are those which I have spent alone with myself. Our own selves so many times are the strangest beings we ever met when we come into our own presence. One of the grandest practices I know of is to have the blessed habit of getting away alone to yourself to meditate at least an hour in each day. If you have ever felt a mystery in the presence of a companion, a sense of something you cannot fathom, perhaps this is the secret. Oh, that silent influence of getting back to self where chambers of mystery are endless, where life is truly precious and sweet, where God is near and his guiding hand is upon me. Here I love to seek and know myself and touch that deep chord where life is ever living. Here the shadow stands but the real fades as a dream and returns again as I enter more deeply into the recesses of my own being. Individuality is a growth from within out, its price is high but its compensation splendid.

In conclusion I might say a thought is mine only when I have expressed it; a life is mine only when I have lived it to the fullest. A soul is mine when I have developed it. Life is so sweet when it is appreciative, it is so grand when truth and harmony enter there, it is so divine when it touches its purpose, it is so nearest perfection when it has yearned and struggled and thirsted the most.

Ashland, Ohio.

How to Make Baptism Vital Today. By B. T. Burnworth

I discuss this subject by request. The implications are many. The first being that baptism is not so vital today as in the past, or in the immediate present and how to vitalize it in the future. It is not within my province to write an argumentative brief upon trine immersion; nor even to say that baptize means to immerse, the offender the better, hence our difference from the single immersionist but that we both baptize. Neither do I consider it my duty to say that sprinkling and pouring are not immersion although called baptism and accepted by many conscientious Christian people whose judgment I shall not challenge now. They are probably as sincere as I and as John D. Rockefeller, Jr., said, “Although never having been immersed they may be better Christians than I am.”

I take it that I am to simply use the word baptize to indicate that sacred rite administered in water and with water, which is an outward symbolic act to witness what has already taken place within. Baptism is vital. It seems that once the mode of baptism was the all important thing and baptism was vitalized by controversy on how this sacred rite should be administered. It was kept before the public by debates between representatives of different denominations whose difference was at one time largely due to the difference on the mode of baptism. I dare say that it today does not seem a very vital reason and a debate upon the subject now outside of a few remote social circles would attract but mere passing notice. The mode has lost its vitally distinctive plea to the common mass today.

If this is true then it is the design of baptism which must vitalize it today if this rite is to live and I do not hesitate to say that whether you have been baptized is more vital than how and that it is the fact that you were more than the way it was done that makes it vital to us. I repeat then, it is the design that vitalizes baptism today and the why of baptism should always be preached first and the how of baptism always secondary. In the past we explained how it should be done without convincing people that it should or even must be done and we have been at fault for the fact that it ever has been doubted necessary to salvation. Our denominational zeal founded on the mode has consumed us. To vitalize anything we must put first things first and deal with the vital parts.

1st. The way to vitalize baptism today then, I should say, first, is to preach the design, or why we have been baptized. I am sure I am right here, because it is being questioned by those taking on the Christ life whether or not it is vitally and absolutely necessary as an essential to salvation and by a large moral class who like the “young ruler” seem to lack but this one thing, and doubt its essentiality. The Quaker so regards it; I personally know of an evangelist of some note that has only the baptism of the Spirit, and I also remember that when Fred Seibert was with “Billy Sunday,” he put out a little vest pocket booklet (the title I do not recall) in which was the statement that “baptism was not essential to salvation.” I would observe in passing that these vest pocket editions are as big as some men’s conception of God and that Fred is probably a far more efficient utility man around a tabernacle than a theologian. On the other hand, it has been preached that if an applicant were to die on the way to the river where baptism was to have been administered he would be lost. To say the least this is a very vital conception of baptism and there is far less danger of overestimating it than undervaluing it. Baptism is as essential today as it has ever been. Let us proceed now to find what makes it vital.

2nd. Baptism is vital because of Christ’s example. You will find my theology centering in Jesus Christ as the very Son of God, not his divinity but absolutely in his deity. So John the Baptizer didn’t argue with Jesus about how he was to be baptized but whether he (John) was worthy to administer the rite, and Jesus said, “Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness.” As his disciples it becomes us to do the same thing. Even the law of compensation obtains here in that the most righteous should do that which will benefit the unrighteous most. Jesus’ baptism undoubtedly benefitted others more than himself and the real reward that John the Baptist received was to witness the seal of the Holy Spirit upon his work as it descended upon Christ in the bodily form of a dove. I want to observe further, that this is the general rule, first baptism of water, then the Spirit. Only one instance is recorded as an exception to prove this rule and it is not presuming too much to believe that rule is still in force. The baptism of the Spirit is vital and follows water baptism and hence vitalizes the latter.

3rd. Baptism is vitally essential to salvation. What saith the Scriptures?

Matthew 28:19. In the last days of Jesus’ earthly sojourn he dealt only and surely with subject matter that was vital. His farewell command was the requisite for discipleship in that all nations were to be taught and baptized. No distinction of nations nor respect of persons was made, all were to be baptized.

Acts 2:38. Peter is the pentecostal preacher, fresh from a ten days’ prayer meeting in which he had been endued with power. As the people cried out under his powerful discourse and asked, "What shall we do?" he commanded them like his Master, to be "baptized for the remission of sins."

John 3:3-6. Here Jesus is confronted by the night disciple, Nicodemus, and discourses on regeneration. "Except a man be born again he can not see the kingdom of God," said Jesus, and except he be born of both water and the Spirit, he can not enter the kingdom of God. Note "born of water" and then "Spirit," the Quaker not excepted. Baptism is therefore vitally essential because seeing and entering the kingdom depends upon it.

Acts 3:41. Here we have the vital truth that those that are willing to receive the word joyfully submit to baptism. After all, it is a small thing to comply with after one has actually become ready to be a disciple. It looks big to "those that would climb up some other way," or those seeking a convenient religion and without authority would turn the kingdom of God into a dry cleaning establishment.

Romans 6:17-18. Here we have the doctrine of baptism mentioned in the context, and those baptized have been transformed from servants of sin to servants of righteousness.

Luke 6:16. Finally hear ye once more the voice of Jesus commissioning the disciples. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved and he that believeth not shall be damned." Here is sufficient scripture for the unbeliever and also for the professed believer who wants to escape baptism. You must believe and be baptized to be saved.

Now what have we? Baptism is vital as:

1. A requisite for discipleship.
2. For the remission of sins.

3. Entrance into the Kingdom.

4. Vital to those willing to receive and obey the Word.

5. Transformation of servants of sin to servants of righteousness.

6. Essential to salvation.

4th. The way to vitalize baptism is to baptize. We may be enthusiastic about the mode which is the how, or we may wax eloquent about the design which is the why, but the force of example in baptizing people is the best and most powerful of all arguments. This is true in the exact ratio that we receive our impressions through the eye as compared to the ear. There are certain other Brethren doctrines that can be explained but to practice them solves the problem of their intrinsic value best. Commune with us once, if you do not believe in the "Agape," the full meal, or wash feet with us and you too will testify that it is a most blessed service. So, better than the pugnacious and dogmatic controversy concerning baptism is to preach the gospel, have confessions, keep your baptistry soaked up so it, like your argument, will hold water. Make your church a saving institution. Keep baptizing people and I will predict that if you pass every conference year from fifty to one hundred through your baptistry, "immersion as baptism" will never need to be debated in your town. This is my last and even best solution of how to make baptism vital today. Don't argue it and have no applicants, administer it and it will need no defense; like the Word, it is its own and best commentary.

Lanark, Illinois.

WORK. By N. J. Paul

Jesus said: "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is called today" (John 9:4). God has a work in this world for each of his children to perform. Satan also has his work. Man casts his lot with one or the other of these two Masters. The church, an aggregation of individuals in the great cause of God, exists for but one purpose—the prosecution of the work of the Kingdom to the ends of the earth, and within the least possible time. When the church fully realizes her mission, then shall she go forth, "fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners." Jesus the great Master and pattern for us all, is the one with whom we should cast our lot with energetic purpose, realizing "the night cometh, when no man can work" (John 9:4). We find him already, at the age of twelve years, busy at his Father's business (Luke 2:49). To him working was more important than eating (Mark 3:20). Said he on one occasion, "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work" (John 4:34). His mission, as announced by himself, was, "to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10). With this same work he charged his followers, "As my Father hath sent me, even so I send you." He sometimes appealed to his works as evidences of his being the Son of God (John 5:36; 10:25). Just before he left the earth, in that great prayer to his Father, he could say, "I have glorified thee on earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do" (John 17:4). When we, like Jesus, realize the time of our departure is near, will we be able to look steady and unabashed into the face of him who shed his blood for us and say, "I have finished the work that thou gavest me to do?" The first question God asked of man was, "Where art thou?" (Gen. 3:9). To the discouraged prophet came the words, "What doest thou here, Elijah?" (1 Kings 19:13). In other words, "Why are you not at work?" In order to be faithful to the cause entrusted to us, we must be busily engaged in carrying on the Master's work.

Following Christ means a life of self-sacrifice and service. It requires a consecration of body and a willingness of spirit that will enable us to say with Paul, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Self must be left out of the consideration. When we serve self we become self-righteous, seeking our own and not the interest of him that called us.

The time to labor in the services of our Lord is NOW, while we live and have the opportunity. "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave" (Eccles. 9:10). Man in Eden had his work assigned to him (Gen. 2:15). Saints the true followers of Christ are all called unto good works (Eph. 2:10; Col. 1:10; 2 Cor. 9:8; 2 Tim. 5:10). Dear reader, after you have looked up and meditated upon these scriptures, can you not see with me that activity is necessary for the sake of Christian growth and development; that Christian growth only comes when we are at work in the vineyard of the Lord. If one did not exercise physically, could he become strong? And how, if we fail to exercise spiritually can we ever expect to become a full grown man in Christ Jesus? Complete consecration keeps us so busy, so close to the Lord; that we have no time to sit and talk about others or to complain about how little the church is doing. No, we even have not the time to look back. Moreover, you see, it is dangerous even to look back (Luke 9:62). Lot's wife looked back (Gen. 19:26).

True, we all have not the same gift; God has given us different gifts. But let us covet earnestly the best gift. In that which we can accomplish the greatest good for the Master let us work. Let us use what we have. Moses, a man not gifted in speech, is called out to one of the greatest tasks that history records. The Pharaoh was powerful, and Moses knew it.

While he was pondering the matter, a voice came to him, "What is that in thine hand? He was a shepherd; and held in his hand a shepherd's crook. That simple instrument, blest with divine power, became the mightiest instrument of freedom the world has ever known. Shamgar, the plowman, had no sword, nothing but an ox-goad. This instrument, about eight feet long, had a point at one end with which to urge on the lazy oxen; at the other end a chisel or shovel, which was used to clean the plowshare. With this simple instrument he slew of the Philistines, six hundred men (See Judges 3:31). You may not have eloquence, but you have a smile. You may not be able to make a powerful appeal, but you can set a consistent example. You can not give ten

(Continued on page 11)

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The Larger Friendship. By Miles J. Snyder

TEXT: Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I command you. John 15:14.

A new name is given here to the followers of Jesus Christ. And no prouder title can anyone have than to be called a friend of Jesus. It is not possible for human speech to frame a higher dignity than that; there is no other honor comparable with it. Of all the titled orders conferred by earthly kings and potentates there is none to rival this one. Compared with it, they are like artificial flowers in comparison with the sweet loveliness of the blossoms of the field.

And who are these friends? To whom does Jesus address these words? First, there were a couple of fishermen named John and James. He found them one day on the shore of the lake mending their nets. Then there were two others, Simon and Andrew, whom he found busy at their humble toiling. There was also a tax-gatherer; and a shy, retiring soul engaged in meditation under a fig tree. And, likewise, he found others. In fact, the glory of his friendship is this: he found his friends everywhere, among the learned and the ignorant, the high and the low, the rich and the poor; and they all, when they became the friends of Jesus, made up the new society destined to transform the world.

I want to speak to you this evening about the friendship of Jesus because we all need friendship. There is not a human being anywhere under the bending heavens that does not need a friend. Friendship is indispensable; it is a necessity of our common human nature. Once in a great while you may find a hermit or a recluse with an abnormal twist in his makeup who tries to get along without friendship, but these exceptions are notably rare and such are always objects of pity or scorn.

You have all heard the story of the famous man, who, being asked to state what had been the most important factor in his life, replied: "I had a friend." Who the friend was, what he did or said, how long that friendship lasted, was never revealed, but the impact of his influence was undying and shaped another life to greatness.

And of countless multitudes of lives this has been the secret! John Keats had a friend named Joseph Severn, who, in order to contribute to the poet's greatness, relinquished everything that would have made for his own advantage; and then, like a mother, nursed Keats through the years of his declining life and finally laid him in the grave. Alfred Tennyson had a friend named Arthur Hallam whose early death awakened in the poet new life and light, and through all his years the influence of that friend followed and animated him, and of it he wrote:

"Whatever way my days decline,
I felt and feel, though left alone,
His being working in my own—
The footsteps of his life in mine."

And Henry M. Stanley, the great African explorer and empire-builder, had a friend who in his youth found a poor, half-starved street urchin in New Orleans, and, recognizing latent possibilities in him, gave him a chance and thus made possible Stanley's great contribution in later life to the world's welfare.

Upon the graves of these, and many others great and good, it might fittingly be written in explanation of what they were and did: "He had a friend." In all such instances we see how large a part friendship plays in the direction and determination of human destiny.

Well, if friends are necessary to our highest good, if friendship is indispensable in our social life, it is a pertinent question to raise: What makes friends? What inspires friendship? Consideration of such questions leads to a recognition of the fact that friends and friendship depend upon obedience to spiritual laws, some of which follow:

First, there must be an openness of disposition. Some lives have their doors and windows closed and the sign, "No admission" put up. It is hard to make friends with that class of people, because they ignore one of the laws of friendship. They are not accessible; they keep you shivering in the ante-room and freeze you in the vestibule of their presence.

In the second place there must be responsive sympathy. A true friend is sympathetic. Your sorrow makes him sad, and your gladness gives a keener note to his rejoicing. He tries to put himself in your place and he feels what you feel. There must be a mutual need; a mutual purpose, a mutual goal in friendship brought about by a common sympathy.

Then, of course, there must be clarity. If there is to be friendship there must be judgment tempered with love. Instead of looking at faults and failures and emphasizing shortcomings, your friend looks for excellencies and virtues and seeks to encourage them; and always he is compassionate and forgiving and overflowing with mercy.

And the last and highest characteristic of human friendship is natural and unreckoned sacrifice. Some one has said that friendship is never really noble until on both sides it becomes unconsciously sacrificial. As Dr. Jovett once aptly expressed it: "A real friend bleeds for a real friend and never sees the blood." For David his friend, Jonathan sacrificed a throne, the good will of his father and family, the comforts of the royal palace, and exposed himself to hardship and danger and death. It is the measure of one's sacrifice in friendship that proves its reality and the depth of its love.

But, it is not my purpose tonight to talk to you primarily about human friendship and its laws and characteristics. My subject is "The Larger Friendship." Human friendship at its very best and purest has its limitations. Life is bigger than any human relationship, and so the relationship of friendship has its limitations, which may be physical or mental or temperamental. But, again, man's limitation is God's occasion; and so we find that only God through Jesus Christ can fully satisfy the hungry heart of man in the larger friendship of which I want to speak. All the limitations and losses of human friendship are designed to drive us to that larger friendship with Jesus Christ, to which he invites us in the text.

The mere statement of the text implies certain things which we should never forget. It implies in the first place the distinguishing feature of the Christian religion, which is that it is faith in a Person. In this it differs from all other religions of the world. Mohammedanism is founded upon a book, Buddhism upon a method, Confucianism upon a system, and Christianity upon a Person—Jesus Christ the Son of God.

But something more is implied in the text. If friendship with a Person must necessarily be recognized as continuously alive and present among men. We may admire and reverence the memory of any person in history, as Augustine, Savonarola, Luther, Wesley, Mack, Washington, Lincoln, but it would be sentimental nonsense to speak of those as our friends, whom we have never known and from whom the centuries separate us. But we delight to speak of Jesus Christ as our friend, and when we do it seriously that implies belief in him as a living Person in actual relationship with us today, capable of maintaining with us and we with him all that belongs to a true and genuine friendship, mutually recognized and mutually carried out.

But, furthermore, the characteristics of human friendship already mentioned are all found at their best in friendship with him. Jesus is always accessible, open to every cry of pain and need. His sympathy is wonderful and boundless. His love cannot be measured. And through his sacrifice we find pardon and atonement.

But, in rejoicing over the possibility of friendship with him, let us not overlook the demands of that divine friendship.

First, we must acknowledge him. We must not be ashamed of this friend. "Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of Man confess before the angels of God." And we must have abiding faith in him. "He that believeth in the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him."

Of course, faith in Christ must be more than intellectual assent to an historical fact. To believe in Christ means that we believe he was precisely what he claimed to be, namely, the Savior of the world. And it means that we believe he is the ONLY Savior. His claim is exclusive and tolerates no rivals. His name is the only name given under heaven among men whereby we must be saved. And furthermore, to believe in him is to receive him as our personal Savior. The fact that ten thousand times ten thousand souls have been saved by belief in him is nothing to me unless I can say, "MY Savior, MY Lord, MY God!"

Then, too, there must be more than acknowledgement and belief. There must be love. Friendship without love is only a name, and empty thing. And so, in testing the friendship of Peter, we hear Jesus put to him the three-fold question: "Lovest THOU me? Lovest thou ME? LOVEST thou me?" It is not enough to admire Christ as a great man, to emulate him as a good man, to revere him as the world's ideal man. Admiration, however sincere it may be, is not enough—in fact it is nothing! Many of the most sublime and glowing tributes of respect and admiration ever paid to the personal character of Jesus have been by those who made no profession of loyalty to him. No, the heart must be enlisted in love. The relation of the Christian to Christ must be that of the bridegroom to the bride.

And the last demand and conclusive proof of our friendship with Jesus is obedience. Faith without the works of obedience is dead; love without obedience is as vain as a tinkling cymbal. The Christian life is not the subscribing to a creed, nor the expression of emotions that voice themselves in loud amens and hallelujahs, but it is faith and love falling before Christ and saying, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" A life of doing the Lord's work, of obedience to God's will, is the true preparation for the life eternal. Unless in our daily lives we manifest ready and cheerful obedience to the teachings of Christ we are none of his. "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" "Ye are my friends if you do the things which I command you."

In view of these conditions and requirements, are we the friends of Christ? Have we entered into this larger friendship through confession and belief and love and obedience? This is your privilege and mine, and it is our only hope of a larger life and greater blessedness in the world to come. Only through Jesus can we have fellowship with the Father, and become heirs of heaven's glory. If we give Christ the submission of our hearts and the obedience of our lives, he will bless us with his abiding presence. We take him as our Savior, and he takes us as his friends.

It is this vital friendly relationship with Jesus Christ that invests our years with victory and blessedness. It gives joy and strength and peace in the present, and lights up the future with an immortal hope. And, if day by day we obey the laws of that larger friendship and cultivate it, we shall be able to say with the poet:

"I've found a Friend; O such a Friend!
He loved me ere I knew Him;
He drew me with the cords of love,
And thus He bound me to Him.
And round my heart still closely twine
Those ties which naught can sever,
For I am His and He is mine,
For ever and for ever.

I've found a Friend; O such a Friend!
So kind and true and tender,
So wise a Counselor and Guide,
So mighty a Defender.
From Him who loves me now so well,
What power my soul can sever?
Shall life or death or earth or hell?
No; I am His for ever!"

Milledgeville, Illinois.

OUR DEVOTIONAL

Consecration. Mrs. C. L. Anspach

OUR SCRIPTURE

And he went forward a little, and fell on his face and prayed, saying, My Father if it be possible, let this cup pass away from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt. Matt. 26:39.

OUR MEDITATIONS

As we read of this struggle in the garden we wonder what our destiny might have been had our Lord not surrendered his life absolutely and unreservedly to the Father. What of our Christian hope if Christ had said, Father all that I have, my power, my popularity, my silver and gold, all these things will I give, but Father, not my life? What would Christ's life mean to us with all its perfection without this crowning act? Was not this the primary purpose for which he was sent into the world? For God sent not the Son into the world to judge the world, but that the world should be saved through him (John 3:17). If then Christ was sent into the world with one supreme purpose, surely we who are made in his own image are not put here to wander aimlessly about.

There is a plan and purpose for every life and it is the duty of each individual, first to seek to know that plan, then, if we would be consecrated, we must give ourselves unreservedly to its unfolding.

How will this effect our daily living? In spite of the multiplied duties and diversions commanding our attention, consecration will hold us to a single and fixed purpose. We are determined with God's help to carry out his plan for our lives and to this our friends, our loved ones, our selfish aspirations and all else must be subservient. We can see that this will necessarily change one's living, as these things are commonly our first consideration. We may sometimes even be compelled to surrender those things which seem good in our own eyes, because we are only finite, and the Infinite sees farther ahead and says, It is not best.

Then too, if the whole life is consecrated to him, we can have more assurance that he is interested in our every act and word. If a task falls to the lot of a consecrated Christian that appears to be unimportant drudgery he need only to remember that God wills it, therefore, it is not unimportant. Ought this not be inspiring and comforting to the tired and weary mothers? Someone expressed this thought well when he said, "Who sweeps a room as in God's sight makes that and the action fine." Why should we not believe that God is interested in our every deed, when we are reminded that he notes the sparrow's fall?

It is fine to have noble thoughts and do noble deeds. It is fine to give one's life as did our Savior. But if all were

(Continued on page 11)

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Topic for May 4: Man Made in the Image of God.

By J. M. Tombaugh

The genealogy of Jesus as given by Luke, traces the life of Joseph through seventy-five generations, back to its fountain source, and ends with the significant words: "Which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God." God first, and all the world his offspring! However far man may have wandered, however low he may have fallen, there is yet this one thing left to dignify and ennoble mankind; God is his Teacher. It is expressly declared that God created man in his own image. It is true that sin has sadly disfigured and marred the image, but even centuries of wilful wrong doing have not wholly obliterated the divine likeness. Even in the fall there have been preserved some of the attributes and qualities which were transmitted to mankind from the heavenly Father.

Man is Godlike even in his ruin. Though his nature has become perverted, he still possesses the power of endless life. In his immortality he is like God. When all other created things shall grow old and perish and be no more, when the firmament shall be rolled up as a scroll, when the material universe shall pass away, and the earth and the works that are therein shall be burned up, man shall still be young in the years of eternity.

Another inheritance which we have received from our divine Father, and which shows our kinship to him, is the possession of a moral sense by which we not only distinguish between acts and courses of conduct as right or wrong, but which impels us to approve the right and condemn the wrong. Sin has never been able wholly to obliterate this faculty; it persists, and it is discovered in the most unlikely places. No adequate explanation for conscience can be found in human heredity or environment or in any other thing than in the fact that we are the offspring of God, and have derived from him something of his own nature.

Man possesses, too, in the main, a benevolent disposition with a desire to promote the general good of his fellow-men. He is not devoid of spirituality, and his possession makes him capable of intercourse and communion with God himself. Love and sympathy which are attributes of Deity, remain in man as marks of his origin in God. The same may be said of man's intellect; he has intelligence; he is capable of thinking and reasoning and willing. All of these qualities, and others as well, possessed by man in his fallen state, furnish proof not only that man is the offspring of God, but they testify to the fact that the spark of divinity is not wholly extinguished.

If any other proof were needed than the Bible statement of the fact that man was created by the direct act of God, and not evolved by a gradual ascent through countless ages of time from fish or frog or ape, that proof is furnished in full measure by a study of man's moral and spiritual endowment. The theory of evolution might account for physical man, though even here there is an essential link missing in the chain, but no theory that ever has been conceived is adequate to account for man as he is, the marvelous union of body, soul and spirit. The only explanation of man that is rational and satisfactory and complete, is that given in Genesis: "God created man in his own image." This conception of man's origin imparts a sense of moral dignity and worth. It emphasizes the feeling of human responsibility, and accountability to God. If man was not a direct creation of God, if he was a mere indirect development through slow processes by a gradual evolution from inferior orders of being, the mainspring of moral accountability is gone.

A lowered conception of man, implies a lowered conception of God and of our duty to him, hence it is important that we be constantly reminded of the dignity of our station as the direct offspring of God.

If so much of moral likeness to God has survived the fall, how perfect and how Godlike must have been man's state before sin entered the world.

The Bible presents three pictures of man's condition and character. They are very unlike, and yet all are true pictures. The first is a picture of man as he came fresh from the hand of God. Sin had not yet spoiled the spotless purity of his soul; he walked with God and communed with him in the pristine innocence of his unblemished character and life. Conscious of his righteousness and purity, he walked upright before his Creator, and found companionship in his presence. Then came a fateful day, a day whose black shadow still falls across the world. Sin entered, and death both physical and spiritual, came as the necessary concomitant of sin. This is the picture of man after the fall. The divine image has been blurred and marred; the indelible stain of sin has disfigured the whole human race. Man no longer seeks the companionship of God, but, conscious of his unworthiness and guilt, he hides away from God. Sin has depraved not only his understanding, but his speech, his will, his heart, his life and left him in what is called the state of nature."

But there is another picture. It is a picture of man renewed; of man an object of divine mercy, a subject of divine grace, and fitted for sharing once more the divine glory.

These different views of man's condition and character are widely dissimilar. We can, of course, only imagine the glory of the life of sinless perfection in which man was originally created, but the other two pictures may be visualized without any assistance from the imagination. One is the sinner unrenewed, unforgiven, spiritually dead in trespasses and sins. The other is the sinner saved; adopted into the family of God, clothed upon with the righteousness of Jesus Christ, made a new creature and fitted for righteousness and holy living. This last picture represents the child of God, born a second time and made in the image of Christ.

Of the original creation it was said: "God made man in his own image." But man, made in the image of God the Father, failed to preserve that likeness. He fell, and the holiness which had made him Godlike, he forfeited through sin. He became an outcast, an alien, a homeless wanderer. Christ the Savior came into the world to seek and to save that which was lost and declared that: "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." The penitent sinner comes to the Savior and by a definite surrender and act of faith, he receives him, and through the mysterious operation of God, he is born anew and becomes an adopted child of God, made in the image of Jesus Christ. All that had been lost in Adam's transgression is restored in Christ and we are exalted again to the station we had lost. But how much greater is our obligation to worship and serve, since now it is based on the double ground of creation and redemption.

Hagerstown, Maryland.

More and Larger Classes

Our teacher training classes are growing in number and size. Unfavorable conditions due to various causes have occasioned temporary delay, but the schools have not fully abandoned their plans for training classes this year.

Nappanee, Indiana

Some weeks ago Brother C. E. Kolb sent an urgent order for thirty copies of "The Educative Process in Religion." Although the communication did not say so, we surmise, that he is the teacher. Nappanee always makes good.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

More recently Brother Alva J. McClain ordered thirty-five copies of the same book. Later the class secretary, Miss Madge Hutt, sent in the class roster containing thirty-five names. To our knowledge this is the largest class in the brotherhood at the present time. Congratulations.

Hagerstown, Maryland

The latest order came from Hagerstown, in which Brother A. B. Cover requested twenty-four copies of our own book. At that writing he thought they would probably need an additional number. Those Marylanders may take first place. It is worth trying for, not alone for the honor but the increased efficiency which such a trained teaching force brings to the school.

Who'll Be the Next?

It is needless to say that we are delighted with these fine classes. What these schools are doing others may do in a larger or smaller way. Some are thus engaged at the present time and we will report their activities at an early date. We are particularly concerned about those schools that have no training work at all. Why not begin without further delay to train your own teachers? Who will be the next to report. J. A. GARBER.

WORK

(Continued from page 8)

thousand dollars to the support of the church, but you can give your all, even if it be but two mites. Your vocabulary may be very limited, but you surely are able to say an emphatic "Yes" or "No," that will save your soul and the souls of others for eternity.

A few things, however, are necessary to all and under all circumstances. In the last meeting on earth just before the Master blessed his disciples and ascended to heaven, he said, "Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high" (Luke 24:49). These disciples were not fully equipped for the work that was before them. Isaiah was unfit for the work before him until his lips were touched by a live coal from off the altar of God (Isa. 6:5-8). Thus you see plainly God can not use us in his service, until we are equipped with the Holy Spirit; the real medium and secret of power. It is given only to them that obey him (Acts 5:32), to those who are willing to "break down every idol, cast out every foe," in order that they may be filled with the Spirit. Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his (Rom. 8:9).

How broad, how comprehensive is our Lord's last commission to his followers,—"Go, teach, baptize, teach all nations, teach them to observe all things (not only such things as suit their taste) whatsoever I have commanded you;" and listen to the promise Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world (Matt. 28:19-20). The great work of inviting must go on to the end of the earth and to the end of time. "And the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world; what for? For a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. 28:14). Every faithful child of God is an ambassador for Christ, entreating the sinner to be reconciled to God (2 Cor. 5:20).

Seeing then, such a great field of opportunity before us, what shall be the reward of those who forsake all for the cause of their Master?" What shall we have therefore?"

(Matt. 19:27-29). "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23). Is not this a glorious promise? Is it not worth striving for. Are we preparing by our activity to inhabit that place the Lord has gone to prepare? Or are we trusting to him to do all of the work while we wait for the reward? "They that do his commandments" (Not they that believe, or have faith in his commandments), "may enter in through the gates into the city" Rev. 22:14). We shall be judged according to our works, not according to our belief: "The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then shall he reward every man according to his works (Matt. 16:27). "The Father. . . without respect of person judgeth according to every man's work" (1 Peter 1:17). "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were open: and another book was opened, which is the book of life, and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works" (Rev. 20:12). Remember, we will be judged according to our works, not according to our belief. The poet must have had this subject on her mind, when she penned those beautiful lines:

Work, for the night is coming
Work through the morning hours;
Work while the dew is sparkling,
Work 'mid springing flowers;
Work when the day grows brighter,
Work in the glowing sun;
Work, for the night is coming;
When men's work is done.—

In conclusion, the great question with me, is, will my work in life meet the approval of the great Judge? When we realize that it is he and he only, that can, upon the approval of our work here in this life, give us eternal life, should it not arouse us to a more consecrated service, and greater self-denial?

Losantville, Indiana.

Consecration

(Continued from page 9)

head what of the body and if all were hands what of the feet? Let us consecrate our lives to his service just as they are.

This does not mean a life of slavery as we think of slavery but instead a life of glorious and eternal freedom. When we remember that we have a perfect Master we need not question our servitude. He will always command what is best. St. Paul calls himself, "The slave of Jesus Christ," but meaning that he must not and wished not to do anything but what was pleasing to his Master.

It has been the experience of some consecrated people that it is impossible for them to make a sacrifice for their Master. Whatever they do with a view of making a sacrifice is so rich in returns that it can not be designated as such. And yet so few are willing to enlist in the life of service, else there would not be the scarcity of Christian workers that is so common. It is not a part of God's plan that children should go to Sunday school only to find no one prepared to teach them. Wherever this is the case, we may be sure that some one is not carrying out God's plan for his life. Too many Christians have to be drafted into service. How much better would it be if they would say as Christ said, "Not as I will, but as thou wilt," or with Frances Havergal, who wrote that beautiful hymn:

"Take my life, and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee.

Take my moments and my days;
Let them Flow in ceaseless praise.

Take my hands, and let them move
At the impulse of Thy love.

Take my feet and let them be Swift and beautiful for Thee.

Take my voice, and let me sing
Always, only, for my King.

Take my lips, and let them be Filled with messages from Thee.

Take my silver and my gold;
Not a mite would I withhold.

Take my intellect, and use
Every power as thou shalt choose.

Take my will and make it Thine,
It shall be no longer mine.

Take my heart, it is Thine own;
It shall be Thy royal throne.

Take my love; my Lord, I pour
At Thy feet its treasure-store.

Take myself, and I will be Ever, only, all for Thee."

OUR PRAYER

"O God, thou only refuge of thy children, who remainest true though all else should fail, and livest, though all else die, cover us now when we fly to thee, rebuke within us all immoderate desires, all unquiet temper, all presumptuous expectations, all ignoble self-indulgence, and feeling on us the embrace of thy Fatherly hand, may we meekly and with courage go into the darkest ways of our pilgrimage, anxious not to change thy perfect will, but only to do and bear it bravely."

Ashland, Ohio.

MISSIONS

The Need of Missionary Education. By Mrs. Grace P. Srack

The National Conference did a wise thing in sending Brother H. V. Wall to Kentucky last fall. The stereopticon lecture he gave for the World Wide Missionary Society of the Long Beach church from pictures that he took while there, was both interesting and instructive and the offering the night of the lecture, February 28th, with what has come in since, as a result of the lecture, totals about $111.

I tell you, Brethren, you who have supervision of our missionary enterprises, our people need instruction along missionary lines. We are densely ignorant of the need of our own fields of labor, saying nothing of our lack of knowledge of "The Field," which is the world.

People cannot be interested in what they know nothing about. It is impossible for us to "pray with the understanding" for things that we are not informed about.

Some of us know how hard it is to persuade people to read missionary books unless they are intensely interested in missions. Every church should have a missionary society for educational purposes.

Every one who has the spirit of Christ must of necessity have a love for missions, for our Lord was pre-eminently missionary. When the church at large is properly instructed; when she will "Lift up her eyes and look on the field," the money will be forthcoming, for Christians will give to work they are really interested in.

Brethren, have you ever taken a birds' eye view of the importance (?) given to foreign missions in district and National Conferences of the Brethren church? How about your district conferences in the past? What about the future? Now take a magnifying glass and search the minutes of the last National Conference. If you love missions, if your heart aches for the unreached millions dying in darkness because we have failed to obey him whom we call Lord, I know you will almost weep: God forgive us and help us to wake up to our own shortcomings.

I wonder why there are not more missionary societies in our brotherhood. Of course some departments of nearly every church probably have more or less missionary activities, but it is secondary and nothing like what there ought to be or our beloved denomination would never dream of a four year goal of 40 cents per member; it ought to be more like $4.00 per.

The Long Beach church has a World Wide Missionary society, the sole object of which, since its organization, four months after dedication of the church, has been to enlarge our vision and increase our interest and knowledge of missionary activities, needs of the heathen world and the obligation of the church. This year we have a mission study class of about 20 or more members, studying Africa; we have very interesting times together in this study.

Our three Christian Endeavor societies have their missionary departments; then our Sunday school is active in missionary lines. Now with no spirit of bragging—for we are not touching our duty, let alone our privilege,—let me remind you that in 1918 Long Beach was at the top of the ladder both as to amount given and amount per capita in the Easter offering. Our pastor is a missionary pastor, but many other pastors also are real missionary in spirit and in teaching. Don't we wish they all were? We believe that our missionary propaganda has been very helpful, to say the least, in opening our purses through a greater understanding of the great need.

Let us "Lift up our eyes and look on the fields" by studying the need of at least our own fields of activity, Kentucky, South America and now Africa, dear, dark, dying Africa; that stupendous task that we are attempting for God; but, glory to his name! it is also with God.

We need more letters from our missionaries that will make us see conditions as they see them.

Dear ones on the field, give us pen-pictures of your people and their lives, and what the Gospel is doing for them. Read "Mary Slessor of Calabar" and "Bolenge," and make things real to us as Mr. Livingston and Mrs. Dye do.

Really, I believe we all want to "let this mind be in us that was also in Christ Jesus," to wake up and be interested in what he gave his life for, to take a real hold of the work by our prayers, our purses and our sympathy. Please help us to understand.

Long Beach, California.

Letter from a Little Missionary

Brazzaville, French Equatorial Africa,

Jan. 22nd, 1919.

My Dear little Friends:

Another month has passed by since I wrote to you, and I have had an experience of suffering. After the epidemic of Spanish influenza had passed by and I had suffered only mildly with it, then I had an attack of malaria. It was slight, but it made me weak, and mamma says the germs of influenza were still in my little body, and overcame me completely. I was very sick in bed for a week, and very, very cross indeed, especially at night. I kept almost everybody busy. Daddy took most of the care of me at night, and Aunt Toddy by day. Mamma was doctor and house-keeper and relief nurse. The very first thing, I was annoyed. I couldn't understand why Uncle Will (Mr. Haas) put the oil on my head and prayed so earnestly to Jesus to make me well. And then daddy and mamma and Aunt Toddy prayed too. Although for four days I got worse instead of better, still, we all believed Jesus would make me well. And now every day we ask him to make me strong again. I know that Jesus will make me strong soon, for he hears our every prayer. Mamma says I am as light as a feather, but I am sure she doesn't quite mean that, for she never seems afraid I will blow away.

Marie and Julia haven't come yet. Every day I look for them, talk about them, pray for them, and love them in anticipation. Every night I dream about them, and we three little girls shall be so happy together. Some day, too, Jesus will send a boat, and we shall all go to Ubangi-Shari together. What wonderful things we shall be able to write you then!

It is strange to hear so many languages. Of course I hear French, and talk it a little. Then I hear our boys talking among themselves in their own language—Bakongo. So I pick up from them words that papa and mamma don't understand, as they are not studying and do not use Bakongo, but Sango, the language of many in Ubangi-Shari, who do not know Jesus. Of course I talk Sango to the boys and the toads and all living things, these not being white, could not, of course, understand English. But when Marie and Julia come I shall talk English to them. Daddy and mamma and Aunt Toddy want to talk with Marie and Julia's daddy and mamma in French, but mamma says there are so many things they want to ask, and so many things they want to say that they are afraid only the English language will be sufficient.

It is the rainy season now, and when the big storms come in the evening, I like to be snug and warm in my little bed, for our house is very open, and it is very easy to be chilled. When they come in the morning or in the afternoon, I wear my little red coat, which looks as warm as it feels. Jesus is very good to us to give us so many blessings and to provide for our every need. We thank him every day for his wonderful loving kindness, and rejoice that he has called us to tell the black boys and girls in Ubangi-Shari about himself. How happy we shall be to go!

Your little friend, MARGUERITE.

WHY THE BRETHREN CHURCH BELIEVES IN MISSION WORK

1. Because she owes her existence to missionary effort, she was established that way.

2. Because she acknowledges Christ alone to be her Master and the Bible to be her only creed which enjoins missions.

3. Because she believes that in order to live up to and hold her God-given name, Brethren, she must obey him who is Master and proclaim him to the lost sheep of the House of Israel: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations." For this reason the Mission Board has wisely set aside April 20th, Christ's resurrection day on which the pastors of the various congregations are to take offerings to carry forward this sacred work.

May God bless the day and the people that a liberal offering may be had to bear the tidings of mercy to the perishing.

J. H. SWIHART.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

LAKE ODESSA, MICHIGAN

We closed our three weeks revival meeting on March the 9th, which we held by God's help. We had very good success considering the condition of the roads. The mud was deep, but in spite of that the people came. We had seven confessions and one renewal. We have baptized five and received them into the church. There are three more to be baptized. The Brethren were all willing to put their shoulders to the old Gospel wagon. They certainly did fine for a church which has been so long without a pastor. We had good singing by the chorus choir which was very faithful. They laid everything aside and went into the work with a full determination of winning souls for Christ.

We were not here long until we could see that the people had not forgotten what Brother Grisso had preached to them. They are surely free givers, as you will see by our offering for the superannuated minister's fund which was sixty-five dollars. We have mission day the first Sunday in each month and on April the 6th, the offering was $21.32. We can make some of the large churches step aside when it comes to giving. We have a real live Sunday school under the leadership of our superintendent Brother Lester Miller. The teachers all seem very enthusiastic in doing their part. They are very seldom absent.

We are striving to fill out a part of the Four Year Program this year, so Michigan will not get another yellow streak this fall at General Conference.

We will hold our regular communion on Saturday, May the 24th, and all Brethren are cordially invited to attend.

Will close, asking the prayers of the Brethren.

Fraternally yours,
M. V. GARRISON, Pastor.

GOSHEN, INDIANA

On last Wednesday evening a goodly number of the brethren and sisters of the Goshen Brethren church met to transact business. If we remember correctly there were one hundred and sixty-four present. A fine spirit prevailed during the entire session. A number of officers who had served the church well were re-elected. Among the number were Brethren Duker, Menaugh, Trimmer and Sharp. Miss Hamman our worthy pianist was continued. Even the corresponding secretary was re-elected ("With an increase of salary"). Well, if the Editor will be patient and correct all my mistakes and the church willing to overlook my blunders, I will do the best I can. But my candid opinion is that every pastor should, at least once or twice a year, give a writeup of the work of the congregation he serves. There have been fifteen or more added to the church in the past quarter, most of them heads of families. Both the attendance at church and Sunday school has been very good the past quarter; the attendance at Sunday school today was four hundred. Arrangements were made by Brother Culp to have a picture of the Men of the Sunday school, after the lesson this morning. The artist lined up a hundred or more, (the rent will follow).

Our pastor, Brother McInturff was called to serve the church another year. Our spring communion will be April 27 if arrangements can be completed. We expect to have a week's meeting leading up to communion service. An invitation to all who wish to attend is extended.

M. E. HORNER,
Corresponding Secretary.

ALTOONA, PENNSYLVANIA

It is with much pleasure that we read the report of the work of the churches each week, but feel that it is time we are heard from. This report will cover a year ending March 31st. We shall be brief. Our annual business meeting was held recently and was presided over by Brother L. Z. Kephogle. Brother Kephogle is a business man but not too busy to work for the church. As moderator and Sunday school superintendent he is rendering a valuable service.

The reports as read by the various officers at the recent business meeting show progress in spite of the hindrances and losses. Church was closed during October on account of the influenza. Arrangements had been made for communion the first Sunday in October, and while the service was held later, it was with a reduced attendance. There was much sickness among our people during the fall and early winter months. Loss in membership by death during the year, ten; loss by letter, two. Some of these were pillars; they were among our best workers. It is to us a great loss.

But the Lord has in many ways blessed us and to him we give thanks. There is always the other side—the blessing side. As we love to sing here, "Every cloud has a silver lining." There have been gains; there has been progress. In some respects this has been our greatest year. Members have been added,—three by baptism, two by letter and two reclaimed. It has been a year of spiritual growth and development. This is in part due to more efficient organization. The auxiliaries did splendid work; there were Teacher Training and Mission Study classes. More missionary instruction has been given from the pulpit. If the church at home is to live, the theme of the preaching must be the "Go ye," of the Gospel.

Financially, this congregation "went over the top." More money was raised than in any year in the church's history. Every apportionment to the mission boards has been met; Brother Beachler visited us in July and the congregation gave to Ashland nearly three times the amount necessary to reach goal eight; the local expenses were much higher than any previous year, yet the reports showed a surplus in every treasury. Perhaps there is a relation between spiritual growth and financial success. Perhaps we have had more at home, because we have given more to others. The financial obligations for the present year are still greater.

A two weeks' revival in February resulted in much good to the church and to the preacher. This was my third evangelistic effort in this congregation; was never better supported by the membership than in this meeting. Yes, we closed too soon. I have a conviction and have made a resolve. If evangelism is to be successful, we must begin to plan earlier and continue longer. Plans are already being made for next fall. The writer assisted Brother Hall and his good people at Martinsburg in a meeting just recently. This meeting has been reported by the pastor, but I will add a word. I held a meeting there two years ago. These folks are loyal and true though few in number. The hospitality of this people is difficult to excel. I was entertained, as before, in the home of Brother and Sister Fred Klepser. Brother and Sister Edward Byers, who are doing a great work in the establishing of a college, rendered valuable service. The choir from my own congregation was present on Friday evening of the first week; the local high school attended in a body on Thursday evening of the second week. Yes, it was a great meeting, but again, we closed too soon.

As we review the past, our hearts are filled with gratitude. God has wonderfully blessed us. The writer has just recently experienced another substantial increase in salary. The membership "stormed the parsonage" at Christmas time and left a very generous donation and a number of personal gifts. But greater than these are the things of the Spirit. Harmony prevails among the members and the best of feeling exists between pastor and people. We have dreams of greater things for the Brethren in this city. May we ask an interest in your prayers. "Prayer unlocks God's infinite power." W. C. BENSHOFF.

NORTH MANCHESTER REVIVAL

It has been the most extended one I ever got into. We began in January and finished—well, quit trying the 30th of March. We had tried to have Thomas, the Welsh evangelist; Elmer C. Miller, the South Bend, Union man; A. O. Newlin, the Winona Union man; McInturff, pastor-evangelist of Goshen and finished with Thomas for three weeks and Newlin, the last week. Fact is, we did try to go, as best we could for four weeks. All the while condition of roads and health made it all but impossible for the farmer-folk of which we have a splendid constituency, to attend. "Flu" that had been dormant for weeks broke out to the tune of forty cases in a small town near ours, two days before we started the last time. The health officer came that morning and asked me if I thought it was expedient. I said we shall go as long as we can. Thomas was in the pulpit and I myself leading what remnant of a choir we could muster in the singing. With more mud and rain than we had had for months, we waded in and on. Thomas preached great sermons. It is a travesty that more of our large churches do not invite a preacher of such worth to help them in evangelistic services when we have so few in the work of evangelism. More churches could be having the increase the Four Year Program demands if they would but try. Not long ago, on the Program page, I said any church can have a revival any time if they will but meet the conditions. Now, I can go one better and say that even if conditions are not all they should be, great good can be done. We have to date forty confessions, nearly all being new converts. Many are from the Sunday school but some are right from the older people of the community who never have, or for a long time have not been identified with the church. It was a great time of joy to see the many young people of the Sunday school come flocking home to God and thus attain the chief purpose of the Sunday school. It was a great time of rejoicing to see folks who have been attending the services of the church for months, finally align themselves with us to work for the Master. The end is not yet. We shall have good things to report from time to time resultant of this work of grace. Till that time, anon.

A Debate

The discussions of the Men's Bible class are often cut off by the ringing, too soon, of the superintendent's bell. It was so with the lesson on the "Ten Commandments." One proposed that we discuss it at the monthly business session. A counter proposal was that we have a regular debate on "Resolved: that the Ten Commandments were never more seriously violated than now." With the help of men outside of town, we had a most happy and profitable time. The crowd filled our large auditorium and the impression left was that all would be glad to have such debates often. They are, if engaged in in the proper spirit, very profitable and entertaining. I commend such debates to other men's classes.

CHARLES A. BAME.

LANARK, ILLINOIS

On Sunday, February 23rd, 1919, the dedicatory services of our new church home were held. The day dawned fair although the recent snow made neither sleighing nor autoing possible, but still the people came. At ten o'clock the Sunday school auditorium was full, the new class rooms were taxed to their capacity and when the report was made we found a good answer to the question: "What do you want with more room?" For there were nearly 400 in Sunday school with an offering of $18.00.

Promptly at eleven o'clock the audience had filled both auditoriums on the first floor. The audience was provided with the dedication booklet containing the day's program. The choir loft seated 34 singers and after congregational singing the choir rendered the anthem, "I Will Extol Thee," and the men's chorus sang "The Lord is in His Holy Temple."

At this time Rev. Wm. H. Beachler delivered the sermon of the hour upon the subject, "The Lordship of Christ." It was just one of the only kind of sermons Brother Beachler delivers, so I need not say more than that it was characteristically good.

Pledges were received amounting to $7,000. The afternoon service was one of fellowship with the other churches in town, the pastors being present and each felicitating appropriately for the occasion. The choir sang the "Hallelujah Anthem" and pledges amounting to several hundred again received.

At the evening service the church was thrown into one great auditorium seating 800 people and practically every seat was occupied including the balcony. It was a grand climax to a perfect day. The audience sang with great spirit and the choir sang "Sing Praises." Brother Beachler spoke upon the theme "God's Cure for a Sick World." This was a timely and exceptionally forceful discourse. The formal dedicatory service had not yet been read and it was announced that it would not be until the $10,000 had been raised. Suffice it to say, our friends were there; members of the church doubled their pledges, prosperous farmers and business men gave with a fine determination to go over the top, and over we went, so this church was really dedicated free of debt. The trustees did not assume the indebtedness to make such a claim, it was actually done, and it now has practically all been cashed.

The dedicatory service was read and a great day was done. What was really done, you must come and see to appreciate. But a descriptive word may help you to realize how commodious is our new home. The lecture room was left unchanged save interior decorating and lighting. The main church auditorium was reversed in its seating, the floor torn up and a hard wood, elevated floor relaid. The pulpit and choir loft are now one, much enlarged and at the south side instead of the north. An alcove is built in for the piano and a fine recess is back of the pulpit. All decorating is new as well as a fine scenic indirect lighting system installed. To this part of the church on the north was built a modern Sunday school auditorium consisting of three large class rooms in the balcony, four on the first floor and an audience room the entire width of the building to be used by the men's class and the social room of the church. The seating is in fine folding chairs corresponding to the other wood work. These class rooms are completely divided and closed by flexible rolling doors. This auditorium is separated from the main church auditorium by a partition of ten folding doors. The lighting is the same as before mentioned and a vestibule entrance on the west is the main entrance to both auditoriums. The extreme dimensions of the present building are 52x98 feet. The seating capacity is 800, the cost $10,000. It was completed, paid for and built in war times, so we have come up through great tribulation but it has been worth while.

A Word Historical

The First Brethren Church of Lanark originated from the Bethlehem country church as also did Milledgeville. In 1884, the church was organized by H. R. Holsinger with eight charter members. The congregational church was purchased and revivals were held by J. H. Werst, R. F. Malott, Debolt and Stephen H. Bashor. Pastors who have served up to the present time are: J. W. Beer, W. D. Furry, W. A. Welty, J. H. Knepper, L. G. Smith, D. F. Eikenberry and Z. T. Livengood. Brother Livengood was the shepherd of this flock for 25 years in all and now is a member of the church and, a teacher in the Sunday school as well as assistant superintendent. I am sure we all know that much credit is due him for his careful shepherding of this people through the years.

B. T. Burnworth is the present pastor, rounding out the fifth year and already having received a unanimous call for the sixth and accepted. One hundred and fourteen have been added to the membership during the present pastorate.

This church is prepared to do a splendid work in the future, and with 250 in Sunday school yesterday, April 13, it looks as though they are not only able but willing. We don't care to build another church in war times, but now it is done and we praise God who giveth the victory.

ROANOKE, VIRGINIA

The work here is still moving toward the goals of our PROGRAM. Attendance and interest is increasing at all services. Our Bible school and Christian Endeavor, maintain their Front Line standing. The S. S. C. E. is rapidly moving toward Banner standing. With our home force, we have planned an Easter week campaign for "Enlistment-Service," this will be for and in the interest of the membership but evangelism will not be forgotten. We will use "Enlistment-Service" cards for each individual member and hope to awaken new interest. The first goal of our Four Year Program suggested this to the writer, and we believe that all the other goals should be the OUTGROWTH of the first one. We will close this campaign with a communion service, Easter evening at 6 P. M., and a message at 8 P. M. A general invitation is extended to all who can be with us at this service.

L. G. WOOD, Pastor.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA BIBLE CONFERENCE

Since our churches have been closed for several months on account of the "flu," it was decided by the pastors, after prayerful consideration, to hold an all day Bible Conference and convene all the churches of our district in a day of prayer and Bible study, and thereby through the power and influence of the Holy Spirit energize our members for the great work that God has given them to do.

The conference was held March 6th in the First Brethren church of Los Angeles. The themes and speakers were as follows:

"The Bible God's Inspired Word," A. V. Kimmell. "The Deity of Christ," Sylvester Lowman. "The Resurrection of Christ," J. C. Beal. "The Atonement," N. W. Jennings. "The Second Coming of Christ," W. S. Bell.

These messages were so heartily received and thoroughly enjoyed by all of the great number present, that it was unanimously decided by the conferences that the messages should be sent to the "Evangelist" for publication, that its readers might enjoy the spiritual feast with us.

On this day was born an organization known as THE EVANGELISTIC AND BIBLE STUDY LEAGUE, a movement which to a large extent originated in the hearts of some of the laity of our district. A committee composed of A. V. Kimmell, W. S. Bell, A. E. Neher, T. J. Steves and Henry V. Wall drafted the constitution for the organization, which was presented and adopted by the conference.

While this organization had its birth in an humble way, as has been stated it may be that God will bless it and make it a blessing to the whole brotherhood. It was so heartily endorsed and supported by our members, that many suggested it ought to be a national movement, with its officers distributed throughout the brotherhood. At present we are waiting upon the Lord for guidance as to further selection of officers, that are to direct this movement to the success that it should attain. The present officials are as follows:

A. V. Kimmell, President; J. C. Beal, Treasurer; Henry V. Wall, Secretary; N. H. Nielsen, Director; A. E. Neher, Director; T. J. Steves, Director; W. S. Bell, Director.

The object and purpose of the League is expressed in a portion of the Constitution as follows:

CONSTITUTION OF THE EVANGELISTIC AND BIBLE STUDY LEAGUE PREAMBLE

Realizing the apostasy now threatening Christendom, in this age of Bible criticism, when thousands of church members are being swept into the fads and frauds of religious movements; with a dearth of spirituality in the churches and a growing indifference to the claims of the Gospel, we as members of THE EVANGELISTIC AND BIBLE LEAGUE feel bound, with our claims of a whole Bible and a whole Gospel, to put forth a special effort in leading men back to the Word of God and anchoring their faith to the Rock, Christ Jesus, and thus reaching forth to save lost men.

ARTICLE I.—NAME

This organization shall be called The Evangelistic and Bible Study League.

ARTICLE II.—PURPOSE

In addition to the general outline in the Preamble we agree to promote and encourage Evangelism and Bible study in the churches.

Section 1. EVANGELISM: This part of the work shall be carried on by having a Field Secretary and other workers, who shall hold meetings in the churches where arranged, and who will also give consideration to, and make provision for our weak churches, which otherwise might not be able to hold special meetings.

Section 2. BIBLE STUDY: The conducting of Bible classes in connection with the before-mentioned meetings, also by correspondence, using the Bible as the text book, thus promoting the interests of our churches as well as defending the doctrines and claims of our Lord as revealed in his Word.

Section 3. INSTITUTES: The arranging of plans, dates and other matters in connection with holding Bible Institutes in Conference Districts, or among groups of churches, or in the individual church.

ARTICLE III.—MEMBERSHIP

Section 1. Members of the Brethren church, in good standing, may become members of this League by signing a covenant declaring their belief in the verbal inspiration of the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, as originally given of God, that they are the infallible record of the perfect, final, and authoritative revelation of God's will, altogether sufficient in themselves as a rule of faith and practice.

Section 2. An annual membership fee of one dollar ($1.00) shall be paid to the secretary. A life membership may be obtained by the payment of one hundred dollars ($100.00).

The constitution is too long to publish it all in this article, but will be mailed to all asking for same.

Further information will be gladly furnished from the undersigned by request.

H. V. WALL, Secretary,
200 South Grand Avenue, Long Beach, Cal.

THE NORTHERN CHURCHES OF CALIFORNIA

I have just returned from a Bible Institute and Conference held by the churches of the Northern California District in Manteca. This district is composed of four churches, located in the San Joaquin Valley. The church at Turlock is the largest, having a membership of 200. Brother Roger Darling served this church for many years and is held in esteem by the members. Brother Francis Reagan accepted the pastorate last fall and is doing a great work. Turlock is a town of about 6,000 and is located in a fertile and productive district. The church is well located and recently purchased a parsonage. The work here has a promising future, and with Reagan at the helm, we expect big things.

The church at Lathrop is the oldest Brethren church on the coast. It is located about 35 miles north of Turlock, 10 miles from Stockton and 70 miles from San Francisco. This is the home of the Walfe family. The building here is a union church, but occupied and controlled by the Brethren. The membership is 106, but a large number of these are living in adjacent towns. The church here, with Ripon and West Colony has recently been combined in being cared for by one pastor. Brother Leatherman, who came west last spring, has been selected as pastor and is doing acceptable work. This is his first charge, and he gives promise of being an able leader and minister.

Ripon is about midway between Turlock and Lathrop; it is a small town like Lathrop, but surrounded with a rich farming section. We own our church building here and Brother Leatherman lives at this place. The membership is small, consisting of 40 names, the work has had its hindrances but the people are hopeful and with Brother Leatherman on the job, the prospect was never brighter.

The West Colony church is located in the country. While the church building is dedicated to the Brethren church, there is no church organization as yet. They have a good Sunday school, and it is a field that has a future for development. The work here was developed under the faithful ministry of Brother Wesley Platt, who has been several years working under great handicaps in ministering to this group of churches. And he is to be commended for his faithfulness, loyalty and sacrifice for the work. He, as well as his wife, are loved by all.

The Jenny Lind church was burned. The membership is scattered, but God has some of the most faithful here. It was a privilege to visit in the home of Elder Jacob Shank and his wife and to find a family so loyal to the cause. It was their daughter, Ida, who for a time taught in Lost Creek, Kentucky.

The Conference and Work at Manteca

This little group of churches, outclassed any district conference I ever attended in the East. The Bible Institute was a grand success; addresses and lectures were well received. I am impressed that our conferences in the East could be made more effective with Bible Institute work.

The business was transacted with unity. The preaching of the Word of God brought conviction and sinners were saved.

They literally captured the Devil's fort in that the place of convention was called the Palace of Amusement. The chorus occupied the stage, the speaker's platform had steps made from beer cases, the secretary had a poker table for a stand, the audience was seated on the dance floor. The ladies' dormitory occupied the bowling alley, and the men's dormitory was located in the pool room. The chart talks by A. V. Kimmell were given with a billiard cue for a pointer. The Cafeteria was used for our meals. Now if that is not capturing the Devil's fort and turning his own guns on himself, I miss my guess.

Manteca has had a wonderful growth in the last two years and will make a good town. It is only a few miles from the other churches of this district and was selected for the convention with the hope that a movement would be made to build a church here and establish our work. This materialized as $5,000 in cash and pledges were made at the conference for the work and Brother Platt, whose home is here, was called to take charge of the work and give all his time to this field.

Formerly, the few Brethren here worshipped in a union church, which Brother Platt served for several years. This has not been satisfactory. Before 1920, we can expect to hear of a new Brethren church in Manteca.

I am greatly impressed with the spirit of giving and doing of the people in California. Every church is being cared for by competent, consecrated men of God. The field is large and promising. I enjoyed meeting at this conference Brother Roger Darling, whom I had known and worked with in former years. His home is in San Jose, where we have several members and some day expect to see a Brethren church. Brother Darling ranks among our leading men as a preacher, and he expects after another year to give part of his time to evangelistic work.

An Announcement

After prayerful consideration, I have decided to give my time after September first, to evangelistic work for a year, and leave my family on the coast. The Dayton church has granted my request to be released from the pastorate there. So, any church desiring my service for evangelistic meetings should write to me early for arrangements and date. My address will be, 602 Stanley Avenue, Long Beach, California, until June first. We are co-operating in a tabernacle meeting in Long Beach through this month and will follow with a campaign in our own church in May.

W. S. BELL.

COMMUNION NOTICES

The First Brethren church of Louisville, Ohio, will observe the Holy Communion on Sunday evening, May 4, at 7 o'clock. This will be the last communion service of this church at which we will officiate and we are hoping for a large attendance of the members. Neighboring Brethren and others who can conscientiously observe the Brethren communion are invited to attend.

GEO. S. BAER, Pastor.

Holy Communion will be observed by the First Brethren church of Altoona, Pennsylvania, on Sunday evening, May 4th, at 7 o'clock. Brethren of neighboring churches are invited to come and enjoy this service with us. All members are urged to attend.

W. C. BENSCHOFF, Pastor.

The church at Portis, Kansas, will observe their spring communion on Sunday evening, May 11. The isolated members and all others are urged to be present.

ROY BRUMBAUGH, Pastor.

BUNKER HILL, INDIANA

We will begin our revival effort at the Corinth church at Twelve Mile, Indiana, on the eleventh of May. We will begin it, but very soon thereafter Brother A. T. Wirick, who is now in Florida, will be present to continue the meeting. Brother Wirick was pastor of this church five years previous to his going south, and it is with great joy that we look to his return and co-operation with us in a revival. The meeting will be followed by our regular spring love-feast, to which we invite all those who can attend. C. A. STEWART.

REPORT OF SPOKANE BUILDING FUND.
Beginning September 16, 1918.

N. W. Jennings,	$ 15.00
National S. S. C. E.,	30.00
Mrs. D. J. Hurley,	5.00
Russel Humbert,	15.00
Mrs. Ella Fudge,	25.00
Philathea S. S. Class, Sunnyside, Wash., ..	30.00
Nancy Haines,	2.00
Mahlon Peck,	3.00
Mrs. Edwin C. Hackett,	3.00
Vienna Hackett,	2.00
Elizabeth Gagey,	10.00
Mrs. H. J. Frantz,	5.00
Mrs. Robert Boring,	5.00
Hattie Ireland,	10.00
A family in Turlock, Calif.,	12.50
Vina Snyder,	25.00
Rachel Benschoff,	5.00
Nancy Haines,	3.00
Mrs. E. C. Hackett,	5.00
Ellen G. Lichty,	15.00
Vianna Detwiler,	12.00
Orion Bowman, Bal in Spokane Building Fund, 11-27,	70.50
Mrs. Hattie Ireland,	20.00
Nancy Haines,	3.00
Mrs. E. C. Hackett,	2.00
D. W. Early,	30.00
Nancy Haines,	3.00
First Breth. Ch. Long Beach, Cal., ..	10.00
Samuel Cook,	5.00
Mrs. E. C. Hackett,	5.00
Lillie Warren,	5.00
Mrs. J. E. Peck,	5.00
Austin Miller,	20.00
Nancy Haines,	3.00
Mrs. E. C. Hackett,	3.00
Nancy Haines,	3.00
1st. Breth. S. S., Los Angeles, Cal., ..	10.13
Mrs. D. J. Hurley,	5.00
Israel and Rebecca Penrod,	10.00
Total since Sept. 16, 1918,	$456.13

For all these gifts from the generous hearts who have given these offerings we are doubly grateful. We only seek to be worthy of the confidence and trust in us and our work here. We prayerfully seek to be faithful and wise stewards of that which is the Lord's. To all those who have sent in $30 or more we have sent one of our bonds. If any are entitled to a bond and have not yet received one, let us know at once that we may rectify our mistake.

This leaves approximately $2,000 of the $2,500 which the brotherhood at large is going to assist us with, still to come. Now is the time to send it in, Brethren. Now is the time when we need it, for now we are facing the heaviest load in actual completion. May God bless you for all your prayers and assistance, I am, Respectfully, R PAUL MILLAR.

Business Manager's Corner

"GO WORK IN MY VINEYARD"

The greatest opportunities for acquiring wealth seem to be found in developing undeveloped fields and undeveloped industries. Fortunes are usually made by getting in on the "ground floor." We have found this same principle to exist in the field of endeavor as we have sought to enlarge the subscription list of the Evangelist. There have been many undeveloped fields in the brotherhood. Many churches have not really been worked for a number of years, and some of them seem never to have been worked at all. While there are many fields that have been cultivated with an ordinary degree of faithfulness that have in the last two years shown a wonderful growth of Evangelist enthusiasm, and our list has grown largely through the more intense methods of cultivation, yet there are still many congregations that furnish virgin soil for a campaign of this kind.

One of the most noticeable victories of recent weeks was that at Maple Grove, or the Eaton, Indiana, church. Brother J. L. Kimmel is pastor here as well as at Muncie. The Muncie church has already won its honors for the second year, and now Brother Kimmel has brought the Maple Grove church to the Honor Roll with an increase of practically EIGHT HUNDRED percent in the subscription list. Of course, had the original list been large, it would have been impossible to have done this, but there are many more churches where the list of subscribers is so small that it would be possible to increase it from two hundred to eight hundred percent. These are the fields we must reach, if we are to win our goal of FIVE THOUSAND before our financial year closes in July.

Better Days

We well remember some of the words of one of the songs we sang in High School thirty years ago, a part of the chorus ran thus—"Sing tra la la la la la, there are better days before you," and we confidently believe there are "better days" before us in all the work of the church, especially in the publishing interests of the church, and we think we can announce several surprises to the brotherhood within a few weeks. Some of our brethren and some of our congregations are getting desperate and if they do not win a place on the Honor Roll it will not be because they have not tried. We are always glad to learn of the churches that are making a sincere attempt to win these honors and we are willing to do anything we can to help them win for we glory in the successful achievements of any of our churches.

R. E. TEETER,
Business Manager.

EVANGELIST HONOR ROLL

The following churches having met the requirements laid down by the Brethren Publishing Company regarding the placing of the Evangelist in the homes of the congregations are entitled to a place on the Evangelist Honor Roll:

Church	Pastor
Akron, Ind., (New Highland), D. A. C. Teeter
Allentown, Pa., 2nd Yr.,	A. L. DeLozier
Ankenytown, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	A. L. Lynn
Ashland, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	J. A. Garber
Beaver City, Nebr., 2nd Yr.,	(Vacant)
Berlin, Penna.,	I. B. Trout
Berne, Indiana, 2nd Yr., ...	W. F. Johnson
Bryan, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	G. L. Maus
Burlington, Ind., 2nd Yr., ...	W. T. Lytle
Carleton, Nebr., 2nd Yr., ...	J. D. Kemper
Clay City, Indiana,	Geo. W. Kinzie
College Corner, Ind., 2nd Yr.,	Homer Anderson
Conemaugh, Pa., 2nd Yr.,	L. G. Smith
Darwin, Indiana,	W. T. Lytle
Dallas Center, Iowa,	R. F. Porte
Denver, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	L. A. Myers
Dutchtown, Indiana,	Homer Anderson
Elkhart, Indiana,	H. H. Wolford
Easton, Ind., (Maple Grove),	J. L. Kimmel
Fairhaven, Ohio, 2nd Yr.,	B. F. Owen
Falls City, Neb., 2nd Yr., ...	H. F. Stuckman
Fillmore, Calif.,	Sylvester Lowman
Flora, Ind., 2nd Yr.,	S. C. Henderson
Ft. Scott, Kansas,	Mrs. L. C. Webb
Fostoria, Ohio,	M. S. White
Freemont, Ohio,	H. M. Oberholzer
Gretna, Ohio, 3rd Yr., ...	Edwin Boardman
Hamlin, Kansas, 2nd Yr.,	Geo. E. Cone
Huntington, Indiana,	J. W. Brower
Johnstown, Pa., 1st Ch.,	J. F. Watson
Johnstown, Pa., 3rd Ch.,	Geo. H. Jones
Laurel, Ill., 2nd Yr.,	B. T. Burnworth
La Verne, Calif., 2nd Yr.,	T. H. Broad
Leon, Iowa,	Geo. T. Ronk
Leon, Iowa, (Crown Chapel), ..	Geo. T. Ronk
Linwood, Maryland, 2nd Yr., ...	E. M. Middle
Long Beach, Cal., 2nd Yr., ...	L. S. Bauman
Loree, Indiana,	W. T. Lytle
Los Angeles, Cal., 1st, 2 Yr., ...	N. W. Jennings
Louisville, Ohio, 2nd Yr., ...	Geo. S. Baer
Los Angeles, Cal., (Compton Ave.),	J. C. Beal
Meyersdale, Pa., 2nd Yr., ...	E. D. Burnworth
Mexico, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	L. W. Diteh
Milledgeville, Ill., 2nd Yr., ...	M. J. Snyder
Morrill, Kansas, 2nd Yr., ...	A. E. Whitton
Mt. View, Va., 2nd Yr., ...	J. E. Patterson
Muncie, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	J. L. Kimmel
Nappanee, Ind., 2nd Yr.,	C. E. Kolb
New Enterprise, Pa.,	Edward Byers
New Lebanon, Ohio,	L. B. Wilkins
New Paris, Indiana,	Ora I. Oxley
North English, Iowa,	W. H. Miller
North Liberty, Indiana,	C. C. Grisso
Oakville, Indiana,	W. R. Deeter
Pittsburgh, Pa.,	H. M. Harley
Portis, Kansas, 2nd Yr., ...	Roy Brumbaugh
Rittman, Ohio,	J. Allen Miller
Roann, Indiana,	W. E. Ronk
Salisbury, Penna.,	E. D. Burnworth
Sidney, Indiana, 2nd Yr.,	L. A. Myers
Summit Mills, Pa., 2nd Yr., ...	E. D. Burnworth
Telford, Tennessee,	(Vacant)
Tiosa, Indiana,	Ora I. Oxley
Washington, C. H., O., 2nd Yr.,	B. S. Stoffer
Waterloo, Iowa, 2nd Yr., ...	H. L. Goughnour
Whittier, Calif.,	A. V. Kimmel
White Chapel, Mo.,	G. T. Ronk
Windber, Pennsylvania,	E. F. Byers
Yellow Creek, Pa.,	Edward Byers
Zion Hill, Ohio,	A. L. Lynn

VOLUME XLI
NUMBER 18

APRIL 30
1919

The BRETAREN EVANGELIST

· ONE · IS · YOUR · MASTER · AND · ALL · YE · ARE · BRETAREN ·

© 1919 BY MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE CHICAGO

CIVILIZATION PRAYS FOR TRUE PEACE —
Righteous, Just and Godly

Published every Wednesday at Ashland, Ohio. All matter for publication must reach the Editor not later than Friday of the preceding week.

George S. Baer, Editor

The Brethren Evangelist

When ordering your paper changed give old as well as new address. Subscriptions discontinued at expiration. To avoid missing any numbers renew two weeks in advance.

R. R. Teeter, Business Manager

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

Subscription price, $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Entered at the Post Office at Ashland, Ohio, as second-class matter.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 9, 1918.

Address all matter for publication to the Editor and all business communications to the Business Manager, Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio. Write the Company's name correctly on all checks.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

"I Have Compassion on the Multitude"—Editor,	2	Sin and Its Consequences—Dr. J. M. Tombaugh,	10
Editorial Review	3	White Gifts of Victory and Peace—Albert Trent,	10
The Setting of the Central Fact in Christianity—G. W. Rench, ..	4	Junior and Intermediate Work with Reports,	11
Prevention More Profitable Than Rescue—Prof. W. P. Beard,	5	Junior and Intermediate Awakening—Miss Nora Bracken,	11
What Makes the Sunday School Interesting to Boys—C. L. Anspaeh,	6	Lost Creek, Kentucky—G. E. Drushal,	12
Armenian and Syrian Relief—Dr. G. H. T. Main,	7	The First Fruits—L. S. Bauman,	12
An Appeal for Ashland College (Sermon)—Roy Brumbaugh,	8	News from the Field,	13-15
It's What the People Want—B.,	9	Communion Notices,	15
Keeping Conscience Inviolable—B.,	9	Business Manager's Corner—Dr. R. R. Teeter,	16

EDITORIAL

"I Have Compassion On the Multitudes"

Who is not familiar with the stories of Christ's compassion on the multitudes and his feeding of the thousands of men, women and children who followed him into the desert? Who does not know the parable of the good Samaritan and appreciate the emphasis placed by our Lord upon the relief of human suffering? How sympathetically human those incidents reveal him to be! How our hearts are drawn out toward him in love and admiration as we hear him say, "I have compassion!" But those words were spoken so many centuries ago. We think of Jesus as healing the sick, cleansing the lepers, relieving the distressed and feeding the starving in the days of his flesh and not in the present time. To most of us it seems like a beautiful romance of ancient Palestine more than a present day reality. But it was never more real than now, and his command to his disciples to distribute to the multitudes the bread he has blessed was never more urgent than now. How terrible must be the agony of his soul as he sees the countless multitudes stricken with disease and war wounds, wondering about helpless, homeless and starving! As certainly as Christ the Savior was not for one age, but for all ages, so certainly is Christ the sympathizing Friend and Helper not for one age but for all. There is a goodly number of noble souls who can testify to this fact. They have seen him going up and down the war-devastated countries of Europe and Asia and have heard him say with awful agony, "I have compassion." And they have obeyed his summons, as did the disciples of old, to make the people sit down and to distribute to them the bread received from his hands.

In the very land where Jesus accomplished his earthly ministry, his servants have been going in his name inspired by his compassion to the relief of some of his suffering little ones. Nearly half the population of 127 villages is dead—murdered, starved, dead of disease. In one place only the younger children of the Syrians and Armenians escaped murder. These children were given shelter and just enough food to keep them alive, evidently with the intention of rearing them as Mohammedans. But at the coming of General Allenby and the British forces the Turks fled. These children were then cared for by American Relief workers and given all they wanted to eat. They were given toys with which to play, lessons to learn and work to do. They were made happy once more after all they had suffered. But they are only 644 out of the more than six thousand in the Lebanon district alone who are still homeless and hungry.

By the waters of Babylon the captive Jewish exiles "sat them down and wept" when Babylon was a great power subjugating all the little nations of Western Asia. By the waters of Babylon Armenian exiles whose fate has been far more tragic and terrible than that of the Israelites of the Captivity have sat them down in a misery too deep for tears. But their oppressors have been conquered by a new Cyrus the Great and modern Ezras have arisen to restore them to their distant homes. Refugee camps have been established at certain intervals along the route over which these destitute wanderers tramp wearily back toward their northern villages. Here they rest a day, are fed and bathed and disinfected and the sick cared for.

Outside the city of Bagdad not far from ancient "Babylon the Great" is a camp where the British authorities are sheltering in tents, feeding and caring for medically 40,000 destitute refugees, while representatives of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East carry on an industrial relief work, giving employment fitted to his capacity to every man physically able to work. Into an orphanage are gathered 700 children uncared for and unclaimed by any one. The Mesopotamian campaign will not be truly ended until these refugees between the two great rivers are repatriated and permanently rehabilitated.

A great work is being done by this Relief committee in the Near East. More and more workers and supplies are constantly arriving, and as fast as supplies reach them they are distributed to the districts where the need is greatest. But the need is so great that the supplies that are sent are only a mouthful compared with the amount required to meet the demands.

Dr. Howard Bliss, president of the Syrian-Protestant College in Beirut, who has just arrived in New York, relates that every day he had to serve notice on men and women that they were doomed to die—that there was not enough food to provide for them. "Every day men and women came to the college with pitiful stories of their own or their children's need," said Dr. Bliss. "I had to tell them that there was no alternative before them but to prepare themselves for death. It was wonderful how they received my words. I was their last hope. I had no help to give. In almost every case they braced themselves and went from me to inevitable death with dignity and resignation. Sometimes I appealed to them when they came to me. 'You see,' I said, 'that I am responsible for 650 students here under my care. You come to me for food? From whose mouth shall I take this food?' And it hardly ever failed to bring the response: 'God has forbid that you should take the food from another's mouth to give to me.'

"Conditions in Beirut now are better," continues Dr. Bliss, "but still distressful enough to make the heart ache. Those who have survived starvation, have done so only at the expense of lowered vitality and intense mental depression. Medical relief is one of the first needs of these people. Many are ill with diseases induced by unnatural and insufficient food. All have used up their every reserve force, and are not more than half alive."

Dr. Bliss told of crowds fighting over a few grains of corn spilled in the dust by passing wagons. "I look now on a grain of wheat as one of the most precious things in the world," he said. "It was hard," he continued, "to get used to passing people in the street who were dying for want of pittance of food—dying of hunger under our eyes, and we could do nothing to help."

Words cannot describe the awful horror of the countless multitudes of dying wretches in those famine stricken, war devastated countries. If we could catch a vision of the hundreds of sick and dying men, women and children who present a spectacle of skin and bones, the horror intensified by frequent mutilated and diseased bodies we would turn heart-sick at the sight. But perhaps it would move us to a passionate sympathy and to deeds before unknown until we should share more than we ever have the compassion of Christ for the multitudes. If we could be made to understand, every Christian man and woman of us, the terribly destitute condition of these people, many of whom have been used to better things but have been brought low by the murderous Turks, we would see the awful sinfulness of our waste and luxury. By what right do we demand our luxuries while our brother men are dying for the barest necessities of life? By what right do we lavish many times the food we need, on dinners and banquets? Why should we pamper our returning soldiers with great feasts and seek to increase their gluttony by peddling doughnuts and sandwiches to them at every station stop? Our soldiers are returning not starved but well fed, and they are virile men, not soft dandies or vain fops. Oh, men are dying and we are indifferent to their cries for food and healing. May it not be that the Lord of mercy and compassion will meet us, as we approach heaven's portals at the last to receive our rewards, with the cold judicial sentence, "Depart from me; I never knew you. For I was an hungered, naked, sick and in prison and ye did not minister unto me?" May we not be so hardened to the piteous cries of God's unfortunate little ones as to deserve such a sentence, but may we hear him say, "I have compassion on the multitudes" and then enter into the fellowship of his sufferings.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

There is an announcement in this issue of the sectional conference to be held at the Fairhaven, Ohio, church on Sunday, May 25th, with Homerville church co-operating.

Brother Drushal gives us some interesting testimony to God's loving providence and answer to prayer. He also states that the school at Riverside closes the year in a splendid shape.

A very interesting report comes from Brother Atkinson of Cabrera, Argentina. He tells of the starting of a mission Sunday school in a neighboring town and of the difficulties there encountered.

There are some interesting reports from Intermediate Christian Endeavor societies to be found on the Christian Endeavor page. They are from Goshen, Indiana, and Linwood, Maryland.

It is seldom we have the privilege of reading a report from the pen of Brother P. M. Fisher, but we have this good fortune in this issue. The New Enterprise, Indiana, church is in a prosperous condition under his pastoral care. That church went "over the top" in its Easter offering and the Evangelist is being put in every home.

Brother Beal, pastor of the Compton Avenue Brethren church of Los Angeles, California, gives us a splendid report of a most unusual spiritual condition. His church is learning how to pray as few churches know, and they are finding that the prayerful church is the powerful church. Every department of the work is in a fine shape.

When we were about to go to press Brother Bauman's "First-Fruits" report came in and we immediately made place for it in order that the many anxious hearts might have some idea as to how the battle goes. In addition to those reported by Brother Bauman, we happen to know that Ashland, Ohio, is sending in an offering of $300.00 and Louisville, Ohio, will go about $170.00. Dr. Miller phoned that the Rittman mission gave more than a dollar per member and Zion Hill's offering will be more than $60.00. Let us thank God and keep the good work going. There will be many churches reporting a dollar and more per member very soon. Send your offerings in early to Brother L. S. Bauman, 5045 N. Smedley Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., or if you must be late about reporting, address him at Long Beach, California.

Brother Goughnour calls for final reports on the Four Month's Sunday School contest and states that he has in hand the $175.00 for the three prizes of $100.00, $50.00 and $25.00. They will be impartially bestowed according to merits shown by reports. Let everybody report whether your showing is as good as others or not. Be prompt, send report now to H. L. Goughnour, Waterloo, Iowa.

We are given a report of a successful evangelistic meeting held at Clay City by Brother Bauman and the pastor, Brother Kinsie. The pastor feels that aside from the number of additions to the membership of the church, the evangelist prepared the field for a much larger harvest in the future. The financial success of the meeting shows that the Brethren cause has some friends outside the church.

The Fillmore, California, church is still moving forward under the leadership of Brother Lowman. They have recently been engaged in an evangelistic campaign with Brother Jennings doing the preaching. The results were very gratifying, and with faithful shepherding, which Brother Lowman will doubtless give them, these new recruits will mean much to the future of the Fillmore church.

Brother Wirick writes from St. Petersburg, Florida, stating that he is soon to be back in the harness in Indiana, beginning his evangelistic work at Corinth, in co-operation with Brother Stewart, the pastor. Brother Wirick will be open to the call of the churches for evangelistic work, giving preference to the smaller churches, and will also do supply work if needed.

The article by Dr. Main in this issue is a cable report to the New York office of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief and was sent to the Evangelist office. It is so appealing and so necessary that every one should know about it that we are passing it on to the Evangelist as well as giving this urgent matter our attention editorially.

Brother Brumbaugh, pastor of the Portis, Kansas, church gives us a report and is jubilant over the showing his church made in the college endowment campaign. The good people there certainly did splendidly and they are not suffering from the effects of their giving either. People never do who give cheerfully. Giving is the way of getting, the best way. But why should it be thought strange, it is God's way: "Give and it shall be given unto you."

From Garwin, Iowa, comes an interesting report of the Brethren church at that place. Brother Freeman Ankrum writes that the work there is progressing splendidly since liberation from the "flu" ban. They decided to pay off the parsonage debt and proceeded to do it in a very short time. The Sunday school is going forward, and the church is about to enter an evangelistic campaign under the leadership of Brother Coleman of Leon, Iowa.

The secretary of the Northern California District Conference gives us a report of the proceedings. We commend her for her wisdom in making this report. Sometimes every detail of the conferences are given in making reports through the Evangelist. A long detailed report is less valuable than a short concise one, because the short one will be read by nearly every one while the long one will be read by a very few. Sister Mansfield's report is interesting, gives a good general impression of what took place at the conference and will be read by nearly all the Evangelist family.

For several weeks we have had in our possession a marked copy of the Falls City (Nebraska) Journal telling of a most generous gift on the part of the Falls City church to their pastor, Brother H. F. Stuckman. On account of the crowded condition of our news department we have been unable to give it space until now. This magnificent surprise shows two things: first, that the splendid work being done by Brother Stuckman is thoroughly appreciated by his parishioners and second, that at the very time the Falls City church was rallying about the College Endowment campaign so loyally as to gain first place among all the churches canvassed they were not forgetting to give the same royal support to their home interests.

GENERAL ARTICLES

The Setting of the Central Fact in Christianity. BY G. W. RENCH

God has never received any revelations from mankind, for as high as the heavens are above the earth, so high are his ways and thoughts above ours. From time to time men have made important discoveries and have been the beneficiaries of special revelations from God. These revelations have been so many links in the chain of our Father's purpose by which he seeks to identify himself with all humanity.

Assuming that this connection of God with all humanity and assuming that Christianity is the culmination of the highest expression of God's unfolding purpose in the scheme of redemption, we readily conclude that every fact or event necessary to the accomplishment of that scheme was as well a part of the divine purpose. "I, and if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." "I am the resurrection and the life." "Christ must needs have suffered and risen again from the dead." Paul declares that the facts of the gospel are embodied in the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus. The essence of the gospel story, then, ARE THE THINGS WHICH BEFELL OUR LORD. The gospel was preached to Abraham by promise. By types and shadows, such as are to be found in the deliverance of the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage, the thunders of Mt. Sinai, the manna, the fountain out of the rock, the passage of the Jordan, these are the main facts of our Christian journey AND OUR LEADER'S LIFE. The substance of the Christian system the prophets have foretold, and when men were narrating the things which befell our Lord, they were preaching Jesus.

But, for a period reaching well into five years, the world has been convulsed in the wildest and most gigantic tornado of destruction ever recorded on the pages of history. The shrieks of the dead and dying—including women and children, yet fill the air and the whole world is so appalled, that it is now in the desperate throes of resuscitation. Of course it is a different world than it was prior to June 28, 1914, when the pistol shot was fired that brought twenty-seven nations to arms, cost ten million lives, and destroyed fifty billion dollars' worth of property, without counting that used in actual war material. The world has been thinking so long in terms of shot and shell, poisonous gasses, torpedoes on the earth, under the earth and in the air, estimating the value of every machine by how much life it can destroy, until destruction—awful destruction—is still a factor of the world's thinking. The sacred precincts of holy religion have been invaded by friend and foe, declaring that the battle fields of Europe have so changed the religious view-point of man that religion must be reconstructed. The lines along which this reconstruction is to proceed have not been made very clear, but its advocates are persistent that it should be done, lines or no lines.

"The World War convulsed religion, as it did everything else." Many are saying, "So much the better for religion." It is said that a great evangelist when returning from the front said, "I have learned from these boys what religion is. . . This war is reconstructing the old theological ideas. And it's the boys in the first line trenches who are doing this rebuilding." This was written in a popular American magazine. The headline of a newspaper reads, "U. S. Armed Legions Aid New Religion." The news article under this heading begins, "America's armed legions, sent across the seas to crush autocracy, are the fighting evangelists of a new religion for the world. . . The Rev. Mr. ——— asserted today before a joint meeting of the Y. M. C. A." This minister of one of the leading evangelical Protestant denominations in the United States went on to say, according to the news article: "I have it direct from a captain who has been through the fire that our men abroad have ceased praying and worrying God. . . Our men and the fighting men of Britain and France are laying the foundation now for the great religion of the future on both sides of the water." According to press reports, the dean of the Theological School of Chicago University has recently said, that orthodoxy has met its Waterloo in this war; and his illustration of his contention was that the Kaiser was orthodox!

A news letter sent out by the Chautauqua Press Bureau told of a Ministers' and Christian Workers' Week, in which the program was to center about "The Church's Next Step Forward." Among the topics to be taken up were, "The Church's Next Step Forward in Biblical Interpretation," and "The Church's Next Step forward in Theological Reconstruction." The first speaker named, in the program of the week, was the dean of the theological school which is the leading exponent of destructive criticism in America.

In a recent number of "Men and missions," a prominent writer says, "Religion is not a matter of creeds or of classes but of human life. The church of Christ is not a building or an organization, but a living body of believers in the humanity of God and the divinity of man." Well does Mr. Van Dyke say, "The church in past ages has often been inclined to abstract the doctrines of Christianity concerning the person and work of Christ from their union with his human life, and to condense them into a purely formal system of dogma for the intellect. The church in the present age shows at least a tendency to separate the image of Jesus from the truths which he taught, and hold him up to men merely as an ideal of holiness and goodness. But the one barrier that stands firm against both these false tendencies is the marvelous narrative of the Gospels, in which the life and the doctrine of Christ are woven together, one and inseparable, like a robe without a seam.

How can we understand his grace, unless we accept his truth? How can we appreciate his truth, unless we receive his grace? At every step, his action is interpreted and explained by his words. He trusts in Providence, and he commands his disciples to trust, not merely because submissive confidence is a beautiful and happy thing, but because he knows and declares that God is really a Father, worthy to be trusted (Matt. 6:25-30). He prays, secretly and openly; secretly because he is sure that God hears him always, and openly because he would fain give this assurance to others (John 9:41, 42). He seeks the sinful and lost, not merely because such a ministry is lovely and gracious, but because he knows and declares that it is the will of God, and that there is more joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth than over ninety-and-nine just men that need no repentance (Luke 15:7). He cares for the bodies of men and he relieves their wants, but he cares infinitely more for their souls, and he teaches them to care more, because he knows that the soul is capable of immortality and more precious than all this world can give (Mark 8:36, 37). He moves willingly and obediently to the cross, not because it is inevitable, not because resignation is the crown of virtue, but because he knows and declares that this is the sacrifice appointed for him as the Christ, the laying down his life as a ransom for many, the lifting up by which he is to draw all men unto himself (John 12:32). He goes down into death with unshaken courage, not because it is a fine thing to be brave, but because he knows and declares that he is returning to the Father and that he will bring those who love him to be with him forever more (John 14:1-3).

Now these are declarations of great truths. If we deny them, if we make them uncertain, the life which was built upon them has no meaning, no substance, no power in it. It becomes a splendid illusion, a heroic mistake." And thus Christianity is Christ, and Christ is Christianity, and however brilliant the committee may be, it will be just a little difficult to reconstruct either. And what can reconstructionists promise us more than they already have given us, namely, a Unitarian Christ, a Christian Science Christ, a Theosophy Christ, or some other human production?

I wonder if we should not exercise a little care in our proposed reconstruction. Religion emanated from God, and Bible religion is as old as he is. His holy religion might be restored, but reconstructing it might prove to be a difficult undertaking. It has gone through many a war besides this World War, surviving them all. "There is blood in God's religion: the shed blood of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ." Is it the plan to leave that out in the new readjustment? That will be a very difficult feat to accomplish. "Are we keenly, intelligently alive to the far-reaching perils that the war has injected into the religious talk and thought of the whole world?" Some of us are willing to hear the gospel of "reconstruction," hear it patiently, but before we begin the excavations for the foundation of the new structure, prefer to examine the "blue prints." Since it is no secret that Germany for 50 years has been working away on this reconstruction problem, the first thing we shall look for is the "Made in Germany" sign. Remembering the experience of France about 100 years ago, together with Germany's "latest advances in religion," we are a little anxious to know whether our religion is to be "reconstructed" up or down, toward God or away from him.

God, Jesus Christ, and his church, and the Bible, have been before the world for a long time. Numerous attempts have been made to obliterate, modify, and reconstruct one or all of these holy agencies, and with what success you full well know. A great many men, and in every age, have never been satisfied with the religion that Jesus brought to this old earth. That Holy One of God, who knew no sin, who never made a mistake, who never reversed himself in his teaching, who never apologized for his conduct, yet MEN HAVE NOT BEEN satisfied with God's IDEAL. Is this Ideal to be reconstructed? and who is to do the reconstructing? One sometimes wonders to what extent Bolshevism has laid its hands on the work of God and the church.

South Bend, Indiana.

Prevention More Profitable Than Rescue. BY PROF. W. P. BEARD

This is a day when things are being done on a large scale. New and more intensive methods are being applied. Tasks which before seemed stupendous are now being attacked with such vigor that it amazes one at what can be done.

The world seems like a giant having come from a fray with still a lot of energy to spend on something. The country has been worked to a high pitch by the recent war and a sudden let up in that line leaves us with tremendous ardor to do something. How fortunate that this is the case, for there were few times in history when there were more places and problems needing attention.

Many of the denominations are capitalizing the situation and are putting on drives for sums of money which before the war would have seemed fabulous. What is more they are going over the top in these drives and furthermore doing the actual subscribing in a few hours' time. The churches have adopted business methods brought about by the war. During the war it was often heard, "Had all this money been spent for missionary work might this all not have been avoided?" Whether or not the churches are consciously working on this basis or not the work they are doing is along that line. Whether or not the prevention of future wars is the aim or not, it will have at least the influence of reducing the number of wars. The main thing is that the church is working as never before and so long as God is at the head it must bring forth fruit in abundance. One might sum up the whole movement in the one word prevention.

It seems rather queer to be harping on this old time worn subject. It seems, and is axiomatic to say that prevention is more profitable than rescue. It may be the commonplace aspect of the subject that makes us so often negligent in applying it. However these phases of the thing appeal to us, if we are going to work at the highest efficiency, we must use the prevention rather than the rescue method of improving conditions. We have had physical prophylactics for some time. Why not use the same method with religion? Science has taught us that to prevent smallpox we should be vaccinated. We even apply the principle to the prevention of diseases of live stock, yet we fail to apply it to things religious. Science has taught us to treat grains before planting to prevent smut and other fungus diseases that the mature grain may be pure. We have been taught physical cleanliness as a method of preventing disease. Still more appallingly lax do our methods seem in dealing with sin when we consider that Jesus emphasized this principle in his many remarks concerning children.

One of Germany's philosophers said some years ago before the war, "Determine your national policy and commit it to the children." We are all familiar with the policy Germany committed to her children. Nevertheless the devil is making the same use of this vital asset that the church should be using. It is said that Protestantism is stronger today in Rome than ever before because the time has come when generations are reaching manhood and womanhood in whom the seeds of Protestantism were sown when they were children.

Some one may remark concerning the comparisons drawn in a previous paragraph that in order to secure immunity from diseases the individual is inoculated with a slight form of the disease. There, however, is this dissimilarity between the two methods. In the vaccination the virus is of certain strength or under control. In arguing that to be a stronger Christian one should have some idea through personal experience what sin is, this statement is often made, "Every young fellow must sow his wild oats, when he gets married he will settle down." This they might claim as the inoculation. The trouble is that when the devil inoculates he uses serum that is too strong for the average human and besides he is inoculating not to prevent, but to cause.

This same statement is often given as an excuse for young people's shortcomings. It is queer how calmly the serious things of life are taken. How utterly foolish the idea of postponing training and then letting it come under the head of rescue, may best be illustrated by a few examples. When a person's home is burning down he does not calmly excuse circumstances with "There is no use to try to do anything now I will wait till my neighbors do something." When the business man sees an opportunity to make a profitable deal he would hardly allow the prospect to be seized by another without making an effort to secure it to his own benefit if he expected to remain in business very long. The farmer would hardly let his registered stock grow up in the pasture without giving it attention until he wished to sell or exhibit. The young colt is not allowed to develop as best he may with a poor ration and improper care, if there is in him the possibilities of a superior individual. Any number of these familiar examples might be cited, all showing our carelessness in dealing with the problem of making the best Christians possible.

It is not the purpose of this article to suggest methods, but it might be well to take a partial invoice of the things the church has at hand to use in the solution of the problem. The home of course is of tremendous importance in the policy of prevention, but how often it fails. The week day school is also of value but it is not closely enough associated with the church. The most important institution at the direct disposal of the church is the Sunday school and its possibilities. When one considers that eighty-two percent of the church members and ninety percent of the preachers come up through the Sunday school, its importance is seen in true perspective.

Here then is the place to put the emphasis. The more effort that is put on the Sunday school now the more will eventually be forthcoming from school and home. Modern methods of teaching, or rather, the basic principles of the Master Teacher must be applied. The laboratory method is a fairly modern method of teaching. The use of sand tables, and dramatizing of the Bible stories are forms of this method of instruction. A study of the New Testament will reveal the fact that Christ used this method in training his disciples. He taught them in the "Sermon on the Mount" and then took them out and supervised the applications of his gospel to matter of fact problems. It is gratifying to see Sunday school officials using such methods. They however may be intensified more than at present.

It is up to each church to adopt a program of action. The next step is to keep interest aroused to the point where things will be done. Our Four Year Program is an instrument for this very thing and if interest lags it is not the fault of Brother Bane. Still another means by which we may attain this end is the campaign conducted by Brother Beachler. If the Brethren church is ever to be a "Greater Brethren Church" she must have more leaders. If she is to have leaders there must be a place and an opportunity for the leaders to receive training. If we fail to do our best in the campaign for Ashland we will suffer in all future drives. We are doing fine in comparison to the goal but that is no reason why a higher aim than the first shall not be striven for. The Brethren church will be held down or allowed to serve in just the proportion that she supports her college.

To the person who suggested the Four Months Program for our Sunday school belongs a great deal of credit. The idea of a permanent benefit was well incorporated in it. When this contest is over can we not have some thing of the sort that will cover a period of greater length and still maintain the interest that this does? This kind of subsidiary program will materially aid our Four Year Program.

What Makes the Sunday School Interesting to Boys. BY C. L. ANSPACH

It is with a great deal of hesitancy that I undertake the discussion of this topic due to the importance of the subject and the limited knowledge of the writer. Because of the vital relation which this topic holds to the church, I feel that it is not being given the consideration that is due it. Have we as a church ever paused long enough to consider that the Sunday school to hold the children must be made to meet the needs of the children that attend and not the needs of the adults that stay a home. We and all other churches have too many members who stay at home during the school hour, forcing their children to go and then legislate in business meetings the procedure of the organization to meet their own imaginary needs and then wonder why the Sunday school does not fulfill the needs of the children. The Sunday school is the source of the church's future strength, because from it must come the majority of the church's workers. We have now come to realize that the proper method of building the church is not so much in popular revival services at regular intervals as in the education of children in the Sunday school, graduating them into a body of alumni that will be the church's future support. In an endeavor to bring a few suggestions as to the manner in which some of this work may be done I shall deal with boys between the ages of 12 and 15.

Because of wrong methods in teaching, the Sunday school has come to hold in many instances an unpleasant thought for the boy. Many Sunday school teachers and ministers assume the attitude of the jailer with the result that the boy has come to look upon the Sunday school as a jail.

One is often forced to wonder where our active members of a few years hence are to be found. In ten years who will be the ones to shoulder the responsibility of conducting the business of the church? Who will we have for deacons? Will it be a hard matter to find some one? Who will be the superintendent of the Sunday school? Who will be the ones to look after those necessary but inconspicuous details that are always indications of leadership in the church, viz., taking care of the linen used in the love feast, and getting ready the bread, meat, tables. Homely service, yes but how do those in your church who do those things stand as to leadership in the bigger things?

The Sunday school is a means of imparting religious information and giving training in its application. The programs we have on foot at the present are very well to keep up interest. WE still have another asset that will serve the purpose of a training school for the above mentioned duties and responsibilities. Every church should have a Young People's society in which the training for these duties may be secured. It gives the young people practice in talking to audiences on religious topics, and in the conduct of affairs similar to those later to be assumed in the church. A young people's society is no easy thing to start and maintain but nothing worth while is obtained without great effort.

